PARAMOUNT wishes the exhibitors of America to realize how many and how influential are the people opposed to sensational and suggestive pictures. We are endeavoring to do this through advertising in the Saturday Evening Post, Woman's Home Companion, Every Week Magazine, Associated Sunday Magazine, American Club Woman and, on May 11th, in thirty-five of the greatest American newspapers. There will be 10,000,000 copies of this advertisement printed—enough to reach 10 per cent of the population of the country. Each advertisement contains the coupon reproduced below.

Some proportion of these coupons will reach every exhibitor who is not running an exclusively Paramount Program.

We know how many people in America will pay to see big, clean, vital pictures, such as Paramount Pictures. We know how many will refuse to look at sensational and suggestive pictures. We hope the coupons from this advertisement will make all exhibitors realize these things as well as Paramount exhibitors realize them.

To the Owner of the Motion Picture Theatre Nearest My Home

I am opposed to sensational and suggestive motion pictures. I would like to see Paramount Pictures. I will support you in any conscientious effort toward bigger, cleaner, better motion pictures.

A Policy Which Decreases Expense and Increases Returns

The value of long runs is in direct ratio to the drawing power of a picture.

V-L-S-E from its very inception has espoused runs of two or more days. It has done this in the firm conviction that its product merited, to an unusual degree, such extended showings.

That this conviction has been fully justified is proven in the following letter from the Majestic Theatre Company of Detroit. The experiences related in this letter are typical of those of many other exhibitors.

V. L. S. E., Inc.,
1600 Broadway,
New York City, N. Y.

Detroit, Mich.,

Gentlemen:—

The following letter bearing on the policy of this theatre wherein we changed from running four features a week to our present policy of running one feature an entire week, and the attendant successful results from a box office stand point for six months, may be of interest to you.

The Majestic Theatre seats approximately 2,100 people and was opened April 1, 1915. On account of its being located two miles from the downtown section, some of the Directors favored a daily change in our program while some of us believed in three changes per week. The matter was finally compromised with a change of four bills per week. This policy lasted thirty days when we went to three bills a week.

At that time one of your representatives arrived in Detroit and told him of our plans, asking him if he thought we were making a mistake. He told us that we were but the mistake was in not running the feature an entire week, and he proceeded to give us arguments in support of this. The radical change suggested by him sort of took our breath away, but the apparent sincerity of his statement convinced us and we resolved to give it a 30 days' trial.

At the end of August, considered not a good show month, we found that our receipts had increased $2,700 over our banner month which was in April. September showed an increase of $900 over August; October $400 over September; November $700 over October; December fell off slightly; January $800 over November; and February, according to present indications, will run from $400 to $500 more than January.

We believe that two things have helped make this increase in our business. First, running a feature an entire week; second, our policy since doing this has been to only book features that we have seen first, we figuring that we know the wants of our patrons better than some manufacturer in New York or California. Further, in a nice way we have given our patrons to understand that we have taken great pains in selecting for them only the best of features and we believe that this has strengthened their confidence in us.

We are writing you this letter as this policy was suggested by one of your district managers and we feel more than grateful to you.

Yours truly,

FAW/WS

F. W. Wesbrook.

A policy which is so valuable to many, should be of equal value to you.

PALACE THEATRE

Ardmore, Penna.

V. L. S. E., Inc.,
New York.

Gentlemen:—

The management and Palace Theatre Patrons are delighted with the special features produced by the V. L. S. E., Inc.

Moving pictures have become a most interesting and entertaining feature to the general public. They have developed a taste for clean, enjoyable amusement, which has been our aim since opening the Palace Theatre.

It has always been our desire to find features of pleasing and drawing value. Recently it was our pleasure to sign a contract with your exchange for Wednesday and Friday nights.

In presenting these specials to our patrons, we find that they, like ourselves, more than appreciate the endeavors of your exchange to please and entertain. It also shows a substantial increase in our receipts, in fact, the receipts have doubled and gone far beyond our expectations.

We trust your good work will continue and we feel certain, in expressing to you our good will and appreciation, that our house is only one of the many that has increased its patronage since enjoying this service.

Very truly yours,

HEARST-VITAGRAPH

Every twenty-four hours the world is shocked by a sensational piece of news. The newspapers are hardly off the presses before the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial flashes the same news throughout the country.

The value of a news pictorial is its news. News means every happening of interest from every part of the world.

In no other news release can you get "all the news all the time," except in the HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL.

Of course, you pay for this service! But, anything worth having is worth paying for, and the up-to-the-minute exhibitor is paying for it, and is satisfied. He gets what he pays for—results in the box office.

Mr. Exhibitor, if you are not using this News Reel we hope you will see one—and then you will understand why hundreds of successful exhibitors demand HEARST-VITAGRAPH and will take no other.

The Soul of the Photoplay

You know the old saw about brevity being the soul of wit.

Just as surely is it the soul of the photoplay.

Essanay's one, two and three reel comedies and dramas are condensed to pure essence—no dilution—nothing superfluous.

The action is quick, sharp, clear, concise.

Essanay goes to as much pains to pick its short subjects as it does its longer features.

It picks each for its proper length and gives you the best there is to be had.

Its greatest actors appear in short plays as well as in the longer.

The New World Film Trade Mark Typifies a New Day for Exhibitors

For with it comes the first of the New Day Brady-Made pictures.

For the first time exhibitors may obtain pictures not alone under the name of, but under the personal supervision of the foremost theatrical genius of the time.

Into these plays are thrown all the stars, all the directors, all the resources that formerly went to make up two big weekly feature releases.

Then comes the great national advertising campaign to still further popularize the pictures of this already nationally known producer.

Never before has a new trade mark symbolized so much of dependable quality backed by years of experience and success.

Don't delay your booking and miss the opportunity to be the exhibitor of your community to tell the public through the display of this trade mark that you can show them the much demanded

These Are the Master Directors Who Produce World Pictures

Their past performances are indicative of their future results and your assurance that they will produce only dependable plays.

Tourneur directed "Trilby" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine"; Capellani produced "Les Miserables" and "Camille"; Chautard is responsible for "The Rack" and "The Boss"; Crane made "As Ye Sow" and "Old Dutch"; August staged "The Yellow Passport"; Thornby did "Her Maternal Right"; Taylor picturized "Passersby"; O'Neill contributed "Bought."

Under the further supervision of that master craftsman of the stage—Wm. A. Brady—can there be any doubt in your mind as to the supreme quality of pictures these geniuses will produce?

Directors, stars, pictures and national advertising combine in their strongest elements to make World Pictures, Brady-Made, supreme in the feature field.

H.B.Warner in The Beggar of Cawnpore

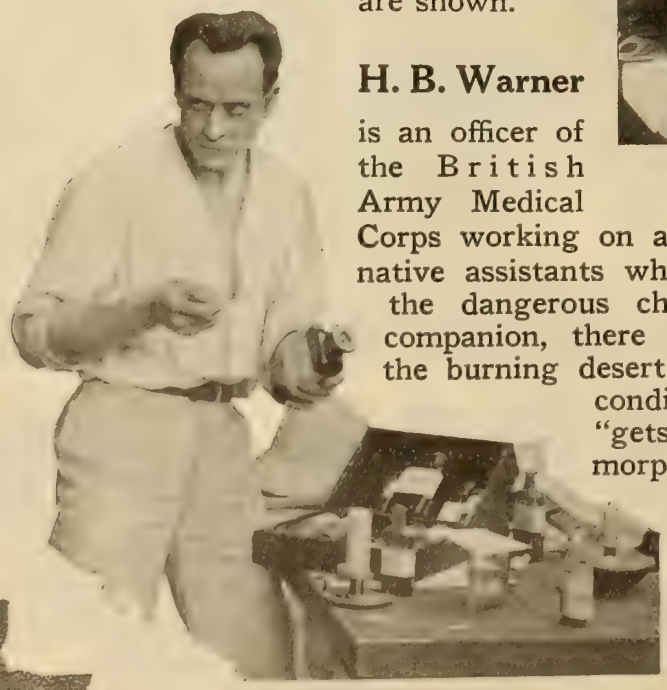
For the week of April 30th the TRIANGLE-Ince Picture will be H. B. Warner in "The Beggar of Cawnpore." This, the second play in which this popular star appears, is a picture so powerful yet so picturesque that it will seldom be equalled.

Based on the Indian Sepoy Rebellion and the terrible massacre of Cawnpore which was a vital point in the history of India, C. Gardner Sullivan has woven a wonderful sketch around the happenings that transferred the entire Indian Government to the English Crown.

Just imagine the terrible fighting that is staged between the British and a horde of savage natives five times as large. Picture the realism of this great conflict as charge after charge is made. You and your patrons alike will appreciate the bravery and courage that are shown.



H. B. Warner is an officer of the British Army Medical Corps working on an East Indian Desert. Deserted by his native assistants who believe the camp to be infected with the dangerous cholera he is left alone with his dead companion, there to exist on the smouldering sands of the burning desert until he is relieved from his desperate condition. The horror and terror of it all "gets" him and he resorts to the aid of morphine in his medical cabinet. Lower and lower he sinks, until on his return to civilization the drug has such a hold upon him that he cannot shake it off, and he leaves his sweetheart in disgrace.

TRIANGLE PLAYS

This Man Sank Deep

Six months later Warner is living in a disreputable hut in Cawnpore leading the life of a helpless, drug-crazed beggar in the crawling slums of this mysterious city, kept alive only by hasheesh, the Indian substitute for cocaine.

In a vague underground way he hears the first rumblings of the Sepoy Rebellion. The single spark of manhood that is left tries to come to the surface, but it is a terrible struggle. The cravings and fancies of the diseased mind long neglected rise up to prevent the desired victory. Into the heart of a dark cave he goes, there to fight the battle to a finish, to come forth victorious but weak and spent after the awful struggle.

He Finally Won

But his effort is rewarded, for at this most critical time his sweetheart, heedless of the terrible danger, has come to Cawnpore to visit an aunt. His knowledge of the ways of the natives, of their plans and ambitions, makes it possible for Warner to rescue the girl of his heart from her terrible predicament and win back her love. The way he does it constitutes a sequence of scenes rarely thrilling.

For the same week the TRIANGLE-Fine Arts Picture will be Norma Talmadge in "The Children in the House," a picture that is bound to touch the heart strings of every married man and woman.

What Will Chicago Do?

THE following letter seems to close at once and for all time the wholly unnecessary and greatly exaggerated wrangle between the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Board of Trade over the New York show matter:

Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc.,
18 East Forty-first Street,
New York City.
Mr. J. Stuart Blackton:
Dear Sir:

We have your communications of the 19th and 21st inst., and after due deliberation, we are satisfied that it is the intention of your body to co-operate with the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of America, and therefore, we accept your proposition with thanks, and we will forthwith recommend that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America give its hearty approval and support to the Exposition held by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., at the Madison Square Garden, May 6 to 14 inclusive.

With the acceptance of your offer, we feel that all misunderstandings are swept away and that henceforth it will be the duty of both of our bodies to co-operate in every possible manner for the best interests of the entire industry.

Yours very truly,
LEE A. OCHS,
President of State Branch No. 11,
Acting as representative for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

BY "greatly exaggerated" we mean that there were never any cross-purposes between the directors of the Board of Trade and the exhibitors of New York or of the National League. An original neglect grew through added misunderstandings and misrepresentations into what seemed to be antagonism.

The muddle is cleared. We are to have two shows. And now with harmony back of each, with enthusiastic co-operation all along the line—and what is of more importance, with the air cleared and minds thinking of the future, it would seem that it will all be for the best.

EXHIBITORS are pretty well stirred up and, judging from reports there will be a heavy attendance at both shows. This will make the exhibits worth while. Good spirited advertising will send the public in paying numbers through the doors of both expositions.

Two weeks is not too long for a double exposition such as this one promises to be, with Art Director Rothapfel and Art Director Rolfe each on his mettle and a friendly rivalry back of each management to outdo the other in the way of entertainment. Surely visiting exhibitors will get their money's worth this time.

BUT we are already thinking beyond New York and about Chicago and the Exhibitors' Convention there in July.

This convention has vast possibilities. It can, if it will, accomplish the one great need of the day, namely, a genuine and powerful working combination between all present organizations and branches of the industry. It can, if it will, build a united front.

WE are all pretty sure of one thing now—and that is that our enemies are without and not within the industry. We have learned—and the wrangle here in New York helped to this end—that there are no differences of aim and intention between manufacturers, exhibitors and distributors, that on the other hand each branch needs the other's help mighty badly, not only for outside fighting but also for inside prosperity.

WE have no places now for those with malice in their hearts, for agitators, for peanut politics, for "rule or ruin," for half-baked speeches on exhibitor oppression and the like. We want to forget the past and think of the future.

We want construction. We want constructive leaders, constructive organizations. We want conferences. We want the best exhibitors and the best manufacturers and the best distributors in and at the head of their respective organization and all of them conferring and working out the serious economic and legislative problems that will seriously impair this industry if intelligent conference and unified action do not correct them.

THE signs are in the air—of this better, broader spirit. In Cincinnati the exhibitors are working hand in hand with the Chamber of Commerce, tackling civic problems like any other legitimate business house. In Pittsburgh the Screen Club is fighting a state censorship in a way that wins universal admiration and respect.

This is constructive work.

CHICAGO can make this spirit, the work, the policy of this whole industry—first by electing a set of officers for the M. P. E. L. of America who will be leaders in the best sense of the word,—constructive leaders, and secondly, by working out a practical scheme of country-wide co-operation with the industry at large.

VOL. XIII May 6, 1916. No. 18

Overworked Judges and Officious Censors

THERE is little comfort or satisfaction for the motion picture manufacturer in the decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court this past week, sustaining the State Board of Censors in their appeal from the Court of Common Pleas, which reversed the censorial findings on the picture, "Virtue."

IN effect, the Supreme Court ruled that the lower tribunal can only properly set aside the judgment of the censors upon the ground that they have been guilty of "an abuse of discretion."

Abuse of discretion, in the administration of a law like this, is, of course, easy to recognize, perhaps, but hard to prove. It is a phrase that seems to mean a great deal more than it actually does mean.

THE powers of a censorship board are, of necessity, almost entirely discretionary. They have, and can have no exact standards to apply. Discretion, like charity, can be made to cover a multitude of sins. An abuse of discretion is something about which you may have a moral certainty, and yet be utterly unable to demonstrate it as a legal certanty. And the more general the powers of a Board like this are, the harder it is to prove abuse of discretion. No one knows what is expected of the censors and what isn't. The Board itself doesn't know. But it solves the difficulty by assuming that it has a right to do anything it pleases, and succeeds in so many instances that its members come at last to feel highly insulted if any unfortunate producer happens to call them to account.

THAT is what the Pennsylvania Board of Censors have done and are doing. And they are able to do so only because the courts are too busy to stop and interpret the law. Overworked as most of the judges are, they assume, for the sake of speed, that an administrative body like the censor board is right unless the contrary is proven. And then they make it as difficult as possible for the private individual to prove the contrary.

We regret exceedingly that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court frowns upon the exhibition of a picture in the trial of a case against the censors, as a common practice. We think such an exhibition the most efficient and intelligent evidence a judge can have—the only first-hand evidence, it might be said. The picture on the screen in the court-room is the whole case on celluloid. The judge may instantly place himself in the position of both parties as the film passes before his eyes, and determine whether censor or producer is in the wrong.

AND, apart from this excellent feature of such a practice, it is the producer's only real safeguard against the rather reckless animosity of a censor whom he has haled into court—an animosity which has been revealed on several occasions.

In spite of the Supreme Court's ruling, we trust that producers will continue to insist upon their right to exhibit the pictures that are the bases of their suits to the court. Sooner or later judges must see its wisdom.

The Tribune and Censorship

THE sincere gratitude of the entire motion picture industry, as well as that of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is extended to the New York Tribune for its exhilarating declaration against censorship, published recently apropos of the Cristman-Wheeler bill passed by the New York State Legislature.

"IF the authorities want to tax motion pictures they may be able to justify that on economic lines," concludes the editorial. "There is no possible justification for an attempt to set up a censorship over them in addition to what the law now provides.

"NOTHING could be stupider, as a matter of state policy, that to undertake to censor anything written, published or presented by pictures. And specifically there is now probably less real occasion for any interference with the commercial output of motion pictures on the score of decency and morality than there ever has been in the brief history of the industry. The manufacturers have learned that smut and suggestiveness don't pay."

VERY true. The manufacturers have. It was a difficut lesson, but it has been learned.

But when will the professional reformers learn that smut and suggestiveness won't pay them any more, as far as the American people are concerned, than it has paid the manufacturers?

The Pittsburgh Screen Club and Mr. McAleer

WE TAKE pleasure in directing the particular attention of the entire industry, exhibitors and manufacturers alike, to the inspiring work that has been and is still being done by the Pittsburgh Screen Club in combatting the oppression of the Pennsylvania State censors.

It is almost without a parallel in the history of the business—but it should not long remain so. We commend the Screen Club of Pittsburgh and Mr. John McAleer, chairman of the Campaign Committee, to all those who are compelled to defend themselves against censorship,—as an example and as an ally.

Rothapfel Opens His Rialto, Film Wonder Palace

Audience of 1,500 Hear Orchestra of Thirty-one Pieces and Chorus of Thirty Voices Make Formal Opening—Men and Women Prominent in Industry as Well as Amusement and Social Circles Present—Light Effects Impressive—Special Program Is Arranged for the Event

S. L. ROTHAPFEL opened his long-heralded Rialto Theatre in New York, on April 21, with a blare of trumpets. The blare of trumpets is not a figure of speech, for the formal opening was announced by an immense orchestra, with a preponderance of brass, backed by a large chorus pouring forth its greeting, while an audience of more than 1,500 rose to its feet and applauded enthusiastically.

The opening of the Rialto must be looked upon as a decided success. It was also a sincere tribute to Mr. Rothapfel, for while things are seldom apt to work smooth on an opening night—and did not in this case—the audience came prepared to like the place, to be pleased with the entertainment offered, and to cheer Mr. Rothapfel and his staff on every possible occasion. Thus the new theatre starts its career under auspicious circumstances, and with every prospect of proving the same example and aid to other exhibitors that its promoter has made of other houses which he has made famous all over the country.

The various New York dailies reported the opening of the Rialto as an event of importance to the public and of significance to the amusement world. It remains for MOTION PICTURE NEWS to report the event to the exhibitor. In doing so, we can furnish no more pithy summary than to quote from Alexander Wolcott in the New York Times:

Luxury, Attractiveness and Convenience

"The difference between the queer, jiggly films that used to serve as chasers on the Keith programs fifteen years ago and the elaborate photoplays of 1916 is no greater than the difference between the evilly ventilated little nickelodeons and the luxurious theatre which was opened last night."

Luxury, attractiveness, and the convenience of patrons have evidently been Mr. Rothapfel's principal policy. The Rialto Theatre has an atmosphere of vastness, roominess, cleanliness and safety. Everything is provided for the patron as completely as at the Metropolitan Opera House, and the ushers, in neat livery, each with a silver-mounted swagger stick, are polite, and above all, serviceable. The seats are comfortable, and every one gives an unobstructed view of the screen.

The lighting effects are a source of constant admiration, and the program is practically the same as those which Mr. Rothapfel inaugurated at the Strand and the Knickerbocker, in New York.

A special program was arranged for the opening night, but we are given to understand that this same program will be followed in form at all performances, with weekly changes. This is the order of entertainment presented for the opening:

1. Opening of the Rialto; special music and singing, including the "Rialto March," composed for the occasion by A. Holzman.
2. Rialto topical digest; a combination of various news weeklies.
3. Two solos by Mary Ball.
   Classical dance, by Pauline McCorkle and Violet Marcellus.
4. Travelogue pictures.
5. Violin solo by S. Fidelman.
6. Five-reel feature—Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad-Man."
7. Baritone solo by Alfred de Manby.
   Male quartet.
8. Two-reel Keystone comedy—Roscoe Arbuckle in "The Other Man."

A representative gathering attended the opening. Men and women prominent in the motion picture industry, as well as in amusement and social circles, were on hand, and the foyers, balconies and boxes presented a scene almost as brilliant as a night at the opera. The performance was delayed to allow the crowds to surge around the house and inspect its arrangements.

Striking Light Effects

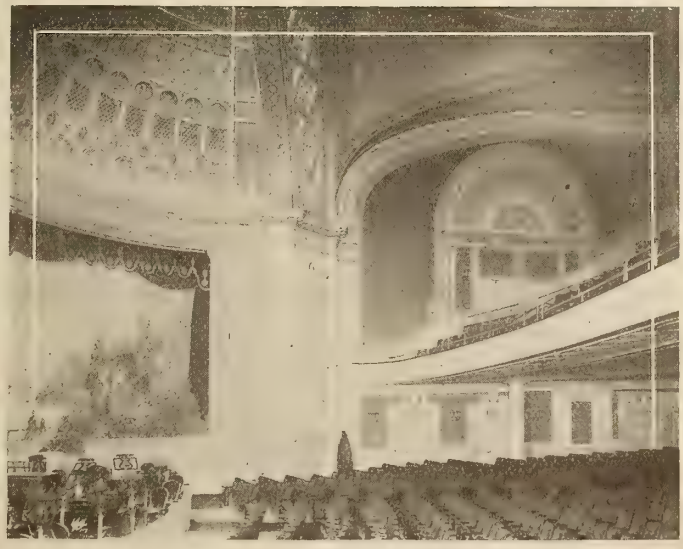
Then a bugle call announced the fact that the entertainment would begin in five minutes. The corridors were quickly deserted, and by the time the orchestra struck the first notes the seats were filled.

Lights, shedding a soft violet glow over the auditorium, changed to lavender, to rose and to a soft yellow, while the great pipe organ, one of the largest in the country, started in on the special dedication number. The orchestra, of thirty-one pieces, and a chorus of thirty voices joined in.

Then came the "Rialto March," a stirring number, after which Hugo Reisenfeld, the musical director, leaped up the steps, reached behind a maroon curtain, and brought out Mr. Rothapfel, who bowed to the cheering audience.

Although the Rialto was announced as a theatre without a stage, it has enough of a stage to accommodate not only the large chorus, but to provide room for dancers. These extra numbers, however, were kept short, and the Rialto kept well within its character of photoplay house.

Orchestra, boxes and balcony were filled, and everybody on hand seemed anxious to have a part in making the new venture a success. Mr. Rothapfel and his executive staff, consisting of Alfred de Manby, personal assistant; Charles G. Stewart, manager; Edwin Mocsary, treasurer, and Ben H. Atwell, publicity director, were very much on the job, each one with his hands full in his separate department.



HOW THE AUDITORIUM OF THE NEW RIALTO THEATRE LOOKS: GENERAL IMPRESSION OF THE DECORATION SCHEME

REAR OF ORCHESTRA FLOOR, SHOWING APPROACH TO MEZZANINE AND BALCONY

ARE YOUR PATRONS DOING THIS, MR. EXHIBITOR?

Motion picture theatre patrons of Terre Haute, Ind., are writing to their congressmen and senators to oppose any legislation that is designed to bring about federal censorship of films.

The Terre Haute Tribune has been running editorials on the question, in one issue remarking:

"It can be said now that the bill has much emphatic opposition, but meager support. It is opposed by many who have not the least interest in motion pictures, but who object to the establishment of the censorship principle in this country. It is opposed by others on the ground of its needless abrogation of home rule in a matter which is not of vital importance. A third ground of opposition is the undesirability at this time of creating new political jobs where jobs are not needed.

"Three states—Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kansas—already have state censorship. Some of the cities have special censorship arrangements. Where there are no censors police regulation is deemed sufficient assurance that the public morals will not be corrupted. And there also is the existing National Board of Censorship, an unofficial body composed of sociologists and public men who receive no compensation and whose dicta are heeded by the great majority of motion picture manufacturers."

Ben Atwell especially distinguished himself in the arrangement of a "magazine program" of thirty-two pages, containing not only the program for the evening, but also a biographic sketch of Mr. Rothapfel, three pages of editorial, a description of the Grand Organ, sparkling notes and verses on the motion picture and kindred subjects, announcement of coming pictures and numerous advertisements. The spirit of this program is embodied in a little verse entitled "The Motion Picture," the authorship of which is credited to Alfred de Manby:

"'A child was born'—
Cradled in obscurity
And nurtured by unceasing pains
This wonderful invention now hath grown
To be a mighty force.

Love, hatred, passion,
Comedy and scenic beauty rare—
The best the world can give a plot of news,
As in a mirror's face
The camera doth reflect.

A thousand minds
Their genius shall combine
To minister unto your pleasure here
By this great means—
The motion picture.

Our tale is told—
'Tis but a prologue to the show.
Now for your approval we present
These three great arts—
Light, music, picture, all intent
On ministering unto your pleasures here."

Analysis and criticism of the projection, lightning effects and other accessory features of the Rialto appear in another place in this issue. Although a number of these, especially the projection, and the house arrangement, deserve criticism, there is much in their defence. It must be borne in mind that the Rialto was made ready for this opening under great difficulties, and at the cost of much labor. Things so intricate in their details cannot be perfected under these conditions, and when their newness wears off the imperfections should disappear.

Mr. Rothapfel has a large staff to assist him in bringing perfect order out of his arrangements. Besides those already mentioned, the staff includes: Dr. A. L. Robyn and Edwin Johnston, organists; Belle Louise Siegel, secretary; Lester Bowen, chief operator; George Larbig, chief electrician; William Fox and William Galvin, assistant electricians; Ira B. Scribner, master of properties; Joseph La Rose, master of effects, and Herman F. Innecken, head usher.

The hemi-cycle of loge boxes were occupied by men and women prominent in all walks of life. In the center box J. W. Binder entertained a party which included Colonel and Mrs. E. M. House, Ambassador and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, and Mr. and Mrs. William A. Johnston. The heads of several of the larger film manufacturing companies entertained parties in other boxes.

WORLD FILM DECIDES TO SEND ITS PLAYERS TO LEAGUE EXPOSITION

The World Film Corporation has decided that the players on its roster, including Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Gail Kane, Holbrook Blinn, House Peters, Carlyle Blackwell, Kitty Gordon, Muriel Ostriche, Jane Grey, June Elvidge, Frances Nelson, Mollie King, Gerda Holmes, Edna Wallace Hopper, Julius Steger, Clara Whippie, Frank Sheridan, Doris Kenyon, Chester Barnett, Johnny Hines, Arthur Ashley and Zena Keefe and others, will be at the call of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League for their annual trade show at the Grand Central Palace during the week from May 1 to 6, and that they would not participate in any counter attraction, either during the same week or later.

This decision was reached when it was learned that the exhibitors were to hold a trade show. The fact that William A. Brady, the general manager of the corporation, believes that the exhibitors are the proper medium to recognize in the trade show, led to the final conclusion it is announced.

OHIO CENSORS THREATEN TO PROSECUTE EXHIBITORS FOR DISREGARD OF CUT-OUT ORDERS

The Ohio Board of Censorship, finding that its cut-out orders on films are being disregarded by motion picture theatre managers in all parts of the state, has asked Assistant Attorney General Ballard, who has headquarters in Columbus, to prosecute all offenders.

In all, over one thousand cut-outs have been ordered, but few of the orders have been obeyed. Chairman Charles G. Williams acted for the board. It is expected that an effort will be made to send some of the offenders to prison.

TRIANGLE INSTALLS BUREAU OF INFORMATION

The Triangle Film Corporation has been forced to make an expensive innovation. This is a bureau of information for the convenience of patrons of motion picture theatres. Thus the producer comes in direct touch with the consumer over the head of the exhibitor or middleman.

A wire into the new offices of the Triangle in the Brokaw Building, at Forty-second street and Broadway, New York, has been turned over to this new department and now all day long one may be informed that William S. Hart's newest picture may be seen at Such-and-Such theatre or that Douglas Fairbanks in an old release is just reaching the screen at the This-and-That theatre.

S. Eckman, Jr., manager of the New York branch, is in supervisory charge of the new service bureau of co-operation with customers.

TORONTO EXHIBITOR CHARGED WITH BREAKING LAW BECAUSE CROWDS WANTED TO SEE METRO STARS

Toronto, Ont., April 22.

An odd echo of the Metro Ball, held in Toronto, was heard in the Toronto police court the other day, when the proprietor of one of the uptown theatres was charged with obstructing the sidewalk during the night when Bushman and Bayne made a tour of the city.

The exhibitor stated that he was unable to handle the crowds which were somewhat disappointed at not seeing the two stars at the time when they were advertised to be at the house. The case was remanded for a short time.

CORNERSTONE OF FIRST PARAGON THEATRE, PART OF CHAIN OF 50, IS LAID IN BEACON, N. Y.

Louis B. Jennings, president of the American Film Laboratories, announces that the laying of the cornerstone of the Paragon theatre in Beacon, N. Y., was a great success.

This is the first theatre of the proposed chain of fifty to be erected by the Paragon Theatres Corporation.

The ceremony caused considerable stir in the city. School children, boy scouts and other organizations turned out in uniform so that from the demonstration it is an acknowledged fact that the leading citizens of the city are behind the undertaking.

"WAR-TORN POLAND" GETS PREMIERE AT STAR, CHICAGO

"War-Torn Poland," Selig, opened its premiere performance at the Star theatre, Chicago, Ill., beginning Monday, April 24. The film is creating interest not only among the Polish population, but other followers of the great conflict now being waged in Europe.

Territorial rights for "War-Torn Poland" have been disposed of in a number of States, and the indications are that an additional number will be sold at once.

"Civilization" Is Plea Against Savagery of War

Ince Picture, Which Will Take Rank Among the Wonderful Examples of Cinema Art, Is Given Premier in Los Angeles—Almost a Year Was Required for Its Completion and Several Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Were Spent by the Producer to Obtain a Masterpiece

(Top, left to right) BOMB EXPLODING IN PALACE; VISION SCENE; IN THE MINISTRY CHAMBER

Los Angeles, April 22.

ALMOST a year and several hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by Thomas H. Ince in the making of a cinema production which widens the scope of the film industry, or the Fifth Estate, as it is now known. This is an entirely new kind of subject, being unlike anything heretofore shown on the screen.

"Civilization" is a sermon based on the uselessness of war, and emphasizes the fact that in nineteen centuries humanity has failed to accept the teachings of Jesus Christ. As such, it is a wonderful preachment that pictures the suffering resulting from war, more effectively than it is possible for writers or speakers to describe it. The film was given its premier Monday evening, April 17, at the Triangle Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, and will be released as a theatrical production.

The plot for this greatest work of Ince is decidedly simple, and may be summed up in the statement that the king of an imaginary government is brought to realize that it is unchristian to cause the murder of thousands that he may gain fame, prestige and additional power, but a marvelous continuity was worked out for this by C. Gardner Sullivan which provides spectacular settings and action and highly dramatic situations.

A Photoplay Sermon

The photoplay sermon opens with views depicting happiness among all classes, and in all quarters of the kingdom of Wredpryd, for there is plenty. The war cloud darkens the horizon and the question of declaring hostilities is debated in the house of parliament. Hundreds take part in the enthusiastic gathering in the galleries. The last speech is for peace, and ends with the sub-title "Are ye wolves that ye clamor for the blood of those whom ye do not know?" and "Will the grief of a million widows assuage that of a few?" The vote is taken, and so evenly are the factions divided that the question is referred to the king for decision. At the meeting of the cabinet war is declared. The Count is summoned, and the ruler promises him anything he may desire if he will perfect a new model of submarine he has been working on. The Count asks for the hand of the king's daughter.

Gripping Battle Scenes

There is joy and sorrow at the capital as the troops march away, and thousands participate in the great scenes. Panorama views from the tower of the capitol building show the great gathering, the bands playing, the fond good-byes, and shadows of the aerial fleet are seen as the crafts fly above. In the first engagement the army is repulsed, and a call is sent for more troops. Men, old and young, are taken from the bosom of their families and forced to serve for the glory of the king, and to quote a sub-title, "Red war grips the nation by the throat."

A most thrilling engagement with approximately twenty boats of all types taking part is seen. Several ships are destroyed by various means of modern warfare. The enemy's aerial fleet attacks the capital city, and aeroplanes are seen dropping bombs on the peaceful metropolis. The arsenal where the Count is working on his submarine is dynamited, and he is carried to the king's palace more dead than alive. The king summons the eminent physicians of the land, and commands them to save the Count's life.

The Count in reality is dead, and on the borderland between earth and eternity he is met by the Saviour, who shows him the horrors of hell with "Behold Immortal Hate chained to himself—it is him whom you have worshipped as your god." Finally the Saviour makes to the Count this proposition: "Would thou redeem the soul thou hast bartered away for ambition and pride?" "Grant me to do with as I will the body thou hast left on earth." "In the body thou hast granted I shall return to earth and strive to teach them as I strove before, that love, not hate, is my Father's sceptre."

Unusual Vision Scenes

The body of the Count is apparently revived after an all-night vigil by the physicians, but it is a different being. His first utterance is "Let there be peace," and from then on he is an advocate of peace, causing riots and pleading with the women to unite in their demands for the prevention of further suffering from war. He is arrested at the order of the king and condemned to a traitor's death. As he is led to the prison he faints, and the guard sees in this a re-enactment of the Saviour falling under the weight of the cross. In the prison the Count dies naturally. When the king arrives to see him the soul that has occupied the body since its former death leaves, and the king recognizes in the apparition Jesus Christ. The ruler is shown the destruction death and suffering his unnecessary war has caused, when he is led from place to place by the Saviour. They visit trenches where the wounded wallow in mud. He sees one soldier gouge out, with a boyonet, the life of another, following the sub-title, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." The king is also shown the destruction by bombs from the aerial fleet, of Red Cross wagons carrying wounded from the field and an improvised hospital and its occupants blown to atoms. Finally Christ and the king reach the registry of humanity and the latter sees his name blotted out.

TWO SCENES FROM "BUNGLING BILL, DOCTOR," AND "SLIPPING IT OVER ON FATHER" (Vogue Mutual)

Thousands of Women Carrying Lilies

The women organize and a great peace pageant is given in the courtyard of the capitol buildings, with thousands of women in the garb of Sisters of Charity, all carrying calla lilies. "Peace that offers honor but denies conquest" has been offered the kingdom, and the king accepts. The army returns and there is joy for some, but sadness for many, with the starting anew for all.

This is a picture that holds the interest from beginning to end. There is hardly a scene in which the action of the photo-sermon does not move rapidly. It leads on and on from one climax to another, until the king sees the folly of his inhuman slaughter of thousands, and wants peace. "Civilization" is decidedly human. Sadness and suffering depicted in many scenes strike sympathetic chords in the hearts of all, and there are few who will see this picture through without a tear.

"Civilization," in several respects, is one of the three greatest pictures so far released. Photographically, it is equal to anything which has been shown on the screen, and contains a number of scenes that for beauty surpass previous effects. It is hard to conceive of anything more beautiful than that of the black cloud from back of which the moon shines, radiating a silver lining on all sides. A new toning process gives wonderful night battle scenes, with the blue sky above, and the red flames issuing from the guns. The scenes of purgatory, with the writhing mass of naked forms, gives life to "Dante's Inferno." Numerous silhouettes of night charges add beauty.

Fully one-fourth of the picture portrays land, naval and aerial warfare, with infantry, cavalry, armored motor cars, submarines, torpedo boat destroyers, gatling guns, shrapnel, coast defence mortar guns, and the entire Pacific squadron taking part. The destruction of gigantic warships by submarine projectiles is shown, the photography being so sharp that the projectile is seen plowing through the water.

Everything on Immense Scale

The production bears out the statement that no expense has been spared. The capitol building and courtyard thereabout, containing numerous buildings of modern skyscraper type of construction, is but one setting that cost a small fortune. The buildings for this were practical throughout, containing glass, curtains and many furnishings. The interior settings used are in keeping with the subject, and radiate an atmosphere of wealth, affluence and splendor. The most expensive were the house of parliament, the ministerial council room, the king's chamber and the princess' boudoir.

It is said more than three hundred thousand feet of negative film was used in the making. This has been cut to ten reels, which, with the prologue and epilogue, require for showing about three hours. Every scene is short, and devoid of all but what might be termed "punchy" action. There must be more than four hundred scenes. The sub-titles are embellished with suggestive designs in keeping with the scenes that follow.

Incidental music for the subject synchronizes with the action, and is in harmony with every scene. This was prepared by Victor Schertzinger, and is original throughout. The composition consists of a longer score than that required for a grand opera. There are forty-two different themes, and the orchestra consisted of thirty-two pieces. There are several vocal numbers given by a chorus back of the screen.

In the prologue a group of peasants are shown toiling contentedly. When the Angelus rings there is a distant rumble of cannon, and the war god appears. There is an instantaneous transformation and the wake of death and destruction is shown. The epilogue is a return to the last scene of the prologue, in which the angel of peace stands triumphant over the crushed god of war.

Strong Cast of Players

Too much cannot be said for the cast. Howard Hickman and Hershal Mayall as Count Ferdinand and the king, respectively, carry the bulk of the scenes, the former being the most difficult because of the double role. First he is the ambitious Count, and later personifies the Saviour. The dominant figure, the Christus, was taken by George Fisher. Lola May appeared as the princess, Charles K. French the minister of war, and J. Frank Burke the peace advocate. That Ince selected players in keeping with the quality of the subject he wished to make is emphasized by every scene.

In the making Mr. Ince had the co-operation of practically every member of his directing and producing staff, but of these much credit must be given Raymond B. West, who worked out many of the wonderful photographic effects, and directed a greater number of the scenes in collaboration with Ince. Mr. Ince also desires to give credit to the following assistants for their aid in the production: Jay Hunt, Reginald Barker, Irving Willat, J. Parker Reed, Walter Edwards and David M. Hartford.

The premier was attended by an unusual array of screen stars. Every producing company was represented by leading men and women, directors, scenario writers, cameramen and executives of the industry. Prominent in the audience were Thomas Dixon and T. H. Gould of National Drama; Frank E. Wood, DeWolf Hopper, Douglas Fairbanks, Fay Tincher, Ralph Lewis, Norma Talmadge, Robert Harron and Dorothy Gish of Fine Arts; Jack Pickford of Selig; Ruth Roland and Henry King, Balboa; George Beban and William D. Taylor, Morosco-Pallas; Agnes Vernon, Thomas Jefferson, Herbert Rawlinson and Marshall Stedman, Universal; Mack Sennett, Charles Murray, Fred Mace, Mack Swain and Joe Jackson, Keystone; practically every star and director of the Ince plant, and a great gathering from other studios. A local civic organization presented Mr. Ince with a floral offering six by twelve feet in dimensions, with "Civilization" inlaid in purple on a field of white carnations.

American Film Signs Four More Important Stars

"Bennett Is More Than Gifted Actor; He Is a Creator in His Art," Declares President Hutchinson—Helen Holmes Is Known for Her Daring in Railroad Stories—Mary Miles Minter Possesses Qualities Endearing Her to the Public—Audrey Munson, "Inspiration" Beauty, Has Posed for Famous Sculptors

FOUR stars for special features are announced by the Mutual Film Corporation. They are: Richard Bennett, Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes and Audrey Munson.

The announcement comes from Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, who came to New York to close the contracts for his company and to confer with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual.

"These stars will appear in productions of not less than five reels, to be released through the Mutual as special features," said Mr. Hutchinson. "These actors will work at the American's big new studios at Santa Barbara. Preparations have been made to do the fullest photographic justice to the high standards we have set for these productions, both in cast and scenario.

"I am especially pleased to be able to announce our contract with Richard Bennett. Mr. Bennett is considerably more than a gifted actor. He is a dramatic creator, a producer, a student of his art and the public. His very substantial success on the speaking stage is the best evidence of his rare ability to recognize what the public wants.

"I think Mr. Bennett has for the dramatic production of the motion picture that same unusual ability which enabled a certain great editor to always print the story the public wanted and to quit printing it one day before the public lost interest in it.

Mary Miles Minter Endeared to Public

"In Mary Miles Minter we have acquired a star who combines the many essential qualities of endearment to the public. She has them all—youth, innocence, naivete, ingenuousness, beauty of face and form, screen presence, dramatic ability, and an established following among patrons, especially the younger set. Miss Minter is coming to us at the most significant period of her career, at the time when her greatest work is possible.

"Helen Holmes, who has just signed a new contract with us, is being given opportunity for work in strong emotional roles. Her particular daring and skill in the more spectacular parts are well known. There is, however, an even more interesting side of Miss Holmes' work that can be given fuller development. The parts she will take in some of the special features to come will afford unusual interest to her already very large and established following. She, as well as the other stars working for the American, will have the benefit of the efforts of the best authors and the best directors.

"The contract with Miss Munson, just now announced, was closed some weeks ago and she has started to work on a special art feature. Miss Munson's first photoplay appearance in "Inspiration," made under the supervision of Edwin Thanhouser, was a distinct success.

"The new Munson feature would not be possible without her. It is being made with some novel and effective special effects in light treatment. Extreme care is being taken to give it the particular touch of artistry that her beauty requires.

Features True to Art

"These special features will be made in 'natural lengths,' that is to say, of a film footage necessary to the proper presentation of the story and yet held within the limits that make it practical for screening within the requirements of the motion picture theatre. There will be neither padding of story or timing to the 'bleeding point.' These features will be true art."

Mr. Hutchinson declined to discuss salary figures in connection with any of the stars enumerated.

Mary Miles Minter, a native of Shreveport, La., began her stage career at the age of five, appearing with Nat Goodwin and Dustin Farnum. One of her greatest legitimate successes was established in "The Littlest Rebel." Her first film engagement was with World Film, where she was cast for the principal role in "The Waif and the Fairy." Later she went to Metro, appearing as the star in several photoplays.

Richard Bennett, whose fame as a legitimate star is thoroughly established, scored his greatest triumph in "Damaged Goods," which ran two years in New York and afterwards was taken to all the large cities of the country. Early in 1915, Mr. Hutchinson prevailed upon Mr. Bennett to star with his co-workers in a screen version of the Brieux play. The feature, in seven acts, was released by the Mutual late in 1915, and has been one of the reigning successes of picture history.

Audrey Munson, an artist's model sought by sculptors and painters the world over because of her beauty of form, has posed for some of the most distinctive pieces of American sculpture. Among these are Daniel Chester French's Statue of Evangeline, the symbolical figure of History which adorns the Florida State Capital, and a number of figures on buildings at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. She appears also on several noted groups of New York statuary.

Helen Holmes Needs No Introduction

Helen Holmes needs no introduction to the picturegoing public. Her first engagement was with the Keystone Company. She then entered the employ of Kalem where her work in the stellar role of "The Hazards of Helen" made her name a household word.

Miss Holmes was selected by President Hutchinson as the heroine of "The Girl and the Game," the Signal-Mutual chaptered photoplay which was screened under the direction of J. P. McGowan. She is now working in "Whispering Smith," a five-reel feature under way at the American studios. This is being screened from the story by Frank H. Spearman.

Two Anxious Young Women Get Tryouts at Horsley's

"The Traitor" May Prove Steadfast Friend to Rosebud Hill and Clair Alexander, Depending Upon the Public's Opinion of This Picture for Long Contract

TWO new members have been added to the Cub comedy company by Director Milton H. Fahrney, and had their try-out in one of the George Ovey vehicles, "The Traitor," and in the event of their coming up to expectations they will probably be found among the members of this comedy company in future productions.

ROSEBUD HILL CLAIR ALEXANDER

They are Rosebud Hill and Clair Alexander. Director Fahrney will have an opportunity to pass judgment on the young women, and maybe end his long search for a woman who is capable of playing opposite Mr. Ovey.

Miss Hill comes very highly recommended, as does Miss Alexander. Miss Hill is about two or three inches shorter than Ovey and Miss Alexander is about that much shorter than Miss Hill.

In "The Traitor" they are cast as Flora and Dora, two dancing girls. Both are said to be exponents of some very novel and interesting steps, and their work will be watched with considerable interest.

Besides being a comedy, this picture is said to be filled with thrills. The blowing up of a two-story building is among the features, and the flight of George Ovey in an aeroplane adds another big "punch." In a street scene in India Mr. Fahrney uses the entire strength of the Cub company, besides fifty extras as natives.

KNICKERBOCKER PRESS SHEETS ARE ELABORATE

Supplementary to the regular monthly bulletin issued to exhibitors by Knickerbocker Star Features is a new and elaborate series of press sheets designed as part of the publicity campaign for the five-reel Knickerbocker features. The first of these press sheets will be issued this week in advance of the Lois Meredith feature, "Spellbound," scheduled for release on May 17.

Several novel ideas of arrangement and subject matter give distinction to the press sheet and enhance its value to the exhibitor. While no pains have been spared to cover the subject from all angles of trade and popular interest, brevity and conciseness have been borne in mind, with the result that all the necessary information is contained in four pages. The bulletin is printed in colors.

Novel forms of heralds have also been adopted for the five-reel Knickerbocker Star Features, combining the utmost of artistic effect with the minimum of cost in a first edition of 1,000,000 copies.

Stage Now Goes to Screen for Productions

On Appearance of Turnbull's "Cheat," Lasky, Broadway Theatrical Men Saw Its Possibilities as a "Legitimate" Attraction, and Woods Acquired Rights to Put It on the Boards

HECTOR TURNBULL, who a little more than a year ago resigned as dramatic critic for the New York Tribune, and went to Los Angeles to join the Lasky scenario staff, has been in New York for the last week, renewing old acquaintances, and discussing the needs of the screen from the writers' standpoint.

Since going to the coast, Mr. Turnbull has been closely associated with Cecil De Mille at the Lasky studios. He has made a close study of the photo drama, and has also found time to write half a dozen strong photoplays, which have been produced by the Lasky company for the Paramount program.

One of the objects of his trip to New York was to confer with photoplaywrights, many of whom are already under contract to his company, and go over with them the outlook for the future, and the immediate needs of the scenario department. He has had several conferences with local newspaper men who are to write for Lasky, and in these conferences has expressed the view that the motion picture not only has reached the point of high dramatic development—the point where it is, and must be pure drama in itself—but that it soon will lead the stage as a source of material for dramatic offerings.

Evidence of this is found in Mr. Turnbull's own photoplay, "The Cheat," in which Fannie Ward was presented. Immediately after its production, several Broadway theatrical men saw in it excellent material for a stage production; eventually arrangements were made whereby A. H. Woods acquired the stage rights to "The Cheat," and will reverse the usual operation by making a stage play from a picture.

"We have found," said Mr. Turnbull to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "that different audiences require different pictures; they want pictures laid in scenes, and depicting the phase of life which they themselves know. A westerner wants western drama, a middle westerner, the rural stuff, and the New Yorker wants New York. But no matter what the locale, the audiences now insist that the pictures contain drama of a high order.

"It was only a short time ago when the screen was almost wholly dependent upon plays or well-known novels suitable for translation to the motion picture. The photodrama as a part has developed along lines quite parallel to the stage, and yet decidedly distinct. It was only natural that the stage and the library should furnish a fund of material, but it was not necessary, nor has it proved so, that the screen was to be wholly dependent upon these resources.

"If for no other reason than the fact that several million people will see every good feature produced, it should be sufficient inspiration for well-known writers to concentrate upon the motion picture. In no medium, not even the newspapers or national magazines, has the man who has something to say so receptive and enormous an audience as that provided by the motion picture.

"As to the adaptation to the stage of well known screen plays, it follows as a natural course that this is to be a step in their evolution and development. With all its wonderful powers of illusion, strength of characterization, its breadth of atmosphere, its extraordinary detail, the motion picture, when it does successfully translate to the screen a well-known production, nevertheless leaves the actors mute.

"There have been several original photoplays which possess splendid opportunity for the spoken stage. When you consider that these first have to compete successfully with filmed versions of dramas, it follows as a natural course that when they are bedecked and elaborated with careful dialogue, their potency on the stage will be as marked and effective as the best plays written essentially for the drama."

Mr. Turnbull is taking several new photoplays back to the Los Angeles studios.

Pictures Made by Uncle Sam for Gaumont Scenics

Among the "See America First" Series Will Be Films of National Parks, Forest Reserves and Industries Under Eye of Government, Taken for Department of Interior

THE unusual interest created by the scenic series of the Gaumont Company, "See America First," has been heightened by the further announcement that among these pictures will be many taken by the United States Department of the Interior. The photography was done for the government by H. T. Cowling. Mr. Cowling has filmed national parks, forest reserves, reclamation projects and many industries whose raw products are dependent upon conservation by the Department of the Interior.

The authorities at Washington have given the pictures their official sanction by permitting the use of the following introduction which will be used in presenting the pictures to screen patrons.

"These motion pictures were taken by the Department of the Interior under whose permission they are now exhibited by the Gaumont Company."

It is not the intention of the Gaumont Company to release these pictures in consecutive order. To give the series variety, there will be interspersed pictures of cities and places of historic and scenic interest just as are at present shown.

Mr. Cowling has traveled wherever the Department of the Interior has had supervision throughout the United States. His film serves as a record for the department. Acting for the Gaumont Company, C. M. White has had screened the results of Mr. Cowling's activities with a camera. Those which make a popular appeal have been selected by him for "See America First."

"I have seen practically all the motion pictures used by lecturers upon the United States," said Mr. White in describing the features he had secured from the government, "and I can frankly say that I have never seen any photography surpass the work of Mr. Cowling. Not only are his light effects exceptional, but he has exercised the news instinct of a magazine writer and filmed his subjects in a manner that brings out their strong and interesting characteristics to the best advantage."

One of the first releases will be Yosemite National Park.

"Gloria" in Big Houses Before General Release Date

Billie Burke Picture from Kleine Is Signed for Showing in Studebaker, Chicago, Arcadia, Philadelphia, and Other Large Theatres Previous to May 22

HEAVY bookings are reported by George Kleine for "Gloria's Romance," the Rupert Hughes film novel in which Billie Burke is featured. Contracts are being closed for a showing of the film in a few of the largest theatres of the country prior to the general release date of the first chapter, May 22.

Among the houses which are contracting for the serial are the Studebaker, in Chicago, under the management of Jones, Linick and Schaefer; the Arcadia, in Philadelphia, which is operated by the Stanley Company; the Mary Anderson, at Louisville, one of the Keith houses, and the Isis, at Denver, operated by Mr. Baxter. Ascher Brothers, owners of a circuit of neighborhood theatres in Chicago and vicinity, have taken the production for each of the houses in the chain, while in the East and South more than a dozen big chain owners are bidding against one another for a showing of the pictures, it is announced.

"CITY OF ILLUSION," NO DELUSION, GETS SOLID BOOKINGS

At this early date, actually less than two weeks since its release, "The City of Illusion," the Ivan feature current for April, is reported as doing big business.

Theatres in Many Illinois Towns Inaugurate Children's Programs—22 Houses in Chicago Give Special Matinees for Kiddies—In Springfield Two Special Shows Are Given Every Saturday Morning—Other Towns Hold Special Showings—Cleveland, O., and Rochester, N. Y., Provided for Entertainment of Youngsters

Springfield, Ill., April 22.

THE cry of boys and girls of Illinois for motion pictures just for themselves, is being heard all over the state. And the demand of these little ones is being backed up by their mothers, for Women's clubs in nearly every city are agitating special shows for children.

Exhibitors are heeding the cry and are going out to get pictures that are suitable for children's performances. It won't be long before manufacturers will find the demand so strong that they will begin giving serious thought to providing films especially for the little folks.

In every city where children's performances are being given the attendance is increasing. Live exhibitors have found novel means of advertising these special shows for little ones, and some have arranged a trading agreement with merchants whereby a certain amount of goods purchased entitles the buyer to a ticket for the children's performance.

At the recent annual convention of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association, held at Cairo, Ill., Mrs. Frederick Michael, chairman of the social service committee, reported on moving pictures as educational assets. She declared that the campaign for better pictures for children was receiving the support of educators and women throughout Illinois.

"Twenty-two theatres in Chicago are giving special children's performances," she said, "and fifteen other cities of the state have theatres giving children's shows. Generally speaking, we have found the theatre managers eager to co-operate with us in this work."

Special Shows for Children in Springfield

Of course, the children's shows have been a feature among the Chicago exhibitors for some time, but it is only recently that exhibitors in other cities in the state have been taking up this feature of the motion picture field.

In Springfield, two special shows are given for the children every Saturday morning. Manager Harry Thornton, of the Gaiety theatre, puts on a special show for the little ones at 10:30 o'clock each Saturday, and the members of the Women's Improvement League also put on a show at the Christ Church parish house for children.

At Danville, the Lyric theatre puts on a special matinee of vaudeville and pictures every Saturday afternoon. The New Colonial theatre at Galesburg offers fairy tales and similar pictures at a matinee for the kiddies Saturday afternoons. Special pictures for the boys and girls are shown at 10 o'clock Saturday mornings at the Colonial theatre at Champaign.

The Bond theatre at Pontiac entertains the children at a special show on Saturday afternoons. At the Irvin theatre in Bloomington the children are entertained at a special show, beginning at 10:30 o'clock Saturday mornings. The shows are under the direction of the members of the Women's Club and special committees of the women attend to care for the little ones.

The matter of special shows for children was the subject of much discussion among members of the Illinois branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, when they held their convention in Chicago recently. Indications are that before long practically every city in the state will have its special shows for children.

Children's Programs Prove Popular in Cleveland

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, O., April 22.

The "Better Films" movement worked out by the Federation of Women's Clubs with the co-operation of the exhibitors, has been successfully launched in Cleveland. The first program selected was shown at the Marquis theatre last Friday night and the house was packed at both performances. Club women of the city are supporting the movement loyally, both by personal attendance and commendation.

Other motion picture houses lined up to show the selected programs are the Carlyon, the Angela, Wind-A-Meer, the Boulevard and the Columbia. Each owner has promised to try out the experiment for six or eight weeks. The initial program was composed of "The Making of Geoffrey Manning"; "Human Movements Analyzed"; a Pathé feature, and "From Jungle to Travel."

The motto of the federation is "Something for everyone in the family; entertaining films, worth seeing and remembering, with no over-emphasis on bad manners or bad morals."

Children's matinees in Cleveland and its suburbs on a recent Saturday were better attended than ever before. The Alhambra, with a seating capacity of 1,400, was unable to take care of all its little visitors. The special children's features were "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," a Jungle comedy, featuring the educated monkeys, Napoleon and Sally, and a news weekly. The new Sidney Drew comedy was appropriately called "Happy Childhood Days."

The Lakewood theatre was packed to overflowing all afternoon, and police were on duty to prevent overcrowding. Special firemen were also on duty. The Lakewood ushers have received special fire drill. The management claims that the theatre could be emptied in four minutes.

The Monarch theatre, which is on the other side of the street from the Alhambra, and the Wind-A-Meer, also had large attendances at their children's matinees. The Knickerbocker theatre, running its regular program and an additional comedy, was likewise packed. Exhibitors declare that the Saturday afternon children's matinee has come to stay. There is great competition for films specially suited to such performances and the exchanges are pressing producers to meet the new and growing demand.

Children's Films Shown at Regent, Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., April 22.

There is one theatre in this city presenting a special program of photoplays for children each week, on Saturday morning. That is as far as the special children's program has gone here, but it is being continued week after week, in spite of the fact that it is not being very well patronized..

The programs are presented under the auspices of a committee of thirty women, who have banded themselves together under the slogan, "Better Movies for Children."

Many of the pictures they have asked for and passed, after seeing them screened, are pictures that had already been shown in this city on regular programs, months ago, but they are the sort of pictures suitable for children's programs, and as the committee wanted them, they were shown.

The programs are shown at the Regent theatre, at a nominal admission. The state law as to the admission of children to theatres provides that all children under sixteen years of age must be accompanied by parent or guardian. To get around this the women called for volunteers, and each Saturday morning finds a squad of them in the lobby of the theatre. As fast as the children come in, the women take charge of them, dividing them into squads, each woman taking care of a group of thirty or so, securing their tickets, and seeing that they are seated.

The program usually opens with singing of popular and patriotic airs, led by a woman singer; an inspiring sight. This gives the performance the air of an exercise, to which the children are accustomed.

There has been no profit to the theatre so far for this departure from the usual routine, as the low price of admission means that a capacity business would mean just about making both ends meet, but the management believes it is a good thing, as it provides a chance for parents to let their children see motion pictures, without taking them to the shows intended for older people.

BUTTONS ISSUED BY KALEM FOR "SOCIAL PIRATES" PUBLICITY

In response to requests from exhibitors Kalem announces that the small buttons, which proved so popular a publicity aid with "Maxim's at Midnight," "Stingaree" and other Kalem features, have been issued for "The Social Pirates."

The buttons, three quarters of an inch in diameter, carry likenesses of Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, the stars in this George Bronson-Howard series. The early demand indicates that the buttons for "The Social Pirates" will equal the one million mark set by the aids for "Maxim's at Midnight."

150 HOUSES IN CHICAGO PROMISE 10 PERCENT OF RECEIPTS FOR FUND

Dispatches from Aaron J. Jones, chairman for the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund, Chicago, announce to National Chairman Goldfish that Chicago has already signed 150 theatres that will give ten percent of the gross receipts on Motion Picture Tribute Day, May 15. In this number are the biggest and most prosperous houses in the city.

"We are sending you these now, but we expect to have 400 on the list before May 15," said Mr. Jones. Marcus Loew is preparing a unique program for his theatres in New York City and vicinity for Motion Picture Tribute Day that will pack the houses to the very sidewalk. With the striking example of these two energetic theatre-owners and exhibitors, is the pleasing fact that nearly 1,200 theatres in the United States have already heartily signified their intention of making Tribute Day a success and gathering the $500,000 for the Motion Picture industry contribution to the million-dollar endowment of the Actors' Fund of America and the Actors' Home on Staten Island.

Rita Jolivet and Edna Goodrich with Morosco

Former Actress, Who Supplemented Numerous Stage Successes with a Number of Screen Hits, Is En Route to the Los Angeles Studios; Latter Is in Rehearsal of "The Tangle"

CLOSELY following the announcement of the acquisition of Vivian Martin, it was learned at the New York offices of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company that this concern has added two new stars to its roster in the persons of Rita Jolivet and Edna Goodrich. Both favorites of the screen and stage have appeared on the Paramount Program in the past under the Lasky trade-mark, Mlle. Jolivet in "The Unafraid" and Miss Goodrich in "Armstrong's Wife."

Mlle. Jolivet made her American stage debut with Otis Skinner in "Kismet" some four years ago and made an instantaneous success. Following a long run of this play at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, she appeared in "When Ignorance Is Bliss" at the Lyceum, New York; "What It Means to a Woman," at the Longacre, New York; "A Thousand Years Ago," at the Shubert, New York, and in other Broadway attractions. In London she enjoys a particularly large following as a result of her appearance at the Haymarket, Playhouse, Royalty, Comedy and other internationally known theatrical institutions.

A number of Italian photoplay successes produced by such organizations as Ambrosio and Gloria Films also present her in the chief role. Although the subject in which Mlle. Jolivet will make her initial screen appearance under the Morosco management is not known at this time, it is understood that it will be one of George Broadhurst's recent stage successes.

Edna Goodrich, whose greatest characterization on the stage was in the starring role of "The Genius" as Nell, although scarcely past her twenties, has spent eight years behind the footlights, during which time she has scored many triumphs. Among them are "When We Were Twenty-one," "The Gilded Fool," "In Missouri," "The Master Hand," "The Easterner," by George Broadhurst; "His Neighbor's Wife" and as a head liner in big time vaudeville in "The Awakening of Minerva." In Longfellow's "Evangeline," dramatized by Arthur Hopkins, she also became widely prominent. Miss Goodrich is already at work on her initial Morosco photoplay, "The Tangle." This production is an adaptation from the play, "The Making of Maddalena," in which Mary Emerson originally starred.

EDNA GOODRICH—RITA JOLIVET

The Goodrich photoplay will be released on the Paramount Program early in June and will be followed by the Jolivet production.

MME. PETROVA GOES TO BERMUDA FOR VACATION

Mme. Petrova, who has just completed the final scenes in "The Scarlet Woman," for the Metro program, has gone to Bermuda where she will spend a vacation of from ten days to two weeks.

Puritanic Putterers Plan "Picture Purity" Plane

This Happens to Rochester, N. Y., Just Through a Week of Censorship, and as Far as Public Can See There Is Absolutely No Change in Conditions as Compared with Those in Existence Before Uplifters Left Off Looking After Their Own Affairs and Began Regulating Other People's

Rochester, N. Y., April 22.

THIS city has gone through its first week of real censorship of motion picture films by the city authorities, and so far as the public can see, there is absolutely no change in conditions as compared with those that existed before the censorship went into effect.

Exhibitors claim that this shows they were censoring their pictures carefully long before the city authorities undertook the job.

Commissioner R. Andrew Hamilton, of the Department of Public Safety, is the man in charge of the censorship. The ordinance providing for censorship puts the responsibility on him, and directs him to use such men as are necessary to make the censorship effective. No addition of men to the police force for censorship purposes was needed, according to the commissioner, who has gone about the work in a sensible way.

"The theatre proprietors have been doing much censoring themselves," said Commissioner Hamilton, in discussing the situation. "They have contracts with producers and order from the lists of films submitted to them. They don't really know what they are getting until the films are put on the screens. They are careful in ordering by titles and synopses of plays, which are furnished them, and, when the plays are first shown on the screens, they cut out anything objectionable they see, or, if in doubt, send for us to look at it. Most of the big theatres screen their feature pictures before offering them to the public.

Complete List of Pictures

"We are arranging to have lists of all the films produced sent to us, with descriptions and reports on them. It will be possible from these descriptions to pick out films which may need cutting. Ninety per cent. of the films produced are unobjectionable, and it will be for the theatre men and this department to eliminate the other ten per cent.

"The motion picture men are co-operating with us heartily, and are prompt in sending in their lists for inspection, as well as eliminating objectionable features. I believe the censorship will run smoothly after a little time, and that we shall be able to carry out the spirit of the ordinance to the benefit of the public, and also of the theatre proprietors.

"I do not think it will be necessary for us to enlarge the police force to look after this business. An ordinance sergeant, a policewoman, and I are looking after the work. Recently I visited two theatres each night and some in the afternoon, and saw nothing objectionable.

"Other managers had cut parts of films out before showing them, without saying anything to my department, which shows the proper spirit on the part of the film exhibitors. It shows that they are really working with this department for better conditions. After a short time the film producers will know better than to send bad films to Rochester, and then our work will be greatly lessened.

"The National Board of Review sends to us lists of pictures examined and approved, and also notations of cuts ordered in certain films. We check these up to see if the cuts ordered have been made. If we find that they have not been made, we notify the board, and in future shall refuse to pass additional pictures made by the delinquent producers. While the National Board has no legal authority to enforce its orders, its moral force is great, and if its orders should be ignored, it could promptly bring a producer to terms by refusing to pass on his productions."

No Harsh Censorship

The remarks of the commissioner show that the censorship in Rochester is not to be objectionable or excessively harsh. It was brought about by a determined legal battle made by exhibitors from out of the city to show a film to which Mayor H. H. Edgerton and Chief of Police Joseph M. Quigley objected. At one stage of the fight, the exhibitors were victorious, having obtained a decision from a county judge to the effect that there was nothing objectionable in the film or story, and no reason why it shouldn't be shown. When another attempt was made to show it, the theatre which advertised it was promptly closed by the Department of Public Safety, on the ground that it was unsafe.

"Efforts to restrain the police from closing the theatre, by injunction, failed, the higher courts holding that the mayor had the last word as to the safety of a theatre. So the picture was not shown in the city, though it did have a run of three weeks in a theatre just over the city line.

Soon after this incident the Common Council passed the new censorship ordinance, which gave the commissioner of public safety the right to stop any film show which in his judgment was not right. In other words, it made it unnecessary to go to the courts and show that a film was objectionable before it could be stopped.

Drawing Power Is Aim of V-L-S-E Multiple Films

Big Four Plans for Next Few Months an Unusual Number of Features Capable of Adding Stimulus to Prestige and Profit of Exhibitors Handling Company's Regular Releases

IN LINE with the policy of the Big Four to offer at frequent intervals features of extra drawing power as added stimulus to the prestige and profit of the exhibitors handling the company's regular run of releases, there is announced for the next few months an unusual number of such pictures.

With "The Battle Cry of Peace" still playing to crowded houses all over the country, and "The Ne'er-Do-Well" creating a success, the new additions will give exhibitors a lever with which to boost summer business.

"Salvation Joan," a seven-part production which marks the return of Edna May—the famous heroine of "The Belle of New York"—to public life as an entertainer, although only released a week ago, has already established box office records, while the success of the Essanay-Chaplin burlesque on "Carmen" is remarkable, reports show.

This week marks another eight-reel feature, "God's Country and the Woman," presented by the Vitagraph company. It has been running at the Fulton theatre, where leading critics of the New York papers were most commendatory in their endorsement of it.

The next special production is the Essanay film version of "Sherlock Holmes," in seven reels, with William Gillette in the part which he has invested with world-wide success on the stage. It is scheduled for release May 15.

Work on "The Crisis," an adaptation of Winston Churchill's best-known novel, is proceeding rapidly at the Selig studios. The same cast which appears in "The Ne'er-Do-Well," will be seen in "The Crisis," and critics who have watched the filming of the feature, are unanimous in predicting that Selig will outdo all its previous successes.

An original drama entitled "The Combat," is fast assuming shape under the hands of Director Ralph Ince. This picture is scheduled for nine reels.

The Lubin Company is rounding out its extensive preparations for the filming of the three Rex Beach novels, "The Barrier," "The Iron Trail," and "The Silver Horde." All of Mr. Beach's stories are noted for their rapid action and wealth of stirring incidents, and those mentioned above are said to be particularly well suited for camera purposes.

IVY CLOSE NURSES ENGLISH TOMMIES

A Middlesex hospital is at present the scene of the labors of Ivy Close, the London favorite who, it is understood, may soon become a screen star. Miss Close has been devoting her time, with a number of prominent women of English society, to caring for the wounded and convalescent Tommies at the army hospital. Miss Close has also taken a prominent part in arranging entertainments at the hospital in which he is supported by an amateur cast, including some of the most prominent names in England.

SOME OF THE BIG SCENES IN WILLIAM FOX'S ANNETTE KELLERMANN SPECTACLE

Fox Marine Spectacle Finished After Nine Months

Herbert Brenon, Director General, Who Made the Annette Kellermann Multi-Reel, Returns from Jamaica to the States with Two Hundred of the Company

WILLIAM FOX has completed his Kellermann motion picture spectacle. Annette Kellermann, the star; Herbert Brenon, the director general and man who made the picture; Florence Deshon, Violet Horner, William E. Shay and two hundred others, principals and mermaids, returned on Wednesday aboard the United Fruit Company's liner Saramaca from Kingston, Jamaica, where they have been working since the middle of last August.

Nine months of labor were required to complete this multi-reel spectacle. Twenty thousand persons were employed in it as actors. Thousands of horses were brought to Jamaica for use in the battle and caravan scenes. Camels were brought down from the "States" and permitted to enter by special dispensation of the Colonial government.

Every branch and agency of the British government in Jamaica was courteously placed at the disposal of the William Fox organization to facilitate the making of his great picture.

Work on the film lasted from early morning in the semi-tropics till late in the evening. In the burning heat of the noontime the men employed under Mr. Brenon in the direction and organization of the picture were obliged to wear duck or canvas cowls to protect them against sunstroke. During the middle of last week the last foot of film was cranked through the cameras and the big battery of instruments sheathed for the last time.

Owing to the remarkable weather which prevails in Jamaica, not more than four days were lost in actual picture-taking in nine months. Storms that threatened to hit Jamaica head-on passed around the end of the island and spent themselves at sea. The taking of the mermaid scenes was attended by many difficulties. Rough seas endangered the lives of both directors and swimming girls and many of them were badly buffeted and scarred against the rocks that line the edges of St. Anne's Bay.

Accompanying Director General Brenon back to New York were the majority of the featured principals in the big picture and many of the mermaids. These girls, who were recruited from every part of the country and are the best women swimmers of the nation, return just in time for the opening of the summer season at the resorts on both coasts. They will quickly disperse and work throughout the summer at the beaches as instructors and lifeguards and also as swimming supervisors at the pools and playgrounds maintained in all of the larger cities of the country.

Having completed his first task Herbert Brenon will now start on another by no means secondary in importance—that of cutting and assembling this huge land and water spectacle. In this task he will share the burden with William Fox himself, and they will spend the next months on this work.

Thus far no authentic announcement comes from Mr. Fox as to the title of the Kellermann picture. More than a year ago William Fox said:

"I am going to make a picture that will top the five biggest pictures that have been made up to this time. I will have Mr. Brenon invest his picture with wonders that have never before been dreamed of by motion picture producers."

HARRISBURG, PA., LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 22.

The annual election of officers of the Harrisburg Local, No. 4, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Pennsylvania, was held in the Regent theatre, 410 Market street, this city, recently, and practically all the members were present. The following officers were chosen: Peter Magaro, Regent theatre, president; James George, Victoria theatre, vice-president; C. Floyd Hopkins, Colonial, Majestic and Orpheum theatres, secretary, and Isaac Marcus, Royal theatre, treasurer.

Plans were outlined for an aggressive campaign in the next few weeks to increase the membership of the local, so as to be able to report material gains in this respect at the annual meeting of the State organization which is to be held in Philadelphia in June.

President Magaro, who also is vice-president of the State League, reported that the various locals throughout the State already are taking an interest in the plans for the Philadelphia convention and the most important session in the history of the league is anticipated.

Brady Offers to Film Century Theatre "Tempest"

World Official Will Use the Cast Assembled for the Stage Attraction, Including Louis Calvert, Jane Grey, Fania Marinoff, Cecil Wyatt and Walter Hampden

WILLIAM A. BRADY, acting for the World Film Corporation, has made a proposition to John Corbin and Louis Calvert to produce in motion pictures the forthcoming production of Shakespeare's "Tempest," to be put on by Messrs. Calvert and Corbin at the Century theatre on April 24.

Mr. Brady agrees in his proposition to use the entire cast as assembled by Messrs. Corbin and Calvert, including Louis Calvert, Jane Grey, Walter Hampden, Fania Marinoff, George Hassell, Cecil Wyatt, Edward Mordant, Harry Sanford, Frederick Esmelton, Reginald Barlow and Frank Westerton and it is Mr. Brady's intention to surround the cast with an elaborate film production becoming the importance of the cast and play.

If this offer is accepted by the Corbin and Calvert interests, it is thought Mr. Brady will assign Maurice Tourneur to the directorial supervision of the picture, with Mr. Brady carrying out the policy of personally managing the artistic end.

The production of "The Tempest" will be begun as soon as arrangements are completed, with the acting company dividing their time between the Century theatre and the World Film studio at Fort Lee, N. J., allowing four days' work a week at the studio.

This is the first step in Mr. Brady's policy as announced recently of making film productions of New York successes and thus doing away with the necessity of sending out inferior casts in No. 2 and No. 3 companies.

The arrangement of simultaneous stage and film production will also be of vast importance in that it will almost insure the production of sufficient revenue to maintain itself while showing at the popular prices announced.

Exposition Topic Discussed at Brooklyn Meeting

Local No. 3 of the New York State League Convenes at Triangle Theatre and Seeks Best Way to Promote Better Understanding with Motion Picture Board of Trade Over Two Exhibitions Scheduled for New York Next Month—Executive Secretary Brandt Presides—Commodore Blackton Makes Plea for Unity

At an open meeting of Local No. 3 of the New York State Exhibitors' League, formerly the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn, held in the smoking room of the Triangle theatre, Flatbush avenue and Fulton street, Brooklyn, on the evening of Thursday, April 20, the general topic of discussion was the approach of the two exhibitions which will be given in New York and the best manner in which the Exhibitors' League might come to an understanding with the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton as president of the Board of Trade represented that body in the hot debate which took place between sponsors of the League and the Board. Exhibitor Blumenthal, of Brooklyn, led the opposition by several heated speaches. He contended that the Board of Trade did not treat the exhibitor fairly and that any exhibitor who was not continually on guard might be "bamboozled" by the Board. Commodore Blackton went to considerable length to counteract this feeling which seemingly existed among other exhibitors as well, and at the end of the meeting the League representatives were in a more friendly frame of mind.

The meeting was opened by Executive Secretary William Brandt, who, after hearing a report of a committee appointed to investigate the rise in the price of posters, and having read communications between the local organization and Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, regarding the willingness of the Brooklyn exhibtors to project pictorial lessons as to the correct manner of using fire alarm boxes, read a letter from William A. Johnston, commending the purpose of the Brooklyn branch of the state League, and urging them to consider more seriously national organization.

Should Watch Outside Oppression

Commodore Blackton was then called upon to speak. He urged the exhibitors not to spend time quibbling among themselves and with the producers, as vindictive interests outside the business demanded their whole-hearted antagonism. He called attention to the fact that a bill had just passed the state Assembly at Albany, prohibiting the appearance of children under sixteen years in pictures, and what dire effects this would have on every release of the manufacturer if it once became a law. Such menaces as this, the commodore pointed out, should be enough to put to route all internal dissension.

In referring to the two expositions to be held, and the deplorable state of affairs that made this possible, Commodore Blackton said: "There have been misunderstandings on both sides. The exhibitors have not understood us and we have not understood you. But the Board of Trade bears no ill feeling toward the exhibitor. We have made mistakes and we are willing to ask your pardon.

"But I do not believe that we were wrong or unfair in offering the state League twenty-five per cent. of the receipts of the Madison Square Garden show if the Grand Central Palace show were abandoned. The combined efforts of the two organizations would have resulted in that twenty-five per cent. being much larger than the entire receipts of the Grand Central Palace Exposition.

"However, the Board of Trade has made another proposal which is now before representatives of your body. This is that all the receipts of the Palace Exposition go to the exhibitor, and the profits of the Board of Trade show be divided equally between the two bodies. This proposition is made by the Board of Trade to signify its willingness to co-operate with the exhibitor. I fail to see if anything could have been fairer."

Blumenthal on His Feet

Mr. Blumenthal then took the floor. He affirmed that the commodore had made a misstatement of fact and produced his letter to Lee Ochs, of the state League, in which the fifty per cent. offer was made. "Commodore Blackton has omitted the most important part of the letter," contested Mr. Blumenthal, and he read the clause which gave the Board of Trade the right to revoke the fifty per cent. offer whenever it deemed it necessary. "I ask for an explanation of this," he said, "for that seems to be a contradiction of the offer." Mr. Blumenthal also condemned the executive committee of the Board of Trade for the unbusiness-like manner of their procedures.

In reply to this, Commodore Blackton said: "That last clause was inserted at the urgent suggestion of the counsel of the Board of Trade. It is merely a legal phrase—a pure formality. Its object is to protect the supporters of the Madison Square Garden Exposition. It should mean nothing to you."

After this subject had been settled with some debate, Mr. Blumenthal launched on another theme, and said that a body composed of both manufacturers and exhibitors could never exist in harmony. "Conflicting interests will prevent co-operation along any lines," he said. "Do you think that a manufacturer who wants to tie an exhibitor down to an iron-clad contract in which that exhibitor is forced to take any and all pictures, good or bad, that the manufacturer thrusts on him, will work side by side with that exhibitor in suggesting new measures for the good of the business? The open booking policy, already inaugurated by one feature concern, would do away with this, but general open booking will be a long time in coming."

Blackton Makes Harmony Plea

"I heartily favor open booking," replied the commodore, "but that is not essential to good will in a Board of Trade composed of representatives of all ends of the business. It is co-operation that we want, and that very manufacturer who favors the contract system will listen more readily if the exhibitor's representative is active in the same body with the manufacturers.

"Neither," continued the speaker, "is the Board of Trade hostile to the Exhibitors' League. It never was and it never will be. It is behind the leagues all the time. Your interests are our interests and the nearer together they get, the better."

Speeches were then made by Mr. Lesselbaum, who supported Commodore Blackton; Samuel Spedon, who told of the sincerity of the Board; and W. Stephen Bush, who praised the efforts of the local body for unified action.

Following the meeting, refreshments were provided by Mr. Mooney, of the Triangle theatre.

GOVERNOR SIGNS MARYLAND CENSOR BILL

Baltimore, April 22.

The motion picture censorship bill was signed by Governor Harrington on Monday night, April 17. Unless it is proven that the bill is unconstitutional by the exhibitors of Maryland, it will be placed into execution within the next month or two.

Guy L. Wonders, president of the Maryland branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, said that he is firmly convinced that the bill is not constitutional.

Mr. Wonders was last week in New York, where he consulted various motion picture and legal experts as to the best course to pursue in defeating the bill.

BIOGRAPH PLAYERS LEAVE FOR NEW YORK AND PLANT WILL CLOSE

The Biograph Companies on the West Coast have completed production, and the business of the organization is being completed by Lee Daugherty, manager of production, and John Waldron, business manager. Walter Coyle, Alice Murrell, Dan Grey, Jack Drumier, Walter C. Robinson, Gretchen Hartman and Jose Ruben departed last week for New York. The plant will probably be closed within the next two weeks.

KATHLEEN BUTLER RETURNS TO SCREEN FOR GAUMONT

Kathleen Butler, who has been seen in a number of Gaumont productions, notably "The Secret Agent" and "The Ace of Death," has returned to the screen.

She has a prominent role in a forthcoming Gaumont production now being filmed at the Jacksonville (Fla.) studios. As yet this photoplay has not been named. It is planned to release it late in May.

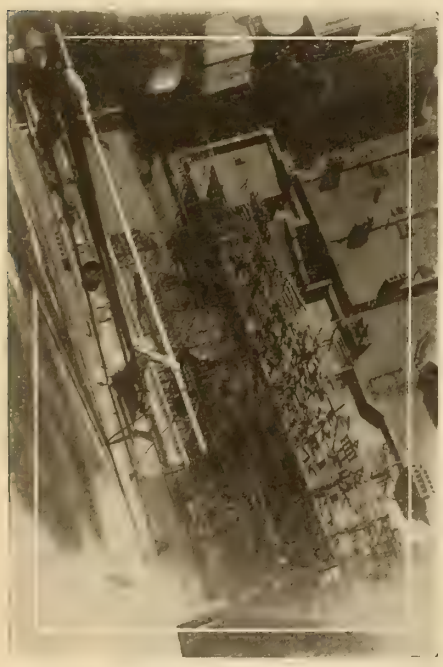
Pearl White Seeks "High Art" on 18th Story Sign

Pathé Star, After Climbing Heights of One Mode of Artistic Expression, Shows Skill Painting Four-Foot Letters Way Above Sidewalk While Crowds Wonder at Her Daring

IT is not an easy thing to startle Broadwayites. Satiated with sensational stunts of every description, it requires something new and especially thrilling to make them take notice. Yet on the morning of Saturday, April 15, Pearl White, of Pathé, gave Times Square thrill after thrill, and compelled public attention to the extent of lengthy stories on the front pages of five of New York's leading newspapers and strong stories in the news columns of practically all the others.

The Godfrey building at 729 Seventh avenue presents to Times Square, the heart of New York, a huge expanse of blank brick wall unrelieved by a single window. At the top, eighteen stories up, is an electric sign, the text of which line by line may be likened to a ladder. It was by clambering down this sign that Miss White was enabled to reach the narrow scaffolding swaying in the stiff wind below.

Several interesting things happened before the little star stepped from the parapet and swung herself over space to the electric sign. On arriving at the building she was met by the representative of the Sign Painters, Paper Hangers and Decorators' Union, who presented her with a card which certified that she had been duly elected to the union. When she stepped out upon the roof she was greeted by a swarm of reporters and cameramen who had been tipped off as to what was about to happen.



PEARL WHITE, PATHE, PERFORMING A HAZARDOUS STUNT; CLINGING TO THE SIDE OF A NEW YORK SKYSCRAPER

A belt attached to a cable was offered to her, but she declined it with scorn. "I've done worse things than this while working in pictures" was her comment. While she was standing upon the parapet Edward Jose, the producer of the serial "The Iron Claw," in which Miss White stars, forced his way through the crowd with a copy of a morning paper in his hand. "Is this true, Miss White?" he demanded, pointing to an article telling of the coming stunt. On hearing that it was, Mr. Jose promptly forbade the thing. "I can't afford to have you take this risk," he urged. "My serial is not finished, and an accident would be fatal not only to you, but to 'The Iron Claw.' Please don't do it!"

PEARL WHITE, PATHE STAR, AS A PAINTER ON AN 18-STORY SKYSCRAPER

Miss White refused to be moved and two seconds later was out upon the sign. In two or three minutes after a dizzy climb she reached the scaffolding while the crowds upon the roofs of neighboring buildings and in the streets set up a cheer.

Miss White's artistic efforts while upon the sign were mainly devoted to painting a huge "P. W." in four-foot high letters, which can be read for blocks.

This work of truly "high art" having been accomplished she clambered bravely up the sign again, and then posed patiently while half the cameras in New York took "stills" of her.

P. A. Parsons, the Pathé publicity man, put the stunt through in conjunction with T. M. Alexander, of the Motion Picture Board of Trade. Mr. Alexander is having painted upon the building a huge sign advertising the exposition at Madison Square Garden from May 6-13, which sign furnished the basis of the idea.

Chambers' "Common Law" for Clara Kimball Young

Offer of $12,000 for Screen Rights to Novel Was Recently Refused by Famous Author—Deal for World Film Is Effected by Farnham, Woods and Selwyn

A TRANSACTION of interest was the purchase this week of the world's picture rights to Robert W. Chamber's novel "The Common Law," by the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. Since Lewis J. Selznick first announced the formation of this producing company there has been speculation as to the character and quality of the pictures in which the star would be presented when the new organization should begin operations in July.

CROWD OUTSIDE THE GLOBE THEATRE, NEW YORK, WAITING FOR ADMISSION ON THE OPENING NIGHT OF "WHERE ARE MY CHILDREN," UNIVERSAL

This novel, "The Common Law," has been read and discussed by thousands of people. A number of big producers have considered purchasing the novel from Mr. Chambers but all have weakened, it is said, when the novelist set his price. The actual figures are not being announced, but the story that Mr. Chambers recently scorned an offer of $12,000 for the rights to screen his book may be taken as some indication of the amount finally agreed upon.

Aside from the advertising value of the title and author's name the story of "The Common Law" is well adapted to screen presentation. In the company's opinion, it is just the sort of a narrative in which the films excel, clean-cut, swiftly cumulative in action, dramatic and filled with "local color" and "atmosphere." The central character, Valerie, the artist's model, is considered to be suited to Miss Young's personality and dramatic gifts.

The purchase of the story was made through Mr. Chambers, Joseph Farnham, Al. Woods and Selwyn and Company. Miss Young was delighted when Mr. Selznick notified her of the completion of the deal. She had been urging its purchase for weeks.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

EXHIBITORS FIND SUPPLY OF CHILDREN'S PICTURES FAILS TO MEASURE UP TO THE DEMAND

SO evident is the demand for special children's performances throughout the country—a demand manifested particularly since MOTION PICTURE NEWS initiated its campaign—that the success of this division of exhibiting seems to be dependent only upon the supply of suitable subjects.

It is perfectly clear that all progressive exhibitors will take up, if they have not already taken up, the movement, provided only they can get the stuff to show. It is up to the manufacturers to furnish it, and it is up to the exhibitors to insist that the manufacturers furnish it.

Doubtless many exhibitors have had experiences similar to those of Milwaukee showmen. If they have, they ought to let the manufacturers know about it, not once, but many times, until the manufacturers accede fully to the demand. We believe they will eventually.

"Why can't we get more and better photoplays suitable for children's hour performances than we do at present," seems to be the paramount question among Milwaukee exhibitors. Though three of the houses are now running "children's hours" none of them is meeting with very great success, and according to the managers, the almost total lack of pictures suitable for juveniles makes it difficult to continue the performances. In fact, it is said that two of the managers are already contemplating discontinuing the special children's performance. According to Manager Harry Graham, of the Merrill theatre, the main trouble with most of the so-called children's pictures now available are that they are not up to the standard of the present-day photoplay.

"But," says Mr. Graham, who, by the way, inaugurated the children's hour in Milwaukee, "young America is too wide awake and up and doing, and when the photoplays are not up to the standard of those for the big folks, they are quick to notice it. Not any old thing will suit the youngster of today, and if the production is not of the best he won't waste his time seeing it."

Mr. Graham has experienced the same trouble as the other Milwaukee managers. The first few weeks completely exhausted the supply of juvenile pictures on the shelves of the exchanges, and it is now necessary for him to make a weekly trip to Chicago and scurry around amongst the old and cold copies to find something for the youngsters.

In Milwaukee it seems to be the consensus of opinion that if some of the producers would release, say one kid picture a week that possessed any real merit, with scenarios by writers of children's stories and played by a company of mature actors, there would soon be a big demand for this sort of play.

The little folks seem to prefer grown-ups to child actors. The reason for this is not far to seek when it is remembered that the great majority of books have lads of about nineteen and twenty as their heroes and that the young mind has been educated to this type. When the producers start putting out children's pictures regularly, they will find themselves flooded with orders, predict the Milwaukee exhibitors.

ADDED PATRONAGE COMPELS TWO MORNING SHOWS A WEEK

The Park theatre, Boston, Thomas D. Soriere manager, is this week giving two special morning performances, on Friday and Saturday, to take care of added patronage. This will continue indefinitely after Lent.

BRIEF HINTS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

We call your especial attention to the article appearing in this department under the heading "Exhibitors Find Supply of Children's Pictures Fails to Measure Up to the Demand."

Read it carefully. Then write us your views on the subject.

We suggest also that, if you have been unable to get suitable children's subjects, you should tell the manufacturers about it.

Keep hammering at the manufacturers, through the exchanges or by direct correspondence, until the supply of children's photoplays is adequate.

And don't forget to tell the manufacturers what kind of pictures you think children prefer.

CALGARY AND EDMONTON ADDED TO CHILDREN'S SHOW RANKS

At Calgary, Alberta, the Naomi Mothers' Society is planning to hold a Child Welfare Week in a short time, and exhibitors have signified their willingness to assist in any manner possible. It is considered likely that special films will be shown at this time, and that members of the society will give short speeches on the subject between shows.

Special performances for children have just been inaugurated at the Monarch theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, by Manager Max Allen, who will hereafter put on a selected program for juveniles every Saturday morning. "Cinderella," with Mary Pickford, will be one of the first long subjects shown, and an effort will be made to secure several pictures of this description within the next few weeks. This marks the first attempt in Edmonton to provide special shows for the children.

ORGANIZES BAND AS PUBLICITY MEDIUM FOR THEATRE

Very profitable advertising for the Dreamland theatre at Redding, Cal., has been secured by Mrs. Jane Olney, owner and manager of the theatre. She took a kindly interest in a number of boys and helped to bring about the organization of a band. The theatre owner also secured an instructor for the lads, and furnished them a place to practise until they put their organization on a self-supporting basis.

The band has now been organized for more than two years, and its reputation has spread throughout northern California, with the result that the boys are called upon to play for many public events. The band is a permanent publicity organization. Several nights each week the band plays for the theatre, and the receipts over and above a fixed expense were given to the band to defray its expenses.

"LAUGHING MASKS" AS SOUVENIRS FOR "THE IRON CLAW"

Manager H. B. Groves, of the Olympic theatre, Sioux City, Ia., has another novel plan to advertise his pictures, says Manager J. E. Kirke, of the Pathé Exchange in Omaha. Manager Groves is running "The Iron Claw," and on the day the picture is shown he distributes miniature laughing masks to his youthful patrons.

TWO BIG STARS IN FINE SELIG DRAMA

"Thou Shalt Not Covet" Written by Curwood.

Next Thursday the Knickerbocker will offer its patrons what is generally considered to be the best play ever filmed by the Selig company, who have such successes as "The Spoilers," "The Rosary" and other fine productions to their credit. It is entitled "Thou Shalt Not Covet," and was written by a well known Detroit and Michigan author and traveler, James Oliver Curwood. The Selig company has spared no expense in the staging of this drama and a great case of favorites including Tyrone Powers, Kathlyn Williams, Eugenie Besserer and Guy Oliver will be viewed in the principal roles.

The drama is based on the Biblical commandment "Thou Shalt Not Covet Thy Neighbor's Wife," and besides the moral lesson taught it contains many sensational scenes. An ocean liner strikes a rotting hulk and plunges to the bottom. Thousands of men, women and children struggle for lifeboats and fall overboard into the dark waters. The stoke hold with the water rushing into the furnaces and the stokers vainly fighting for life are vividly pictured. Daring

ALAS! OTHER FELLOW GETS THE VAMPIRE

After a Duel Mack Swain Grabs Her In "Love Will Conquer."

"Love Will Conquer," the new Keystone-Triangle at the Knickerbocker Tuesday contains all kinds of laughs at unexpected places. It is a burlesque on the shockers and thrillers, in which the villains are all painted a deep, deep shade of black and the hero is without a flaw. Fred Mace appears as the villain and Billie Brockwell as a somewhat passee vampire. They quarrel desperately in a fashionable cafe and Joseph Swickard, as the hero, takes the woman's part. Mace is a big bully and is the pride of the neighborhood, but he shakes in his shoes when he sees Swickard shoot a bottle to pieces in mid-air. He timorously chooses swords as the mode of combat, but being a villain he doesn't take any chances. He plants some of his tough associates in an ambush to attack Swickard from the rear. But Swickard is a clever swordsman and he keeps Mace backing up and jumping from side to side. Mace's accomplices stab him by mistake and he runs rubbing his legs and body with Swickard hot in pursuit and urging him on with the point of his sword. They tear into the cafe, overturning tables and chairs and leaving a per-

"JORDAN IS A HARD ROAD" IS POWERFUL

Sir Gilbert Parker's Novel Made Into a Great Film.

That the love of a father for his daughter can transform him from a dangerous bandit to a noble character of rare self abnegation is shown in the Sir Gilbert Parker-Triangle play, "Jordan Is a Hard Road," coming to the Knickerbocker Monday. Campeau plays the role of the father, Bill Minden, most effectively. Dorothy Gish is Cora Findley, the daughter who has been brought up in ignorance of her father's identity.

Campeau brings out strikingly the gradual development of Bill Minden from the rude, savage outlaw to the father who loves his daughter so much that he lays down his life that she may live in happiness. There are effective moments emotionally where Campeau is talking with his daughter and tells her that he is a friend of her father. He emphasizes by his restraint the overmastering desire of Minden to claim his daughter as his own.

Another effective scene takes place at a camp meeting, where the rude soul of Minden is wrought upon by the sight of his beautiful daughter, Miss Gish, playing the organ and

NEW ORLEANS ITEM DISTRIBUTES PORTRAITS OF STARS

The New Orleans Item has inaugurated a system of photoplay picture distribution. Every Sunday the newspaper distributes a rotogravure art picture of some star, as a supplement to the Sunday paper, with no strings attached to the gift. On Sunday, April 26, the picture was that of Mary Pickford, and these will follow:

Lillian Gish, Theda Bara, Mary Fuller, Helen Holmes, Ruth Roland, Anita Stewart, Mary Miles Minter, Marguerite Clark, Blanche Sweet, Mabel Normand, Beverly Bayne, Clara Kimball Young, Edna Mayo, Kathlyn Williams and Marguerite Courtot.

The Item was the first paper in that section of the South to establish a photoplay department; it was the first paper to enlarge the section to a daily one, and the only paper to conduct it as a daily illustrated feature.

LOUISVILLE THEATRE INSTALLS SCOREBOARD

An innovation which bids fair to be popular during the summer has been inaugurated by the management of the Star theatre, Louisville. A special wire has been run into the house which will give the results by innings of all baseball games in the American Association, the American League and the National League.

A large scoreboard has been erected just below the picture screen on which the scores will be marked as soon as received and there will be no interruption of the pictures. The management believes that this service will appeal to baseball enthusiasts especially on Sunday when the newspapers do not bulletin the scores.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITOR USES "NEWS" REVIEWS

Trenton, N. J., has a live-wire exhibitor in the manager of Taylor's Opera House, that city. The Opera House is showing "The Social Pirates," Kalem's series by George Bronson Howard, as a first-run attraction. In addition to the press matter supplied by Kalem with the different episodes, the manager of the Trenton house also makes good use of the reviews appearing in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The story of the production and the comments of the reviewer as appearing in the NEWS make an excellent news story, he finds.

Releases from Popular Pictures in Few Weeks

Company Recently Incorporated for $1,500,000, with Milton M. Goldsmith, President; A. C. Langan, Vice-President, and A. J. Bimberg, Treasurer, Will Issue Program by September

THE formation of the Popular Pictures Corporation, capitalized at one and one-half million dollars, signalizes the entrance into the film industry of another company. Already a country-wide system of exchanges is being organized, producing companies are being formed and the general machinery of operation being set in motion. So far have matters progressed it is stated that the first production of the new company will be placed upon the market some time next month, and that by the first of September a regular program consisting of one feature production released each week will be manufactured and handled.

The men behind the organization of the new concern represent a combination of experienced film men and business interests. Milton M. Goldsmith, formerly president of The Playgoers' Film Company, has been elected to serve in like capacity for the new company. The vice-president of the corporation is A. C. Langan, formerly president of the Sun Photoplay Company. Mr. Langan will ,among other activities, attend to the work of the organization of foreign branches. A. J. Bimberg is treasurer of the corporation.

The new company has taken over the entire building known as the Candler Annex, at 218 West Forty-second street, New York, renaming it the Popular Pictures Building. The general offices of both the marketing and producing organizations, the New York exchange and a large projection room, have been installed in this building.

Announcements of the personnel of the producing companies will soon be made. Negotiations are now in progress with stars and directors.

THE WEEK'S BEST LIVE WIRE STUNT

The difficulty of inducing motion picture patrons to attend exhibitions where admission prices exceed the five or ten-cent rate is frequently realized by small-town exhibitors. Yet on occasions this stumbling block has been overcome, as in the case of J. A. Karnes of the Lyric theatre, Blacksburg, Va., a town with a population of 8,750.

Recently Mr. Karnes found himself confronted with a demand for "The Battle Cry of Peace," but although willing to go to any reasonable lengths in order to satisfy his patrons, the cost of booking the feature in a community of such limited numbers appeared prohibitive. However, as repeated requests for the exhibition of the Vitagraph spectacle continued to pour in upon him, the Lyric manager set about solving the problem. Making a rapid canvass of his patrons, he succeeded in signing up 150 of them who were willing to pay one dollar each to view the picture, and booked it accordingly.

It was necessary to provide appropriate music to accompany the film, another heavy expense which might have daunted the average exhibitor, but Mr. Karnes overcame that difficulty by a second canvass which resulted in his obtaining fifty more subscriptions at the same price. He was thus enabled to hire an orchestra that had accompanied the showing of "The Battle Cry" in Norfolk, and the V-L-S-E release was accordingly shown in Blacksburg to a delighted audience.

VICTOR ROTTMAN WITH KALEM FOR ETHEL TEARE COMEDIES

Victor Rottman, known in Pacific Coast picture circles as a juvenile, has been added to the Kalem forces. Mr. Rottman will be seen in the Ethel Teare comedies. He completes the quartet, with Ethel Teare, Jack MacDermott and Gus Leonard.

Before entering pictures Victor Rottman had an extended stage career, including appearances in support of such stars as Olga Nethersole, Florence Reed, Henry Kolker and other prominent players.

NEBRASKA TOWNS FAVOR SUNDAY OPENING

Hartwell, Neb., in the spring elections returned a majority of twenty-two in favor of retaining the Sunday motion picture shows. A number of other small Nebraska towns voted on the question, and not one had to close its film houses on Sunday.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE starting of several new and pretentious productions in the Eastern studios during the last week has compensated to a great extent for the reduced activity which resulted from the curtailment of production all along the line. In addition to these, work which was halted at many of the larger studios is about to resume, and by the middle of next mnoth it is likely the eastern studios will be well started on the busiest summer they have known.

One of the new productions is being made by George Irving for the Frohman Amusement Company, for release through World Film. This picture, the title of which has not as yet been announced, is being produced with a cast which includes Frances Nelson, Gladden James, and a number of other prominent players. The interiors are being made in the Frohman Fifty-second street studio.

Marshal Farnum has also commenced work on a play which has not as yet been named for the Popular Pictures Corporation. He is making his interior scenes at the old Victor studio in West Forty-third street, and will find locations for his exteriors on Long Island.

No Let-up in Famous Players Production

There has been no let-up in work at the Famous Players studio. One of the latest pictures to be started is "Saints and Sinners," by Henry Arthur Jones, a screen adaptation of the noted stage success. In this subject Peggy Hyland, the British film favorite will make her bow to the American public as a star. The picture will be released on the Paramount program in May.

At the time that the engagement of Miss Hyland was announced, it was stated that the play in which she was to make her appearance had not been selected. The choice had at that time been narrowed down to three or four plays which were especially suitable to Miss Hyland's personality. From these, "Saints and Sinners" was finally chosen.

In "Saints and Sinners" Miss Hyland plays the role of a clergyman's daughter whose innocence very nearly proves her downfall. It is only the faith and determination of her lover and her aged father which save her after she has been taken to the city and lodged at a hotel by a man in whose honor she has every faith.

It is a peculiar coincidence that Miss Hyland plays the daughter of a clergyman in the photoplay and that she is, in real life, the niece of two well-known English vicars with whom she has spent a great deal of her time.

"Saints and Sinners" is the fourth of Henry Arthur Jones' successful plays to be adapted to the screen by the Famous Players, "The Masqueraders," "Lydia Gilmore," and "The Dancing Girl," having been presented on the screen with John Mason and Hazel Dawn, Pauline Frederick, and Florence Reed in the respective stellar roles.

Sidney Olcott is back at the Famous Players studio from a trip to Bermuda with his company, to get exterior scenes for "The Innocent Lie," in which Valentine Grant is featured. The picture is now nearly completed, requiring only a few interiors, which will be made at the studio here.

No Holiday Trip to Bermuda

Mr. Olcott's company did not have a holiday all the time they were in Bermuda; their experience was one of light and shade, and Mr. Olcott expresses himself as agreeing with Mark Twain's famous characterization: "Bermuda is Heaven, but it's Hell getting there."

"Only two of our entire company escaped the ravages of sea sickness, one being Valentine Grant, and the other, I may say with modesty, being myself," said Mr. Olcott. "This was true of both voyages—but I must confess that neither Miss Grant nor myself inhabited the dining room to any alarming extent. Food soon ceased to be a luxury

"We had a hard time getting extras until William Scully, my assistant, hit upon the scheme of posting notices in the hotel lobbies that guests would be permitted to take minor parts in a number of the scenes that we were going to stage. The idea worked beautifully. About forty went out with us and thanked us for the privilege of working in a picture."

"The Innocent Lie" is scheduled for release on the Paramount Program, on May 4.

Universal Heights also reports itself in the blaze of glory that comes from busyness! Every stage finds a busy director and company grinding out good things for the Universal program, and except that Matt Moore has been ill the Heights has nothing to be said about.

Matt was making a Moore-Jane Gail comedy entitled "Goats Is Goats." Of course, a goat was required. Mr. Moore, Miss Gail and Mr. Goat had to go out for exterior scenes one very cold morning. Mr. M. and Mr. G. caught cold. Matt got over his. The goat died.

Bob Hill is directing Hobart Henley in a five-reeler. It is called "Temptation and the Man" and Clara Beyers, Sidney Bracy and Sydell Dowling make up the cast. The picture has slum atmosphere and a crowd of hoboes were imported from the Bowery, Manhattan, together with a squad of prize-fighters headed by Tommy Houck.

During this picture engagement, Houck had a fight scheduled with one Carey Phelan at one of the New York "clubs," and Tommy won it. This fact made him quite a hero among the stage hands at the studio, all of whom "tipped" to him in real reverence. Catherine Carr wrote the scenario of this feature.

Another five-reel feature is being made by Henry Otto, "The Man from Nowhere," featuring King Baggot. In this Dorothy Phillips appears as Mr. Baggot's leading woman for the first time. The scenario is by William H. Clifford.

Edna Hunter Is Wilson's Lead

Edna Hunter is leaving the Baggot company and taking Miss Phillips' place as Ben Wilson's feminine lead. Her first appearance in this connection will be in a comedy release, "An Amateur Detective," in two reels and with an exceptional cast including Ben Wilson, Charles Ogle, William Welsh, Howard Crampton and Paul Panzer. This is William Addison Lathrop's story.

In his efforts to surpass "The Great Problem," his first Heights feature, Director Rex Ingram is still patiently working on "Yellow and White," his story of Chinatown. That is to say, Ingram has again written his own feature. Violet Mesereau and William Garwood are appearing in this picture, never to be separated again, it is hoped. Frank Smith and a number of genuine Chinese actors complete the cast.

Paul M. Bryan, of Denver, Col., a photoplayright who has written a great many Gaumont dramas, is now visiting in the east. He came to visit the Gaumont studios and confer with General Manager F. G. Bradford and Scenario Editor George D. Proctor.

Before returning to Denver Mr. Bryan will visit Atlanta and Jacksonville, Fla., where Gaumont's winter studios are located. Among the Gaumont successes written by Mr. Bryan are "The Card Players," "The Idol of the Stage" and Marguerite Courtot's latest Mutual Masterpicture, "Feathertop." He is also author of a Gaumont May release, "The Isle of Love," in which Gertrude McCoy is starred.

"The Isle of Love," by the way, promises to be a thrilling five-reel feature. Miss McCoy, who already had won a name for herself in dare-devil roles for the Edison company, has been hard at work at Jacksonville, under the direction of Edwin Middleton. An exciting moment is when she jumps from a rock into the sea, clad in a costume that by courtesy is called a bathing suit. She returns from her swim to find that her clothing was washed away by the tide.

Miss McCoy overplayed her part and dived into a pool lined with jagged rocks. She completed the scene despite the fact that she received painful bruises.

Passes Through Fire After Water Stunt

Miss McCoy was next called upon to jump into the ocean from the deck of a steamship supposed to be on fire. This feat was accomplished without incident. Her next exploits were near Atlantic Beach, where were filmed the scenes supposed to take place on a desert island. Here she was saved from the sea by Earl O. Schenck, her leading man. Kidnapped by a wealthy but dissolute yachtsman, she is forced to fight for her freedom aboard the yacht, a realistic struggle which covered her with bruises.

JEAN SOTHERN IN "THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA," INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE

Supporting Miss McCoy in this feature, which will be released on May 15 as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, are Earl O. Schenck, Robert Clugston, W. J. Butler, Charles W. Travis and Iva Shepard.

President Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation, President Samuel S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company, Inc., and a number of invited guests attended a private showing of the first three chapters of "The Secret of the Submarine," the new American-Mutual photoplay in chapters, held recently in Mutual's projection room. President Freuler announced himself as exceedingly well pleased with the chapters screened. The first chapter, in two acts, will be released May 8.

First of the Gaumont-Mutual players who have been working in Jacksonville for the past five months are expected to reach the Gaumont studios in Flushing the early part of next week.

Riley Chamberlain, Falstaff-Mutual comedian, is the first of the Thanhouser contingent to reach New Rochelle. Riley came back tanned like a ribbon salesman who had spent his vacation in the sun at the beaches. Riley announced that fishing for tarpon occupied all his spare time while in Jacksonville and brought a host of fish stories back with him. He is spending his leisure passing the stories out among his friends.

Daring "Dips" Detaches Dion's Dollar Dial

They're telling a story on Hector Dion, of the Thanhouser-Mutual studios. Hector, while passing through the lower level of the Grand Central on his way to catch a train for New Rochelle, several days ago, was approached by an affable stranger who asked him for a match.

"Help yourself," was his reply, Dion handing his silver match box to the stranger.

Some time later Hector, reaching for his watch, found it gone.

"But here's the rub," laughed Dion, as he showed a handsome gold timepiece to verify his assertion, "the dip got away with the wrong watch. He took my Ingersoll instead. And he's welcome to it."

Mme. Kalich, tragedienne and heroine of William Fox feature films, returned this week from a motor tour of the New Jersey resorts and in a few days will be busily at work on her second Fox feature. This time she will be under the direction of James Vincent, who made the Theda Bara "Gold and the Woman" picture.

Mme. Kalich is particularly delighted with the success of her first picture, "Slander."

J. Gordon Edwards, the director who handled Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper in films for William Fox, returned this week from Jamaica, where he had been working since last October. Edwards and his company of players will soon begin work on a new feature in one of the New Jersey studios of the Fox corporation.

Stanhope Wheatcroft, who will be seen for the first time in a Fox film made by Director James Vincent, also will be seen shortly afterwards in the latest Theda Bara picture now in the making at the Eclair studio at Fort Lee.

ILLUSTRATING RECENT EPISODES OF PATHE'S "THE IRON CLAW"

Director Will S. Davis, who produced "Slander" for William Fox as the first starring vehicle for Mme. Kalich, has begun another production. Among the players in this picture are Fuller Mellish and Stephen Gratten.

John Robertson, who has made an enviable reputation for artistic work, has been appointed to a directorship by Supervising Director Ralph W. Ince, of the Vitagraph company at the Bay Shore, L. I., studios. Mr. Robertson possesses peculiar fitness for this field of the motion picture industry by reason of the fact that in stage work his efforts have always been for the best in the production.

Bay Shore Backgrounds for Ince Feature

To properly produce a five-part feature that requires some difficult outdoor scenes, Director Ralph W. Ince has been successful in finding right near the Bay Shore studios locations that are right in the way of backgrounds. Title not made public.

The regular stock cast, headed by Lucille Lee Stewart and Huntly Gordon, will play the principal roles.

Director Ince has added to his roster Josephine Lovett, who will play the part of the mother in his next production. Miss Lovett has appeared in leading roles with Henry Miller, Robert Hilliard, Robert Edeson, Henrietta Crossman and just prior to joining the Vitagraph players was connected with the Grace George company at the Republic Theatre in New York. Miss Lovett also wrote the scenario of the play in which she is to appear.

The Vitagraph baseball team who, by the way, claim the championship of the motion picture industry, are again ready for the 1916 campaign and issue a challenge to any of the producing companies who dispute their claim of the title. The Vitagraphers are ready to arrange their schedule and would like to hear from other producers regarding a game or games.

Fred Held, manager of this aggregation, says that there is no change in the line-up from last year. Last year, out of twenty-eight games, the Vitagraphers lost two.

Friends of Nell Craig will see her in three new Essanay releases. "Her Naked Soul," in three acts, gives her a dramatic role. "Once a Thief—?" is another three-reeler in which she takes the feminine lead. She is now working in a new two-reel play, "The Consummation."

Elizabeth Burbridge, whose latest work was Essanay's three-reel release, "The Danger Line," will be seen shortly in a two-reel play, "The Double Cross." The latter is a flippant tale of boy crooks, which points its moral and has nothing but light comedy angles.

A photoplay has been prepared for Joyce Fair, Essanay's twelve-year-old star, to meet the demand following "Joyce's Strategy," "The Dixie Winner" and "The Little Samaritan." The new play, "Orphan Joyce," will give her just as fitting a vehicle.

"The Barrier" will probably be chosen by the Lubin Company for the first of the Rex Beech photoplay features, with "The Silver Horde" and "The Iron Trail" following in the order named. Definite decision on this selection will be made within the next fortnight. Meanwhile preparations are progressing in an effort to make each production represent a new epoch in elaborate photoplay achievement.

It is likely that nine or ten reels will be required for each story. The companies will be located in the regions described by Mr. Beach in his novels and when the final selections of principals has been announced it will be apparent that the Lubin Company has planned for some of the most important undertaking in modern screen history.

Edwin Middleton, Gaumont director, who has been filming "The Isle of Love," has already begun upon a new photoplay at Jacksonville, Fla., for Gaumont. In the latter Miss Gertrude Robinson appears to advantage. The picture will be released either late in May or early in June.

The last of the Gaumont companies are expected to return to their Flushing, N. Y., headquarters from the winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla., early in May.

THEDA BARA AND VIRGINIA PEARSON IN MAY FOX RELEASES

Two productions for release during May have been announced by the Fox Film Corporation. These are, together with title, star and date of release:

"Blazing Love," a story of modern life, with Virginia Pearson, for May 1. "The Eternal Sapho," with Theda Bara, May 8.

Virginia Person is presented for the first time as a William Fox star. Miss Pearson is given opportunity to display her emotional talents, and is supported by George Selby, Frank Goldsmith, Lew Stern, Frank Burbeck, Wilmuth Merkyl and Louise Huff.

In "The Eternal Sapho" Miss Bara appears as a child of the slums, who rises from her squalid surroundings to the studios and fashionable society. She wrecks the lives of many, including those who do the most for her. The cast includes Warner Oland, Frank Norcross, George MacQuarrie, Walter Lewis, Hattie Delaro, James Cooley, Einar Linden, Mary Martin and Kittens Reichert.

PRETTY OUTDOOR SCENE IN "FEATHERTOP," GAUMONT-MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DE LUXE

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, April 22.

"THE HOODOO" has become the working title of the Fox subject now being filmed by Director Oscar Apfel and starring William Farnum, because of the numerous misfortunes attending its production. The most recent was that experienced at Santa Cruz Islands when a small boat carrying Farnum, Willard Lewis, William Burress and Eddie Moncrieff from the launch to the shore, was capsized by the surf, which beat the small craft against the rugged rocks. All occupants were thrown into 18 feet of water, and in the darkness it was necessary for every one to rescue himself.

The accident happened the first night the company went to the island. Two cameras, a number of rifles and a quantity of props being taken to the islands went to the bottom of the ocean. Many of these were recovered the following day by divers. The title of this picture is "The Battle of Hearts," and the misfortunes encountered in the filming of it include a hurricane on Catalina Island, which raised a fishing village of 18 houses built there. This occasioned a four-day delay. The company then lost the boat Ruby, a two-masted schooner, and its crew of three men. Barges, used to carry props to Catalina Island, encountered heavy seas, and the property men and stage carpenters were at sea for 36 hours without food or shelter.

Since the boat capsized at Santa Cruz Island, work has been delayed, because it was impossible to transport the lumber needed from Santa Barbara to the islands on account of storms. This delay has given the players ample opportunity for hunting and fishing, and reports are to the effect that William Farnum has killed one wild boar, captured another small one alive, and actually become tired of pulling in fish.

The Raul Walsh-Fox Co., filming "The Honor System," will leave within the next few days for Florence, Ariz., where scenes will be made about the Arizona prison. Governor Hunt of Arizona, whose work along prison reform lines is the foundation for this subject, has granted Producer Walsh the privilege of photographing a number of men now occupying the death chamber if they so elect. Governor Hunt has furnished much data, and is co-operating in every way possible to make this subject highly successful.

Two Lasky Subjects Titled

Titles for two Lasky subjects now in production were selected last week. The photodrama now being made by Director George Melford, and starring Fannie Ward, supported by Jack Dean and an all-star cast, is to be known as "The Gutter Magdalene," and the one being made by Director James Young from a story by Margaret Turnbull, which features Blanche Sweet, has been named "The Thousand-Dollar Husband."

"Hot Water" is the title given a production now in rehearsal at the Lasky studio in which Victor Moore will be starred, and Anita King will play a featured part.

Many scenes of a circus atmosphere were secured for the Lasky subject being filmed by William C. deMille, when a three-ringed traveling organization was leased for the entire forenoon. All of the performers and attaches of the circus took part in the scenes made, and following the work the Lasky employment department was besieged by applicants. That was but one injury during the day, and this was occasioned by one of the Lasky property men attempting to take a piece of prop candy away from a monkey.

The California Committee of the Actors' Fund Association has adopted a plan for raising money at the suggestion of Tom Meighn, leading man of the Lasky stock company. This provides that photoplayers supply the Actors' Fund with a number of photographs, and when they receive requests from fans for photographs to turn these letters over to the Actors' Fund Committee who will in turn notify the screen fans that upon receipt of 25 cents the desired photograph will be mailed, the money to go to the Actors' Fund endowment.

The mammoth new stage at the Lasky plant is now nearing completion and by the end of the week the structural steel work supporting the diffusers will all be in place, and the stage completed so that it may be used by Director Cecil B. deMille, who will be in charge of filming the next Mae Murray offering.

Roberts as Julius Caesar for Fund

Theodore Roberts has been selected to play the role of Julius Caesar at the open-air presentation of "Julius Caesar" at a natural stadium in the foothills near Hollywood. Horace B. Carpenter, also of the Lasky staff, will appear in the role of Decimus Brutus. The net proceeds of this production will go to the Actors' Fund.

There are a number of new members of the stock company at the Kalem Glendale studios recently added by Director James W. Horne, and they will make their first appearance in episode 11 of the "Social Pirates," entitled "The Fangs of the Tattler." As in previous episodes, Marin Sais, Ollie Kirkby and Frank Jonasson will be featured. Of the recent additions are R. L. Dell, late of the Ince studios, E. Forrest Taylor, recently leading man for the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, and Roland Bradbury, recently with the Universal, Lubin and Lasky.

pany have been receiving exceptionally heavy mail since the first release of the "Social Pirates," and now they have letters from all parts of the United States as well as Canada, Australia and England. The stamps from these letters are being used to paper the walls of Director Horne's office. A number of improvements are being made on the grounds of the Kalem Company with flower beds laid out in walks and drives, and as one of the technical staff is a landscape gardner, some very attractive effects are being secured.

A rural comedy being made at the Keystone studio under the direction of Richard Jones has four of Keystone's best known people as leads. Charley Murray appears in the name part, a rich farmer who covets the hand of the daughter of Harry Booker his neighbor, the part of the girl being taken by Louise Fazenda. Wayland Trask is the hired man on Booker's farm, and he and the girl have a secret love affair. When she refuses to marry Murray, he immediately starts action to foreclose the mortgage, but the hired hand comes to the rescue at the eleventh hour by inheriting a fabulous sum. Melodrama, yes, in that Keystone way. The subject is now known as "The Gardner."

Swickard Begins "Dawn"

The Horsley Company under the direction of Charles Swickard, has taken up the filming of "The Dawn," which will consist of two reels. In this William Clifford appears as an artist, with Marie Gavette as his wife. Most of the scenes are laid at a fishing village on the African coast made up of French people. The artist goes to this place to make studies. While there he finds a beautiful girl who is the dairy maid of the village, taken by Margaret Gibson. He induces her to pose for him in the mountains.

A jealous sweetheart, Jack Nelson, follows and seeing that two lions are to attack the man and girl, kills one. The girl takes the gun from him and kills the second, but not until the artist has been badly maimed. Owing to injuries it is almost morning when the three arrive back at the village. The artist's wife, thinking her husband is untrue, has gone to sea in a frail boat, but is recovered before she is injured. A fishing village was built for this on the beach near Los Angeles harbor, and sixty people worked several days in scenes there. The story is by Theodosia Harris.

The next Horsley Mutual Masterpicture now being made by Director Robert Broadwell and starring Crane Wilbur is entitled at present "Wasted Years." The story and scenario are by Wilbur, who plays three parts. The sub-titles will all be in verse, and the picture itself is of an allegorical nature. A prologue opens with a tramp as the central figure. He forgets his hunger when he sees the placard in front of a theatre bearing the following: "Theatre of Life Presenting the Comedy Drama of Happiness, 'Youth.'" He attends the performance and sees his past life re-enacted. A youth in a small village upon inheriting wealth seeks the city to gain fame and more riches, but there leads the gay life among the bright lights.

The sweet village maiden, played by May Gaston, to whom he is betrothed, is forgotten, and he weds another. The marriage is a dismal failure, and when his wealth is gone he is abandoned by his wife who takes their child. By a series of coincidents he learns of the death of his wife, years later finds his daughter and tries to be happy with her, but death cuts shorts this companionship and he becomes a wanderer of the world. The scenes of the play are shown as through a proscenium arch with a curtain following after each instead of the usual dissolve-out. A climax is reached when the usher finds the dead body of the tramp in the front seat of the vacant gallery. The entire cast has not been selected, John Oaker and Miss Gaston being the only ones named.

New Faces at Horsley Studio

There are several new faces at the Horsley studio. Claire Anderson, formerly of the Famous Players and Reliance, has been engaged to play in the Cub Comedy company, as has also Rosebud Hill. Miss Hill played in a number of Essanay-Chaplin subjects, and recently has been playing with Chaplin in "The Floorwalker."

The Universal serial, "Peg o' the Ring" company, is now making episodes three and four, having completed the first two. The first episode is to consist of three reels, and in the making of this Director Jaccard establishes a new record for Marathon working horse, having worked five days and nights in order to get ahead prior to the release date early in May. The five days included a trip to Hollister, Cal., where the Al G. Barnes circus showing there was used for many scenes.

The story throughout will be written by Olga Printzlau and Director Jaccard. The trip to Hollister brought to the acquaintance of Ruth Stonehouse, two missing heirs of the estate of Sir Alfred Stonehouse, of England, Al G. Barnes being one, and his brother, Captain Robert Stonehouse, also with the circus, the other. No settlement has been made of the estate of which Ruth Stonehouse is one of the principal heirs, as it was impossible to locate the other two. This fortunate meeting will, in all probability, bring about a division of the wealth.

Stanton Just Has the "Work Fever"

Richard Stanton, who has directed the "Graft" serial, and played the leading part in the last nine episodes, finished his work on Friday morning last week, at 3:30 a. m. During his spare moments, on Friday, he wrote a story around the famous Corona road races, and on Saturday made five thousand feet in and about the track and pits, which will be cut to three thousand feet and released under the title of "The Great Corona Road Race." Stanton played the leading part in this, the role of Bob Burman, driving the car of Burman, the unfortunate speed fiend who was killed, a number of laps prior to the race. Cameramen fortunately were standing near where the accident happened in which Burman lost his life, but these scenes will probably not be used.

With the three-reel subect completed last Tuesday, Mr. Stanton was assigned to directing the production of a series of ten pictures featuring Carter DeHaven to appear under the title of "The Mollycoddle and the Rounder," from scenario written by Bess Meredith. Mr. Stanton had been granted a three-weeks' vacation following the finishing of the serial, but owing to his ability as a director, the management of Universal City have induced him to continue without a vacation.

The Universal Animated Weekly, released through the Southern California Exchange, has become known as the Los Angeles Times-Universal Animated Weekly, and a number of events are being added to this each week to make it more of a local subject.

John Borden, Chicago millionaire, and party en route to Seattle to start on an Arctic expedition, were guests one day during the past week at Universal City where they posed for the Animated Weekly camera.

Several people of the motion picture industry have been added to the producing staff of the Universal Company, the list including Tom Walsh, late assistant to Producing Manager Lee Daugherty of the Biograph Company, who will serve as assistant director to Henry McRae. Jack Mulhall, juvenile leading man, late of the Biograph Company, has been contracted to play leads opposite Cleo Madison in subjects made under her direction. Billy Mason, who played in the Essanay-Chicago Tribune baseball pictures, "You Know Me, Al," has left the Keystone Company and is back with the Universal, where he will, in all probability, play leads, and direct the making of a baseball series.

Suzette Booth, who has played heavies for the Essanay, is with the Universal. Also Frank Whitson, well known actor of the legitimate stage. The latter will play leads in the DeGrasse Company. Helen Lesley, formerly of the Universal Company, who has not played for the past year owing to injuries received while at Lake Tahoe, is again numbered among the stock players, and has been assigned to ingenue parts with the J. Hunt Company.

"Never Again, Eddie"

The Al Christie Nestor Company is making the final scenes for "Never Again, Eddie," a single reel, in which a wife, Billie Rhodes, of a white-light-loving-husband, induces her brother (Lee Moran) to don feminine makeup, and play the role of a blonde chorus girl, while she appears as a man, with a full grown mustache, who is the husband of the chorus girl. The "chorus girl" succeeds in the flirtation with his sister's husband, when his sister appears as the indignant husband, and causes her husband to be cured of his giddy ways.

The second Nestor Christie Company is home from San Diego and Coronado, where they made two subjects. One is "When the Browns Visited the Fair," in which Neil Burns appears as husband and father, and Stella Adams as his wife, with their five children go through the California Exposition.

The second was made at Coronado Beach, and has been named "Wanted, a Husband." The story provides that a bride of a few weeks is requested by her wealthy uncle to spend a short time with him while her husband, a traveling man, is absent from home. She induces a lawyer to pose as her husband, hoping to secure a partially promised inheritance. In this she is successful, but complications arise when the husband comes home unexpectedly. The principal players of this are Betty Compson, Neil Burns, Ethel Lynn, Harry Rattenberry and Joe Janecka.

Producer Christie and his leading people including Eddie Lyons, Billie Rhodes and Lee Moran, will go to San Francisco the first of the coming week to make a two-reel comedy.

Eddy Lyons of the Nestor Company has been mourning the loss of his Buick automobile stolen recently, and has received the advice from the insurance company that it was found at Randsburg, one hundred and

Train Load of Dynamite for a Bison

A train loaded with dynamite is to be blown to atoms for the two-reel Bison, "The Shadow of Crime," being filmed for the Universal by Director Henry McRae. This sensational melodrama was adapted from the story of Wright Roberts. A division superintendent of a railroad finding himself in serious financial troubles, accepts a contract for ten thousand dollars if he will cause a train load of explosives billed through as fruit to be safely delivered. An attorney who hopes to keep the superintendent in his power in order to have the influence of the superintendent to win the hand of his daughter, employes men to fire the train.

The attorney then refuses to make payment to his henchman, who tries to rob the attorney's office at a time when the superintendent's daughter goes there to secure the contract. In a struggle the lawyer is shot. A passing engineer rushes to the office and is charged with the crime. The day following the crook is run down by a a street car, and on his deathbed confesses of the shooting of the lawyer. The engineer, who has been freed by a confession of the girl, woos and wins her, and then falls heir to a fabulous sum. Marie Walcamp is the daughter; E. N. Wallock, the superintendent; Lee Hill, the engineer, and L. C. Shumway the attorney.

A one-reel heart interest story is being made by Director R. H. Cochran entitled "Betty's Hero," from a scenario by Calder Johnstone. An aged tramp, arrested for vagrancy, is sent to the chain gang, rescues the little daughter of the judge and returns her home, where he learns he was the former caretaker of the judge's father's estate. The judge, because of fond memories of the good old days, grants him his freedom, and gives him employment. Thomas Jefferson is featured in the character part, Malcolm Blevins is the judge, and little Zoe Beck is the daughter.

The George Gibbs novel, "The Silent Battle," has been adapted by F. McGrew Willis, and is being filmed in five reels with J. Warren Kerrigan in the star part, that of a young lawyer with every promise of a brilliant career who is addicted to drink. The story deals with his attempts to overcome this inherent appetite, and there is a romance frequently interrupted by another woman who loves the young lawyer. Lois Wilson, Maude George, Harry Carter, Ray Hanford and J. F. Conaly appear in support of Kerrigan. The picture is being filmed under the direction of Jack Conway, late director at Fine Arts.

Allen Curtis has created a lot of comedy as the result of a man and wife being jealous of their respective mates, all of which ends in a unique climax resulting from the wife taking the other woman's husband to the basement of her home to evesdrop on the other couple, and there being buried under an avalanche of coal, which the wife forgot was to be delivered. The usual Joker cast appears in this.

The Joker Company has just completed filming "It Was Only In the Play," a comedy dealing with the performance of a one-night stand company in Hickville, where the show is broken up by an admiring yokel, who thinks the leading woman of the troupe is about to be killed.

"By Chance" a Stock Exchange Play

"By Chance" is the one-reel drama dealing with incidents of the stock exchange. The subject is being made by Lloyd B. Carleton with a cast composed of Dorothy Davenport, Emory Johnson, Richard Morris and Alfred Allen. The plot hinges on the father, the stock broker, abhorring gambling with cards and refusing to aid his son, who has become financially involved. The daughter leaves the home when the son is ordered away, and becomes the stenographer of a rival broker, whom she later weds. Her husband and her father clash in an attempt to corner the copper market, and she brings the two parties together.

Filming of a five-reel melodrama entitled "The Iron Grip of Crime" has been taken up by Director Jay Hunt. This is from an original story by Frank Wiltermood, and features Francelia Billington and Jack Holt, with a supporting cast which includes Gilmore Hammond, Paul Byron, Mina Jeffries, C. Normand Hammond, Mrs. Jay Hunt, Hector V. Sarno and W. F. Musgrave. The story is that of a young school teacher who makes many sacrifices to prevent her brother from falling into the hands of the law for various crimes. These acts bring her into many complications which cause her husband, a detective, to question her fidelity. The climax of the photoplay is a court room scene, where she makes a final sacrifice which prevents the conviction of her brother's friend, a murderer, and brings out an explanation which reunites her with her husband.

A leap year girl who becomes infatuated with her father's chauffeur and leads him to the altar is the central figure of "The Rose Colored Scarf," a two-reel drama being filmed by Universal Director William Worthington, from a story by Eleanor M. Ingram, adapted for the screen by Ben Cohn. Agnes Vernon appears in the part of the daughter of the rich, Herbert Rawlinson the chauffeur, and William Canfield the father.

The cast for the two-reel story "Shoes," adapted from a Collier's Weekly story, and produced by the Smalleys, includes Mary McDonald, Harry Griffith, Jessie Arnold, William Mong and Mrs. Whitting.

Dillon Films "When Papa Died"

The Vogue slapstick-with-a-reason company, directed by Jack Dillon, is filming "When Papa Died." Ben Turpin appears in this as a socialistic telephone repair man, who accidently hits a patron of his company on the head with a hammer, and politicians attempt to railroad him to the death chair. The clumsiness of a pallbearer causes the dropping of the casket, the supposed dead man comes to life, and brings about the release of the socialist. Appearing in this are Paddy Maguire, Rena Rogers, Jack Gaines and Ed. Sedgwick. The scenario is by Robert Dillon.

The second Vogue Company is filming a gypsy story which has been given a working title of "A Gypsy Romance." This pertains to the chief of a wandering band who becomes infatuated with a country girl, Madge Kirby, and causes her abduction. Rube Miller, as her country lover, overpowers the gypsy chief, and by the gypsies is selected as their chief. The deposed leader attempts to wreck the lives of all by the use of bombs, but the romance of the country lovers is brought to a happy ending. Art Travers and Ellis Neice are others of the cast.

Burt C. Hart, who came to Los Angeles two weeks ago to establish a local office for the New York Morning Telegraph, died of pneumonia early this week, and the body was shipped to New York. He was seventy-two years old. He was well known as a newspaper man and theatrical manager.

The Clune Film Producing Company's twelve-reel subject, "Ramona," closed a ten week engagement at Clune's Auditorium April 15. The attendance has been as great as anticipated by the management of the producing company and theatre, and the subject will probably be returned here at a future date. The paid admissions total 200,000.

SCENES FROM TWO COMING HORSLEY PRODUCTIONS, AND (Center) A NEW TYPE OF "STILL," WHICH DAVID HORSLEY PLANS TO ISSUE WITH HIS PHOTOPLAYS

"The Birth of a Nation," which has played twenty-two weeks at the Auditorium, Los Angeles, is soon to be returned for an indefinite engagement.

The film, orchestra, music and three mammoth stage settings used in the local showing of "Ramona" will be shipped to Chicago for the opening there at an early date—about June 1—at the Auditorium. Advices from Messrs. Clune and Brown, who are now in New York, state that the opening there has been far more successful than they had anticipated. Director Donald Crisp, who is in New York, is making scenes there for the company's next production, "The Eyes of the World."

The third Fine Arts subject featuring DeWolf Hopper, originally known as "The Philanthropist," has been titled "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan." This is probably the last picture in which Fay Tincher will be seen with Hopper, as she has been cast to play in other subjects, in which she is featured. Others supporting in this subject are Chester Withey, who is author of the story, and Director Eddie Dillon appears in the part of a crook. This photoplay is said to contain all kinds of situations from genteel comedy to the intensely dramatic, and is referred to as a real for sure Hopperesque subject. This, as with all Fine Arts subjects, is carrying a preachment against censorship which is as follows: "Censorship is absolutely against public policy, against the spirit of the constitution, against the very life and essence of true American and democratic ideas." The producing staff of the Fine Arts studio have been notified that the Pennsylvania censor board ordered similar preachments against censorship eliminated from the subjects shown in that state.

"Dope Fiend" First Starring Medium for Fay Tincher

Scenario for the first Fine Arts subject starring Fay Tincher has been prepared by Chester Withey and Roy Summerville, and is entitled "The Dope Fiend." In this Miss Tincher appears in the part of an artist's model who is a victim of drugs. It is a decidedly new characterization for this actress, but not wholly different from her former work, in that there are a number of comedy situations. Tully Marshall appears as the artist, and others in the subject are Max Davison, F. J. Butler and the author. The direction will be by Eddie Dillon. Withey is the author of all scenarios for DeWolf Hopper the subjects previously made.

Miss Tincher has just been notified that she has won second place in a popularity contest conducted by the Mirror, an Australian film publication. The first place was won by Mary Pickford. In view of the fact that Miss Tincher has been in pictures less than two years, this must be considered as a distinct honor.

Director Lloyd Ingraham is ready to stake his life that he has found the small town where there are more fans than in Mudville, and to this place he and the Fine Arts Company producing "Casey at the Bat," with DeWolf Hopper as Casey, have now gone. A former professional baseball player has been secured to assist in the direction, and Fine Arts players make up two entire baseball teams. A cast composed of Marguerite Marsh, Frank Bennett, Kate Toncray, Carl Stockdale, Elmo Lincoln and Mae Girici have been selected to support the big comedian, who looks like a giant in his baseball uniform.

The crook story originally known as "Playmates," produced by the Franklyn Brothers at the Fine Arts studio with Norma Talmadge, Ralph Lewis and Eugene Palette in the principal parts, has been renamed "Going Straight."

Every effort is being made at the Fine Arts studio to keep a secret the nature of the subject now being made by Director Paul Powell, with Mae Marsh, Robert Harron and Wilfred Lucas. The first and only subject these three appeared in was of the cave man type, and inasmuch as it has always been the desire of Production Manager Frank E. Woods to again cast these players in such a subject, it is almost a certainty that this is the kind of a story they are now playing in. Additional reason for this belief is the fact that there is but one interior scene in the entire five-reel subject. The scenario for this was prepared by Anita Loos.

Fairbanks in "The Assassin"

With the completion of "The Bouncer," which will be within the next few days, work of filming "The Assassin," starring Douglas Fairbanks, will be taken up by William Christy Cabanne. This new photoplay is by Robert M. Baker, co-author with John Emerson of the stage and screen version of "The Conspiracy." This is spoken of as an ideal play for Fairbanks, and the supporting cast includes Jewel Carmen, A. D. Sears, Margie Wilson, W. E. Lawrence, Lillian Langdon, Wilbur Higby and George A. Barringer.

A semi-public showing was given the adaptation of the Shakespearian tragedy, "Macbeth," featuring Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Thursday evening of last week at the Burbank theatre, the audience being made up of studio people and friends of the English actor. Prior to the showing Director John Emerson, who was in charge of the filming of this, made the announcement that it was not to be considered as the completed photoplay, as it was being shown solely for the purpose of permitting those who took part to see the subject, and to aid the cutting and tinting departments of the Fine Arts studio.

All in all, it is a very remarkable film with good acting, beautiful locations, wonderful detail of costumes, settings, properties and photographic effects that are marvelous. The film will in all probability be completed within the next ten days, when critics will be given a showing.

Arthur Shirley having completed his work in "The Fall of a Nation," by Thomas E. Dixon, which has been produced by the National Drama Corporation, has gone to Bear Lake for a short vacation.

Albert Russell has been engaged by the Universal Company to co-direct with Billy Mason, also recently added to the Universal staff. For the past two years and a half Russell has been assisting and co-directing at the Biograph Company.

A series of western and underworld stories are being arranged for Harry Carey by the Universal Company, in which he will be starred. Arrangements are being made for a special release of "The Three Godfathers," the five-reel story by Peter B. Kyne, in which it is reported Mr. Carey did some exceptionally good work.

Vola Smith, for the past two years leading woman for the Biograph Company, has been signed by the Universal Company to play a vampire lead in Carter De Haven's company.

Two players of the B. & L. Film Company at San Mateo, California, Neva Gerber and Earle Emlay, narrowly escaped drowning in the swift current of the Feather River, near Beldon, this week. The wire holding the boat broke, and the craft was carried down stream and capsized in the rapids. Frank E. Baskette, one of the owners of the company, was successful in rescuing the two after others had failed. The story of the rescue was told Los Angeles players by little Lena Baskette, the nine-year-old Universal dancer, who returned from spending a week end with her father. Miss Gerber escaped from the experience without serious injury, but Emlay was not so fortunate, and is still ill from the accident.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Fox Puts Entering Wedge in South American Market

TO know that the Fox Film Corporation feature productions had invaded South America, the millions of people on the southern continent only had to take a look at the newspapers of Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

In those two cities are published dailies with circulations as large as those which rank at the top on the North American continents.

The initial success of William Fox features in both Brazil and Argentina is due largely to the successful use of the dailies published in Spanish, Portuguese and German which have a strong hold upon the South American public.

Every first, second and third run exhibitor using Fox features in South America in a city or town having a newspaper is signed to use paid advertising to make the features known to the public.

The initial advertising outlay entailed an advertising expenditure running from 25 per cent. to 33⅓ per cent. of the rental cost of the pictures and the exhibitors promptly spent these amounts in their most powerful newspapers.

The physical appearance of this advertising, running from 400 to 1,200 lines in a single advertisement, is not at all unlike the type of newspaper advertising done by Mr. Fox himself in New York City, where he has been close to a score of theatres, as well as theatres in other nearby cities.

The results obtained from this advertising were astonishing. "Carmen" and other Fox pictures attracted audiences so large that the theatre attendants could not cope with them and it became necessary both in Rio and Buenos to ask police assistance in handling the audiences. Motors lined both sides of the streets near houses where the Fox features were showing and the very best elements of the population, beautifully gowned, came long distances for the premieres.

The influential newspapers of both cities dealt with these showings at great length and with the dignity that usually attaches to reviews of the opera in South American capitals. The critics of these big journals personally reviewed the performances under their signatures, thereby at the very outset placing motion pictures on a par with the highest forms of amusement

Congress of Mothers Indorses Local Censorship

At Meeting in Cairo, Ill., Body Passes Resolution Calling Upon Each Parent-Teacher Association, Woman's Club and Mothers' Circle to Agitate for Censorship in Their Locality

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Cairo, Ill., April 22.

THE Illinois Congress of Mothers, in session at Cairo, adopted this resolution on the question of motion picture censorship:

"Whereas, Many of the motion pictures shown in theatres throughout Illinois are unsuitable for exhibition to children, and

"Whereas, The advertising matter displayed in connecting with the motion picture theatre often tends to destroy the ideals that home, school and church are attempting to establish, and

"Whereas, There is no state legislation of the motion pictures shown, therefore be it

"Resolved, That each Parent-Teacher Association, Woman's Club and Mothers' Circle do its utmost to urge its respective city councils to appoint a volunteer Censorship Board composed of members of local representative organizations, and that it co-operate continuously with said Board; and be it further

"Resolved, That each individual father and mother recognize a responsibility in regard to patronizing theatres where good films are shown, thus proving that there is a public demand for such films."

Most of the members indorsed local censorship of motion pictures, being against state censorship.

PAUL ALWYN PLATZ.

THEY'RE GOING TO PUT THEIR FINGERS ON THE "BAD SPOTS"

An ordinance regulating picture shows, vaudeville and places of amusement, defining the character of show permitted, prohibiting shows tending to corrupt private morals, and placing the power of censorship in the Commissioner of Public Safety, and authorizing assistant censors, was recently passed by the city council of Lawton, Okla. Violations of the city ordinances is punishable by both fine and jail imprisonment.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

PATHE MANAGER IN KANSAS CITY FINDS OKLAHOMA TERRITORY BOOMING

THE official organ of the Kansas City branch of the Paramount Company has been changed from the name of Picture Pep to that of Paramount Pep, and under the latter cognomen is thriving in great fashion. Lee Balsley, publicity manager of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, who acts as editor of this publication, thought of the present name when the magazine was started, but hesitated to use it for fear of infringing on the rights of the New York office, but when he got a letter from the East suggesting the change, he was more than eager to comply with their wishes.

The Kansas City Metro Exchange is undergoing some changes in the accounting and booking department. Albert W. Howell, of the Pittsburgh staff, has been there for some time installing new systems. From there he goes to Des Moines. H. E. Berman, Kansas City manager, has been in Excelsior Springs recently taking a short rest. A change in the office several weeks ago was the addition of G. J. Munchmore, formerly with the Kansas City Feature Film Company, as office assistant.

The Kansas City Feature Film Company is doing its best to boost Paramount day, April 27. In the issues of Paramount Pep, the publication issued by the publicity department of this company, special articles have been written telling exhibitors throughout the territory how to cooperate with the exchanges in making the day a success.

The use of Paramount trade-marks in every possible way is being urged for that day, and an effort is being made to get the exhibitors in the various towns to run the Paramount trade-mark in the newspapers. Lee D. Balsley, editor of Paramount Pep, is very enthusiastic over the day, and believes that it will be a great success. His company covers the states of Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa, and the literature that he sends out reaches a multitude of exhibitors.

A recent visitor to the Kansas City offices of the General Film Company was F. C. Aiken, division manager.

Joseph Skirboll, general manager of the Metro Picture Service, recently paid a one-day visit to H. E. Berman, Kansas City executive. From there Mr. Skirboll went to Des Moines. He was on a business trip to that section of the country.

Two recent visitors to the Kansas City Paramount office were H. B. Gray, manager of the Royal theatre, at Carroll, Iowa, and J. E. Foley, manager of the Princess theatre at Ames, Iowa. Mr. Gray was in Kansas City looking over the newer theatres there, with the view of getting pointers on first-class houses or ideas on improving his present one at Carroll. It is also very probable that if he cannot make suitable arrangements towards remodeling the Royal, he will build an entirely new theatre, modeled on the plan of some well-known Kansas City houses.

C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Kansas City office of the Pathe Exchange, has returned from a trip into the Oklahoma territory, during which time he was with his two representatives in that territory, Howard Jameyson and George P. Meek.

"The moving picture business in Oklahoma is in excellent condition," said Mr. Edwards. "In Tulsa the houses are playing to capacity each night and are charging as high as thirty cents for pictures. Few places get five cents, twenty cents being about the average." Mr. Edwards said that exhibitors there use all kinds of service and seem to get excellent results.

With the return of A. A. Chatkin, Kansas City manager of the United Film Service, from a meeting of the branch managers of that company at Chicago recently, the announcement has been made that the Kansas City office will handle twenty-one releases each week, instead of three as heretofore. Mr. Chatkin also said that other changes would probably take place soon, the nature of which he could not announce until the plans were perfected.

MARGETTS AND BYERLE IN TORONTO FOR SALES CONFERENCE

Mr. Margetts, the St. John manager of Universal, and Mr. Byerle, representing the company in Montreal, were recently in Toronto, and spent some hours in consultation with Mr. Hague and Mr. Lennon. The coming of the new serial, and several other matters, which it is stated the Universal Company has in view, required a thorough understanding between all the Eastern branches, and this is the object of the meeting.

C. W. BUNN, WORLD, WASHINGTON, D. C., MARRIED

Again cupid has entered the film ranks in Washington, D. C., this time through the World film offices, when C. W. Bunn, manager of the local exchange, stole off to Chicago and brought back a wife. The young lady was Miss Mable Larsen.

The happy couple have the hearty good wishes of the territory, for Mr. Bunn has won the hearts of film circles by his congeniality and business fairness.

C. E. SMITH WILL OPEN PATHE EXCHANGE IN BUTTE

C. E. Smith has resigned as assistant manager to J. E. Kirk, of the Pathé exchange, Omaha, to open another Pathé branch at Butte, Mont. Smith had a big following in the Middle West, who, while regretting to see him go, were also glad to see him in a higher position.

EXPLOITATION OF BILLIE BURKE SERIAL BRINGS CHANGES IN KLEINE MARKETING ORGANIZATION

PREPARATIONS for the handling of the Billie Burke serial were responsible for a number of important changes in George Kleine's marketing organization last week.

W. C. Condell, formerly a traveling salesman out of the Kansas City office, was promoted to the management of the Dallas, Tex., office; vice E. J. Moskowitz.

A. C. Melvin, for some time past roadman out of Philadelphia, goes to Kansas City as manager.

W. O. Edmonds, formerly handling George Kleine's Kansas City office, has been promoted to Coast supervisor, and will spend his time between the three Kleine offices at Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

J. C. Ragland, one of the most successful travelers out of the Kleine Pittsburgh office, goes to New Orleans, where he will have charge, succeeding Howard Gale.

Among several new offices soon to be opened, that at Omaha will be handled by R. P. Peebles, of the clerical forces of George Kleine's New York headquarters.

Another new Kleine office will be opened in Detroit next week, with Frank Rutledge, of the Chicago office, in charge. Mr. Rutledge is one of the best-known film salesmen in the Middle West. He has covered the state of Michigan for the Kleine interests for a long time and is well and favorably known to exhibitors everywhere throughout that state.

The opening of the new offices will be under the supervision of General Branch Manager Merle E. Smith, who will also visit the Dallas, Tex., and possibly other offices before his return to the New York headquarters.

FOLAND TRAVELS FOR PATHE IN KANSAS CITY

A new traveler out of the Kansas City office of the Pathé Exchange is J. T. Foland, formerly Kansas City representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Mr. Foland, who takes the place of T. S. Bradley, now in Pittsburgh, will travel in northern Missouri and Kansas.

KRAKER GOES TO LOS ANGELES UNDER BRYSON, UNIVERSAL

John Kraker, formerly with the Canadian Universal Film Exchange at Calgary, and for the past several months with the Universal California Film Exchange at San Francisco, has been transferred to the Los Angeles branch, where he will serve as salesman for Manager J. V. Bryson.

GOOD BUSINESS IN LENT PREVENTS NEW ENGLAND MEN FROM "BORROWING TROUBLE"

FRED B. MURPHY has sold his United Film Company exchanges in Bangor, Boston, Springfield, Albany, Syracuse and Buffalo to the newly formed Unicorn Film Service Corporation, the largest independent film exchanges in that territory. He has signed a contract as Eastern district manager of the new company, which started April 24.

The personnel of the six exchanges have all gone over to the new company with Mr. Murphy. Seen by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Murphy gave it as his opinion that there was a wonderful field for a service proposition. His experience and observation showed that the need was for short subjects in drama and comedy. He said the Unicorn company was the result of a natural evolution in the business; that it was organized to satisfy the exhibitors' demands for a return to original subjects and lengths of reel.

The consideration is said to be large which induced the sale of the United interests to the Unicorn company, and the salary mentioned in Mr. Murphy's contract is announced to be the largest paid to any film man in New England.

Daniel J. Horgan, late representative of Pathé Frerés, at Springfield, Mass., has associated himself with Hearst's News service.

The male employes of the Universal Film exchange, Boston, Mass., presented Manager Eslow with a gold-headed cane on his departure to take charge of the Unicorn company interests in the West. The women employes gave him a gold fountain pen.

Manager Hart, formerly in charge of the Mutual Springfield office, who left several months ago, has returned to his former position.

Wedding announcements are uot for William T. O'Brien, formerly of the United, now Unicorn company, Springfield. This will be Mr. O'Brien's third venture in matrimony. Reports say the bride-to-be is young and charming. Mr. O'Brien is being congratulated on his luck.

William P. Gray, of Lewiston, Me., was a visitor to Boston last week.

Manager Harry Campbell, of the Fox Boston office, has signed the Scollay Square Olympia for six-day service. The Fox is the only feature exchange in Boston which has two six-day runs. They have the Modern for first run and the Scollay for second.

Manager Campbell, Boston, has a unique contract with Grant D. Burns, of the Graphic theatre, Bangor, Me. Mr. Burns signed two separate contracts for Fox service. When they run out he is to take the service straight under one release.

William Shapiro is back in Boston from his Maine trip for Fox. He corroborates the statements of all film men in New England territory of unprecedented Lenten business. Trade men are greatly pleased at the continued patronage. The February business is continuing for many of them, and bids fair to hold indefinitely.

Lila Izen, a New England booker, has left the V-L-S-E and gone to the World Film in Boston, Mr. Grady manager. Miss Izen is popular throughout New England and her friends will be interested to know of her change.

EXCHANGEMEN IN NEW ORLEANS HOLD ANOTHER MEETING WITH REALTY INTERESTS OVER FILM BUILDING

AN important change occurred last week at the New Orleans office of Kleine-Edison. Howard Gale, eight months manager, resigns to go into business for himself in Canal street, and his place will be taken by J. C. Ragland, formerly with the Pittsburgh office of George Kleine.

At the local Fox lair, W. C. Harden has been installed as the new Southern division manager. Mr. Harden went to New Orleans just long enough to get acquainted with the Row, and was then called out of the city.

Through the courtesy of R. E. Barron, New Orleans manager of Fox, a Fox feature was lent to the pupils of the Sophie B. Wright High School for a charity entertainment. When a committee, of which the correspondent for MOTION PICTURE NEWS was a member, called on Mr. Barron, he very willingly gave a one day's booking to aid in the entertainment. He offered the choice of Theda Bara in "Carmen," and "The Little Gypsy," and the latter picture was selected as being the most appropriate for the "teen age" misses.

Managers of the New Orleans exchanges held another meeting with the realty interests backing the erection of a film exchange building in that city.

At this meeting, the plans for the building were further discussed, and it was agreed that centralization of New Orleans exchanges would be a good move. For one thing, it is thought, the exhibitors will be saved a lot of time in signing contracts, and any expediency along this line, of course, is heartily desired by every manager in the city. At the same time, the exhibitors will not be compelled to make a round of the Row when in search of film.

No definite results were announced from the last meeting, but it is not an improbability that New Orleans will boast of a fine exchange building within a very short time.

George Vivirito, friend of every exchange manager in the Crescent City, has moved from 306 to 318 Baronne, which in itself seems a simple announcement, and yet he made much of it by having the managers over to see his new quarters. Mr. Vivirito by this move inaugurates one of the largest supply houses in the city. He has been named exclusive Southern representative for the Simplex machines, and he has this line, as well as Edison machines, very prominently displayed in his salesrooms. Mr. Vivirito started out in business in a veritable "hole in the wall"—a little place in Baronne street, just wide enough for the passage of one person—and by progressive methods and an engaging personality, has won his way to the top in his line.

CLUNES BIDS $3,500 FOR TWO-WEEK RUN OF CHAPLIN "CARMEN"

A new record price for film rental was made at Los Angeles last week when Manager Harry Naugle of the V-L-S-E exchange made a contract with the management of Clune's Broadway Theatre for a two-week run of the Essanay-Chaplin subject "Carmen" of four reels, the consideration being three thousand five hundred dollars for fourteen days.

Because of the numerous applications for exclusive first showing of the film, Mr. Naugle notified all applicants that sealed bids for the first two weeks would be received, and the subject would go to the highest bidder. Nine houses bid on the subject, ranging in price from eight hundred dollars to seventeen hundred and fifty per week for the first two weeks. Manager James Anderson of Clune's Broadway was the successful bidder.

This subject will be shown in connection with the Hearst Vitagraph Weekly at the regular prices of the theatre, ten, twenty and thirty cents.

PERSONAL LETTERS BRING REPLIES TO HARDENBROOK FROM EXHIBITORS

Manager Ross Hardenbrook of the Mutual Film Corporation in New Orleans is a believer in personal letters. Not long ago he got out a multigraphed communication on a certain subject which was mailed to exhibitors in his territory.

The form letters brought no response from certain exhibitors with whom he was doubly anxious to do business. So he sat right down and wrote three or four personal letters to these exhibitors asking why he had received no reply to his first epistle.

"The results were surprising," said Mr. Hardenbrook. "This experiment convinces me that exhibitors possess a whole lot of finer feelings and as a rule are highly intelligent persons who will treat the average form letter in the same manner that the average business man does—throw it in the waste basket."

He got replies to every one of his personal letters.

ESLOW FETED BEFORE LEAVING BOSTON FOR UNICORN MANAGERSHIP IN WEST

James A. Eslow, for the past three years New England manager of the Universal in Boston, has resigned and accepted the position of Western district manager of the newly formed Unicorn Film Service Corporation. His friends in the trade gave him a send-off dinner at the Georgian and presented him with a gold watch, suitably inscribed. Albert S. Schaller, who has been assistant manager and now becomes manager, vice Mr. Eslow, presented the watch and voiced the good wishes of Boston to Mr. Eslow in his new field. The headquarters will be in San Francisco.

Among prominent picture men present were: Peter W. McGuire, of Salem; Walter G. Hartford, of Pawtucket and Providence; Charles G. Gallagher; William J. Sullivan, of South Boston; Charles Walker, T. W. Burke and Morris Rothenburg, of Boston; J. Fred Lovvett, of Olneyville, R. I.; Henry J. Wasserman, of Haverhill; A. Montague, of East Boston; Edward J. Farrell, New England manager of the General Film Company; W. H. Bradley, manager of Triangle; E. R. Daniels, W. J. Cooper, Walter Bess, of Weymouth; James H. Donovan, of Jamaica Plain; H. J. Shepard, of the Universal executive offices, New York; F. H. Jacques, manager of the Bluebird Boston exchange; Fred B. Murphy, Eastern division manager of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation; S. H. Steinfeldt; Lon Vail, of Warren, R. I.; S. M. Moscow, New England manager of the Unicorn; Alden Washburn, Herman Hirsch, manager of "The Girl and the Game"; H. J. Segal, manager of the New Film Corporation; Joseph Saxe, of the Boston Traveler; Michael Shea and Joseph Di Pisa, of the Plymouth and Park Square theatres.

LARGE EXCHANGE IS NOW FEATURE OF NASHVILLE

The opening of the Nashville Film Company, Nashville, Tenn., with offices at 233½ Fifth Avenue, North, is the latest thing for "Opportunity Town." The new company now occupies very handsome offices over the Elite theatre, which are in keeping with some of the largest film companies situated in the larger cities. The Nashville Film Company is under the management of Theo. D. Mousson, who has a long and successful record in the motion picture industry.

The amount of business this new company has been doing during the short time that it has opened its offices, is positively amazing and astonishing. The following brands of films are handled by the new company: Paramount, Alliance, Life Photo, and the Universal program.

The shipping room is a large and spacious one, taking up many square feet of flooring and is in charge of Cloud V. Eckhardt, who also supervises the inspection of all films before being sent out to the various exhibitors. "Up to the minute service" will be our slogan, said Mr. Mousson, and with the capable assistance of our office force the new company should in time prove to be one of the livest and most up-to-date film companies in Nashville. The new company also makes and manufactures screens, puts out complete road shows and handles parts for all make machines.

TWO COPIES OF "NEWS" DISAPPEAR FROM WIESFELDT'S DESK BEFORE HE HAS TIME TO TURN A PAGE

There was a commotion in the Mutual exchange offices in Omaha last week. It was on the day MOTION PICTURE NEWS arrived. Manager Max J. Weisfeldt, chatting with the correspondent, leaned back in his chair and reached over on the desk where the latest copy had been left a moment before.

It was not there.

"Hey! Where's that 'NEWS'?" yelled Weisfeldt.

His stenographer and Assistant Manager Vaughn rushed in, fearing something tragic had happened. Weisfeldt was red in the face.

"This makes the third time," he declared, accusingly. "I get two copies of the 'NEWS,' and I can't even keep one. I won't say what'll happen if this doesn't stop. I'd hate to fire anybody, but I feel like doing it."

"Subscribe for it for everybody in the office," suggested Vaughn, calling a boy and sending him to the nearest news-stand.

WERNER OPENS UNICORN BRANCH IN ST. LOUIS

Sam Werner, formerly with the United Film Company, has opened a branch af the Unicorn Film Service Corporation at 3628 Olive street, St. Louis, which is one of the twenty-five exchanges to be opened by the corporation in as many of the larger cities in the United States. The exchange will handle only one and two-reel subjects, and will make twenty-one releases a week, with two copies of each subject, the first release date to be April 24.

Mr. Werner was one of the first men in St. Louis to become identified with the film industry, having been connected with one of the first exchanges in the city. He has remained in some branch of the business ever since, and is very well known to the trade all through the St. Louis territory.

NEW AUDITING SYSTEM INSTALLED BY HOWE FOR METRO IN KANSAS CITY

The Kansas City office of the Metro company is undergoing a slight period of reconstruction in the matter of bookkeeping.

Albert W. Howe, auditor for the company, is at the Kansas City headquarters putting in a new system, which it is expected will simplify the work.

SCHWALBE BUYS RIGHTS TO "ONE DAY," MOSS

The Electric Theatre Supply Company of Philadelphia, through H. Schwalbe, has purchased from B. S. Moss the rights to exhibit "One Day" in eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, southern New Jersey, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

FOX FRISCO EXCHANGE RENDEZVOUS FOR OUT OF TOWN MANAGERS

The exchange of the William Fox Film Corporation, in the heart of the film exchange district, on Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, has become a favorite meeting place for exhibitors, where the problems connected with the film business are discussed. In order to care for the steady increase in business, Manager William J. Citron has found it necessary to rearrange the offices, and the big waiting room in front of the exchange is always well filled.

Many visitors from the country districts have been coming in of late, now that the weather is well settled, and a day never passes without a new contract being secured. I. F. Morris, of the Sequoia theatre, Sacramento, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco, and stated that although he showed Fox productions five days a week he could scarcely care for all who desired to see them. James Beatty, of the Liberty theatre, San Jose, was also in San Francisco recently and had about the same story to tell. He recently refitted his lobby, installed new projection machines and otherwise improved his place. L. F. Williams, of Santa Cruz, is another exhibitor of Fox productions who was a visitor at the exchange a few days ago. Still another visitor was C. Robinson, of the Bagby theatre, Monterey, who motored into the city for a short stay. The local exhibitors like to meet the proprietors of theatres in the country towns at the Fox exchange, as they find that some of the real live wires in the business come from the smaller places.

UNICORN IN KANSAS CITY UNDER MORGAN

The Unicorn Film Service has located its office for the Central West territory at 602-612 Lloyd building, Kansas City, Mo. The agency will have eight rooms comprising a floor space of 2,000 square feet. Present plans contemplate a force of twelve.

The manager of the exchange will be J. W. Morgan. Mr. Morgan is a widely known exchange man in the territory, having organized and owned the Universal exchange in St. Louis and Kansas City. For the past several years he has been out of the business. His chief associates will be G. S. Shumard, booker, who is an old employee of Morgan's; E. E. Crockett, of Minneapolis, and C. C. Chenoweth, a new man to the industry, as roadmen.

The offices are complete in every detail, being fitted up with the latest equipment, while the executive part is neatly furnished.

FLINTOM'S BROTHER-IN-LAW ELECTED MAYOR OF KANSAS CITY

A. D. Flintom, president of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, is the brother-in-law of the newly elected mayor of Kansas City, George H. Edwards. Mr. Flintom has played an active part in the election of Mr. Edwards, and was very much pleased when the latter was put in office.

The general opinion of the moving picture men of the city is that the new executive will make a good leader.

Number Two in the series:
What Is a Trade Journal?

The Trade Journal and the News-Stands

YOUR own good sense, I think I have made clear, is your best first aid in directing your trade advertising.

It simply amounts to this: if you've got 5,000 or 10,000 prospects, you want to reach them by the shortest route at the least expense.

That means that you want to buy circulation that goes to these prospects—and nowhere else.

Now how may you determine this?

The answer is: through the subscribers to the paper—the kind, the number.

News-stand circulation means nothing to you.

It may go to your prospects. But you don't know this: the paper itself doesn't know it; the news company can't tell you.

No one can prove it to you. When publications are put upon news-stands, anybody may buy them—the public at large presumably.

The news-stands are for magazines for the public. They were never meant for trade journals.

Look over a news-stand some time and see if it displays any trade journals. Write to any trade journal — The Dry Goods Economist, Motor World, Power, Paint, etc., and find out what a very small percentage of their circulation is on the news-stands.

News-stand circulation is not difficult to secure upon a returnable basis. The news company will take about as many copies as you care to give them. They don't have to pay for what they don't sell and they charge you for the return express.

They would take 10,000 extra copies of MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week — gladly. They have often made the request.

We could then go to you—the advertiser—with a claim of almost double circulation. The figures would look big and attractive.

But, as a matter of fact, with all these greatly increased figures, we couldn't guarantee you one single unit more of trade circulation—the circulation you want.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is on a non-returnable basis, with the news-stands. The news company pays for every single copies it orders. This publication is the only one in this field that is on a non-returnable basis.

We have cut down our news-stand circulation to the last point. You will find MOTION PICTURE NEWS only on news-stands near theatre and exchanges and in the congested trade districts of New York and Chicago. There you will find it displayed more and selling more than any other picture trade journal. Ask any Times Square news-stand and find this out for yourself.

We assume that this carefully restricted news-stand circulation goes to the trade—to exhibitors principally. But we don't know. We don't guarantee it.

A subscription, on the other hand, tells you just who gets the paper. It tells you he wants it regularly.

Subscriptions, their number and kind are, therefore, your second consideration. You may rule news-stand circulation out of your calculations—cut the figures out and throw them away. They don't count.

And next week—for Consideration Number Three.

The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

THE moving picture business is here to stay. That you must admit in spite of carping critics, and blundering sore-heads. True, some Exhibitors have not found business so good lately—but if you get down to facts when you look for the reason why, it's a 100 to 1 shot that they are, and for some time have been, dallying with a feature program. Some of these wise ones will tell you that business has picked up since they went into features,—BUT—ask them whether they are talking NET or GROSS and they will find they have an immediate appointment and terminate your queries unceremoniously. Funny how we like to kid ourselves, isn't it? The man who is packing 'em in and losing money on features is envied by his competitor who is laying by a bit every day, and has a good steady dependable patronage, but admits to a few vacant seats at some performances. When this chap wakes up, he will realize that he has a gold mine and that good advertising will make it produce to capacity. The moral is that if you can tie up to the Universal Program, DO IT. If you can't NOW, watch your first chance. Let the people know what you have, and let the feature man go on to ruin if he wants to. You should worry!

Carter DeHaven and Flora Parker DeHaven in "A Youth of Fortune." Sixteenth Red Feather Production. Directed by Otis Turner. Released May 15. There's a new brand of movie enthusiasts and they are called "Red Feather Fans." Bigger, better, greater, grander, more lavish, larger casts, finer sets, more absorbing stories, with each succeeding Red Feather release—that's the order of the day. Directed by Otis Turner, the dean of moving picture directors, "A Youth of Fortune" is an achievement that has the peculiar punch and power that pulls. Carter is the son of the kind of well-to-do people who are always hard up. He is popular with all the family—not, but he stands high with his grand-dad, a multi-millionaire. When the old gentleman takes the count from old age, he leaves a will directing that his money be held in trust for Carter, and that the trustee shall be that person with whom Carter is living at the time of his coming of age. This is because Carter's father and mother are always scrapping over money matters, and show little regard for their son, who at the time is at a distant college. The merry chase for the boy and the custody of his fortune supplies one of the swiftest stories of the season. Carter meets Flora at school and you can imagine what her beauty did to him. That she showed up at the right time, proved that "the boy" was her husband and living with her on his twenty-first birthday, and that she was entitled to the trusteeship, is the finish of some of the most surprising incidents and unusual situations ever filmed. The story keeps you guessing all the way through and winds up with a startling and unexpected climax.

Herbert Rawlinson in "D'Arcy of the Northwest Mounted." Three Reel Gold Seal Drama. With Agnes Vernon. Directed by Wm. Worthington. Released May 16 Pathos and tragedy, a ruined life, human emotions and passions in the raw—that's this big story, BUT—illumined by a sweet and tender love story that is beautifully portrayed by two of the most popular stars on the screen today. A corking feature.

"Gertie's Gasolene Glide." With Gertrude Selby, Billy Armstrong and Phil Dunham. Two Reel L-KO Scream. Released May 17. This unusual L-KO was reviewed last week, as it was originally set for release May 10. NOTE change of release date and book it, for it is a whale of a comedy.

Ben Wilson in "A Wife At Bay." With Dorothy Phillips. Two Reel Rex Regeneration Drama. Directed by Ben Wilson. Released May 18. A new angle of a world-old problem, so startlingly and refreshingly presented as to fascinate all who have seen it. Dorothy was keen for the gay life. Her sense of honor was blunted and but for the timely aid of her husband would have been in the toils of a notorious gang. Strong, clean and vivid.

"Heartaches." With Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson. Two Reel Romantic Drama. Directed by Lloyd Carleton. Released May 19. When dramatic situations are set in an atmosphere of romantic charm the result is a picture that leaves the director and the actors free to do their very best. How Dorothy and Emory re-live a romance of an earlier generation makes one of the strongest and most charming dramas of the season. Your audiences will thank you for this.

"Hulda the Silent." With Lois Wilson, Harry Carter and Maud George. Two Reel 101-Bison Heart Interest Drama. Directed by Otis Turner. Released May 20. Can you beat that? A whale of a picture on the Regular Universal Program—with such famous feature players as Lois Wilson, Harry Carter and Maud George—directed by the Dean of Directors—Otis Turner, himself. You have never seen finer acting on the screen. You have never seen better "atmosphere" than in this big story of the Scandinavian emigrant who fell into the clutches of a designing woman, breaking the heart of the "girl he left behind him." In the title role Lois Wilson will command the sympathy and admiration of every picture lover in your neighborhood. Padded a reel or two this feature might easily be made a "special" and strong enough for a big feature night. If you can't tie up to the Universal Program now, watch FOR THE VERY FIRST CHANCE THAT OFFERS.

"Love Triumphant." With Gretchen Lederer and Val Paul. Two Reel Rex Emotional Drama. Released May 21. This strong story of the man who lived a double life; who could be true to neither the good woman nor the bad, furnishes some surprising situations and emotional scenes that fortunately are in the hands of a most capable group of players. Great features have been built around stories with less than is offered in this two reeler. When you have shown the Universal Program for a time you realize that big stories boiled down is a part of the policy that makes it the greatest Program on earth.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

THIRD GERALDINE FARRAR PLAY, "MARIA ROSA," FROM LASKY ON MAY 8

WITH Geraldine Farrar, Sessue Hayakawa and Blanche Sweet as the stars, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company announces three important releases on the Paramount program for the month of May. The third Geraldine Farrar photoplay for the Lasky company, entitled "Maria Rosa," will be released on May 8 in first run Paramount houses.

Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese actor who created such a sensation in the Lasky productions, "The Clue" and "The Cheat," will be seen in a photoplay entitled "Alien Souls," in which he will have the support of Tsuru Aoki on May 11; and Blanche Sweet is starred in "The Thousand Dollar Husband," a James Young production released on May 22.

"Maria Rosa" is a screened version of the play of the same name by Wallace Gillpatrick and Guido Marburg, which was presented in dramatic form on the New York stage two years ago with Lou-Tellegen as the star.

The story is laid in a Spanish province, and Geraldine Farrar appears as Maria Rosa, a young peasant girl for whose hand two friends are ardent suitors. Jealousy prompts one to shift the evidence of crime against the other, who is put in prison. Maria Rosa, believing him dead through forged evidence, marries the villainous suitor. On the wedding day the convict returns, in which situation Maria Rosa kills her new husband after he confesses his treachery, and the play ends with the promise of happiness. The cast includes, in support of Miss Farrar, Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, Horace B. Carpenter and Anita King.

"Alien Souls" is by Hector Turnbull, who also wrote "The Cheat." The story is based on the impossibility of the peoples of two races so diverse as the Japanese and the Anglo-Saxon to successfully merge in a social way. The cast includes Tsuru Aoki, Earle Foxe and Grace Benham.

Blanche Sweet will be seen in "The Thousand Dollar Husband." This will be James Young's second production for the Lasky company, as he has already completed "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" with Mae Murray in the title role, which will be released through Paramount at an early date. Theodore Roberts, James Neil, Tom Forman, Horace B. Carpenter and Isabelle Malone will appear in principal support of Miss Sweet in this photoplay.

ANNA LEHR, AUSTRIAN PLAYER, WITH TRIANGLE

The April releases of the Triangle introduce a new leading woman to film theatregoers, one whose debut has already convinced her discoverer, Thomas H. Ince, that a long term contract would just fit her case. Anna Lehr came from Austria, which perhaps accounts for her successful portrayal of Berna, the Russian girl, in "Civilization's Child," with William H. Thompson, the veteran character actor and Scotch uncle in "Peggy," the Ince-Billie Burke subject.

Miss Lehr has played on both sides of the water in stage productions, but when she entered the picture field her progress was slow until Ince recognized her ability. When the right part came along he gave it to her and she more than holds her own with Thompson, Jack Standing, Dorothy Dalton, J. Barney Sherry and other members of the cast of "Civilization's Child." Her next appearance on the Triangle screen will be with young "Buster" Collier in "The Bugle Call."

"INTO THE PRIMITIVE" FROM SELIG ON MAY 29 FOR V-L-S-E RELEASE

Kathlyn Williams is the star in the Selig Red Seal Play, "Into the Primitive," released through V-L-S-E, on Monday, May 29. Miss Williams takes the role of Jenny Leslie, an American heiress, supercilious and selfish. With two men, one a society fop, the other with the instincts of a "caveman," she is cast ashore in the African jungle.

In "Into the Primitive" she is compelled to forget all the comforts that were formerly hers and to take what primitive life provides. A river swarming with alligators, a herd of wild animals, a python, a gigantic African lion in search of prey, tigers, leopards and other wild beasts are introduced during the course of the story.

ILLUSTRATING THREE LASKY-MADE PHOTOPLAYS FOR PARAMOUNT RELEASE: SCENES FROM "ALIEN SOULS," WITH SESSUE HAYAKAWA. "THE THOUSAND DOLLAR HUSBAND," WITH BLANCHE SWEET, AND "MARIA ROSA," THE THIRD GERALDINE FARRAR SCREEN DRAMA

"ROGUE'S NEMESIS" WILL ATTEMPT TO OVERTAKE POPULARITY FOR KALEM ON MAY 8

Marin Sais dons trousers, a sticky, little mustache and a mannish wig—all in the cause of art—for "The Rogue's Nemesis," a coming episode of "The Social Pirates," scheduled for release on May 8.

In "The Rogue's Nemesis," George Bronson-Howard has written another novel story, which shows the girls called in to aid in dealing justice to an unscrupulous hypocrite, who is beyond the reach of the law. A carefully laid plan succeeds in having him become interested in Mary, played by Ollie Kirkby.

It is then that Marin Sais is called upon to contribute her performance in the male role, for she must pose as an eccentric musical genius, the husband of Mary. With this basis the story that follows may be expected to be rife with thrills and suspense.

May releases of "The Social Pirates" series are episodes six to ten. The company at the Glendale studio is now putting the finishing touches on the tenth episode. When weather conditions become suitable Director Horne and the company are going to make another trip to Seattle, securing marine scenes on the boat trip, and stopping off for an extended period in both Seattle and San Francisco for new locations.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH USED FOR "GILDED SPIDER"

The unusual privilege was recently afforded Louise Lovely, Lon Chaney and other Bluebird photoplayers, to take scenes for a moving picture within a Roman Catholic church, an incident believed to be so uncommon that the Bluebird publicity man has taken immediate advantage of the circumstance.

Largely through compliment to Vice-president and General Manager H. O. Davis, of the Universal company in Los Angeles, was the concession granted; for Mr. Davis, when he was director general of the San Diego exposition, made a great personal effort in making Catholic Day at the exposition a noteworthy success.

In producing "The Gilded Spider" for the Bluebird program it was necessary to have some authentic scenes in a Roman Catholic church, and when Mr. Davis made it known that the requirements of the picture would exact the most unusual concession on the part of church dignitaries, the Church of the Blessed Sacrament at Hollywood, Cal., was placed at the disposal of Miss Lovely and her associate players. Joseph De Grasse directed the scenes.

BLANCHE SWEET BEGINS WORK IN "THOUSAND DOLLAR HUSBAND" FOR LASKY

Returning from her brief vacation, following the completion of "The Sowers," Blanche Sweet has begun work again at the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company at Hollywood, Cal., in "The Thousand Dollar Husband," by James Young, who is also directing the production founded on a story by Margaret Turnbull.

"DR. NEIGHBOR," WITH HOBART BOSWORTH, HEADS UNIVERSAL PROGRAM FOR WEEK OF MAY 1

THE Universal program for the week of May 1 leads off on Monday with Hobart Bosworth in "Dr. Neighbor," a five-reel Red Feather drama in which Mr. Bosworth is supported by Dorothy Davenport. "Dr. Neighbor" treats of a doctor's struggle with himself to decide whether he shall let a hopelessly injured patient suffer the tortures of the damned or give her an opiate which may prove fatal. Just to relieve the sombreness of "Dr. Neighbor," the Nestor comedians, Lee Moran and Billie Rhodes, fill out the day's program with "Her Hero Maid."

Stella Razeto, Juan de La Cruz and Gladys Brockwell are featured in the Gold Seal two-reel modern drama, "The Purple Maze," which is released on May 2. On the same day Cleo Madison is featured in the Rex drama, "Eleanor's Catch," and Victor Potel and Eileen Sedgwick cavort around in the Imp comedy, "When Slim Was Home Cured."

Mary Fuller, supported by William J. Welsh and Edna Pendleton, appears in a rather unusual sort of photoplay, "The Girl Who Feared Daylight," which will be released under the Victor Brand on May 3. Alice Howell and Ray Griffith add the comedy balance to the day's program in the L-Ko comedy, "The Bankruptcy of Boggs & Schultz." The Universal Animated Weekly, No. 18, containing views of Dr. Waite, and the last ride of "Wild Bob" Burman also will be released on May 3.

There will be no release under the Laemmle brand on May 4, but two photoplays, one featuring Thomas Jefferson, son of the late Joseph Jefferson, and the other, with King Baggot, will take its place. Mr. Jefferson and his little child actress, Zoe Bech, are seen in "The Beloved Liar," a three-reel human interest drama, which will be released under the Big U brand. Mr. Baggot is featured in a protean photoplay, "Won with a Make-up," in which the veteran Imp star assumes many puzzling disguises.

Edith Roberts and Sydell Dowling are co-starred in "Just Kitty," an Imp comedy-drama which will be released on May 5. On the same day Myrtle Gonzales and Fred Church are featured in the Laemmle drama, "The Thief of the Desert." Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson close the day's program with "Lem's College Career," a two-reel Nestor comedy which is loaded to bursting with laughs.

On May 6 "The Leap," a Bison two-reel railroad drama, with Lee Hill and Geneg Rogers, will be released. Gale Henry and William Franey present "A Perfect Match," a Joker comedy on the same day. Don't miss seeing Gale, the eugenic marvel, in her new toothpick bathing suit. She's a scream.

"Scaling the Jungfrau," a Rex educational scenic, will be released on May 7. It will be followed by "The Marriage of Arthur," a two-reel comedy drama with Rupert Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson heading the cast. The L-Ko single reel comedy, "Mr. Buddy Briggs, Burglar," with Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris furnishing the fun, closes up the week with a laugh.

The attention of exhibitors is called to the fact that during the week of May 1 the first episode of the new Universal serial, "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," will be released. Episode one, in which Ruth Stonehouse, formerly of Essanay, and Eddie Polo are starred, supported by Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, is entitled "The Leopard's Mark."

CARTER DE HAVEN IS SUPPORTED BY YONA LANDOWSKA AND MACQUARRIE IN "KING FOR A MINUTE"

IT is a long leap from Broadway to a throne, but Carter De Haven, comedian of the Universal Company, makes it in "King for a Minute," which has just been completed by William J. Bowman, who made "Pennington's Choice, "The Silent Voice," "The Second in Command" and other photoplays in which Francis X. Bushman was featured.

"King for a Minute" is a five-reel comedy which was written by the producer especially for Carter De Haven. The scenario is by Elliot Clawson. Director Bowman has known De Haven for years and therefore found but little difficulty in preparing a story that would fit the comedian.

De Haven appears in the part of the Broadway pugilist, "Battling" Jimmie, who subsequently is carried to the principality of Magonia by the emissaries of the king and there assumes the part of a prince who was kidnapped in his youth.

There are a number of elaborate sets in Director Bowman's production, the most notable ones being those of the ring-side on Broadway and of the royal palace in Magonia.

In the supporting cast are Yona Landowska, as the Princess; M. Blevins, as Marlex, the writer and composer; Frank MacQuarrie, as Hundane, the arch conspirator; Marvel Spencer, as Bess; Duke Worne, as Billie, and Walter Belasco, as the King.

"FROCKS AND FRILLS" A COMEDY WITH KNOCKS AND THRILLS

"Frocks and Frills," produced by the Lubin Company, to be released April 17 through the General Film Company, is a one-act comedy written and directed by Edwin McKim, in which Davy Don is featured. In the character of a leading member of the wise guy's club he convinces a shifty French count that Barnum said something when he stated that one is born every minute.

"One of the Pack," produced by Lubin, will be released April 18 through the General Film Company. It is a two-act drama written by Tom Gibson and directed by Leon D. Kent. A villain of the polished type, with the heart of a wolf and a hero of manly appeal, make a thrilling contest for an American girl.

EXHIBITORS IN DECATUR, ILLINOIS, TO FIGHT CENSORSHIP

Motion picture exhibitors of Decatur, Ill., have organized to fight the proposed censorship of films exhibited in that city. Members of the Federated Mothers' clubs recently presented an ordinance to the city council asking that body to create a city board of censors. Exhibitors objected to the ordinance, and it has been referred to the commissioners as a committee of the whole for action. Mayor Dineen has declared against it, saying that he did not think the situation in Decatur warranted the passage of such an ordinance.

The motion picture theatre managers have organized under the name of The Exhibitors' League and Theatrical Managers' Association of Decatur and have elected officers as follows:

President, Ray Colvin, Orpheum theatre; vice-president, Daniel Higgins, Paris theatre; secretary, Charles Dorgan, Strand theatre, and treasurer, Mrs. E. Striewing, Crystal theatre.

Advance notices of "Undine," famed for its water nymphs, startled members of the Mothers' Club and other societies of Belleville, Ill., when it was booked for the Washington theatre there and that city's board of censors took action. The board, headed by Mayor Duvall, called on the management to show them the picture at a special performance. This was done, and when it was over the censors agreed that there wasn't anything so awful in the picture. Then just about everybody in town went to see it.

RALEIGH, N. C., ON VERGE OF CENSORSHIP

The censorship of motion pictures will soon be a reality in Raleigh, N. C., if the efforts and determination of the Raleigh recreation commission amount to anything. At a meeting of this commission recently, a committee was appointed to draw up plans for a board of censorship and to co-operate with representatives of the Women's Clubs, Daughters of the Confederacy, Social Service Conference. Elks, Story Tellers' League and any other organizations interested in the establishment of a censor board.

The committee of which the following-named are to be members, was appointed after considerable debate and following the submission of reports on censor boards in other cities, Supt. Frank M. Harper, Mrs. Clarence Johnson, Mrs. W. N. Hutt and Nan Lacy.

OH! THE PURITANIC CONSCIENCE, FOREVER BUSY WITH THE AFFAIRS OF OTHERS

Mayor Charles M. Blodgett of Malden, Mass., last week appointed three members of the Malden Civic League to censor pictures in Malden, which is a city of about 60,000, just outside of Boston. The members of the Malden censor board are all women.

They will begin their inspection work immediately, and the managers of the motion picture theatres have been ordered by the mayor to receive the censors with courtesy.

OHIO CENSOR BOARD ORDERS CUTS BUT EXHIBITORS CUT DOWN NUMBER OF ORDERS OBEYED

CUTS made in films by the Ohio Board of Censorship are given below in detail, but few of the orders have been obeyed by the motion picture theatre managers, who are indorsed in their stand by patrons. The cut-outs were ordered as follows:

"Bankruptcy of Boggs and Schultz." Take out subtitle, "Kiss me and I'll give you a raise"; scene where woman raises her skirts above her knees; reduce all fights in office to three feet and take out safe-blowing scene.

"Bill's Narrow Escape." Eliminate the scene where a man sits with a foot on a knife, which is sticking in roast of beef on the table.

"Doctor of the Afternoon Arm." Cut to five feet all scenes where man is bound and girl kidnapped, and all of shooting.

"Girl That Didn't Matter." Eliminate scene where woman lobbyist sits on arm of man's chair and caresses him.

"Hubby Puts One Over." Cut out all scenes where actress sits undressing and unduly exposing her legs.

"Luke's Double." Cut out all scenes where policeman brutally strikes man with club.

"Mr. Buddy Brigg's Burglar." Take out all scenes where man embraces girl other than his wife and where woman threatens man with a knife.

"One Day." Cut out subtitle "Dreams of his three weeks in Lucerne," and reduce all love scenes on couch to three feet each.

"Rival Pilots." Cut to five feet scene of fight between men.

"Billy Van Deusen's Muddle." Cut out scene where man and woman are in private room of road-house.

"Birth of a Man." Cut to five feet scene where tramps beat up, rob and place man in old shed.

"His Highness, the Janitor." Cut to three feet closing kissing scene.

"In the Ring." Cut all fighting scenes to ten feet each and reduce all scenes where men are knocked down.

"Mama's Boys." Cut out scene where man sits down in basket of eggs and wipes himself on grass, and reduce to five feet all eating scenes.

"Record Run." Cut out to five feet all scenes showing unlawful interference with railroad property.

"Spider's Web." Cut out scene where man takes drug and scene where one man injects drug into arm of another.

"Escapades of Mr. Jack" (No. 6, "Jack Inspects Paris"). Cut out all scenes of man and girl on sofa in room designated as a "swell office," and scenes of man and woman on sofa drinking wine amid embracing bouts.

"Escapades of Mr. Jack" (No. 7, "Mr. Jack, Doctor by Proxy"). Cut out subtitle "Let Doc's friend out, Judge."

"Light Bearer." Cut out subtitles, "You're in love with that pale-faced sky-pilot. I'll kick, etc."

INTER-PROVINCIAL CENSOR BOARD IS PLAN FOR MANITOBA AND SASKATCHEWAN ON JUNE 1

CENSORING of films for Manitoba and Saskatchewan will, on June 1, go out of the hands of the city of Winnipeg, which has been responsible in the past, and will be done by an inter-provincial censor board. Concurrent with this, the Manitoba government will establish a system of inspection of theatre buildings and examination of employes. Inspectors and an examiner for this purpose will soon be appointed.

The Hon. Edward Brown, provincial treasurer, has just returned from a trip to Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, and says that he has been informed by the Saskatchewan authorities that it is their desire to have Charles Robson, who is now representing that province in the censoring of pictures in Winnipeg, remain in office.

Alberta has not as yet notified the Manitoba authorities as to whether that province will enter into an inter-provincial censoring arrangement or not. In case Alberta does come in it will be necessary for Manitoba to appoint only one censor. The Hon. Mr. Brown says that the appointee for the province has been selected, but he would not give out his name. If Alberta does not come in, Manitoba will appoint two censors, and one of them will be a woman.

It is Mr. Brown's intention to ask the city to keep up the work of censoring films until June 1, when the inter-provincial organization will be completed.

Under the new Public Amusements Act, passed at the recent session of the provincial legislature, the government will more rigidly regulate theatres and moving picture houses than in the past. Besides the censoring of the films, theatres will be inspected carefully, and an inspector will be appointed for this purpose. He will have a sufficient force of sub-inspectors, and all the amusement houses in the province will have to come up to certain standards of sanitation and safety.

There will also be an examining department which will affect moving picture houses particularly. Operators will have to pass certain tests and the government will appoint an examiner. His authority may also extend to examining employees of other theatres to see that they are equal to the responsibilities which rest upon them in case of an emergency when the public safety is endangered.

NO CENSORSHIP IN DETROIT

There will be no censoring of motion picture film in Detroit by the Recreation Commission during 1916. The Recreation Commission demanded an appropriation of $3,500 from the Council Committee to carry on this work which would necessitate one censor and two assistants. But when the matter came up for action the Council Committee felt that there was really no need of such an amount being spent for censoring—that the pictures shown on the average were very clean and that the police department was the place to handle films unfit for the public to see.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

AT 10:43 on the morning of April 21, while emerging from her regular cream bath, Virginia Pearson found herself confronted by a terrible, horrible vampire. It has long been thought that a vampire was a bat, but the camera tells us different. It is a bird, and this bird attempted to pick off the solid gold bracelets, which were presented to Miss Pearson by the Shah of Itchwixcky, who purchased them for half his kingdom from a motorman, who found them in the ruins of the Theseum at Athens. It is believed that they once belonged to Theseus, who was well known along the Broadway of some years back as the son of Aegeus and Aethra, and who won still greater fame by killing Periphetes on the Isthmus of Corinth. What has all this to do with the vampire? says you; nothing, we reply; we're just telling you about it, that's all. What did Miss Pearson do when the vampire attacked her? She merely summoned in her presence of mind. Miss Pearson, who is the author of a work in sixteen volumes on "The Life and Habits of the Vampire, with Hints on Artificial Feeding," merely grabbed the bird by the leg. It flew out the window with Miss Pearson, and landed underneath the elevated railway. Nor was Miss Pearson at a loss here. As the author of a twelve volume work entitled "The Renaissance of Structural Steel Work, with Heart Advice to Housesmiths," she merely pulled down one of the "L" pillars and rapped the bird over the head. It gave three kicks, then lay still. Miss Pearson is known (in some sections) as the "Modern Cleopatra."

Our lightly tripping Lydian measures anent the trade show last week have called forth a rise from Arthur James. Oh, yes, he writes the stuff, too. Mr. James squared away on the 6:01 train for Murray Hill, and addressed the following to us:

"You have written your sparkling verses,
And have printed them, too, what's more,
In boost of a show, when you gosh well know
You should boost for the one before.

"It's Grand Central Palace, Brother;
The Exhibitors' League are the men
Who will exposish to the public's wish
Each day, from ten to ten.

"Remember the dates, Longacre:
May first to its fairest sixth,
When the whistle blows for the show of
Don't get the two shows mix't."

We are rather proud of Mr. James' verses, although we assume no responsibility for his attempt to rhyme the ordinal sixth with mixt. We still believe it can't be done. But Mr. James continues in prose: "And speaking of the Grand Central Palace Exposish—which I'm right glad to do—remember, there will be a special train run from Buffalo, and reserved exclusively for exhibitors and their wives and sweethearts, and due to arrive in New York on May Day, the first day of the exhibitors' show. The Buffalo contingent have wired that they will gather their fellow exhibitors up along the line of rail, and the plans include a stay in Manhattan for the entire week. This is a practical example of what 'pep' will do for a big show."

VIRGINIA PEARSON EMERGING FROM A CREAM BATH

Censorship, like a campaign roorback, if given enough room, may be depended upon to step on itself. An insight into the "mental" processes of the censorship fan, is furnished by this little clipping from Punch.

"In order to satisfy my mind I spent over two hours in a certain cinema. . . . Frankly I was disappointed. I saw nothing which could in any way be called indecent."

"The Rev. F. H. Gillingham, in the Weekly Dispatch."

E. F. Licome, who sends us the clipping, points out that Punch has given the latter the title: "Clerical Candor."

The Barbers' union, of Ely, Nebraska, has telegraphed to Terry Ramsaye, of the Mutual corporation, that it has resolved not to attend picture houses unless the actors shown on the screen get their hair cut regularly. Terry immediately ordered two carloads of horse clippers.

Virginia Pearson has been presented with a valuable rug. It has been to almost every part of the world, and adding up the centuries and decades for which it has laid at its various resting places, it is just 1,297,344 years old. It originally came from Lake Manasarovara; most of our readers will recollect the magnificent rug shops of Lake Manasarovara, which is the third station north of St. Giggsmikkiteluski, on the Kigg and Drinkovisky railway. We are informed that the rug is known as the "Rug of Romance." Romance is correct.

*VERBUM SAT SAPIENTI

In many, many cantos.

Canto I.

What time our lyres we poets tune
To themes of high enunciation,
We've brought mankind no richer boon
Than clearing up pronunciation;
For many men have many names
Susceptible of two renditions;
(I don't refer to Arthur James,
Who's quite the same in all conditions.)

Who knows if a is soft or hard?
Diphthongs are puzzling institutions.
And so we summon in the bard,
Who with his rhymes provides solutions.
Perhaps, it now occurs, I should Have opened up a line of samples
To make my meaning understood,
And so I give these few examples:

II.

"In this we coyly take a crack
At finding rhymes for Reichenbach.
Oh, yes, we always keep a stock
Of words to rhyme with Reichenbach."

III.

But, since the case I've cited here
May prove to some to be defective,
I strive again to make more clear
My noble and inspired objective:

"The bonehead, destined for the cooler,
May ignorantly call him Freuler;
Whereas, the true and trusty toiler
Knows very well we call him Freuler."

Going, as we frequently do, through the advertising pages of our publication with a fine tooth comb, last week we discovered a startling announcement regarding one of the new serials. "It is a constructive story," says the type. "Every epi*soso*de is stronger than the last." While the episodes of many serials we have heard of are only so-so, we have questioned the reviewer carefully, and he says this serial is not that kind at all.

We announce with consuming regret that the "Diary of Our Own Samuel Pepys," which idea, we, like a good scenario-writer, stole merrily from Frank Adams, is not ready for the press this week. Oh yes, it was successful; we are willing to bet $14.85, Mexican money, that we could name at least two young persons who would have read every word of it.

The rush of business at the opening of the Rialto theatre was so great as to fully justify Ben Atwell's new dress suit. At a late hour on the night of the opening Ben was quoted as saying that if business keeps up he'll take the suit by the week.

SCENE FROM A GROUP OF AMERICAN RELEASES FOR APRIL THROUGH MUTUAL: "THE RETURN," "HIS MASTERPIECE," "A BROKEN GENIUS." AND "THE COUNTERFEIT EARL"

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE" AT ARCADIA, PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, April 22.

It has at last been settled that Billy Burke in "Gloria's Romance," the approaching Kleine film novel, is to have its first showing at the Arcadia. Beginning May 8, the picture will be shown three days each week for twenty weeks at this, the only Chestnut street theatre in town. The Arcadia will get the first run two weeks ahead of the general release on May 22.

The North American has contracted with the Chicago Tribune to run "Gloria's Romance" each week as a serial story. Harry Scott, Kleine manager, reports a phenomenal demand for the "Musty Suffer" comedies. Every exhibitor holding contracts on the first series is clamoring already for the second series.

Maurice Tourneur, the creator of "Trilby" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine," is busily engaged with Gail Kane and House Peters on a visualization of "The Velvet Paw," a coming World film.

Brady Whirlwind Trip to 3 Cities Gets Contracts

Head of World Film Visits Cleveland, Buffalo and Chicago—Exhibitors Seek Producing Magnate for First Run Privilege on Pictures from His Studios

WILLIAM A. BRADY, now head of the World Film Corporation, has returned to New York from a hurried trip to Chicago, Cleveland and Buffalo. Since the widespread announcement of his forthcoming activities and the announced display of the first three "Brady-Made" World pictures, he was besieged in every town by important exhibitors.

The Colonial theatre, Chicago, for the past few months the headquarters of Triangle pictures, has begun running World Film pictures exclusively, starting with Clara Kimball Young in "The Feast of Life." It will be followed by Kitty Gordon in "Her Maternal Right," and then each of the World Film releases in turn.

Mr. Brady's trip to Chicago had a twofold purpose. Arrangements are going forward for the opening there of Grace George in her repertoire of Shavian dramas and it was while Mr. Brady was there in the interests of this attraction that he was besieged by various first-run exhibitors with the result that the Colonial became the permanent World Film headquarters.

On his return from Chicago he spent a few hours in Cleveland and at Buffalo the same condition prevailed as in Chicago and Cleveland. The Palace theatre of Buffalo, one of the finest houses in northern New York, secured World pictures for first run. The Boston theatre, Marcus Loew's Orpheum theatre and the new Fenway theatre, in the Back Bay section of the Hub, have assumed World Film contracts.

This leap has been accomplished by the faith of the exhibitors in the continuance of the Brady policy which is so noticeable in the forthcoming three World releases: Clara Kimball Young in "The Feast of Life," Kitty Gordon in "Her Maternal Right," and House Peters in "The Closed Road," and those to follow, including Holbrook Blinn in "The Way of the World," Alice Brady in "La Boheme," Robert Warwick in "Friday the 13th" and Gail Kane in "The Other Sister."

These pictures have been produced under the direct supervision of Mr. Brady with his censorship and physical effort obtaining from the day the scenario was procured to the last dip in the finishing vats.

Early reports of the trade displays held recently in the various states in which World Film exchanges are located and to which the exhibitors were invited to view the forthcoming "Brady-Made" pictures, show a great interest on the part of the exhibitors in the new World productions. The fourteen offices already heard from show a large number of new accounts and extensions of contracts. Almost every metropolitan center throughout the country is responding with rapidity to Mr. Brady's announcement, which was sent out through the mails, and by the large insert which appeared in this paper in last week's issue.

"V" Multiple with Nell Shipman for Indefinite Run

Los Angeles, April 22.

MEMBERS of the Vitagraph stock company are congratulating themselves on the fact that Director Rollin S. Sturgeon's recent subject, "God's Country—and the Woman," is to go on at Clune's Auditorium, the largest theatre here, May 1, for an indefinite run. The exceptional work done in this picture by Nell Shipman caused Director Sturgeon to select her for leading woman in his next subject, "Through the Wall." The cast for this has been selected, and includes George Holt and William Duncan, who had featured parts in the previous production. A number of scenes have been made for this, and the technical staff of the studio is busily engaged in building a number of sets which will be used.

The novelty made by Edgar Keller of the arts staff, Vitagraph studio, showing animated styles, will be finished this week. All of the costumes for the one-reeler were designed and especially made for use in this. The fashion models include Carmen Phillips, Corrine Griffith, Florence Vider, Al G. Blake and Clare Toner. The feature of this is said to be a dancing act by Miss Phillips.

Vitagraph Director Wm. Walbert has completed the three-reel subject, "Ashes," which will be shipped to New York soon. This subject from scenario by William E. Wing features Corrine Griffith in the role of mother, and later daughter, and Jack Mower as husband and father. The story contains some very thrilling incidents and a heart interest.

"THE MOMENT BEFORE" WILL COME AFTER APRIL 26

Pauline Frederick next appears in the Famous Players adaptation of Israel Zangwill's "The Moment Before," which will be released on the Paramount Program April 27.

The Duchess of Maldon, in which characterization Miss Frederick first appears in the photoplay, is a white-haired woman. When she falls dying, there arises before her the vision of her youth. Then the scene fades out and Miss Frederick appears as a vivacious young cerature, the gypsy for whom two men are found in combat.

The greater part of the picture was staged in Florida by Director Robert G. Vignola. In support of the star appear Thomas Holding, J. W. Johnston, Frank Losee, Edward Sturgis and others.

ITALIAN WAR PICTURE WILL BE SHOWN TO TRADE BY AUTHORS FILM

The Authors Film Company, Inc., will show to the trade at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, April 28, at its projection room, 67 Madison avenue, New York, an Italian war picture.

This feature was taken under the auspices of the Italian government, and is the first war film to be released from Italy. Ambrosio, the well known Italian film manufacturer, through his affiliations with his government, was able to arrange for its exploitation in Italy and in this country through the Authors Film Company.

"HER HUSBAND'S WIFE" IS ELABORATE PRODUCTION

The Ivan May release, "Her Husband's Wife," will cost several thousand dollars more than any feature heretofore produced by this company, it is announced. A well known Broadway manager is said to have offered one thousand dollars for the story, but the offer was refused by Director Ivan Abramson.

The cast will include Sally Crute, Mignon Anderson, Augustus Phillips, William Bechtel, Brinsley Shaw, Bradley Barker and Guido Colucci.

"IRON CLAW" WILL BE CONTINUED IN TWENTY EPISODES

J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of Pathe, announces that "The Iron Claw" will be continued to twenty episodes. Mr. Berst in his statement emphasizes the fact that the exhibitors themselves have extended the serial, for it was through numerous letters received from representative exhibitors all over the country requesting the extension that the idea of making such a departure from the original plans was first considered.

DAVIS PICKS DE HAVEN AS SERIAL STAR

Vice-president and General Manager H. O. Davis of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has decided to feature Carter De Haven in a serial, each chapter of which is to be an entirely separate episode. The title has not been announced.

Selznick Company Begins Widespread Campaign

Ned H. Spitzer, Sol J. Berman, Sam E. Morris and Ben S. Cohen, Well Known Film Men, Picked as Aids in Plan for Distribution of Clara Kimball Young Pictures

WITH four well-known exchange and salesmen as the nucleus of its organization, the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., the distributing company for the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, began its nation-wide campaign this week.

The four men to align themselves with Mr. Selznick are Ned. H. Spitzer and Sol. J. Berman, of Bluebird; Sam. E. Morris and Ben. S. Cohen, of World Film.

Mr. Spitzer has been identified with the industry for nine years. He began with William Harbeck, was associated with the Warners and in the distribution of "The Million Dollar Mystery," then became the Kansas City manager for World Films. Later he was engaged as general Canadian manager for William Fox, since when he has been general representative for Bluebird.

In speaking of his decision to leave Bluebird for the new Selznick proposition Mr. Spitzer said:

"My association with Mr. Hoffman and the rest of the Bluebird family has been one of the happiest in my film career, and I doubt whether any other proposition in the trade today would have tempted me away. I am going back to my first chief and have absolute faith in him and his new project. Miss Young is in a class by herself and we are starting a new era in film history."

Mr. Berman has been in the film business for ten years. He organized in Des Moines, Iowa, the first exchange in the middle west. He was the Pittsburgh manager for Metro and district manager for "The Million Dollar Mystery." For a while he was New York exchange manager for World Film, from which position he went to Bluebird, associating himself with Mr. Hoffman in the launching of that company.

Mr. Morris knows the exhibitor's end of the industry perhaps even more thoroughly than any of his associates, having been one of the pioneer exhibitors of Pittsburgh. It was only a year ago that he shifted from the exhibiting end to the exchange, becoming Cleveland manager for World Film. He was one of the early advocates of the feature film and a founder of the original Motion Picture Exhibitors League, of which he was the first vice-president.

Mr. Cohen's career was told in these pages in a recent issue. He, too, was a World Film district manager and one of the best known film salesmen and exchange managers in the country.

In collaboration with Mr. Selznick his new staff is at present engaged in going over the field, sorting out the thousands of applications for the Clara Kimball Young features and establishing exchanges in the principal cities. As soon as their preliminary work is completed they will make a comprehensive tour of the country, getting in personal touch with all the principal exhibitors and supervising the establishment of the Selznick exchanges and branches.

California Company to Book Direct to Theatres

First Hand Understanding of Exhibitor Viewpoint Will Be Obtained by Officials of Company Through This Method, They Believe—Plan in Operation Only for State of California

WITH their decision to release pictures on a state's right basis, the California Motion Picture Corporation has begun to solve the intricacies of the marketing end of the business in earnest. "The primary concern of the California producers in entering the open market," according to a statement of General Manager Alexander E. Beyfuss when on a recent Eastern trip, "was to make connections with the most substantial independent buyers in the country. The permanency of these relations must depend on the quality of co-operation our firm is able and willing to render the exchanges."

Significant of this declaration is the announcement just made that "The Unwritten Law," with Beatriz Michelena, will be handled in California through direct arrangement between the theatres and the producer. There will be no intermediate exchangeman.

The reason given by the California Motion Picture Corporation officials for reserving this territory for their own immediate exploitation, is a desire to get a first hand understanding of the exhibitors' point of view. This, they believe, will give them a better appreciation of many of the problems that the state's right man has to solve in his relations with the theatre he serves, and will consequently strengthen the co-operative arm of their own organization.

"In striving for the personal touch as far down the marketing scale as possible in the distribution of our features, we are but following to its logical conclusion a policy already proven efficient for the producing end of our enterprises," says Mr. Beyfuss. "The whole success of the motion picture business, as I see it, lies in a full understanding between the producer and the public. This applies just as forcibly whether the producer be making a picture or making a sale.

"The main trouble usually is that the true statement of the public's demand becomes distorted in transmission through the hands of a middle party. There is no direct communication between the man who buys his ticket at the box office and the one who manufactures the picture.

"It is this difficulty that we have been trying to surmount. At first it was in the producing end that we went to the public and asked its opinion and advice. The result was such a picture as 'The Unwritten Law.' Now that we have entered the open market and are giving personal attention to the distribution of our output, we are going to follow the same line. That is why we are booking the California territory direct from our own offices."

B. AND L. PRODUCING SIX-REEL FEATURE

The B. & L. Film Company have established headquarters at Belden, Cal., and are using the scenery of the little village for a part of the background of a six-reel feature picture entitled, "The Strangest Man in the World." Director General Raine Ewell decided to bring the entire company from the studio in San Mateo to locate for an indefinite period in the once thriving gold mining center.

The story in part now being filmed is of a man who, suffering from mental abberation, is lost in the wilds of California. Not having any means of support or subsistence, he is thrown upon his own resources and lives as best he can from what nature provides. Edward Cecil, who plays the principal part, was leading man of the Biograph for two years, and also supported Lena Cavallieri in her screen debut. Neva Gerber, his leading lady for the past year, was featured with the American Film Company. Among others may be mentioned Earle Emlay, Sadie Lindblom, Maud Warren, Ursula Klein and others.

ANITA STEWART SELLS HER PHOTOS AT $5 EACH FOR ACTORS' FUND

In the Eighty-first Street theatre, New York, recently, Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, was the principal attraction at a benefit conducted for the benefit of the Actors' Fund and disposed of her photographs at high prices.

Originally it was intended to sell the pictures for a nominal sum, but when the demand threatened to over-reach the supply, prices went up by degrees and a price of five dollars per photo was the prevailing rate for the closing sales. Miss Stewart was tendered a fine ovation.

LUCAS TOURS BIG CITIES FOR TRIANGLE

Arthur Lucas, District Superintendent of Triangle Film Corporation, has just returned to Philadelphia after several weeks spent in visiting Triangle branches in Chicago, Cincinnati, Minneapolis and other western cities. Some big contracts resulted from this little spin around the circle.

Canadian Chief Justice Passes on Court Procedure for "Spellbound," a Knickerbocker

ENGLISH COURTROOM SCENE IN "SPELLBOUND," KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE

SPECTACULAR scenes in an English court form a part of the narrative in "Spellbound," the five-reel Knickerbocker Star Feature in which Lois Meredith is starred. Lord Chief Justice Howell, of Canada, a friend of H. M. Horkheimer, under whose direction the picture was produced, was visiting the studios at the time these scenes were being set, and consented to supervise the details of court procedure and the settings. The result of his labors is manifest in the film, comprising about 200 feet

"Mysteries of Myra" Booked by 703 N. Y. Theatres

Trade Review of Psychic Subject Released by International Film Service Brings Out 1,487 Exhibitors and Others—Ochs and Trigger Enthusiastic

ONE THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-SEVEN leading exhibitors, trade press reviewers and newspaper men arose bright and early to attend the specially arranged and augmented performance of "The Mysteries of Myra," atop the New York theatre last week.

From the reception given and the comments heard, it looks as though "The Mysteries of Myra" will mark a turning point.

Hereward Carrington, the author of "The Mysteries of Myra" in collaboration with Charles W. Goddard, is undoubtedly one of the greatest living exponents of psychic phenomena. And let it here be said that Leo and Theo Wharton are the producers and directors of this feature series. It has been stated that the Whartons spent six months making a study of mental suggestion and thought transmission. But with it all, probably the most important verdict was a statement made by Leo Ochs, president of the Motion Picture League.

Mr. Ochs unequivocally stated that he considered "The Mysteries of Myra" a revolutionary step in serial or series productions. He predicted a great success.

Samuel H. Trigger was also lavish in his statements, as were hundreds of exhibitors who made up the representative audience in attendance.

If the advance bookings in any way forecast as to how "The Mysteries of Myra" will be accepted, it might be stated that over 703 exhibitors in the New York territory have booked the film thus far.

BENNIE MICHAELS KILLED IN AUTO CRASH IN SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, April 22.

Bennie Michaels, one of the most interesting figures in the motion picture field in the San Francisco Bay region, and an exhibitor of many years' experience, was killed in this city on April 12, when his automobile overturned, crushing him beneath it.

His career as a motion picture exhibitor commenced shortly after the rehabilitation of the downtown district of San Francisco, following the great fire of 1906, when he opened the Silver Palace theatre on Market street, near Third. The pipe organ installed there, and other features that were new at that time in moving picture houses, are still commented upon by exhibitors.

He then took over a house on Broadway, near Stockton street, and when this was destroyed by fire, erected a magnificent fireproof structure in its place, the Verdi theatre, opened about two years ago. A host of friends mourn the passing of this prominent exhibitor, and his funeral was attended by representatives from almost every film exchange in the city.

"ISLE OF LOVE" IS THE NEXT VEHICLE FOR IVA SHEPARD

Iva Shepard, prominent member of the Gaumont forces at Jacksonville, has a conspicuous role in "The Isle of Love," a Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe which will be released May 15.

Miss Shepard was one of the first players engaged by Gaumont when the Florida company was augmented. She specializes in heavy and emotional parts, and was seen as the star in "The Haunted Manor," and as the vampire in "The Drifter."

Before her association with Gaumont, Miss Shepard appeared in "The Straight Road" and "The Conspiracy," Famous Players; "Northern Lights" and "Capt. Swift," Life Photo; "The Thief," Fox; "The Suburban," Universal; "Bondwomen" and "The Crimson Path," Kleine, and "The Salamander," Moss.

Chatterton Risks Life for Realism in a Mutual

FLYING LEAP OF AUTOMOBILE BEARING THOMAS CHATTERTON

DRIVING an automobile across a thirty-five foot chasm at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip, is a feat performed by Thomas Chatterton, in "The Secret of the Submarine," the Mutual-American film play released on May 8.

To do the stunt, Mr. Chatterton, who essays the role of Lieutenant Jarvis Hope, U. S. N., overcame the objections of directors and managers who had employed Al Thompson, a professional dare-devel to make the mad ride.

The scene was taken on the road between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, at a spot where a bridge had actually been washed out by the Spring rains. Three cameras were trained on the flying car, catching it as it left the broken side of the bridge, as it went through the air and landing safely on the far side. The accompanying picture shows the car in its full mid-air career.

There was no announcement made of their plans by the producing company, but the authorities of Camarillo, a small village nearest the scene scented excitement and dismissed the school, so that the pupils could witness the thrill-making.

"Aeroplanes are tame to this," Mr. Chatterton commented as he received the congratulations of Director Sargent. "I was never sure that the machine would stay right side up and when we landed on the far side I thought my teeth were all jarred loose. But it will give a thrill to the story and that is what we are after—realism with a big R."

The following day a tourist party ran off the bridge and the chauffeur was instantly killed, so the Film way of jumping chasms is, after all, the safe way.

Stanton Completes 20th Episode of "Graft"

Enough Difficulties Were Encountered to Drive Him and His Company to Distraction, But as an Obstacle Climber He Proves Himself a Candidate for a Blue Ribbon

WITH the filming of the twentieth episode of "Graft" by Director Richard Stanton, the Universal serial is completed. About every tribulation that might be met in the production of a film story was encountered by Stanton, but he overcame them all successfully with the co-operation of his assistant, Clifford Elfeldt, the scenario writer, Walter Woods, Camerman Fred Granville, N. V. Wright and Sam Kaufman.

When the male lead was disabled by an accident, Stanton took his place, appearing opposite Jane Novak. Considerable difficulty was experienced in assembling the right types, especially when the first cast called for twenty-eight people. The scenario was dealt out to the director in bits, but in five days he succeeded in finishing the first episode of two reels.

Throughout the serial a man had to be killed in each chapter, and it had to be done differently each time. This kept Stanton and his assistants busy figuring out new ways. In order to film a scene in a cotton mill, considerable searching was necessary before a concern was found which would permit the use of its plant.

On another occasion, one of Stanton's leading men had to depart to work in another company. One night Stanton received word to rewrite one half of one episode. Woods wrote the scenario in the morning, Stanton made the picture by 6 o'clock the following morning, and by 11 o'clock it was on its way to New York.

These were a few of the difficulties encountered in the making of the twenty episode, for which scores of extras had to be engaged, many sets especially built, and a number of suitable locations found.

You will find the Monthly Index of Reviews, covering the issues of April 1-April 29, inclusive, just what you need. It's just ahead of the Table of Contents.

IN "THE HARD WAY," A SELIG FOR GENERAL ON MAY 15

"The Hard Way" is a Selig multiple reel feature to be released through General Film Service on Monday, May 15, in which Jack Pickford enacts a character role. The drama, by Russell E. Smith, and produced by T. N. Heffron, presents the story of a high school boy who is tempted to the bright lights by boon companions. How realization came to him is developed in the climax. Mr. Pickford is supported by Sidney Smith, Harry Lonsdale, Lillian Hayward, Vivian Reed and others.

On Saturday, May 20, a comedy, "A Boarding House Ham," will be released by the Selig company through General Film Service. The action takes place in a theatrical boarding house. Among the characters presented are the Street Faker, the Animal Trainer, the Property Man, the Strong Man and the Lightning Sketch Artist.

THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING AT CULVER CITY FINISHED

Los Angeles, April 22.

The administration building at the new Culver City Ince plant is nearing completion and within the next week the staff will be located in its permanent quarters. This building will have the private offices of Thomas H. Ince connecting a private projecting room, purchasing, publicity and auditing departments.

With the completion of this, and the new building for the general projection rooms, the plant will be practically finished, at least for the present. There is sufficient grounds adjoining for the building of a number of additional stages, and this may be taken up at a later date.

"END OF THE WORLD," GREAT NORTHERN, DEALS WITH APPALLING SUBJECTS

The forthcoming release of the Great Northern Film Company, New York, entitled "The End of the World" is a production, the cost of which involved a great sum of money.

The subject is unusual, dealing as it does, with the probable havoc and destruction wrought by a fiery comet in the earth's atmosphere.

Hundreds of people were employed to take part in the scenes of devastation, where a whole village was set afire by flames descending from the skies, and which was entirely consumed; a shipwreck on a blazing sea; an electrical storm of great violence rages; and a real flood in the midst of its work of destruction is pictured.

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS PENNSYLVANIA CENSORS

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has handed down a decision upholding the State Board of Censors in their appeal from the findings of the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 in the case of the film "Virtue," produced by the Franklin Film Corporation.

Judge Von Moschzizker ruled, in effect, that the Court of Common Pleas could not sustain an appeal from the edict of the censors unless it was proved that the censors had been guilty of an "abuse of discretion." Judge Barratt, of the Common Pleas, had ruled that the Censor Board's actions were "minute," "far fetched," and "without merit."

The Supreme Court also ruled that the censorship statute never contemplated that the Courts of Common Pleas were to be constantly called upon to review censor-condemned films in the courtroom.

The Franklin Company has not decided whether it will press the case further. Further details of the Supreme Court's decision will be published in next week's issue of "Motion Picture News."

JOYCE FAIR FINISHES HER SECOND ESSANAY, "DIXIE WINNER"

Joyce Fair, the littlest leading lady, has just completed her second play for Essanay, "The Dixie Winner."

It is the story of a little southern girl who loves horses and is deprived of her pet colt by family reverses.

When the jockey is kidnapped, the little girl, an expert rider, dons his colors secretly and rides the thoroughbred to a victory.

It is a race track picture, with quaint Kentucky settings throughout, and is made the more real because little Joyce is quite an accomplished rider in real life, and the stunt part of the picture is no trick for her.

NEW FEDERAL CENSORSHIP BILL IN U. S. SENATE

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, has just introduced a bill into the United States Senate "To create a new division of the Bureau of Education, to be known as the Federal Motion Picture Commission, for the regulation of motion pictures intended for interstate and foreign commerce, and defining its powers."

This latest attempt to impose Federal Censorship provides for five commissioners to be appointed by the President. The chairman would receive $8,000, and the four other members $7,500 per annum each. Ninety thousand dollars would be appropriated to put the measure into effect. Two dollars for each thousand feet of film or fraction thereof and twenty-five cents for each additional copy licensed by the commission, would be fixed as fees to be paid by picture producers.

JOSE AVERAGES A REEL A WEEK

Edward José, who personally directs the Pathé serial "The Iron Claw," on May 1 will celebrate the completion of his first year as an independent producer. During the twelve months he has made "The Beloved Vagabond," six reels; "Simon the Jester," five reels; "The Closing Net," five reels; "Nedra," five reels; "The Light That Failed," five reels, and fourteen episodes of "The Iron Claw," twenty-eight reels, a total of fifty-four reels, or over a reel a week.

Among the artists who have been under Mr. José's direction during the year are Pearl White, Edwin Arden, Kathryn Browne-Decker, Irene Warfield, George Probert, Fania Marinoff, Howard Estabrook, Bliss Milford, Madeline Traverse, Margaret Greene, Robert Edeson, Jose Collins, Creighton Hale, John Drum and Sheldon Lewis.

ROMANCE TRAVELS FAST IN "A MILLION A MINUTE"

"A Million a Minute,' a story of romance, mystery and adventure, with touches of comedy relief, presenting Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar roles, will be released on the Metro Program May 15. It was picturized by Howard Irving Young from the novel of the same name by Hudson Douglass, and was directed for the Quality Pictures Corporation by John W. Noble, who is producing all the Bushman-Bayne features, assisted by William Bailey.

AUTO FACTOR IN QUICK "SHOTS" FOR SELIG-TRIBUNE NEWS PICTURES

The automobile plays an important part in the releasing of a news reel. For example, the Selig-Tribune, the twice-a-week news reel, released by the Selig Polyscope Company, of Chicago, Ill., has an automobile always ready and waiting. By special wire one of the news gathering agencies informs Editor Jack Wheeler the moment a big news "story" breaks in Chicago.

Editor Wheeler presses a button and the auto with chauffeur and staff cameraman is at the office door. Soon the car is speeding to the scene of a large fire, a spectacular parade, or some other event. The automobile is utilized at the Chicago headquarters of the Selig-Tribune.

"SOULS AFLAME," METRO, NOT TO BE QUENCHED BY WATER EPISODE

At the Metro offices it has been definitely decided to call the five-part feature production in which Dorothy Green and Clifford Bruce are starred, and which was recently completed at the Popular Plays and Players studio, "Souls Aflame."

"Souls Aflame" is a story of today. One of the features is the introduction of a submarine in a stirring scene. "Souls Aflame" serves to introduce both Miss Green and Mr. Bruce to Metro audiences, as it will be the first time that either have appeared upon the Metro program.

DAVENPORT, OF NOTABLE STAGE FAMILY, IN "DORIAN'S DIVORCE"

Edgar L. Davenport, of the famous family of Davenports, who have contributed so many notable artists to the speaking stage, is now appearing regularly in Metro productions and will next be seen on that program in "Dorian's Divorce," in which Lionel Barrymore and Grace Valentine are starred. He was last seen on the Metro program in "The Blindness of Love."

He has appeared as leading man for many prominent Broadway stars, including Otis Skinner, Nat Goodwin, James K. Hackett and E. H. Sothern.

Twenty Per Cent Bonus for Employees of V-L-S-E

Third Time Within Period of 9 Months Profit Division Is Made by Company—Success of Policy Attracts Attention of Concerns in Other Lines

DURING the past week, there was distributed by the board of directors of the V-L-S-E to its employees twenty per cent. of the net profits of that organization, in accordance with the plan established almost at the inception of the Big Four, for the purpose of stimulating the maximum interest in the company's service to its exhibitors. This is the third time within a period of nine months that such a division has been made.

This profit-sharing idea, which makes each employee a partner in the corporation, has worked to such advantage for all concerned that it has attracted widespread attention from companies in other lines. Recently the United States Department of Commerce made an investigation of the plan for the purpose of advising business enterprises generally of the co-operation between a sales force and its customers which the policy engenders.

Among the organizations which have adopted the V-L-S-E plan may be mentioned the company operating the Strand theatre, New York, whose employees were recently notified that they would be placed upon a profit-sharing basis.

The efficiency developed by the Big Four sales and office forces in their labors for the company's customers, has more than proven the wisdom of the plan, the V-L-S-E directors believe.

All the employees of the twenty-three V-L-S-E exchanges throughout the country who have been with the organization for a period of three months, shared in the recent disbursement.

It is worthy of note that as regards the actual amount received by each Big Four employee, the final disbursement by the concern exceeds that of all other companies doing business on a co-operative basis.

Despite this fact, the division represents no tax whatever upon the customers of the Big Four for the reason that not only is its cost met by the increased business which its mutual helpfulness engenders, but also for the reason that although the individual manufacturers making up the Big Four have a combined capital of from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000, the V-L-S-E itself is capitalized for only $40,000.

Accordingly, instead of having to go to Wall Street and issue $6,000,000 of stocks in order to get $3,000,000 in cash for which it would be necessary to pay a six per cent. interest charge amounting to $360,000 a year, the V-L-S-E has only to meet $2,400 a year interest on its stock.

"Eye of God" with Tyrone Power from Bluebird

Scenario Is by Lois Weber, Who Also Plays Opposite the Star—Phillips Smalley and Mrs. Smalley Directed—"Naked Hearts" an Early Release

MAKING selections from its supply of subjects, Bluebird Photoplays has added to its program several numbers for release at an early date.

One of them is entitled "The Eye of God," and features Tyrone Power as star. The scenario was written by Lois Weber. Miss Weber acts as Mr. Power's leading lady, and she and her husband, Phillips Smalley, directed the production.

Another Bluebird of early release will be called "Naked Hearts," and for artistic achievement will, according to promise, equal any of the several pictures that have marked the program. Tennyson's poem "Maud," which has been made the basis of the story which Rupert Julian furnished Olga Printzlau for scenario purposes, and Mr. Julian not only directs the piece but plays the leading role.

Francelia Billington becomes a Bluebird star with the release of "Naked Hearts," and beside Mr. Julian her company will comprise Gordon Griffith, Zoe Bech and George Hupp, a trio of juveniles; Douglas Gerrard, Jack Holt, Ben Horning, Paul Wiegel and Nannie Wright.

"Naked Hearts" will be released May 29 and "The Eye of God" on June 5. Meanwhile "Elusive Isabel" will be released on May 15 and "A Son of the Immortals" May 22. In "Elusive Isabel" the return of Florence Lawrence to the screen will be recorded, that lady making her appearance after a considerable lapse of time spent in retirement. She comes back in a release originally filmed in eight reels and then cut to five, with all the excitement assembled in the shorter length.

J. Warren Kerrigan will be the star of "A Son of the Immortals," with Lois Wilson, the Alabama prize beauty, in his support as leading lady. This feature is said to be melodramatic and highly sensational.

Plans Are Under Way to Enlarge Signal Studio

This Is Rendered Nessary by the Large Sets for "Whispering Smith" and Other Subjects Planned for Production Under Direction of McGowan Later

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, April 22.

PLANS are being formulated by Production Manager J. P. McGowan, Business Manager G. P. Hutchinson and Orrin Denny, laboratory superintendent of the Signal Film Corporation, for the enlargement of the producing plant of 4560 Pasadena Avenue, Los Angeles. A portion of the studio property is now covered by a residence which is be removed, and the offices and laboratory buildings will be moved to the street line. This will add approximately one hundred and fifty more feet to the studio property, which may be used for stages, settings, etc.

This is made necessary because of the large sets for "Whispering Smith" and other subjects to be filmed later by Mr. McGowan, and also by the fact that Superintendent Denny has accepted contracts from smaller producers for their laboratory work. Mr. Denny is one of the best known laboratory men in the Coast colony, being a pioneer here in motion picture laboratory work, following many years of photographic work. The laboratory work for three independent companies is now being handled by Mr. Denny. Artificial lighting equipment is being added to the producing plant, which will enable the company to continue on scenes at night, if necessary, and also to secure night effects, heretofore impossible. The latter scenes are needed for "Whispering Smith," production now being made in ten reels, and will show Medicine Bend at night.

Three members of the Signal cast producing "Whispering Smith" were injured during the past week while working on locations near Whittier, California. A horse stepped into a gopher hole while running at high speed, and Director McGowan was thrown several feet. He alighted on his feet, but the force of the fall caused him to turn his ankle and resulted in a severe strain. Leo Maloney, appearing in the role of Du Sang, was kicked by a steer and two ribs fractured, while Sam Apfel was badly bruised in a fall when the saddle girth snapped. A physician accompanied the troupe on this trip and cared for the injured.

HARDY AND BODE UNDER ARREST FOR THEFT FROM KALEM

Charged with the theft from the Kalem Company of films valued at many thousands of dollars, George Hardy and Harry Bode, who have been engaged in the exchange business with the Quality Film Service, Inc., of New York City, were last Friday held for a hearing by Magistrate Frothergham under bonds of $1,000 each.

The defendants are charged with the theft of Kalem's five-reel feature "From the Manger to the Cross." It is also asserted that when the arrests were made at the offices of the Quality company, Rooms 601-602 Godfrey Building, Seventh avenue and 49th street, about thirty other reels of pictures belonging to the Kalem company were also discovered.

Board of Trade Makes Peace With the League

Proposition from Former Is Quickly Accepted in Spirit of Friendliness and Each Organization Will Support the Other's Trade Exposition—Instead of Two Shows and Civil War There Will Be in Effect One Exposition in New York, Lasting Two Weeks

SANITY has prevailed. The breach between the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America and the National Exhibitors' League has been healed, almost as soon as made, and instead of two rival expositions in New York next month, fighting each other tooth and nail, there will be absolute harmony. Each faction will attend the other's exposition in a spirit of true friendliness and co-operation, and there will be in effect one show lasting two weeks, the first at Grand Central Palace and the second at Madison Square Garden.

The new understanding came about as the result of efforts, lasting practically all of last week, on the part of the Board of Trade, to convince the exhibitors that the Board wishes to represent every branch of the industry, and has the interests of the exhibitors at heart as much as those of any other group.

Terms proposed by the Board of Trade were promptly accepted by the Exhibitors' League in a spirit of sincerity and friendship, and assurances were exchanged that each organization will work heartily for the success of the other's exposition.

By these terms, the Board of Trade will turn over to the League fifty per cent. of the profits of the exposition to be held at Madison Square May 6 to 13, and, in return, the exhibitors will turn over to the Board fifty per cent. of the profits of their exposition to be held in Chicago early in July

The League will hold its exposition in Grand Central Palace, May 1 to 6, as planned, and the Board, as a unit and as individuals, will co-operate to make it a success. Moreover, the Board will take space at the Exhibitors' show. The League is to finance and retain all the profits of its new York show.

Blackton Starts Discussions

The clouds began to clear on Thursday of last week, when J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Board of Trade, addressed the Brooklyn Exhibitors' League. Through them, Mr. Blackton and the directors of the Board made a proposition for the sharing of profits to Lee S. Ochs, president of the New York State branch of the League, and at the same time, the proposition, which provided for a sharing of the profits of the League's Chicago show, was telegraphed to President Fred J. Herrington, now in Pittsburg.

Here is Mr. Ochs's reply:

"Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., 18 East Forty-first Street, New York City.

"Mr. J. Stuart Blackton. Dear Sir: We have your communications of the 19th and 21st inst., and after due deliberation, we are satisfied that it is the intention of your body to co-operate with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and, therefore, we accept your proposition with thanks, and we will forthwith recommend that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America give its hearty approval and support to the exposition held by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., at the Madison Square Garden, May 6th to 14th, inclusive.

"With the acceptance of your offer, we feel that all misunderstandings are swept away and that henceforth it will be the duty of both of our bodies to co-operate in every possible manner for the best interests of the entire industry.

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed) LEE A. OCHS,

"President of State Branch No. 11."

Mr. Herrington, on Saturday, telegraphed this reply to Mr. Blackton:

"Pittsburg, Apr. 22.

"J. Stuart Blackton,

"President Motion Picture Board of Trade of America.

"Communications received. Your offer in same accepted. Thanks. Madison Square trade show endorsed.

"FRED J. HERRINGTON."

Feeling Now Most Friendly

After a voluminous exchange of notes, the warring factions discovered that they had no cause for a suicidal civil war, became convinced that neither harbored any real ill feeling against the other, and today the shoulders of both organizations are against the wheel, pushing in the same direction.

The Board of Trade desired officially to endorse the Grand Central Palace Show, but investigation showed that such action would violate their contract with Madison Square Garden. Consequently, the endorsement will be unofficial, but just as hearty.

After the clouds had cleared away, J. Stuart Blackton, president of the Board of Trade, issued this statement:

"I am sincerely gratified at the outcome of the controversy between the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the Board of Trade. It never should have existed. There was no occasion for it. A little frank discussion between the parties to it would, in my judgment, have avoided it. Now that it is over, I am sincerely pleased.

"It means this: That the motion picture industry has reached such proportions, and the interest in it is so tremendously keen, that, in order to give the public the proper conception of its magnitude, standing and artistic possibilities, it will be necessary to secure the two biggest showing places in the United States to hold the exposition, which will bring these factors home to the public.

"Therefore, instead of one exposition in Madison Square Garden, there will be two, one in Grand Central Palace. Instead of one week of motion picture festivities and instruction, there will be two weeks. The public will, for the first time, be given an opportunity to meet and talk with thousands of motion picture stars.

"The combined problems of the two weeks' exposition will thoroughly cover all branches and activities of the motion picture industry. Instead of there being an exposition with only one, or at least two, of the main branches of the industry represented, there can now be no doubt but that all branches, including especially that tremendously important branch, the exhibitors, will be represented in this exposition.

"In like manner, too, the profits accruing from the great show will be distributed equitably and fairly among all branches of the industry.

"It means more than this, however. It means that the Chicago show in July in the big Auditorium in that city will be a real trade exposition equal in kind and character and size to the New York show if it had been held in either the Garden or the Palace, instead of in both.

"These are the material advantages resulting from the common sense, sane outcome of the misunderstanding. The more important results are the elimination of the suspicion that one branch of the industry is antagonistic to any other.

"It will mean, too, the knitting together of all of the factors which have been responsible for the tremendous advances made by the motion picture industry into one homogeneous effective fighting unit, equipped as never before for repelling the enemy from without and for solving its internal problems, which are bound to arise from time to time in an industry of the magnitude and importance as has the motion picture of today. This is my firm belief. To do this is the primary purpose for which the Motion Picture Board of Trade was organized.

"This purpose has animated the splendid work done by the Board of Trade to date. It will continue to animate our plans and purposes in the future, and it is a source of sincere gratification to know that, all the misunderstandings having been cleared away, we shall in the future have fighting with us, shoulder to shoulder, the great army of exhibitors throughout the country, and with united front we will move against the common enemy—whether that enemy be censorship or any other hostile and unjust legislation—we are bound to win.

"The final decision and settlement was influenced by the fact that the profits from the joint exposition here and in Chicago, whether earned by the Board of Trade or the Exhibitors' League, will be used for an identical purpose—to fight political pre-publicity censorship of motion pictures."

J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Board, also issued a statement, concurring in that of Mr. Blackton, and expressing the good wishes of the Board. In the name of the Exhibitors' League, Lee S. Ochs made this statement:

"The exhibitors have received complete recognition and are now in a mood for full co-operation in fair return for the Board of Trade's agreement as individuals to unreservedly support the Grand Central Palace show.

"It is not our desire to take advantage of any manufacturer or in fact any other element of the industry. We feel that at this exposition all branches of the industry should unite on a harmonious and effective program of co-operation. This is the time we must get together and work together.

"We feel that the manufacturers will find that a broad, friendly policy of personal and business recognition of the exhibitors will spell good results, continued harmony, and real unity on all matters vital to the industry.

"We shall ask all exhibitors to attend the Garden show which follows ours. Our best wishes go with this endorsement."

BOSTON WILL BE NEW ENGLAND SUMMER HOME FOR "RAMONA"

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week that the Colonial theatre in Boston would be the New England summer home of Clune's cinema-drama "Ramona," while the New York company continues its run at the Forty-fourth street theatre.

Negotiations for the presentation of "Ramona" at the Colonial, Boston, were concluded by W. H. Clune, the Los Angeles film magnate, and his associate, Lloyd Brown, on behalf of the "Ramona" company, and Klaw and Erlanger, as the representatives of the Colonial theatre management. The definite date for the opening of "Ramona" in Boston has not been set, but it will be along about the latter part of May.

With the opening of the Boston engagement, "Ramona" will be running simultaneously on the Pacific Coast and in New York and Boston. The chain across the continent will be further strengthened by the additions of Chicago and Cleveland in the course of a few weeks. In Chicago "Ramona" opens at the Auditorium on June 19. The Cleveland theatre and date have not yet been announced.

Screen Examinations

"THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"

(International Film Service—Episodes One and Two)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

"THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA" is a serial based on occult phenomena, and therefore dependent to large degree on weird camera effects, tricks of lighting and general superiority of technical work. If these were not well done, if they were overdone, the atmosphere of mystery and suspense could not be maintained.

Evidently the Wharton Brothers, the producers, realized this fact at the outset, for they have supplied some of the most novel camera work so far seen on the screen. Splendid effects are gained by clever use of dissolves, double exposures, and fades; and these are reinforced by two color treatment in many of the scenes. The atmosphere of mystery is created well and a high order of technical achievement is presented in the first two episodes.

But there are also other elements which make this an unusual offering. It was written by Hereward Carrington, whose identification with occultism guarantees a fund of information from which screenable material can be drawn. Certainly he has supplied that sort of material for the first two numbers, for these contain novel situations and genuine appeal. These are indispensable to a picture in which the action moves as slowly as it does here.

The first episode shows Myra Maynard, a young girl of psychic tendencies, the object of evil design by the Black Order, of which her father was a member. The Grand Master of the Order commands Arthur Varney, his chief lieutenant, to have Myra killed, so that the Order may gain her fortune, according to a provision of her father's will which decreed that the Order should have the money, in case his three daughters died on their eighteenth birthdays. Two of the daughters committed suicide, as a result of the Order's black magic, and Myra is sought as the remaining victim.

Dr. Payson Alden, an investigator of spirit phenomena, arrays himself against the Order, and prevents Myra from killing herself on the eve of her eighteenth birthday. He gains entrance to her home, follows her as she walks in her sleep to a secret crypt and takes a dagger out of her hand, just in time. Then he carries her to the living room above, and Myra, in a trance, begins to trace automatically a message from the other world. She awakes, however, before it is completed.

In Episode Two, Dr. Alden explains to Myra and her mother what happened on the night of her attempted suicide, and gains their consent to hypnotize Myra so that she may complete the message. When he is under the spell, Varney, commanded by the Grand Master to find out why the suicide plan failed, breaks the hypnotic power, after Myra has written, "Your father wishes to warn you against the Black"——

Then the Grand Master prepares a poisonous plant, and by a clever trick gets it into the Maynard home. Dr. Alden, suspicious, asks to be allowed to keep the flower in his room for the night. At midnight the plant gives forth its poisonous gas, and Alden is almost suffocated. Myra, gazing in the crystal, sees Dr. Alden struggling in his bed, and his rescue is effected just in time. Then Myra sees in a picture on the wall the face of the Grand Master looking threateningly at her.

In the telling of these incidents, some original ideas are introduced. The most striking of these, perhaps, is Myra's vision of Dr. Alden referred to above. The various characters are presented in unusual fashion, resort being made to trick photography again. The two-color scenes are also very striking.

Jean Sothern, as Myra, gives a sympathetic and appealing impersonation; Howard Estabrook is excellent as Dr. Alden; M. W. Rale, as the Grand Master, is inclined to exaggerate, but he is quite impressive. Others are Bessie E. Wharton and Allen Murnane. Charles W. Goddard made the scenario.

"THE HEART OF NORA FLYNN"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ALTHOUGH the quality of pictures is improving rapidly, we do not often see so good a picture as "The Heart of Nora Flynn." It is the type of picture which cannot be dissected; the story is simple, but ingenious; the handling and presentation leave little or nothing to criticise; the cast is excellent—but more than all, the picture grips. The element of sympathy is played upon to its fullest possibilities, and almost any audience will suffer with the heroine. This should be enough to make a picture.

The author is Hector Turnbull, of the Lasky staff. The picturization is the work of Jeanie MacPherson, and the direction by Cecil B. DeMille. It is a hard combination to beat, and we have no hesitation in recommending this offering to the careful consideration of any exhibitor in the world. It would be difficult to conceive of an audience to which "The Heart of Nora Flynn" would not appeal.

It is needless to speak of artistry where the DeMilles are concerned. There seems to be a deftness about their touch which is understood by persons who never even heard the word "art," and this touch is noticeable all the way through Mr. Turnbull's story.

Marie Doro is cast as an Irish nurse-maid. She is loved by and loves Nolan, the chauffeur. She is witness to an intrigue between her mistress and a young profligate; and when her mistress' husband suspects the plot, the bame is shoved off onto the nurse. The chauffeur is led to believe that the aforesaid profligate is calling at the house to see the nurse, and in a rage he shoots the interloper, wounding him seriously. Still the nurse accepts the blame, for the protection of her mistress and the two small children. In the end, Nolan learns that Nora is worthy of his homage, and he takes her away to a home of their own, keeping the secret of her mistress' guilt, and extracting a promise from her never to see her lover again. Thus the story has two happy endings.

Remarkable photography enhances the picture. Several night scenes, one of them showing an automobile charging along a dark street, with only the lights, and the reflection of street lamps on the pavement, visible, have been contrived.

Elliott Dexter does some convincing work as Nolan, and Ernest Joy and Lola May, as the employers, hold their scenes well, without detracting from the magnetism of Miss Doro, who is as charming a screen figure as we have seen. Charles West, Billy Jacobs, Peggy George and Mrs. Lewis McCord are other capable members of the cast.

"DAVID GARRICK"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

BY this picture the Pallas studios have demonstrated that the costume drama is by no means dead, and that a costume subject can be made as interesting and human as any other. It is the human chord which has been played upon to the greatest extent, and when this is done properly, it should make little difference just what period or age the story is laid in.

"David Garrick" is picturized from the stage success of the same name. It affords Dustin Farnum an opportunity to do some strong and artistic work; it also serves to present Winifred Kingston in an attractive role, and one which she handles with much grace and charm. As a whole, the casting and mounting have been very successful.

The story is laid in the London of 1754. Garrick, then just approaching the meridian of his fame, is appearing at the old Drury Lane in "Romeo and Juliet." One night he sees in a box Ada Ingot, daughter of a wealthy merchant, and the two fall in love. He does not know who the girl is, and searches for her for months in vain.

Eventually her father, who wants her to marry a dissolute young noble, learns of her infatuation, goes to Garrick and attempts to induce him to leave London. Garrick refuses, but, ignorant that the daughter is the girl he seeks, volunteers to attend the merchant's dinner party, and cure the girl of her attachment. On arrival there he is dismayed at the discovery of Ada's identity, but he keeps his word, and by pretending to have taken too much to drink, disgusts the girl, who asks him to leave.

The next day he fights a duel with a man who spoke slightingly of the girl, and then the real facts come out. The girl hears the truth, and goes to Garrick; her father, realizing that Garrick, although an actor, is a man of sterling character, consents to their union.

The atmosphere of London of that day has been carefully preserved. Several striking night scenes show theatre-goers in their sedan chairs, with link boys escorting them away from the famous old playhouse. These scenes are most attractive.

Herbert Standing, Frank Bonn, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Olive White and Mary Merschal contribute sincere and effective work.

"THE LAW DECIDES"

(Special Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IF the word excellent had not been overworked in describing photoplays, we should pick that word to sum up this picture. We shall not, however, content ourselves with merely calling it by a tired adjective. We go further. We call it admirable.

When we say admirable, we do not mean perfect. But we do mean—and this is the essential thing for the exhibitor—that its box office success seems to us assured, for the picture has that rare quality, a real story, a splendid cast, and some of the keenest psychology we, at least, have ever seen on the screen.

This psychology, built largely around a child, is shot through with a depth of emotion, and an absolute, sure-fire appeal, because of the way in which it is handled. To take a story which hinges on a misunderstanding between husband and wife, and throw into it enough humanity to make it hold for seven thousand feet is no easy matter. But it has been done here, and the result is a powerful photoplay.

John Wharton and his wife, Florence, are separated—divorced—when the husband's stepmother, unreconciled to his marriage and still wishing she could see her own daughter, Beatrice, his wife, joins forces with Lorenz, former admirer of Florence. A scheme is hatched by which the admirer is brought to Arrow Lodge, where the wife goes in order to escape, for a few days, the unbearable situation in her household. She takes her little son with her, and the husband finds his wife with her admirer. Immediately he suspects evil, although there is no evil, and he departs, taking the child with him.

Divorce follows. The wife marries the admirer, taking the only honorable alternative. She still loves her husband, however, and her devotion to her child causes her to pay secret visits to the child at night. The husband is miserable, but finally consents to marry at his stepmother's dictation. On the eve of this wedding, Beatrice, who has always loved Lorenz, agrees to go away with him. This is forestalled by the discovery of the plan. Florence learns of the stepmother's treachery, and Lorenz, seeing that his love for Florence can never be returned by her, commits suicide, leaving the reunited family to their happiness.

Probably you have seen nearly all that on the screen before, but we are quite sure you have never seen it handled as it is handled here. The action is keyed in a slow, even play of emotion, which brings out, with remarkable effectiveness, the complete sympathy of the spectator. It is logically developed, each step being clearly shown. The continuity is unbroken.

We can hardly assign particular praise to one member of the cast above another, for Bobby Connelly, as the child, Dorothy Kelly, as the wife, Harry Morey, as the admirer, Donald Hall, as the husband, Louise Beaudet, as the stepmother, do unusual work. Adele Kelly, as Beatrice, is fairly good.

Marguerite Bertsch, who wrote the story, assisted William P. S. Earle in its production. Details of settings, locations, and lighting were carefully looked after, except in the case of a few scenes where tinting is needed to give correct night atmosphere. There are only three brief cut-backs. We think the film could be cut to advantage, thus speeding up the action.

As it stands, however, "The Law Decides," is a winner.

"THE HUNTRESS OF MEN"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS subject is notable because of Mary Fuller. She never dons the same gown twice and the weird creations of the dressmaker that she displays would make even the most eccentric modiste green with envy. Miss Fuller also exhibits a striking array of coiffeur architecture. In fact, she is singularly out of the ordinary in appearance and is likely to cause much comment because of her eccentricities along this line.

"The Huntress of Men," however, is not as striking in any way as its star. It is built on a theme we all know—the taming of a heartless woman by a man who is aptly described as a "man among men." This man refuses to succumb to her wiles, as hordes of others had done. He marries her, quite by force, and then for a long time neither one admits love for the other, but after each of the pair have suffered largely from suppressed love they at last meet each other half way and live happily ever afterwards.

This story is by G. Vere Tyler and Catherine Carr scenarioized it for production by Lucius Henderson. The director and scenario writer have done the best they could, but they were not able to make an entirely pleasing five-reel feature out of such a slim and worn theme. The action runs slowly at all times and regrettable padding has been resorted to, to complete the required footage.

Miss Fuller numbers in her support Joseph Girard as her conquerer and Sydney Bracey as one of her conquests. Mr. Girard is a polished actor, but a slightly younger man would have shown more advantageously in this prominent part.

The direction, save that it is handicapped by obligatory padding, is good. The photography, scenes and settings are also to be commended.

"The Huntress of Men" is apt to cause considerable excitement in the all-powerful feminine portion of the audience because of Mary Fuller and her gowns, but the gowns would have had a better effect if the plot had been of material well suited for pictorial purposes.

"THE THREE WISE MEN"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

A YULETIDE film in the springtime seems like an anomaly, and while this play would be more timely during Christmas, the lesson it teaches is perennially in order. The story is a mixture of allegory, dream, and reality, swiftly changing from A. D. 1916 to A. D. 1 and back again. This quick shuttling is confusing at times, but the climax puts everything straight, and the spectator is able to piece the disjointed transitions together if he has the inclination.

DUTY OR PLEASURE?

A very good dramatic touch is the contrasting of Christmas in the slums, and Christmas in the lobster-palaces. This ironical comparison is brought in frequently, and while somewhat exaggerated, cannot help but provoke thought. The best incident of the film is one showing a sweet-faced Salvation Army lassie going among a crew of delirious merry-makers and telling them of the Wise Men and their pilgrimage to the manger in Bethlehem.

Bessie Eyton is just the right type to play the Salvation Army girl, and Thomas Santschi is convincing in the role of a rounder. Guy Oliver and Edith Johnson, who also appear, are both competent.

Owens, a wealthy roué, trifles with the love of Madge Fields, and when she is about to become a mother, deserts her. Nellie, a social worker, takes care of the mother and child. One Christmas eve Nellie goes to a cafe where Owens and his friends are carousing, and recognizing the father of her friend's child, tells the story of Christ's birth and crucifixion. Owens falls into a stupor and dreams that he is living in Biblical times. One of his roistering friends appears in the guise of the devil and urges him to continue his dissipations, but Nellie pleads that he go back to the woman he wronged. When Owens wakes up he finds Nellie shaking him, and she leads him to the mother of his child. Owens resolves to marry Madge and lead a decent life.

DE WOLF HOPPER AND MACK SENNETT COMEDIES SET FOR SHOWING AT 81ST STREET THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY, APRIL 24-30

FOR the week of April 24 to 30, at the Eightyfirst Street theatre, New York, the newest Triangle film plays will be shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday DeWolf Hopper will be seen in "Sunshine Dad" in five parts. A Mack Sennet Keystone comedy will also be shown.

On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday William H. Thompson and Anna Lehr will be seen in "Civilization's Child."

"THE CLOSED ROAD"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

LOOKING at this picture from every viewpoint, we find it hard to recall a better one. It was written by a dramatist who knows the value of suspense, how to procure it and how to sustain it. It was produced by a director, happening to be that same dramatist, who being thoroughly acquainted with his subject, carried it out in its picturization to a degree that knows no flaws. Maurice Tourneur is that craftsman.

His picture has no comedy element. It is unusually intense throughout and in places it tends to approach the gruesome, but happily enough the man behind the cameraman prevented the introduction of the horrible. This picture can be recommended to any exhibitor without hesitation. People want that which grips them and which keeps them breathless—that which keeps its ending hidden to the last and "The Closed Road" gives them all this.

It tells the story of Sargeant, a profligate bachelor, who on being told that he has but six months to live, decides to outwit nature and take his own life. He is prevented by Julia Annersley, the sister of a young physician and scientist who is being held for murder. Why, questions Julia, shoudn't he take the blame? He is a doomed man. And besides her brother has work to do that may benefit the whole world.

So Sargeant takes the offer. He incriminates himself—is doomed to die. But suddenly out of a clear sky it is discovered that Sargeant is perfectly sound and that he has years to live. The man who said that his condition was serious is proven insane. Julia learns this and exerts every effort to establish his innocence and she does at last, saving him at the fifty-ninth minute from the electric chair. The insane doctor confesses to have committed the crime and Julia and Sargeant are made happy with one another.

Mr. Tourneur has handled his plot excellently. There is crisis after crisis and the beholder is worked up to such a height that he forgets the probability of the old doctor being insane. And approaching death hanging over an innocent man is no incentive to lackadaisical interest—it pushes up the attention several degrees.

As a director Mr. Tourneur has acquitted himself equally well. His scenes are well timed and arranged. The dream of Death which vists Sargeant is handled in just the correct style. The settings are revelations. The course of the story brings the locale to the Tombs and Sing Sing and exact reproductions for interior work have been secured. The lighting and the straight photographic work add the finishing touch of perfection.

House Peters as Sargeant gives the best performance that we have ever seen him render. He is never House Peters but always Sargeant and we hope the outline of the plot will give significance to this inadequate praise. Barbara Tennant makes Julia a human figure and Lionel Adams plays the brother most creditably. Leslie Stowe as the insane doctor and Assistant Director George Cowl as the murdered man complete the named cast.

"THE LEOPARD'S BRIDE"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

MELODRAMA, with the addition of wild animals to make it more melodramatic, seems to be the best description of this subject. The scene is Northern India, and the atmosphere that of English army life. This gives ample opportunity for magnificent settings, and action in what is commonly looked upon as "high life." Stunning gowns, pretty girls, dashing officers, and then ferocious animals—this is a combination which makes the picture unusual.

The story does not wander far from the beaten track. Nobody will have any difficulty in understanding it. It involves no great psychological study, nor analysis of the emotions. It is a straigtaway dramatic story, beginning just where so many such stories have, and ending just where everybody supposed it would.

Two army officers are rivals for the same girl. The superior takes advantage of his position, and sends the other off to a post in the jungle. The letters between this man and the girl are intercepted and destroyed, and they quickly grow into the belief that each has forgotten the other. The girl agrees to marry the superior officer.

The inferior officer, in the jungle post, has won the love of a native girl, who watches him night and day. The superior officer, with the first girl, and her father, take a party for a leopard hunt, and the white girl, becoming separated from her party, is rescued by the native girl and taken to the camp where the junior officer—her true love—is resting. There the past is explained.

Nadja, the native girl, realizing that she has no real place in the man's heart, wanders out into the jungle; she commends her soul to her gods, walks into the lair of the leopards and binds herself to a tree. She is rescued after the animals have attacked her, and is carried dying to the camp; there she lives long enough to bring the lovers together and straighten out the wrongs of the past.

The cast includes William Clifford, Brooklyn Keller, Nan Christy, Frederick Montague, Margaret Gibson, Fred Goodwins, Edward Gordon and Paul Machette. The story is by Theodosia Harris.

BRITISH COLUMBIA FAVORS KALEM SUBJECTS, IS GENERAL FILM EXCHANGE REPORT

THOUGH Kalem discontinued the production of four-reel features some time ago to devote entire attention to the short pictures that are in such demand words of praise for the Kalem features that are still being shown are constantly received. Following is a letter from the branch manager of the Vancouver, B. C., General Film exchange last week:

"Kalem's 'The Pitfall,' in four reels, has been the subject of unusually favorable comment among exhibitors of British Columbia who have used it. In fact, there have been commendations received, not only verbally and by letter, but also by telegram on this and other Kalem four-reelers; for example, 'The Runaway Wife' and 'The Pretenders.' Kalem is to be congratulated accordingly and, no doubt, will be incited to accomplishment of similar successes."

"THE GILDED SPIDER"

Bluebird—Five Reels

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

LOUISE LOVELY, whose beauty and charm even belittle this last chosen nom de plume of hers, appears as an Italian girl in this Bluebird release. Miss Lovely, we must confess, is not what one would associate with the Latin type of woman. She is pretty to the extreme, but her features are anything but Italian. Perhaps though that prettiness will triumph over the casting, it will with the trousered portion of the audience, anyway.

"The Gilded Spider" is by Ida May Park. We have seen more creditable offerings from the pen of this writer. The theme here presented is familiar, but that might pass unnoticed if it were developed after a better fashion. The principal characters are not as well defined as they could be and the motivation of some of the incidents of the story is unconvincing.

GIOVANNI CONTEMPLATES REVENGE

In its production the picture has suffered from either lack of understanding or carelessness. There is comedy in the climax and naturally humor of this sort is badly placed. That which is spectacular has been introduced without direct bearing on the main lines of action. Some members of the supporting cast fail to effectively register in big moments of the piece.

The story opens with the introduction of Leonita (Louise Lovely) and her husband Giovanni, who are very happy in Italy. Kirkham, an American traveler, ends the happiness. In attempting to take liberties with Leonita she jumps into the sea to evade him and drowns. Then the scene shifts to America. Fifteen years later, Leonita's girl, Elisa, has grown to womanhood. She is loved ardently by a young artist, who has much trouble in seeing her because of her father's antagonism toward all American men.

Giovanni, to revenge himself on Kirkham, plans to drown his wife, but he is foiled by the artist. In the meantime, another villain lures Elisa to his den. Giovanni arrives knowing that Kirkham is also there and finally succeeds in killing him, after which he jumps from the roof of the building, believing Elisa has been indiscreet, but it is quite the contrary, and artist and Elisa are married.

Lon Chaney's Giovanni is a strong piece of character portrayal. Lule Warrenton, Gilmore Hammond, Marjorie Ellison, Hayward Mack and Jay Belasco are other principals. Joseph De Grasse directed.

The settings are worth special notice, particularly the Italian garden and the interior of a Catholic church. The lighting, too, is practically faultless as is the photography.

"GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN"

(Special Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Eight Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A THOROUGHLY good photoplay, one which holds because, an emotional theme is thrown against a background of rugged natural settings and beautiful snow scenes and nearly always skilfully managed both by director and cast, has been made from James Oliver Curwood's book by Western Vitagraph.

It has suspense, thrills, pathos, a good love motif, on the one hand; and the atmosphere of the wild, on the other. And it proves, among other things, that a plot which would be entirely conventional and somewhat unpleasant if it were confined to the haunts of civilization, becomes very impressive when Nature is made a character in the story.

In fact, the story, analyzed, is not extraordinary. The handling of it puts it over. A daughter poses as the mother of a child to whom her own mother has given birth, and then persuades a young man in turn to pose as the child's father, in order to shield the real mother from the wrath of her husband, the girl's father. This is the backbone of the theme.

It should be stated explicitly, however, that this is not what is generally called "a sex picture." The central incident, taken alone, might lead one to suppose it was. But the pervading atmosphere is not that at all, and, basing our opinion entirely on the way the story material is presented, we think it fair to say that it is rather a picture of elemental emotions, without any trace of insidious suggestiveness.

It is possible to portray human weakness without resort to sensationalism, and this, it seems to us, has been done here. Nevertheless, it is a picture which will be understood in its entirety only by the mature.

In few pictures we have seen have natural effects been handled to better advantage. Laid in the Canadian Northwest, the story gave Director Rollin S. Sturgeon splendid opportunity to pick unusual locations, and he did not fail to do so. Most of the scenes were made in a forest, with magnificent trees, lakes and hills as a background. But the most effective thing of the sort was gained by staging a large part of the action in a snowstorm and the resultant drifts. The characters dash back and forth in snow sleds pulled by a pack of remarkably well trained dogs, or they are engaged in going from place to place in canoes, or they fight their way through the drifts.

The management of the outdoor scenes is excellent. In themselves, apart from the rest of the subject, they are extremely interesting, and helps to make the whole genuinely distinctive.

In a picture in which there are so many points to commend, it is a thankless job to remark that some of the scenes are too long, and that the footage could be cut down materially, thus quickening the action. Many of the subtitles also are inappropriate, and impede the action. It seemed to us also that the motive for the mother's misstep was not defined clearly. There are other faults, such as the frequent appearance of backdrops, which jar particularly, because one can't help contrasting them with the magnificent settings.

The work of the cast is good throughout. Nell Shipman has the role of the self-sacrificing daughter, and she gives an expressive and sympathetic performance; William Duncan, as her lover, is a pleasing hero, and George Holt is a satisfactory villain. One of the best impersonations is that of Edgar Keller, as Jean, the half-breed. Good character work is done by William Bainbridge, Nell Clark Keller, and George Kunkel. A large number of extras are used, all of them good types.

"God's Country and the Woman" is sure to please nearly everybody in its climax, for it ends with a stirring denouement. In this the Woman's devoted followers fight a series of encounters in order to rescue her from the leader of the Devil's Nest. And these battles, with rifle, revolver and hand-to-hand, are not complete until the dogs finish the chief of the criminals.

"THE CHAIN INVISIBLE"

(Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Chain Invisible" gets away to a start that is somewhat too sudden and there are places, only a few of them, however, throughout the rest of the picture that show signs of poor editing. But when these flaws are done away with the feature will present a commendable appearance, judging it from the standards that must be lived up to to please the average audience.

The story is that of one James Wadsworth, a north woodsman possessed of cave man instincts and a lot of money, with which he believes he can buy any woman's love. He meets Anne Dalton, a product of Fifth Avenue, who attracts his attention. On a sea voyage he makes her acquaintance, but she scorns him because of his primitive ideas. Not to be routed with cuts and snubs, Wadsworth decides on a bold plan. He throws Anne overboard, leaps in after her and then swims with her to some nearby wreckage. The ship gives the two up for lost. On a desert island, Wadsworth and Anne live alone and a natural course of events finally causes Anne to love the powerful man.

THE DRIFTING RAFT REACHES LAND

A year later, Anne's parents arrive believing that the two might have been thrown on the island. Anne's former fiance Towne, discovers Wadsworth with a broken leg lying on the rocks where he has fallen waving to the ship. He tells Anne that Wadsworth is dead and finally persuades her to depart. She takes with her her baby.

Back in civilization, Anne marries the deceiver to pacify her parents and give a name to her child. Wadsworth has been rescued and years later he reappears and denounces Anne's husband for the villain he knows him to be. In despair Towne commits suicide and Wadsworth and Anne are, of course, again united.

The scenes are all good, those on the desert island being very well chosen. The photography in the print viewed was affected by the print itself which was imperfect in several places. Frank Powell has displayed good judgment in directing in all but a few scenes wherein his characters are inclined to pose noticeably, and Victor Benoit should have been told to remove his hat in the presence of ladies.

"THE NO-GOOD GUY"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

WILLIAM COLLIER puts to rout, in this offering, all doubts anybody may have had regarding his ability to be genuinely funny on the screen. And he does it, curiously enough, by acting a "drunk," a character with which the screen is of course perfectly familiar. But Mr. Collier introduces some new business, and is aided by several pieces of trick work, which compare favorably with anything of their kind.

When we say Mr. Collier appears as an inebriated young man, we are not telling quite the whole story, for his characterization is more than that. He is, as the title says, "The No-Good Guy," which means that he will not work, but instead occupies his time giving "third rail parties," as one of C. Gardner Sullivan's clever subtitles remarks.

One of these occasions ends with the driving of an automobile into a department store. Released from jail, "The No-Good Guy" becomes a detective—this being his idea of work—and although he fails to develop great ability along this line, he falls in with a gang of crooks, and helps pull off a job. When everything is cleared up, he finds that his uncle is the boss of the crooks, so all "The No-Good Guy" has to do is to disown the guardianship of his uncle, and take Lucia into his arms, Lucia, by the way, being one of the crooks.

Certainly this is a wierd story, but as a vehicle for Mr. Collier it is excellent. It enables him to create a real comedy character, one that will bring laughs from any audience.

The picture is largely Collier, but it has other funmaking qualities. We have already mentioned the trick work. This consists of a bed, which dances about the room, eluding the intoxicated young man, or a glass of liquor which jumps from one end of the table to another. When realism is necessary in the latter half of the picture, which gets quite serious for a time, a building is blown up. The management of these touches is typical of the fine direction of Walter Edwards.

Enid Markey makes an unusually good feminine lead. Others in a superior cast are Charles K. French, Robert Kortman, J. Frank Burke, and Mr. Edwards.

"THE HALF MILLION BRIBE"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

RAPID action is the keynote of this picture, which begins with a murder mystery, and then gradually shades into the reformation of the leading character, after he has been cleared of the false charge by a district attorney who wishes to see him on the straight and narrow path. The story is based upon William Hamilton Osborne's novel and play, "The Red Mouse," which was scenarioized by Harry O. Hoyt.

The mystery-interest aroused by the first third of the footage is keen, and although this interest is not kept at such great height throughout, the total effect makes the picture entirely salable.

Not the least commendable thing is the beginning, which captures attention at once. J. Lawrence Challoner, an idler, is shown running away from his favorite haunt, a gambling den. Then the spectator sees a man lying dead on the sidewalk. Challoner is charged with the murder, and in fact, believes he is the murderer. His wife offers the District Attorney her whole fortune if he will save her husband, and although the prosecutor agrees, he proceeds to secure Challoner's conviction.

This, of course, heightens the suspens. Later Pemmican,

the real murderer, confesses to the District Attorney, but the latter tells Challoner he has secured his freedom by a fake confession. Eventually Challoner reforms, quits drink, and goes to work. Then his wife, who has been faithful to him throughout his troubles, reveals the fact that she bought his freedom. Challoner decides the confession is real, confronts the prosecutor with the fact, and threatens to expose him. The District Attorney explains that he took the money because he knew it was the only way to make a man of Challoner, and gives it back. Challoner then helps the prosecutor to win his race for Senator, by getting the goods on the latter's rival, the proprietor of the gambling den in which the murder took place.

A good many things about this plot are improbable, and, under strict analysis, not convincing. It is hardly probable, for example, that Mrs. Challoner would have kept from her husband the facts about the bribe for so many years. But these improbabilities are more than offset by the interest aroused by the subject as a whole.

Marguerite Snow gives an appealing impersonation of the faithful wife, and Hamilton Revelle is quite good as Challoner. Others in a capable cast are Carl Brickert, Walter Hitchcock, Fred C. Williams, Fred Heck, John Smiley, Fred Tidmarsh, Carol Seymour, Diane D'Aubrey. Edgar Jones directed well. Settings and locations give the right atmosphere in each case.

"THE BEGGAR OF CAWNPORE"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A DIFFICULT task was assigned H. B. Warner in the title role of this Ince drama, for he was called upon to show convincing character development. He had to change from a high principled young army physician to a drug fiend, and then back again from the rags and degradation of The Beggar of Cawnpore to respectability and his proper estate. That Mr. Warner succeeded in making his impersonation impressive throughout argues much for his ability, as well as for the merit of the production.

It is not a pleasant thing to witness the writhings of a drug slave on the screen, and certainly it is not easy for an actor to keep such a character from becoming repulsive, but here again Mr. Warner succeeded in holding sympathy, until the time for the change back, which was sure to come, of course, in the end.

Nobody who sees this picture can fail to heed its warning, for the downward road opened by the use of drugs is pictured in realistic fashion. There is no doubt about the value of its lesson, though the teaching of it was not allowed to render the story undramatic.

On the contrary, we have a series of well directed mob and battle scenes, descriptive of the Sepoy Rebellion, which forms the central incident in the piece. These speed up the action, and provide a necessary contrast to the large amount of footage given to portraying the young physician's weakness.

A slender, but pleasing love theme, is at hand also, wherein Betty Archer, loved by the physician, refuses to marry him because of his weakness, and marries Capt. Douglas, of the Delhi garrison instead. Later she comes to Cawnpore, and sees the physician, now sunk to utter degradation as a beggar. They meet, and without knowing who he is, she gives him alms. This is probably the most pathetic incident in a picture which abounds in pathos.

After the Sepoys mutiny, and the British surrender, the beggar by a terrific struggle, throws away his supply of hasheesh and rescues Betty. The treacherous Sepoys murder all the rest of the British.

Lola May does well indeed as Betty; Wyndham Standing gives a convincing portrayal of the cowardly Capt. Douglas, who is shot as he attempts to escape; A. F. Hollingsworth is seen as Mulhar Rao, H. E. Entwhistle as Col. Archer, and Wedgwood Nowell as an English engineer.

Some large sets are used, and these, together with well chosen backgrounds, give the correct atmosphere. Charles Swickard, the director, deserves much credit.

"A BATH HOUSE BLUNDER"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

PRODUCED by Del Henderson, and acted by such accomplished slapstick artists as Mae Busch, Joseph Belmont, Frank Hayes, Polly Moran, Blanche Payson, and Don Likes, this is one of the best of recent Keystones. The fun centers about rivalry between father and son for the affections of a pretty teacher of swimming, and it leads the principals through a merry chase which begins at a swimming school, peopled by diving girls in one-piece bathing suits, and ends in the deep blue sea.

The plot is cleverly contrived. It calls for some high diving from the end of a pier and the usual chase by the Keystone police. One of the most ludicrous incidents is the performance of an alleged life saving crew, which attempts to rescue a trio of Keystoners struggling in the water, but never gets beyond the first breakers. Finally, Mae Busch is selected to rescue the three, which she does in the most approved heroine fashion.

The action is swift throughout, and is punctuated with laughs nearly every foot of the way.

"MR. JACK GOES INTO BUSINESS"

(Vitagraph-V-L-S-E—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS number of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack" is, if anything, a little more lively than preceding installments. Frank Daniels continues his effective character comedy, which centers here about a business venture.

Mr. Jack, taunted by his wife, decides to go to work, and decides that the conducting of a theatrical agency would be interesting. He rents an office, gives the building superintendent a few dollars to stand outside the building and drum up business for him, and then sits down to play solitaire until something happens.

Something does happen very soon. Pretty would-be actresses begin trooping into Mr. Jack's office, and then the fun starts. Mr. Jack has a glorious good time until his wife arrives, and rudely breaks up the party. She takes Mr. Jack by the collar, and starts him homeward, while Mr. Jack, still hilarious, sings "Good Bye, Girls, I'm Through."

Rose Tapley, William Gibson, Edward Boulden, and a number of others are in the cast. C. Jay Williams directed.

"THE KISS OF HATE"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE uniform excellence of the cast, and the direction should result in success for this picture. The story is somewhat reminiscent, and has been popular with producers and the public for some time: it is that of the persecution of the Jews in Russia, and the righting of the wrongs inflicted by overbearing bureaucrats.

The subject is a tense one, and has been handled in such a way that its full power to grip its audience is brought to bear. Ethel Barrymore has a difficult part, but one which she handles in a finished and pleasing manner. Her work is almost matched by that of H. Cooper Cliffe, as the conscienceless prefect of police.

William Nigh's direction is fully up to the standard which this young director has set and maintained ever since he has been with Metro. As the entire action takes place in Russia, some beautiful snow scenes have been utilized, and those showing a snow-storm in the forest of Siberia are especially impressive.

Orzoff, prefect of police, is one of the chief persecutors of the Jews. Not knowing this, Turgeneff, governor of the province, plans to co-operate with him in lightening the persecutions. Nadia, the young daughter of Turgeneff, discovers Orzoff's true character, and exposes him. As a result, the prefect hatches a plot in which the governor and his son are killed. Nadia makes the supreme sacrifice to Orzoff in order to save her brother, but the prefect tricks her.

Nadia swears revenge. She joins the persecuted peasants, and in the woods, meets Sergius, the son of the prefect, in whom the latter is completely wrapped up. The two fall in love.

DISARMED!

Nadia cannot marry the son of her father's murderer, and tells him so, without giving the reason. So she plans that they shall be united in death, and stabs the young man, but before she can kill herself, she is caught by the guards. Finding that she can save Sergius' life, the prefect yields to her demand that he sign a statement to the effect that he has wrongfully sentenced thousands of unfortunates to Siberia.

She goes to the dying man, and gives orders that his wound shall be attended to, but before anything can be done, the desperate nihilists attack the governor's mansion and set it afire. Not only Orzoff, but Nadia and Sergius perish in the holocaust.

Niles Welch, Robert Elliott, William L. Abingdon, Victor De Linsky, Martin J. Faust, William Boyd, Roy Applegate, Frank Montgomery, Ilean Hume and Daniel Sullivan complete the cast.

"THE OTHER MAN"

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Other Man," the first comedy to grace the screen of Rothapfel's Rialto, features Roscoe Arbuckle in a dual role. The humor in it is the consequence of no thrilling chase or comical feats—Arbuckle has reserved the right to take the laugh-producing burden on himself almost exclusively. To be sure there is an automobile wreck, but this is startling without being funny.

Being introduced to the spectator in two different parts, the fat comedian manages to make the picture very funny. It is mild humor, but Arbuckle's rotundity and seemingly sunny disposition and his clean business, which is in such contrast from that of other comedians, places the picture in the class of good ones.

Arbuckle is the lover, and at a masque ball his engagement with the girl is to be announced. But Fatty is slightly banged up in an automobile accident and he is late in attending. A fat tramp makes his way to the ball and the girl believes him to be her lover. But Fatty frightened at the thought of an operation and the sudden appearance of a carpenter who is fixing window shades, hies himself to the ball in his nightgown and then things start to hum and they are made more amusing by the introduction of a pair of society crooks. A chase results, the tramp gets an unexpected reward for capturing the light fingered couple, while Fatty and his sweetheart are united.

This story, which is subordinated to its star, is worked out after a good fashion, although some time is consumed before real action is introduced.

There are new tricks of business and old ones, and both kinds achieve the desired results.

Irene Wallace is the girl and she makes a good opposite. Minta Durfee and Al St. John are the crooks and the others are Alice Lake, Horace J. Haine, Lillian Shaffner, William Jefferson and Joe Bordeau.

"COLONEL HEEZA LIAR WINS THE PENNANT"

(Paramount-Bray—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is an especially diverting animated cartoon, showing the somewhat improbable adventures of the Colonel at the seat of war.

He decies to go to the front and settle the fight immediately; but the bursting shells soon reduce him to a state of nature, at least as regards clothes.

He regains his senses beside a deserted gun in a fort, which is under fire, and as the ammunition is exhausted, he has recourse to strategy. He recalls his baseball prowess, picks up a gun-barrel, stands on the ramparts, and as the shells fly by, he bats them back to the enemy's lines, wrecking their works. On the same reels is a study of insects which mimic nature, by Raymond Ditmars.

"THE CONSCIENCE OF JOHN DAVID"

Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

AS author and actor Crane Wilbur has not provided himself as good a vehicle in this subject as he has on other occasions. The story lacks compelling interest, and is rather weakly built up, yet it has several high spots, which make it a fair average picture.

Allegorical in type, the allegory has been subjected to more human impulses and emotions, which is as it should be, according to our way of thinking. The characters are all well drawn, and several of them present interesting studies. Special mention should be made of Mae Gaston, who is an attractive figure and does her work convincingly.

John David, a wealthy idler, is engaged to the Worldly Woman. At a dinner of the parasites whom the spender calls friends, he announces the engagement. Then the wanderer appears, and becomes one of the guests. The wanderer turns out to be John David's Conscience, who had been driven out some years before.

At the dinner a telegram arrives saying that David's fortune has been swept away. The guests hear the news and take their hasty departure. Conscience alone remains. David goes to his fiance's home, and finds her with the Libertine. He attacks the latter, and believing he has killed him flees West; Conscience goes along.

In the West David makes friends, and one bitter enemy. He meets and falls in love with a sheriff's daughter, and they are to be married. In the meantime his enemy, suspecting he is the missing John David, sends East for a detective.

As the ceremony is being performed, Conscience stands at David's elbow and prompts him to give up the girl and confess to the murder. The assemblage is in a wild uproar, when a telegram arrives from New York, announcing that a Japanese butler, who had a grudge against the murdered man, had confessed hiding under a sofa and killing the man while he was struggling with David. David is freed of the charge, and all ends happily, David, the girl and Conscience going away together.

Numerous scenes have been introduced to give the story added atmosphere and interest. The cast includes, besides Mr. Wilbur and Miss Gaston, John Oaker, Alice Rinaldo, Frederick Montague, Louis Durham and Francis Raymond.

"CAPTAIN KLEINSCHMIDT'S WAR PICTURES"

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CAPTAIN F. E. KLEINSCHMIDT who, up to a year ago was with the Austrian armies in various European campaigns, has added a valuable selection to the already formidable library of war pictures. In some respects Captain Kleinschmidt's views are unusual from the general run of such pictures, while in all respects they are exceedingly interesting throughout their length.

Last week were shown about seven thousand feet of film dealing with the activities of the Austrian army. These pictures, temporarily titled "War on Three Fronts," successively follow the Austrian armies in their campaigns against the Russian, Servian and Italian forces.

With all their interest it is doubtful whether an audience desires so much war material. The Captain would do well to divide his picture into three parts and put each out, one at a time. The interest, then would be more central and shorter lengths would prevent unrest.

The pictures have not yet been subtitled when shown for review. If they are carefully and intelligently interspersed with inserts descriptive of the many interesting scenes, they will, no doubt, be enthusiastically received. Captain Kleinschmidt accompanied the private exhibition with explanations of every scene and as he is seen in the pictures now and then himself, the personal interest was therefore added to the usual attention that such pictures create.

The photography of his pictures is always clear enough to permit of the observer's satisfaction, while in some places it is unusually good for war pictures, judging by others which we have seen.

The pictures show such scenes as building pontoon bridges, panoramas taken from balloons and aeroplanes, one of these being the city of Belgrade showing devastation wrought by the besieging guns; army routine, the firing of the mortars and soldiers on the march consume much of the footage. There are some pictures of an Austrian trench in action. The camera was evidently in a protected position in the trench and consequently it has been able to catch the soldiers dropping one by one, wounded and sometimes killed.

If the exhibitor believes his public is not tired of war pictures he would do well to consider Captain Kleinschmidt's offering seriously.

"THE HEART'S TRIBUTE"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is quite an effective heart-interest story, which employs the old theme of a young man who wins the love of a working girl, promises to marry her, and then weds a woman of his own social rank. Despite that fact that this theme has been used scores of times, it still has vitality, if intelligently presented, as this picture witnesses.

The cast, which includes E. K. Lincoln, Helen Greene, June Daye, Herbert Fortier, and others, does work superior to that found in most three-reelers. Mr. Lincoln and Miss Daye, in particular, make their parts convincing, and the other players are entirely competent.

Suspense is well maintained. Though the story material is absolutely familiar to the spectator, he does not know how it is going to be worked out in the end, and is gratified to find that the rich wife, instead of repudiating her husband when the working girl confronts them with the illegitimate child, sacrifices her pride and forgives both.

A considerable amount of cleverness is employed to bring about the denouement naturally and logically, so that it is both convincing and wholesome. The story was written by Daniel Carson Goodman.

Rene Plaisetty had charge of the directions, and his careful attention to detail has much to do with the good effect of the offering as a whole.

Photography and sets are very good.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Woman Against Woman." (Biograph. Three reels. Reissue.)—This picture was made quite some time ago and has in its cast Lionel Barrymore, Alan Hale, Betty Grey, Vivian Prescott and Mrs. Lawrence Marston. Its theme concerns two sisters, one of which falls afoul of a city rounder. Later when she is attended by a decent man, she persuades her sister to claim the baby, but when she gets married, there is the villainess to poison her husband against her and bring forth the baby as proof. However, matters are finally adjusted happily. In some respects, this picture is very well acted; in others it is not. The story has been dragged out considerably and would appear more interesting if edited. The theme is appealing and no doubt will create sympathetic response in an easily appeased audience.

"In the Moon's Ray." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., May 2.)—This re-issue not shown for review; the story follows. Two gentlemen crooks decide to steal a priceless scarab from Blake, a millionaire. Just as they have it in their possession, Judith, Blake's daughter, enters the room, and they are obliged to kidnap her to make a get-away. Judith scribbles a note on her white slipper and throws it from the taxi-cab in which she is being hurried away. The slipper is found by Neal, a detective, who captures the thieves and rescues Judith. Neal later marries Judith.

In the cast are Francis X. Bushman, E. H. Calvert, Bryant Washburn, Rapley Holmes and Gerda Holmes.

"The Fable of the Preacher Who Flew His Kite." Essanay. Wed., May 3.)—This George Ade fable not shown for review; the story follows: A Man of God was in Wrong with his Congregation because he Spilled his Pearls in language they could understand. So the Sky Pilot got Wised Up, and quoted Sanskrit, Semitic, and other Fancy Tongues, shuffled together with Hand Picked globs of tongue-twisting Polysyllabics. The Pew Warmers didn't Make the Line, but they hailed him as a Theological Wizard, and fattened up the Pay Envelope.

"Once a Thief———?" (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., May 6.)—Not shown for review, the story follows: Kendrick and Mary Fulton both are employed in Overton's antique shop. They plan to marry as soon as Kendrick can save enough money. Kendrick's sister is a cripple, but a specialist promises that she can be cured for a thousand dollars. Kendrick embezzles this sum, intending to repay it, but is caught, and sentenced to six months in the penitentiary. When he comes out, he is accused of stealing again, but Mary proves that he is innocent, and by proving her employers guilty of smuggling, make them give Kendrick a job.

In the cast are Bryant Washburn, Nell Craig, Edmund F. Cobb, and Richardson Cotton.

"Ham's Waterloo." (Kalem. Mon., May 2.)—Will be reviewed next week.

"Romeo of the Coal Wagon." (Kalem. Wed., May 3.)—Ethel Teare and Jack MacDermott appear to good advantage in this comedy. Ethel poses as a burglar and so does Jack. Ethel catches Jack and thinking he is hard up, gives him a job as driver of one of her father's coal wagons. Jack hires a substitute who fixes the father's books and makes off with some money. Jack gets the blame until the substitute's wife shows up and matters are adjusted.

"The Human Telegram." (Kalem. Sat., May 6.)—The featured stunt in this number of the Hazards of Helen is Miss Gibson's ride on telegraph wires over a deep crevasse. It is quite a feat and will doubtless cause great excitement. The rest of the picture, that is the story, is well constructed and holds the interest nicely.

"The Dumb Heiress." (Kalem. Fri., May 5.)—Here is Sis Hopkins again. She inherits a lot of money and visits her stylish relatives and causes a great disturbance by her kitchen manners. And also she refuses to speak to any man because a fortune teller has prophesied that she will marry the first man she speaks to, and Sis wants her sweetheart back home. Henry Murdock and the usual cast appear in Miss Melville's support. It's a worth-while comedy.

"The Social Pirates." (Kalem. Two reels. Sixth Episode.)—"The Master Swindlers" takes up the adventures of Mona and Mary pitted against portrait thieves. The action is a little involved, as there are so many original portraits and imitations that one becomes confused toward the finale. However, the body of the picture is as interesting both in the way of comedy and suspense as the others have been. Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby with their customary support do excellent work.

"Millionaire Billie." (Lubin. Sat., April 22.)—Billie Reeves masquerades as a millionaire tramp, thus breaking into society. He has a glorious time until the real tramp appears, and then of course Billie lands in jail. The complications are quite amusing. June Daye and a number of other Lubin favorites are in the cast.

"Germs and Microbes." (Lubin. Mon., April 24.)—By all odds one of the best David Don comedies produced. Edward McKim has provided a funny story which is just what Don needs most to offset his actions. Here he appears as a grouchy father whose one terror is germs. His son, to get more money out of him, writes a letter in which he says that many germs have been enclosed in the envelope. As a result he gets a large sum of money from him but Don gets back after a humorous fashion.

"The Man Within." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., May 1.)—Will be reviewed at length in next week's issue.

"An Elephant's Gratitude." (Selig. Sat., May 6.)—This Jungle-Zoo drama has good atmosphere, a suitable story, and an interesting, if not exciting ending. Edith Johnson is an appealing heroine, well supported by Harry Lonsdale, Leo Pierson, and Dan Noonan. This release ought to please most audiences.

Ellen, the daughter of a planter in East Africa, is very fond of an elephant in her father's herd. One day she sees Kasu, the keeper, abusing the animal, and she dismisses him at once. To get revenge, Kasu kidnaps Ellen, but the elephant follows them and rescues the girl who had been kind.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Out For the Count." (Vogue. Tues., May 2.)—Not shown for review.

"Billie Van Deusen's Ancestrie." (Beauty. Wed., May 3.)—Not shown for review.

"With a Life at Stake." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., May 5.)—A great many thrilling incidents make this an exceptional Western. It is refreshingly free from padding, and the cast is at its best in this type of play. Supporting Art Acord and Queenie Rosson are Alfred Gerguson, Nita Davis, Larry Peyton and Guy Lundy.

Margaret, the daughter of a ranch-owner, is a telephone operator in a Western town. She is courted by Pitman, the town bully, and by Blinky, a cowboy. Blinky has several adventures while protecting Margaret from Pitman, and always manages to defeat the man's schemes. One day the sheriff arrests Pitman for a killing, but the captured man shoots the officer, and since he cannot unlock the manacles that hold them together, pulls the dead man up on the saddle with him. Hearing a shot over the telephone, Margaret hurries to her father's house and finds that Pitman has broken her father's arm. In pursuing the fleeing ruffian, she is wounded and falls across the railroad tracks. She is saved in the nick of time by Blinky. Pitman falls into a wolf trap and slowly starves to death.

"All For Nuttin'." (Beauty. Sun., May 6.)—Not shown for review.

"Bungling Bill's Dream." (Vogue. Sun., May 6.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Iron Claw," No. 9. (Pathé. Two reels.)—This episode of the stirring serial is entitled "Arrows of Hate." In it Legar, the arch criminal, turns upon "The Laughing Mask," and perpetrates several crimes in the latter's name, so that the police seek the mysterious character. They trap him in the house of Margery's father, where Margery saves him, but she and Manley, her father's secretary are captured by Legar, bound hand and foot and left in a room, with the gas turned on. They are about to escape, when one of Legar's attendants fires some small metal arrows with poisoned ends. The Laughing Mask, however, succeeds in saving them by neutralizing the poison. Pearl White, Sheldon Lewis and Creighton Hale head the cast.

"How Birds Feed Their Young." (Pathécolor. Split reel.)—This is another of the attractive educational films, giving an intimate study of birds which is unusually appropriate at this season. On the Same reel is "The Towns of Tunis," an interesting inspection of the quaint towns of historic northern Africa.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Doctor Neighbor." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., May 1.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of April 22.

"Her Hero Maid." (Nestor. Mon., May 1.)—Lee Moran here dons feminine raiment and poses as a maid in order to be near the girl of his heart. Al Christie has never failed to put such a plot over, as Moran is insurpassable in this sort of a part. Horace Davey directed while others in the cast are Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams and Neal Burns.

"The Purple Maze." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., May 2.)—A stenographer seeing those who have taken the Easiest Way, decides to take it herself, but the sorrow coming to her friend influences her to stick to the Straight and Narrow. Stella Razetto, by excellent acting is largely responsible for the success of this release, while her support in the shape of Juan de la Cruz, Gladys Brockwell, George Hernandez and Rosita Marstini is capable. The picture combines comedy and drama in good proportions and all in all is a most acceptable two reeler. Edward Le Saint directed from a scenario by Olga Printzlau.

"Eleanor's Catch." (Rex. Tues., May 2.)—A young girl starts to tread the easiest way, but stops and thinks just in time to save herself. A pleasant picture, rather shallow on the whole, but well done. Cleo Madison, William Mong, Edward Hearn and Lule Warrenton are the principals. Mong wrote the scenario while Miss Madison produced.

"When Slim Was Home Cured." (Imp. Tues., May 2.)—A Victor Potel comedy which does very well, save for one or two scenes in which the lead is inclined to overwork himself. The idea is old, but of late it has been absent from the picture field, so it comes in the nature of a welcome revival. Jean Bernoudy assists the star.

"The Girl Who Feared Daylight." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., May 3.)—This picture just misses being convincing because it is improbable, while the subtitles are written in an overly-sentimental style. However, some good snow scenes and a complete Northern atmosphere, and last but not least Mary Fuller make it acceptable. Clifford Grey, Edna Pendleton and William Welsh are chief of the support.

"The Bankruptcy of Boggs and Schultz." (L-Ko. Wed., May 3.)—Not shown for review.

"The Beloved Liar." (Rex. Three reels. Thurs., May 4.)—This production contains an interesting old character study rendered realistically by Thomas Jefferson, while the presence of Zoe Beck, the extremely clever child actress in the greater part of the picture affords a striking contrast. The story furnished by Calder Johnstone moves very slowly and comes to no conclusion of any power—it is all character study with an inconsequential plot. However, it is free from the usual sex element and it makes mildly pleasing entertainment. George Cochrane's direction is very good.

"Won with a Make-Up." (Imp. Thurs., May 4.)—King Baggot as the leading man of a motion picture company disguises as a doctor and elopes

"Lem's College Career." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., May 5.) Al Christie hasn't put the punch and vim in this two reeler, qualities which are almost always present in his subjects of shorter length. Eddie Lyons as Lem, the ranch owner, mistreats Lee in Western style while he visits the ranch, and Lee in turn mistreats Lem in equal style when he comes to college. Lee Moran and Betty Compson are also prominent. This has laughs in it, but the plot is slim and the humor lies or is intended to lie in the practical jokes perpetrated by both parties, and this sort of stuff has lost much of its value through constant use.

"The Thief of the Desert." (Laemmle. Fri., May 5.)—An Arabian romance of original and unusual pleasing quality. Ali Ben is conveying his daughter across the desert to present her to a wealthy merchant already possessed of thirteen wives. The young lady doesn't like the idea at all and so she encourages a wandering Bedouin to steal her. This appears rather trite, but it is treated very well.

The desert scenes and the photography are excellent, while capable work is done by Myrtle Gonzalez, Fred Church and Val Paul. Lynn Reynolds wrote and directed.

"Just Kitty." (Imp. Fri., May 5.)—The little ward of the millionaire saves his fortune from a scheming nephew and his accomplice. Edith Roberts plays the ward very well, while the picture as a whole, though quite conventional, is pleasant. Robert Hill wrote and directed.

"The Leap." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 6.)—Another of Henry McRae railroad dramas written by Harvey Gates. It concerns rival business concerns with the son and daughter of each millionaire very much in love with one another. The subject builds to a good climax wherein a wreck is narrowly averted. Lee Hill and L. C. Shumway appear in the respective roles of hero and heavy.

"A Perfect Match." (Joker. Sat., May 6.)—Through the medium of a fortune teller, the defeated rival poisons the lovers toward one another and wins the girl for himself. William Franey, Gale Henry and Milburn Moranti are featured in this reel, which is rather lifeless at the outset but fairly funny at the end. The subtitles furnished by Roy Clements aim at humor and are partially successful.

"The Marriage of Arthur." (Laemmle. Two reels. Sun., May 7.)—A Rupert Julian release not yet shown for review.

"Scaling the Jungfrau." (Rex. Sun., May 7.)—This beautiful scenic was shown at the Globe theatre, New York, with "The Dumb Girl of Portici." Its snow scenes are very pretty, while the educational value of the reel is great. The photography is good.

"Mr. Buddy Briggs, Burglar." (L-Ko. Sun., May 7.)—Showing the various efforts that a henpeck makes to amuse himself with friends not to his wife's liking, while that lady has been purporting to go on a trip. Dave Morris is in this and neither he nor the comedy is as good as he can be and his pictures can be. Others are Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris.

DAL CLAWSON PERFECTS MANY NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC EFFECTS

Dal Clawson, now in charge of photographing Thomas H. Ince productions made under the direction of Charles Giblyn, has recently added several new effects to his long list of successes in this line of work. In "Not My Sister," an early release, he introduces a new lighting iris effect which both diffuses and irises the image out. Another double exposure process Mr. Clawson has perfected irises down a complete scene to the size of a pin-head in each frame, while at the same time another complete scene starting from the size of a pin-head, is enlarged to cover the entire frame. These two innovations elicited many congratulations from members of the producing staff when they were shown in the studio projecting room, and add materially to Clawson's record as an inventive genius of intricate photographic effects. Mr. Clawson has perfected several other mechanical devices which will be used in coming subjects. One is a candle which has sufficient lighting power to illuminate a scene and will be used in the coming Frank Keenan production. In this subject also will be seen results obtained by mechanical dissolving devices whereby several visions traveling across the frame are dissolved out by another scene taking its place.

Rialto Marks New Era in Theatre Construction

Design of New York's Latest House Devoted Exclusively to Motion Picture Shows Radical Departure in the Conception and Erection of Amusement Places—From the Top of the Building to the Basement the Rialto Embodies Unusually Striking Features—Managers Will Find It a Model for Future Theatres

By James McKenzie

THE opening of the new Rialto Theatre in New York City on the site formerly occupied by Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre serves to mark the beginning of a new era in the designing and construction of motion picture theatres. The design of this addition to the list of theatres devoted exclusively to the exhibition of motion pictures illustrates a very radical departure from the time honored customs and precedents established in the construction of theatre buildings. Thomas W. Lamb of 644 Eighth avenue, New York City, the architect, has produced a house which will tend to revolutionize the designing and development of the motion picture theatre.

He has deliberately departed from the usual ideas, and the scheme which he has presented to the lovers of motion pictures shows what can be done with an auditorium planned and designed according to an entirely new standard.

In co-operation with the architect, Mr. Russell B. Smith of 305 Madison avenue, the consulting engineer, together with Mr. Hall, have worked out the construction problems in heating, ventilation, lighting, etc., which are perfect in operation and embody many new ideas for the complete comfort of the patrons.

Represents the Last Word in Construction

As the design and construction represent the last word in the development of the motion picture theatre so the production of the pictures themselves will be an entirely new artistic achievement which has been made possible by original mechanical devices demanded by Mr. Rothapfel, the managing director, whose genius and imagination are in a large degree responsible for the fine result. The artistic effects, especially by means of the lighting, will be a revelation to those who have thought the possibilities already exhausted.

When it is realized that manufacturing companies all over the country are specializing in materials and devices for the exclusive use of motion picture theatres, and that a choice has been made from the best among these for the Rialto Theatre, it is possible to imagine to some extent the high degree of perfection that has been attained in this theatre.

A description of the exterior is hardly necessary except for the large electric sign over the entrance, designed and made by the Norden Electric Sign Company, which is the central and dominating feature of the entire façade, the architectural treatment of the rest of the front being subordinated to it. The walls are of a buff brick, with buff terra cotta trimmings. The wall surfaces are kept very simple and plain. The lower part of the sign is in the form of a pin-wheel containing about 400 lights of various colors. This revolves rapidly and a stream of fire like a rocket shoots from the edge of it, goes over the roof, turns, and strikes the letter "R" of the sign, when it bursts into stars and sparks. This is repeated until each letter is lighted. When each rocket leaves the pin-wheel a hissing sound, made by compressed air, gives the actual noise and appearance of fire works. After the entire sign is lighted, it all goes out, and then the word "Rialto" lights up alone in a different color; then the entire sign goes out and all the rockets go off at one time, lighting the sign "Rialto" again in a different color. The sign contains about 2,200 10-watt lamps. All the apparatus for operating this sign such as flashes, air compressor, etc., was

There is also a vertical sign reading "Rialto." This sign is about 45 feet high and has a flower pot fire work effect.

On these signs color caps, made by Betts and Betts, have been used. These color caps are used on all the large roof displays in New York and throughout the country.

In addition to these signs attractive torches are placed along the parapet wall. Thus it will be seen the color and life of the exterior is obtained not by the architecture, but through the living active agency of electric lights arranged in a spirited free design.

Projecting Brick Frame at Entrance

The entrance is marked by a slightly projecting architectural frame of brick, surmounted by a cornice with a large marquis extending over the sidewalk the full width of the entrance.

The lobby occupies but a small portion of street frontage on Seventh avenue, the rest being given over to store space. This entrance lobby is a very attractive room about 12 feet deep and 30 feet wide with a low segmental vaulted ceiling in plaster. The design of the ceiling is in the Adam Style in rectangular and circular panels These are left light against the background of gilt. The walls are of imitation Havertino stone, and the floor is of white and brown marble mosaic. At each end of the lobby are unusually attractive ticket booths, equipped with the latest electrically controlled ticket selling devices made by the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company. In connection with this, there have been installed by Caille Brothers Company of Detroit, Mich., automatic changemakers, which are wonderfully quick in operation. In combination with the ticket selling machine they enable the management to handle double the crowd in much less time than would be possible without the devices. This last named company are also putting in specially designed and finished ticket choppers.

The display frames which are placed on both sides of the building and in the lobby are attractive in design, being especially designed for their position by S. Marken Torff.

The foyer is one of the most successful features in the design of the house, as will be seen in the illustration which also takes in mezzanine. The effect of this lobby is elliptical as the upper part or second floor level is curved and the ceiling is treated as an ellipse. The stairs at either side, which are about 10 feet wide, go up under arches and curve around following the elliptical form of the upper part. The first level of the balcony, as is also shown in the illustration, has an attractive balustrade with flower boxes placed along the top, giving a refreshing and pleasing appearance on entering. The floral decoration here as well as that about the orchestra was supplied by the General Flower Decorating Company, and was chosen with an eye to color effects.

This balcony has large comfortable lounges and chairs with reading lights, where the patrons may retire. The hat and coat checking rooms are placed at the top of the stairs in the sloping space under the balcony. The ceiling, an artistic Adam design, has a large elliptical coffre finished in gold leaf and colored medallions of graceful figures. Hidden behind the mouldings of this are the electric which are thus reflected down.

Six Marble Water Fountains Set in Alcoves

Six marble water fountains, set in alcoves, are to be found in the lobby and balcony promenade, where cool sparkling water may be obtained—an especial boon in the coming warm weather. Individual paper cups are provided at each fountain, being dispensed automatically from attractive, dust-proof hermetically sealed Health Kup Vendors. The paper cups are the well-known "health kups," a non-paraffined bevelled edge, sanitary individual cup.

The treads of the stairs and trimming are a beautiful grey Tennessee marble. The pink Tennessee used in the theatre as well as all marble and slate was supplied by the Eastern New York Marble Co.

In the interior the principle feature of this new house is the colonnade which has taken the place of the usual stage and proscenium opening. The usual stage setting with which the American theatregoing public is so familiar has been entirely done away with and in its place has been substituted the colonnade consisting of three openings with the picture screen set directly in the center. The architectural treatment of the side walls has been carried along and continued around the colonnade so as to give the so-called picture setting a harmonious treatment with the rest of the auditorium.

The floor of the semi-circular space formed by the colonnade has been very effectively divided by a series of platforms to accommodate the musicians and singers, while the curved ceiling above the colonnade forms an ideal sounding board and produces perfect acoustics.

When this new idea was originally conceived by the architect he was confronted with a very difficult problem in the solution of an ornamental treatment which would properly decorate and present his ideas in finished form. The colonnade itself is essentially monumental, but when consideration is taken of the fact that it is a feature of the indoor treatment and the usual style could not be adopted, consequently, a very bold, but at the same time delicate, "Adams Treatment" was determined upon and effectively carried out. While the design itself presents simple and sturdy lines, the ornament is very delicate in scale and is pleasing in its effect. By skillful treatment the usual bare affect of the Adam style is eliminated in its place has been substituted a delicate treatment which greatly enhances the simple lines and bold features of the design itself.

In this colonnaded setting the Lee Lash Studios have arranged rich drapery curtains, and behind them colorful scenes. The curtains can be drawn aside at will, together or singly, disclosing enchanting vistas of picturesque country.

The selection of a color scheme which would properly complete the Adam design presented an unusual problem since the colors which this treatment usually calls for would produce an affect that would be entirely too cold for an auditorium and which would lack the atmosphere which has always been so essential in a well designed theatre. The solution of this problem was finally determined by disregarding the coloring of the walls and ceilings

Rialto Theatre Projection and Operating Room

The Equipment in New York's Latest Picture House Is "the Last Word" in Perfected Devices for the Booth, and Is Likely to Become "the First Word" for All Other Theatres to Follow—Rothapfel, Bowen and Hallberg Planned the Arrangement and the Apparatus for Installation

By J. H. Hallberg

ON the evening of Friday, April 21, the new Rialto theatre, justly termed "The Temple of the Motion Picture" under the direction of S. L. Rothapfel, was opened to a specially invited select first-night audience. It is a noteworthy fact that at last the motion picture theatre has come into its own. The opening of the Rialto in a blaze of grandeur is typical of the tremendous strides which have been made in the exhibition of motion pictures.

Naturally as the Rialto is devoted exclusively to motion pictures, the projection end of the equipment has received the most careful and expert consideration.

It is now almost six years since S. L. Rothapfel made the statement that he had conceived a system of projection and a method of exhibiting motion pictures which in his opinion would revolutionize the art. He believed that music in motion pictures was a most important adjunct and that by proper arrangement of scenic and sound effects, the motion picture would be made more than the rival of the regular stage productions.

Mr. Rothapfel stated at that time that he wished co-operation in the development of certain improved devices which he had in mind. Among the improvements there were shutters for moving picture machines; special dissolving apparatus; special spot lights; special stereopticons with slides and color effects; the like of which had up to that time not been produced. One of the large Keith theatres in Philadelphia had just been equipped with his improved system of projection and exhibition and he wanted to secure certain type of apparatus, lenses and accessories to produce the results which he had in mind.

About the same time he became associated with Albee and Murdock of the United Booking Offices, in what was called the Motion Photo Plane Company, through which organization the exhibition of motion pictures in almost a hundred of the largest theatres in this country and Canada, was revolutionized.

Results Justify Experiments

Many experiments were conducted and the results obtained on the screen more than justified the pains, troubles and the expenses involved. There was no detail too small for consideration. The revolving shutters were tuned up to the highest possible efficiency. The condensing lenses used were of the highest grade and quality obtainable at that time, some of them being made to order. The lenses were most carefully selected and tested. Special lugs and asbestos cables were designed and provided to secure perfect contact and great flexibility. Carbon holders on arc lamps were made larger and heavier, in fact, many minor improvements were made at Mr. Rothapfel's suggestions, during the time he was director of the Motion Picture Photo Plane Company.

One apparatus in particuler advocated by Mr. Rothapfel, was a double dissolving spot light with variable focus lenses which would permit two independent illuminated fields of light on any part of the stage, both fields of light to be under absolute control of the operator, to be variable in shape, size and color and to be adjustable together in any direction or independently of each other. The wonderful effects which have been worked out with this arrangement can be seen at the Rialto.

Later on, Mr. Rothapfel made his big strike at Minneapolis, where his DeLuxe motion picture exhibit attracted the attention of every citizen of Minneapolis as well as the entire state of Minnesota. Here he received special endorsement by the governor of the state and by ministers and heads of educational institutions for his wonderfully clean and up-to-date exhibits.

It was only natural that New York would take notice of Mr. Rothapfel's success at Minneapolis and as a result he was called here by Mr. Norton, President of the Photoplay Theatres Company, who had taken over the Regent theatre, 116th street and Seventh Avenue, New York City. Here Mr. Rothapfel had his first opportunity to introduce some of his more modern ideas. The success of the Regent caused other interests to employ Mr. Rothapfel for the Strand theatre, erected at Broadway and Forty-seventh street. Later others, appreciating his work, came to the front and offered to build the finest and most expensive motion picture theatre in the world—the Rialto.

In this new house Mr. Rothapfel was determined to have the best projection ever installed anywhere. As a result of the consultations between Mr. Rothapfel, Lester Bowen, the engineers of construction and the writer, the motion picture projection-booth at the Rialto was planned and laid out as follows:

Booth Is Twenty by Eight Feet Wide

The booth measures 20 feet wide by 8 feet deep and between 10 feet and 12 feet high. At one side there is a room measuring 8 feet by 8 feet with the full height of the operating room, constructed for the motor generators and rheostats, controlling the projector arcs. At the other end of the operating room there is another 8 foot by 8 foot room for the rewinding equipment and for the use of the operators.

Fig. 1, illustrates one end of the operating rom with the door, leading to the motor generator and rheostat room, open.

Beginning our description of the apparatus installed from the left of the both to the right, I will proceed as follows:

In Fig. 1, the first machine to the left is the Edison Super-Kinetoscope of the latest type with motor drive, fitted with Marlux lenses made by the Crown Optical Company, of Rochester, New York. The Edison Super-Kinetoscope machines supplied by the Picture Theatre Equipment Company were fully described in the December 18th issue of Motion Picture News in the Accessory Section.

Each projector is provided with an automatic arc controller made by the Speed Controller Company, of New York City. The arc controller is so sensitive and perfect in its operation that after the operator once sets the arc, it will be maintained constant within one volt and the operator does not need to pay any particular attention to the arc after it has once been set and started, excepting, of course, to see that the spot is properly centered upon the aperture as it may shift slightly up or down if one of the carbons should burn faster than the other as happens sometimes in changing carbons. The second machine is also an Edison Super-Kinetoscope.

The third machine illustrated by Fig. 2 is a specially constructed Power's double dissolving stereopticon made by the Nicholas Power Company, New York City. The illustration shows Mr. Lester Bowen operating the special dissolver which is provided with larger condensers than usual, to permit special slides as required for the scenic effects at the Rialto.

The fourth machine installed is a double dissolving stereopticon with multi-focus lenses and many other special features as illustrated in Fig. 3.

In the introduction to this article, I referred to Mr. Rothapfel's desire some years ago, to secure just such a projector for scenic effects, but not until now has his desire been realized. The double dissolving projector illustrated in Fig. 3 was made up and designed under the direction of Mr. Rothapfel assisted by Mr. Bowen, by the Baird Motion Picture Machine Company, of New York, and the mechanical details of the design are the efforts of Messrs. Emory and Saunders of the Baird Motion Picture Machine Company.

Illustration Fig. 3, shows this wonderful projector which will be described separately later on. It accomplishes all of the features asked for by Mr. Rothapfel, several years ago.

The next apparatus in the operating room part of which can be seen on the rear wall, is a large and complete switchboard upon which there is mounted all of the necessary volt and ampere meters, fuses and switches for the main control of the entire installation. I state main control, because there are special control panels for each motion picture projector with individual volt and ampere meters and current regulators, for each arc within easy observation of the operator.

In the motor generator room, as can be seen through the open door in the rear wall, there are installed two Hallberg 20th Century Motor Generators, built especially for the Rialto theatre. The motor generators operate on the circuit of the United Electric Light and Power Company, supplying 220 volt, 2 phase, 60 cycle alternating current, for the 15 H. P. motors, each one of which forms part of the motor generator sets, the direct current end of which is capable of a delivery of any amperage from 50 to 150 at any voltage betwen 50 and 70.

The motor generators are under the control of the operator by means of special control panels one of which is illustrated in Fig. 4, mounted next to the outlook opening for each motion picture projector. The panel with the ampere meter for the first machine can be seen on the left hand side of Fig. 1, and the second panel, can be seen just under the left hand portion of the second machine lamphouse.

In describing Fig. 4, I may state that at the left is the volt meter and at the right the ampere meter and below is mounted the field controller for the motor generators by means of which the amperes can be adjusted instantly at the will of the operator, without introducing resistance in series with the generator and the arc. At the Rialto, it is intended to keep the motor generators operating all of the time, but when one of the machines is not in service, the motor generator supplying said machine, has its field winding disconnected by means of the small snap switch below the instruments.

The disconnecting or breaking of the field circuit reduces the losses in the motor generator to a minimum while it is running idle. This was decided upon because it was thought best not to restart the motor generators between shows, as the losses are really very small and it makes a smoother installation.

On the M. P. projectors, Fig. 1, there can be seen an intercon-

GENIUS OF EXHIBITORS INSTALLS THE AUTOMATICKET SELLER

The RIALTO THEATRE will have an Automaticket Seller installed by Mr. Rothapfel after competitive tests of ticket selling systems.

Mr. Rothapfel knows the value of system—the necessity of keeping an absolute check on receipts. He knows that patrons must be taken care of as fast as they come to the box office and that a machine that will do all these things will pay for itself over and over again.

The Automaticket Seller issues one, two, three, four or five tickets by a single pressure on a button. It makes an absolute record of the sale. It makes no mistakes, wastes no time, removes temptation from the box office, GIVES YOU CONTROL OF YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

Send us a sample of the ticket you are using and we will tell you which is the right machine for your use and give you details of an easy payment plan for buying it.

necting flat lever arrangement, running above the operator's head, but within his reach between the two machines. This arrangement operates a large Iris dissolver made by Kleigl Brothers, of New York, and is attached to the condenser mount on the machines, which permits the dissolving of one picture into the other and at the same time acts as a dowser. This is a distinctly new arrangement put on at the suggestion of Mr. Bowen, chief operator.

Fire Shutters Operate on New Plan

The fire shutters protecting the openings in front of the booth are operated on a new and novel principle devised by the writer and executed by Mr. Bowen. The arrangement is illustrated at the upper part of Fig. 1, and comprises a long pipe running the entire length of the projection room, supported on suitable brackets. There are pins in the pipe immediately above each opening upon which the fire proof shutter hangs, by means of a chain and hook.

This rod, which when it is in fixed position, has all of the pins holding the shutters in the vertical position is held there by a rope arrangement, illustrated above the rod in Fig. 1, and in various places the rope is cut and held together by the usual form of fuse. The fuses can be seen immediately above the Edison machine number 2. In case of fire the flame will come up above the magazine, melt the fuse which severs the rope which in turn allows the iron rod to turn, due to the weight of the shutters, hanging on the pins and as the pins come down, the hooks come off, and the shutters drop. This arrangement is by far the most modern of its kind and is very simple and easy of installation.

There is a complete intercommunicating telephone system putting the operator in direct connection with any part of the theatre.

There is also a signal system controllable by the director, which lights various colored lights behind bulls-eyes or lenses, set in the wall in front of the operator for the signalling focus, framing and speed changes etc.

In the motor generator room the rheostats are placed on shelves. There are two for the Baird dissolving spot light, two for the Powers dissolving stereopticon and one for each of the M. P. projectors. All are controllable from the main switchboard on the rear wall of the operating room. In other words, the various steps of the rheostats are connected to a set of dial switches on the switchboard, making it unnecessary for the operator to leave the room when effecting a change in the amperes at the arc.

The large rheostats for the moving picture machines are merely put in for emergency and are connected to the Edison 3 wire D. C. system which is also brought into the operating room for the express use of emergency and for the dissolving lamps.

The ventilation of the operating room is the best of any I know of. There is a large window opening on the street in the rear of the wall, giving perfect day light over the entire room and plenty of fresh air. In the ceiling of the operating room there are three, 18 in. exhaust fans with speed controllers. In the motor generator and rheostat room there is installed a large typhoon fan, about 5 feet in diameter, directly connected to an electric motor with speed controller. This large fan will always insure fresh and cool air supply to the motor generator and rheostat room as well as in the space above the theatre ceiling with which it connects.

The distance from the lens to the screen is 127 feet and the screen which is of special construction and design measures 17 feet wide, and forms part of one of the most elaborate and beautiful stage settings, ever produced which in conjunction with the beautiful lighting effects forms a combination of pleasing surprises which must be seen in order to be realized.

The operating room is in direct charge of Lester W. Bowen, chief operator; Ivan W. Bowen; and M. A. Kricorian, assistant operators, all members of Local 306, I. A. T. S. E.

The Messrs. Bowen were originally in charge of the operating department at the Regent Theatre and later on were in charge of the Strand projection and I. W. Bowen, also had charge of the projection at the Liberty Theatre during the exhibit of "The Birth of a Nation" and later on was connected with the Knickerbocker Theatre, where Triangle Films have been shown during the

and by placing dependence upon the lighting for the proper color effects. Thus the beautiful color scheme of the interior anyway which consists of golden brownish and ivory tones may be changed into reddish, bluish or brighter golden tones by the use of the various electric switches. This is the wonderful novelty of these decorations, which were under the personal charge of Mr. William Sckart, of the Sckart Studios, who has gained a wide reputation for his successful theatre decorating.

Consequently the entire auditorium has been wired on three circuits giving a combination of amber, red and blue lighting which when blended together will give any combinaton of colors desired. This, of course, is a feature which has long been practiced in the production of stage effects, but it is the first time that its use has been attempted in the auditorium proper. However, the elimination of the stage and the designing of the picture colonnade as part of the auditorium itself made it necessary for the lighting effects to be carried out through the entire auditorium.

Kliegl Brothers were called on to furnish electric screen equipment consisting of a number of three-color strips and also a number of special 1,000 watt bunch lights on one stand for dimmer equipment so gradual transition from day to night can be obtained. Also special reflectors for illumination of music.

Mr. Levy, the president of the Edwards Electrical Construction Company, who designed and installed the electrical work in this theatre, stated when interviewed, that he was particularly impressed by Mr. Rothapfel that the switchboard, dimmers, lighting effects, etc., must be such that they can be played upon and directed the same as a musical director would play upon and direct an orchestra, and with this end in view the management has spared neither trouble nor expense to achieve its object.

The combination of switchboard and dimmers is such that were the house and stage large enough they would suffice for the production of grand opera. The concert stage is provided with foot lights, and there are border and proscenium strips, and all the stage lighting is in four colors, with a dimmer for the operation of each color in each border, in each foot, and in each proscenium strip, together with stage pockets for each color, each of which is on a dimmer. The house has the unique arrangement of having every outlet in three colors with a dimmer for each section of outlets and for each color. This will provide for dimming and color effects without number.

The seats received careful study to secure the greatest possible comfort of the patrons of the Rialto, which is a key note in the equipment of any theatre. They were manufactured by the Wisconsin Seating Company, of New London, Wis. The resign of these chairs are plain throughout, curved to fit the body, are full upholstered in Rogeroid and have spring construction. A new device used on these chairs indicative of the rapid progress made in special equipment for theatres, and one of the latest improvements both for comfort and safety is a self-raising device, manufactured by the Self-Raising Chair Company, of 220 West 42d

"EVERY ROW A CLEAR AISLE"

Sectional view of Lincoln Theatre, Union Hill, N. J.

No, the seats in above photograph were not raised by attendants after a performance. They rose automatically as soon as vacated by patrons.

You keep your aisle-space clear. It is just as easy to keep your rows of seats clear. The EISNER Self-Raising Seat Appliance makes "Every Row A Clear Aisle."

Whether the seats in your theatre are old or new, we can convert them into Self-Raising Opera Chairs by attaching the EISNER Appliance.

Old style lowered opera chairs mean discomfort to your patrons and an obstruction in time of emergency. The EISNER Appliance assures Convenience and Safety by furnishing clear aisles at all times.

The Rialto, S. L. Rothapfel's "latest and best," represents the ultra-modern theatre. That's why it is equipped with the EISNER Appliance.

Rothapfel means "Theatre Progress." He has a genius for picking winners. He has picked the EISNER Appliance. You can't go wrong by following this "tip" of a progressive leader.

THE SELF-RAISING SEAT APPLIANCE CO.

street, which causes the seat to rise automatically as soon as vacated by the occupant. The advantages are obvious for it means a clear aisle and greater ease in reaching the exits.

The depressing effect which is ordinarily the result of the long overhang of a big balcony has been cleverly eliminated by the use of a mezzanine floor with a promenade from which the occupants of the upper floor can look down into the orchestra foyer. This is a feature originated by the architect, Thomas W. Lamb, and which he has probably developed to its best advantage.

The space beneath the balcony which was formerly wasted in the designing of the old-time theatres has been utilized by cloak rooms, retiring rooms and toilets, etc., which formerly took up so much valuable area on the lower floor.

The unusual feature in this design is the fact that the auditorium can be readily converted into the usual type of theatre with a stage by eliminating the colonnade.

Shallow Dome in Ceiling

A very effective feature is a large shallow dome in the ceiling over the center of the house. This is covered with gold leaf and the Adam treatment of medallions. Sixteen chandeliers hang from its outer circumference and one large chandelier from the center. By using the different colored lights this central ceiling feature may be made to glow like fire so intensely that the detail is lost, giving the effect of a huge burning sun over the heads of the audience. Blues or yellows may be used with varying degrees of intensity to produce similar effect, in these colors. These lighting fixtures as well as those throughout the rest of the theatre were designed at the studios and made at the factory of the Kathodian Bronze Works.

The main fixture in the center of the dome, as well as the smaller ones, are designed to carry out the indirect scheme of lighting, and consists of a lower bowl seven feet in diameter, and an upper bowl three feet in diameter, in which the lamps are located. The light is reflected by means of mirror reflectors to the ceiling, giving a soft subdued light with no glare whatever. All of these main fixtures are equipped with an equal number of red, blue and white lamps, on separate circuits.

On the side walls in the auditorium and balcony are three light candle brackets with silk shades over the lamps, which also give a soft subdued light and at the same time are very artistic and ornamental in appearance. In the vestibule are three semi-indirect fixtures which consist of amber colored leaded art glass bowl, supported by a metalized band, in which are cast eight wedgewood medallions, with white figure and blue background. These bowls are placed close to the ceiling, part of the light coming through the art glass and part being reflected to the ceiling, giving a very pleasing effect. The fixtures under the balcony and on the rear of the main ceiling are similar to those in the vestibule.

In the soffit of the balcony are placed fourteen oval leaded panels, flush with the ceiling, with lamps in back of the glass, which are very effective and pleasing to the eye.

At either side of the proscenium arch, electrical fountains are given a conspicuous position yet out of range of the projecting lens. These novelties which now form a prominent part of the scheme of the many picture theatres were made by the Electric Fountain Company of New York.

Rialto Installs a Minusa

It is only fitting and proper that New York's newest and America's finest and most perfect Photoplay Theatre should install a Minusa Gold Fibre Screen.

Other Rothapfel Theatres — the Knickerbocker—the Academy of Music—the 44th Street Theatre, in New York—the Fenway and Boston Theatres in Boston and the Colonial in Chicago have all installed Minusa Gold Fibre Screens during the past year.

When an experienced exhibitor like Mr. Rothapfel insists upon Minusa Gold Fibre Screens—surely there must be a reason.

April 14th, 1916.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.
564 W. Randolph St., Chicago,

Gentlemen:---This is our twentieth week in operating the Merrill and it is the opinion of everyone that we are getting the best projection in the city with the new Motiograph, which we consider superior to any machine in the market.

You may use this letter to tell others of our success with the Motiograph.

Yours very truly,
MERRILL THEATRE CO.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

86—What other means may be used for increasing or decreasing the reactance of a choke-coil besides cutting in or cutting out turns or decreasing the air-gap?

Ans.—You have been told that a choke-coil is a voltage producer but that the voltage or current produced by the magnetic reaction is of such nature that it will oppose the supply voltage and in consequence thereof, reduce the ampere flow or limit and control the ampere flow at the arc or other load, connected in series with the choke-coil and the line. The reactance of the choke-coil depends upon the strength of the magnetic field and upon the number of turns of wire and the amperes flowing through the turns. Therefore, the maximum choking effect is produced when the greatest current strength and number of wire turns are influencing the iron core.

Suppose you have a coil 10 inches long which contains 100 turns of wire. Suppose this coil surrounds a laminated iron core, 2 inches square and 10 inches long; then you will secure the maximum reactance from this combined core and coil when the core is all the way in the coil.

Suppose you move the coil relative to the core so that only 50 turns will influence the iron core; then your reactance will be considerably reduced and more current will flow through the coil, other conditions remaining the same in the circuit.

Having impressed this fact upon your mind, you will understand how an additional means of control is obtained with a choke-coil by merely moving the iron core or the coil relative to each other.

87—How would you illustrate by diagram the adjustable feature of a choke-coil and what takes place when the coil and core are displaced, relative to each other?

Ans.—Fig. 43 illustrates a laminated core "A" surrounded by a solenoid or magnetizing coil "B," provided with terminals "C" and "D" to allow the coil to be connected in series with an A. C. source of supply and an electric arc or similar load.

In operation the current entering at "C" will magnetize the core "A"; within the fraction of a second the current has, however, been reversed and now enters at terminal "D" the opposite direction. During the first instant when the current entered at "C" you will recollect the core "A" became magnetized. Now, during the second instant, when the current is reversed in the coil, the magnetic charge in the iron core stored or created therein by the first impulse becomes effective and as you might say, discharges itself on the peak of its strength during the instant the current ceases to flow as happens during reversal of the current, and it is this magnetic discharge of the core "A" which creates within the coil "B" a counter electro motive force or opposition to the current coming in from the line in the opposite direction. These two factors, the incoming current which tries to go through the coil without opposition and the stored magnetic charge in the core created by the previous current flow in the coil act as a balance or choking effect which limits the current flow to a fixed value and that value is maximum when the coil entirely surrounds the full length of the core as illustrated in Fig. 43.

The dotted lines "E" are intended to show the magnetic lines of force, through the core "A" and complete the magnetic circuit on the outside of the coil as illustrated by the dotted lines "F F." The dotted lines "F F" indicate the magnetic leakage which makes possible the sluggishness or cushioning or regulating effect which is so essential for the control of an electric arc.

In Fig. 44, you have the same coil and core but with the core moved up so that only a portion of the turns of the coil surround the core which means that a lesser number of ampere turns are effective and therefore the magnetism in core "A" is less and in consequence thereof, its kicking power and consequently the reactance or resistance of the device is lowered and a greater number of amperes will flow over the arc.

Striking Effects Produced by Ingenious Devices

Cameramen Are No Longer Compelled to Construct These Contrivances—These Attachments for the "Box" to Obtain Artistic Film Production Are Now on the Market—Designers in Charge of Mechanical Departments of Optical Companies Are on the Lookout for New Ideas

IN most all motion pictures made at the present time the work of the producer is amplified by certain effects secured by devices attached to the camera. Cameramen have formerly been compelled to construct these devices or have them made, but the mechanical department of the C. P. Goerz American Optical Company appreciating the importance of such attachments in artistic film production, have designed a number of devices which fulfill all requirements along these lines.

Best known of all dissolving attachments is the round closing shutter or circular vignetter shown in Fig. 1. Owing to the shape of the blades this round closing shutter can be completely closed, not even a pinhole opening remaining. The true value of this will be appreciated by those who have formerly used such a device which did not close entirely, or could only be made to do so, by a small tab of metal on one of the diaphragm leaves which shows plainly in the picture as the circle closes down.

This round closing shutter is generally mounted on the "sliding base" as shown but can also be supplied with three large thumbscrews placed on its circumference in which form it is readily attached to the sunshades of many cameras without special fitting.

At the front of the round closing shutter in Fig. 1 may be seen the Goerz Mask Box, which supersedes the large double exposure box formerly supplied. This Mask Box has a rectangular opening exactly proportional to the dimensions of a film image, although, of course, somewhat larger. Masks or mats cut to any shape may be inserted before the opening in the Mask Box, by means of a slit which may be noticed at the side. The channel for the masks

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication

CALIFORNIA

A THEATRE is being erected just across the county line from San Francisco, in San Mateo County, on the location formerly occupied by the Peninsula theatre, which was burned last year.

S. H. Levin has awarded a contract at about $4,000 for additions and alterations to the Haight Street theatre, San Francisco. A balcony and new fire escapes are to be installed.

Moving picture equipment is to be installed shortly in the Christian Church at Wheatland.

Lydia Dugan, of Belmont, has awarded a contract for the construction of a theatre and store building on Broadway, near Washington street, Redwood City. Will H. Hoepke, 46 Kearny street, San Francisco, is the architect.

A one-story moving picture theatre, with a seating capacity of about four hundred, will be erected at Twenty-ninth and Church streets, San Francisco, by Rosa & Bodania. The architects are Welsh & Carey, Merchants' National Bank building.

Anderson and Wood have made arrangements to open an airdome at Chico at an early date, and will close their two theatres for the summer.

The house formerly known as the Creation theatres, Los Angeles, closed for a number of weeks, has been leased by A. E. Beck, who was formerly connected with Los Angeles film exchanges as a salesman. He reopened the house last week.

Plans now being drawn by a Los Angeles architect providing for a theatre of a capacity of three thousand seats to be built at the corner of Seventh street and Grand avenue. The owners of this real estate advise that a lease has been made for this property for theatre purposes, but no information will be given as to who the owners or promoters are.

C. E. Clendenny, auditor at the David Horsley studios, has leased the Hoover theatre at Ninth and Hoover streets, Los Angeles, and took possession the first of this week. He has had considerable motion picture experience, and exchangemen predict that he will make this house, which has never been profitable, a success.

CANADA

According to a reliable authority an independent amusement company well known in Montreal as the operators of the Strand and New Regent theatres, have decided to open yet another theatre. This time the house will be in Westmount, the residential suburb of Montreal, and will be situated, it is said, at the corner of Victoria and Sherbrooke streets. From what can be learned the house will seat 1,500 people, and will be a fac-simile of the Majestic theatre, Detroit. It will be remembered that Mr. Nicholas is the president of this company, which has been one of the very few successful theatrical enterprises during the last two years in Canada.

C. E. Bailey, manager of the Majestic theatre at Victoria, B. C., has turned the house over to the owner, B. S. Heisterman, who will hereafter conduct it. Mr. Bailey, who formerly ran the Rex at Esquimalt, expects to leave for Calgary in the near future.

CONNECTICUT

Nathan M. Higbie has leased the Bristol theatre, Bristol, for two years at a rental of $1,800 a year.

The plans for the theatre which R. J. Jodoin will erect in Baltic have been completed. They call for dimensions of 40x100, of frame and stucco construction, with slag roof, steam heat, etc. It will have a balcony and the seating capacity of the entire theatre will be 750.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Harry Crandall formally opened the latest link in his theatre chain on April 15, this one being the Avenue Grand, Washington. The house had been newly decorated and made more commodious in many ways. A more attractive arrangement of lights has been instituted on the exterior and display posters and pictures have been well arranged. The Grand has a seating capacity of 1,000, with an attractive balcony. Mr. Crandall has inaugurated a uniform admission of ten cents, and is showing feature films. An orchestra of several pieces furnishes the music. The Grand is situated in a residential neighborhood, amid the homes of some of the first families of the Capital City. In this enterprise Mr. Crandall has associated with him J. P. Morgan, for many years manager of the Princess theatre. Mr. Morgan was the first exhibitor in the northeast section of the city.

GEORGIA

Abe Ginsburg, of Atlanta, has completed arrangements for the opening of a new motion picture theatre in Lagrange on May 1. This house, it is understood, will carry only the biggest features.

The New Grand is being pushed to completion in Lagrange by Market Brothers, the owners. Lagrange will thus have two new and big theatres not later than the first week in May.

Another theatre will soon be added to the ten photoplay houses now entertaining Atlanta fans. Work has been progressing rapidly on the building leased by W. T. Murray, Sig Samuels and George Pheles on Peachtree street, opposite Walton street, and it is expected that this new house will be ready for occupancy the early part of June.

ILLINOIS

Frank M. Francis has purchased the Majestic motion picture theatre at Charleston from John J. Barton.

The management of the Majestic theatre at Kewanee has recently made a number of improvements.

Adolph Linick announces that his firm, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, will resume active management of the Colonial theatre, Chicago. At no time have Jones, Linick & Schaefer ever given up the lease of the Colonial to any one, although reports to that effect have been circulated. In resuming the active direction of the Colonial, a feature picture policy will be installed and Norman E. Field will be the resident manager.

INDIANA

The management of the Vaudette theatre, Connersville, is putting in a new ventilating system. The nucleus of the system is in the dome of the theatre and is motor driven. Pure air will be supplied to the theatre every four minutes without any draft.

Henry M. Williams is having plans drawn for a four-story building which he contemplates erecting on his property on the east side of Calhoun street between Berry and Wayne streets, Fort Wayne. Plans for the proposed building, the greater part of which is to be erected for a moving picture theatre, are being drawn by Architect Harris, of Chicago.

IOWA

The Orpheum theatre at Ft. Madison recently changed hands. A. J. Schuchardt, former manager, has sold it to J. B. Bandalak.

KANSAS

W. S. Nelson and son have purchased the theatre at Great Bend formerly known as the old Fred Savage house. Fred Savage, now a well-known exhibitor of Kansas, formerly had this house, but relinquished it when he went to Hutchinson, his present location. Under the direction of Mr. W. S. Nelson, the Great Bend house is being entirely remodeled and improved, complete new machinery being installed and other features introduced.

KENTUCKY

The fair grounds at Erlanger have been sold to the Edgewood Photoplay Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, for $27,000. The grounds cover thirty-three acres. Several buildings will be erected, including an open air stage, property rooms and a scenic loft.

The Sardis Opera House, a new motion picture theatre at Sardis, opened April 14 under the management of J. M. Wheatley.

James L. Weed, manager of Keith's Louisville theatre, and formerly manager of the Mary Anderson theatre, has been transferred to Indianapolis as manager of the Keith theatre there. He has been succeded by N. S. Hastings, who has been manager of the Keith interests in Indianapolis. Before leaving Louisville, Mr. Weed was presented with a Knights Templar watch charm by the employes of the theatre.

The new Crystal theatre, recently completed at Bardstown, is one of the most up to date motion picture houses in that section of the state. It is entire fireproof, has a modern system of ventilation and a seating capacity of more than five hundred. The house is under the management of George Mann.

LOUISIANA

N. C. Scheppegrall opened his Northside theatre in Roman street, New Orleans, on April 7.

Another new suburban house in New Orleans is the Burdette Airdome, Burdette street and Carrollton avenue, which was opened by R. Green on April 12.

Earle Harris is the owner of a house which is planned for Broadway and Carrollton avenues, New Orleans. This house will be a decided addition to the extreme upper section of the city.

After numerous deals had been put through for the rehabilitation of the Old Dumaine theatre No. 2, a house in North Hagan avenue, New Orleans, a company headed by George R. Larrieu, of the Salmen Brick and Lumber Company, New Orleans, took over the house. They have completed reconstruction and opened with a feature program on Easter Sunday.

Sid Levy, old New Orleans exchange man, who recently built the Eugie theatre at Ursuline and Dorgenois streets, New Orleans, has sold out his interests to A. Thomas.

The Alvar theatre, Dauphine and Alvar streets, New Orleans, which has been closed for a year, has been opened by a company headed by Mr. Nix, and will run during the summer months, it is announced.

A six hundred seat house at Washington avenue and Prieur street, New Orleans, has been built and opened by Joseph Johnson.

Nothing more has been heard of a rumor that New Orleans is to get another $200,000 theatre in Canal street, to be built by New York capitalists, but the report is that the gentlemen interested in the project have not yet abandoned the idea.

The French Opera House, one of the most famous structures in New Orleans, and for scores of years the home of legitimate attractions, will be sold at public auction to satisfy the demands of insistent creditors.

Dan B. Monledous has purchased an interest in the Olympia theatre, New Orleans, from H. W. Eastman, and hereafter these two gentlemen will conduct the theatre on a partnership basis.

Gretna, across the river from New Orleans, has a new attraction, the Electric Park, under the management of Alvin Foster. A number of amusements have been provided. Moving pictures will be run on Sundays and holidays. The opening date was Easter Sunday.

Ernst Boehringer, proprietor of the Triangle theatre in New Orleans, a legitimate house converted to a picture place some time ago, is about to build a large and modern moving picture theatre in Lake Charles, the northern metropolis of the state.

John Sheppard opened his new suburban theatre at Cortez and Cleveland streets, New Orleans, on Easter Sunday. He has named it The Star.

MAINE

William Henry, of Mars Hill, has removed his picture show from the new Hussy theatre to the old York opera house.

MARYLAND

Plans have been filed by J. J. Valentini for a $5,000 motion picture theatre, 32x90 feet, to be erected at Nos. 2618 and 2620 Harford avenue, Baltimore.

MASSACHUSETTS

Plans have been prepared for a new moving picture theatre at West Lynn at the corner of Holland and Western avenues, near Breed square. When completed it will make quite an addition to that part of the busy ward where the General Electric interests center.

MISSISSIPPI

Fred Abbley, well known Mississippi exhibitor, will open his second house in Gulfport on May 1. It is an airdome.

MICHIGAN

Paul Ferrell, of Grand Rapids, has purchased property in Ionia, and plans to erect thereon a theatre seating 1,000 people. His son, Russell Ferrell, will have the management.

Architects Varney and Varney, Detroit, are preparing plans for a theatre and dance hall building.

The new Palace theatre, Saginaw, owned by the Hippodrome Amusement Company, comprising the Hoffman Brothers, of Detroit, opened Monday, April 24. It seats 1,084 people. Ivory and gold is the scheme of decoration. W. V. Newkirk is manager.

The Star theatre at Calumet will be enlarged by a thirty-foot addition, and will be redecorated throughout. John Panninen is one of the proprietors.

D. S. Scoffern announces his intention to build an eight hundred seat motion picture theatre in Niles. He will not operate the theatre, but plans to lease it out to responsible parties.

George E. Murphy, of the Lion theatre, Western avenue, Muskegon, has purchased the building and will remodel the theatre. The seating capacity will be increased, the entrance will be remodeled and both the exterior and interior will be redecorated. This work will be done some time during the summer months.

C. Howard Crane, architect, has let the contract to the Frank Farrington Company on the Rialto theatre to be erected at the corner of Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenues, Detroit, for the Boulevard Theatre Company, of which J. C. Ritter is president and general manager.

C. Howard Crane is now accepting bids for the construction of the new Oakland theatre, Pontiac. It will be amphitheatre in style and will cost upwards of $100,000. It will seat 1,800. The owners look for its completion about September 1.

MISSOURI

The Melba Amusement Company of St. Louis has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $50,000, in order to extend the operations to include the building of a new theatre on Grand avenue and Miami street, at a cost of about $100,000. The Melba airdome, which was opened last summer by the Melba company, produced enough business in spite of adverse weather conditions during the airdome season, to warrant the building of the new theatre, which will be one of the largest and most pretentious on the South Side, and which will seat 2,500 persons. Construction has begun so as to allow plenty of time to complete the theatre by the time the coming airdome season closes. William C. Neubauer, Mollie Neubauer and Gus Bauer are the officers of the Melba company.

The Colonial theatre, Thirty-ninth and Woodland streets, Kansas City, has been sold to H. A. Curtin. A. W. Walker, former manager, has gone to his old home at Portland, which is the cause of the change. The theatre was in fine shape when the new manager took charge, and very few changes were necessary.

The Rex theatre, at Thirty-ninth and Main streets, Kansas City, has been sold by B. B. Saunders to Donald Frankenberger.

I. Malone is taking charge of the old theatre at Jamesport and is remodeling it with the intention of opening shortly. Mr. Malone, who is a former exhibitor, contemplates the first showing to be about May 1.

The Broadmour theatre, Thirty-fourth and Broadway street, Kansas City, has been sold by D. Donnice to C. H. McCann, booker in the Kansas City office of the Metro Exchange. Mr. McCann has remodeled and redecorated the house and has installed new machines until it is now one of the best equipped suburban theatres in the city.

Announcement has been made by the Alhambra Theatre Co., at Springfield, that improvements will be made on the Alhambra theatre that will give it a seating capacity of 1,800. This house and that of the Elks' Arcade, which are very close together, will be combined and a large attractive house made. Improvements

HALLBERG ANSWERS IN NEXT WEEK OF "NEWS"

OWING to the extra work put upon J. H. Hallberg this week by the opening of the new Rialto theatre, in New York, he has been unable to answer the letters of inquiry addressed to this department. These letters will have his careful attention, however, and will be answered in the next issue.

PERSISTENCE OF IMPRESSIONS AS RELATED TO MOTION PICTURES

By Herbert W. Andem

THE fundamental principle of motion picture photography is from the phenomenon that an impression of light once made upon the retina does not subside instantaneously. An electric spark is sensibly instantaneous; but the impression it makes upon the eye remains for some time after the spark has passed away. This interval of persistence varies with different persons and amounts to a sensible fraction of a second.

If, therefore, a succession of sparks follow each other at intervals less than the time which the impression endures, the separate impressions will unite to form a continuous light. This uniting of the separate impressions to form a continuous light can be given for the effect of a circle of light forming when one swings a small lighted stick of wood rapidly around in the form of a circle.

We know that there is only a point of light burning, but each position of this point revolving in a circle endures until the point has once more come into the same relative position, hence, there is the effect of a continuous band of light. From this cause, also, the spokes of a rapidly-rotating wheel blend together to form a shadowy surface. It also accounts for the fact that the spokes of a wheel revolve in the reversed order so often seen in motion pictures. The rate of taking the pictures to the relative positions of the spokes is such that the next impression comes just behind the preceding one, in the revolving wheel.

The Eye Not Perfect

The eye is by no means a perfect optical instrument. It suffers from spherical aberration; a scattered luminosity, more or less strong, always surrounding the defined images of luminous objects upon the retina. By this luminosity the image of the object is sensibly increased in size, but with ordinary illumination the scattered light is too feeble to be noticed. When, however, bodies are intensely illuminated, more espcially when the bodies are small, so that a slight extension of their images upon the retina becomes noticeable, such bodies appear larger than they really are. An incandescent lamp filament illustrates this fact very clearly. When the current is not flowing the carbon filament can hardly be seen even upon close inspection, but as soon as it becomes illuminous and intensely so, then the carbon filament appear of sensible dimensions and can be easily seen from at some distance.

This apparent increase of the true size of the object, when it is small and intensely illuminated, is called irradiation. The stereoscope: Look with one eye at the edge of the hand, so that the finger nearest the eye shall cover all the others. Then open the other eye; by it the other fingers will be seen. The images of the hand therefore within the two eyes are different.

The two images are projected on the two retinæ; if by any means we could combine two drawings, executed on a flat surface, so as to produce within the two eyes two pictures similar to the two images of the solid hand, we should obtain the impression of solidity. This is done by the stereoscope.

The first form of this instrument was invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone. He took drawings of solid objects as seen by the two eyes, and looked at the images of these two drawings in two plane mirrors. Each eye looked at the image which belonged to it, and the mirrors were so arranged that the images overlapped, thus appearing to come from the same object. By this combination of its two plane projections, the object sketched was caused to start forth as a solid.

In looking at and combining two such drawings, the eyes receive the same impression, and go through the same process as when they look at the real object. We see only one point of an object distinctly at a time. If the different points of an object be at different distances from the eyes, to see the near points distinctly requires a greater convergence of the axes of the eyes than to see the distant ones. Now, besides the identity of the retinal images of the stereoscopic drawings with those of the real object, the eyes, in order to cause the corresponding pairs of point of the two drawings to coalesce, have to go through the same variations of convergence that are necessary to see distinctly the various points of the actual objects. Hence, the impression of solidity produced by the combination of such drawings.

The impression of solidity may be produced in an exceedingly striking manner without any stereoscope at all. Take two drawings—projections, as they are called—of the frustum of a cone; the one as it is seen by the right eye, the other as it is seen by the left. Holding them at some distance from the eyes, let the left-hand drawing be looked at by the right eye, and the right-hand drawing by the left. The lines of vision of the two eyes here cross each other; and it is easy, after a few trials with a pencil point placed in front of the eyes, to make two corresponding points of the drawing coincide. The moment they coincide, the combined drawings start forth as a solid, suspended in the air at the place of intersection of the lines of vision. It depends upon the character of the drawings whether its base or its top seems nearest to the eye. For this experiment the drawings are best made in simple outline and they may be immensely larger than ordinary stereoscopic drawings.

The Reflecting Stereoscope

Take notice that here also the different pairs of the corresponding points are at different distances apart. Two corresponding points, for example, of the top of the frustum will not be the same distance asunder as two points of the base.

Wheatstone's first instrument is called the reflecting stereoscope; but the methods of causing drawings to coalesce so as to produce stereoscopic effects are almost numberless. The instrument most used by the public is the lenticular stereoscope of Sir David Brewster. In it the two projections are combined by means of two half lenses with their edges turned inward. The lenticular stereoscope also magnifies the object or picture looked at.

It has been stated that for distinct vision of a near point a greater convergence of the lines of vision of the two eyes is necessary than that of a distant one. By an instrument in which two rectangular prisms are employed, the rays from the two points may be caused to cross before they enter the eyes, the convergence being thus rendered greater for the distant point than for the near one.

The consequence of this is, that the near point appears distant, and the distant point near. This is the principle of Wheatstone's pseudoscope. By this instrument convex surfaces are rendered concave, and concave surfaces convex. The inside of a hat or teacup may be thus converted into its outside, while a globe may be seen as a concave spherical surface.

THE Speer Carbon Company takes pleasure in announcing that Speer Projector Carbons will be demonstrated in actual operation on both Alternating and Direct Current in the exhibit of our Eastern Distributor, J. H. Hallberg in space No. 7 on the main floor of the Madison Square Garden, during the First National Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry, during the week of May 6th to 14th.

The demonstration of Speer Projector Carbons will prove the superiority of this product and we call the attention of exhibitors and operators to this exhibit, where we will distribute samples of our Speer Carbons.

A limited number of tickets can be had free, one to each operator at office of J. H. Hallberg, 36 E. 23rd Street, New York.

NOREIGA DENIES CONTROVERSY BETWEEN OPERATORS AND THEATRE MANAGERS IN SAN FRANCISCO

ANTHONY L. NOREIGA, secretary of the Motion Picture and Projecting Machine Operators of San Francisco, has written to Motion Picture News to correct several statements in an article printed by the News on April 1. This article, from the News' San Francisco correspondent, contained the assertion that the operators in San Francisco sought to have only union members employed at demonstration work in exchanges, and that a controversy was on between the employers and employes over the working conditions.

Mr. Noreiga says that the News correspondent has been misinformed on several matters vital to the operators and their relations with the employers. The News is glad to correct any false impression which may have been given by the article. "We have made no demands for over three years," says Mr. Noreiga, "and that was when we were granted a day's rest in every seven, a privilege which is granted even to a work horse. This we secured without much opposition, the managers seeing the justice of our request.

"You state further that we are desirous of organizing the 'film repair boys.' Here you have been misinformed again. Even had we entertained the idea of taking in the boys in the film exchanges the terms under which we are chartered by our International prevents us from carrying out such an idea, for this organization consists of none but competent machine operators."

"NOT FAIR TO REPLACE US WITH RETURNED SOLDIERS," SAY OPERATORS IN TORONTO

MEMBERS of the Operators Association in Toronto, although taking no official notice of the incident in Calgary, have stated their opinions through a few men in the organization.

One man said: "It hardly seems fair that they should treat our union so, because in the case of the local lodge we have done our 'bit' loyally and well as far as the war is concerned; we having many members in khaki. Also, any of us who are holding the positions of men at the front are under agreement to vacate the job should the first occupier turn up again.

"We are doing our best, we have undergone the most stringent examinations, we have spent money to carry our ideas of safety and convenience and comfort to the patrons of the house through to completion. Why they should want to replace us with returned soldiers, does not seem clear, unless they desire to cut down and break the union schedule of wages."

After the news of the action taken in Calgary several of the theatre managers in Toronto threatened to replace Union men with returned soldiers at lower wages. Altogether, it looks as if the whole affair would have far reaching results, but to do the men in Toronto justice, they are acting with restraint and discretion.

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER COMPANY OPENS CHICAGO OFFICE

THE Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, with headquarters at 1737 Broadway, New York City, has just opened a Chicago office in the Lytton building. This office will be under the personal management of E. S. Bowman.

Plans are also being made to open an office in Philadelphia under the management of Thomas T. Flynn. The exact location of this office has not as yet been definitely decided upon. There is also a Boston office under contemplation. When these headquarters have been established the company will have a distributing organization which will be capable of taking care of the entire country.

The opening of the Rialto has also a musical significance that has been more or less overlooked, for in addition to the largest orchestra on Broadway outside of the Metropolitan, the institution will boast the biggest organ ever installed in a theatre. Primarily, the only portion of the organ visible to the public will be the consol, the massive mechanism, pipes, etc., being concealed about the theatre, and more particularly the proscenium colonnade and the sounding board in the dome above. Here 4,500 pipes, each representing a different tone shade, are hidden away. These pipes range from massive tubes 32 feet long down to the size of an ordinary lead pencil. To operate these 2,000 silver electric contacts are employed. Silver is used by the organ builder because it is the most sensitive metal known from an electrical standpoint.

The instrument, which weighs over ten tons, was built by the Austin Organ Company at Hartford, Conn., and assembled at the Hartford factory to prevent any possible oversight and then taken apart and shipped to New York, requiring three freight cars in transit.

Among the peculiar individual characteristics of the organ may be mentioned a section with stops representing strings which gives the effect of scores of violins, gambas, cellos and double basses, as well as a chime of unequaled proportions.

Special Attention Given to Uniforms of Employees

Special attention has been given to the uniforms for the employees of the theatre. Incidentally they are the most elaborate and the most expensive ever used in any theatre, being especially designed and made by the Eagle Uniform House. The orchestra, consisting of 40 pieces, is all dressed in a fine velvet and silk costume. The ushers will wear elaborate uniforms trimmed with gold and silk, and special shoes and spats. Every usher carries a special designed swagger stick to be used in greeting and directing the patrons. The program boys will be dressed in oriental costumes; the ticket-takers in a frock-cut coat harmonizing with the settings of the theatre.

The theatre is equipped with the Typhoon Cooling and Ventilating System. Six huge twin Typhoon Blowers are located at intervals on the roof, taking pure fresh air from way above the roof, free from dust and dirt of the street level, and forces it into the theatre through openings in the ceiling. The pent houses which enclose the blowers are constructed so as to keep out the rain and daylight, still permitting free passage for the air into the theatre.

The air is blown down through chutes working the fans under openings in the ceiling, supplying a continuous flow of air, about twenty million cubic feet per hour. A perceptible breeze is felt all over the theatre, free from objectionable draughts. During the cool season smaller blowers are used for ventilating and the air forced into the building is heated when required, by being blown over steam coils, and by maintaining a pressure of the air in inside of the theatre, uncomfortable cold draughts are prevented when opening and closing doors in winter.

The heating is accomplished by a mushroom fan blast system, which also ventilates the theatre. This is accomplished by taking the air from out of doors into the basement, forcing it over heating coils by means of a large blower fan into heat ducts under the auditorium. From the heat ducts the fresh heated air is admitted into the auditorium through a number of our aisle hoods under the end seats in each aisle, the hoods being scattered over the entire area of the auditorium and balcony, and even and perfect distribution of the air is obtained and every one in the theatre is supplied with a sufficient quantity of fresh air.

An air washer and cooling plant in conjunction with the heating plant for summer use has been installed, the heaters being so arranged that the blower fan may blow the air through the heater in winter, or through the air cooling apparatus in summer.

When using it for summer use, the air is blown through the iced water sprays of the air washer and cooler and enters the auditorium very cool, and will keep the temperature far below that outside.

A vacuum cleaning system is installed throughout the theatre by the Spencer Turbine Cleaner Company, of Hartford, Conn. The system consists of a multistage wide clearance

Spencer turbine cleaner operated by an electric motor connected directly to it. To this machine is connected a system of piping extending throughout the building, having inlet valves attached at convenient locations; to these inlet valves the hose is attached for operating the specially designed tools for cleaning all parts of the building, including bare floors, carpets, walls and hangings. The dirt and litter is conveyed through the piping system to a suitable receptacle located in the basement near the machine. The tool equipment is of pressed steel, making them light and durable, with swivel connections, which induces flexibility, and are so designed as to enable the operator to reach all the dirt, which is conveyed out of the building.

A splendid fire protection system has been installed by the Globe Automatic Sprinkler Company. Over the stage portion of the theatre the system is supplied by a 10,000-gallon gravity tank placed on the roof and an auxiliary supply line form the fire department connection on Forty-second street. In connection with this equipment there is an automatic alarm signal system connected with the local fire alarm gong in the building.

The entire theatre is one of beauty and attractiveness from lobby to screen and from floor to ceiling. Everything is in keeping. The whole has been studied and put together by a master hand with the result that this the latest undertaking of S. L. Rothapfel is the finest monument in existence to this the fifth greatest industry in the world.

MARTIN ROTARY CONVERTERS PLACED IN TWO BROOKLYN THEATRES

E. B. FORSLUND, eastern representative of the Northwestern Electric Company, reports that he has recently installed a 7½ K. W. Martin Rotary Converter in the Bay Ridge theatre, at Seventy-second street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, each arc in this house pulling from 60 to 65 amperes and dissolving from one to another perfectly.

Another installation is a 7½ K. W. Martin Rotary Converter in the New Rialto theatre, located at Flatbush avenue and Cortelyou road, Brooklyn. The distance of the throw in this case is approximately 140 feet, each arc pulling from 65 to 70 amperes while the picture is being shown on a plain white screen.

The Camera

Correct Estimate of Shutter Speed Is Not Difficult

In Most Cameras the Film Movement Interval Requires Fifty Per Cent. of the Shutter Area to Cover It, Consequently One-half of the Shutter Is a Solid Metal Sector, the Other Half Being an Open Space Through Which Exposure Is Accomplished

MOST beginners in the use of the motion picture camera, and sometimes others who only use such an instrument occasionally, find that if they could tell, with accuracy, the speed at which the revolving shutter in the camera operates, they would be enabled to get their exposures more nearly correct, and that estimating the right exposure would be as easy as with a Kodak.

To a certain degree this is the case. To be sure Cine negative film is much faster or more light sensitive than the hand camera film and the exposure, which, in a still camera, is automatically made by the shutter, will depend in cinematography on the regularity and speed with which the camera crank is turned.

But the speed of the motion camera shutter may easily be calculated. In most cameras the film movement interval requires 50 per cent of the shutter area to cover it, and therefore one-half of the shutter is a solid metal sector, the other half being an open space through which exposure is accomplished. There is, on most cameras, however, an extra metal blade which can be rotated around the hub of the shutter to close the open section of same in some degree. A shutter with such an auxiliary blade is called adjustable.

As in correctly cranking a moving picture camera, sixteen pictures per second are exposed it can easily be seen that if the shutter has an open area extending around one-half its circumference, ½ of 1/16 will be 1/32 of a second the exposure each picture receives at the normal turning speed of two crank revolutions per second (motion cameras are geared 8 pictures per crank revolution) with one-half or 50 per cent shutter opening. Likewise if the shutter is closed a little, so that the open space occupies one-third of the shutter circumference, the exposure will be ⅓ of 1/16 or 1/48 of a second.

The speeds of the most generally used shutter openings are:

½ or 50 per cent Shutter Opening—Exposure 1/32 Second.
⅓ Shutter Opening—Exposure 1/48 Second.
¼ (Right Angle) Opening — Exposure 1/64 Second.
⅕ Shutter Opening—Exposure 1/80 Second.
⅙ Shutter Opening—Exposure 1/96 Second.

For regular work taken at the rate of sixteen pictures per second or thereabouts it is decidedly not advisable to go to extremes in closing down the shutter in order to make movements of the objects on the film perfectly sharp.

Blurring Not Always Alarming

Upon examination of a piece of motion picture film it will be found that all movements of objects in the little pictures show decided blurring. While this would seem a terrible crime to the user of a Graflex camera, experience and exhaustive experiments on the part of film makers, have shown that quite a lot of blurring in the objects in motion is beneficial and therefore entirely permissable.

This blurring of the moving objects facilitates the blending of the various phases of a given motion when the picture is projected. Moving objects photographed too sharp, by the use of a narrow shutter opening have a rather jerky motion when projected similar to stop motion photography and sometimes give the effect of multiple images of the moving objects in the scenes thus taken.

There are many classes of camera work, however, in which closing the shutter considerably is necessary, so an adjustable shutter is a feature of importance in a motion camera. For instance let us consider the photographing of the animated cartoons, of which so many are nowadays seen, or any of the film subjects in which inanimate objects are made to move about. These are taken by what is known as stop motion; namely, the camera crank is put on an auxiliary spindle known as the trick or single picture shaft and found on most professional cameras. This spindle is so geared that when the camera is operated from it, only one picture on the film is moved and exposed for each complete revolution of the crank.

As the film will be exposed to the light much longer at this rate of turning (one-half second per picture if the shutter were left at half opening) it is, of course, necessary in order not to overexpose to close the shutter to some extent. Closing the shutter to the one-fifth opening would give a ⅕ second exposure which should be all right in animated cartoon and title work, in which positive stock is generally employed to make the negative upon.

But there are other phases of motion picture taking which also require consideration of the shutter adjustment. As an example take a director producing a comedy. In some of his scenes he wants his people to traverse the length of several city blocks in a very short space of time. The director tells his cameraman "Speed on this scene." That is a tip to the cameraman to crank his instrument at only half the regular speed, one crank revolution per second being the proper procedure for such effects.

Dangers of Overexposure

The cameraman knows that to turn at this rate in a good light, such as outdoors, would give him a bad overexposure. So opening the front of the camera he adjusts the shutter to one-fifth of the circle opening, which, at eight pictures per second (half regular speed, would expose at 1/40 of a second or one-sixth opening giving approximately 1/50 second exposure. Possibly if the light was very strong the photographer might close the shutter to one-eighth of the circle which would give an exposure of 1/64 of a second. As the majority of negatives made outdoors, with the camera cranked at half the regular speed, are badly overexposed, it is advisable in addition to using a small shutter opening to also close the lens diaphragm slightly more than would be done in taking the same scene at the normal rate of turning.

After having the shutter speeds for motion picture cameras thus reckoned out, the ambitious novice and exhibitor filmer should now be enabled to more intelligently estimate correct exposures.

If you didn't notice the Monthly Index of Reviews as you ran through the book, just turn back to pages 2755-2757, and look it over.

extends clear through the device and the mats may be inserted from either side. Any one having occasion to do vision or double exposure work will readily appreciate the value of this Mask Box attachment.

Ingenious Effects Obtainable with Double Exposure Device

To particularly take care of double exposure work, however, the Goerz people supply the double exposure device, shown in Fig. 2. Many effects are obtainable with this ingenious camera attachment.

By operating the control lever, the blades may be caused to open from the center to the sides, or the device may be swung around on its mount so that the blades open from center to top and from the bottom of the picture. It will be appreciated that either of these effects are pleasing to behold on the screen.

In addition, one of the blades may be detached from the operating mechanism and secured by a set screw to the base, out of the way. Upon operating the device now with only one blade working, an effect similar to raising or lowering a curtain is had. When the double exposure device is used with only one blade working, this blade can be set to obscure a portion of the stage while the other part of the stage is being recorded on the film in the first half of a double exposure scene.

Having gone through the necessary camera operations the blade of the device is set to cover the remaining section of the scene and the remaining half of the double exposure run off. Succeeding exposures up to a considerable number can be made on a single film strip by proper manipulation of this double exposure device.

Another attachment decidedly novel and pleasing in its effect on the screen is the square closing shutter or square vignetter shown in Fig. 3. It is the same class of attachment as the round closing shutter already described being used in front of the lens. In operation, all four sides of the rectangle move towards the center the opening, gradually growing smaller until entirely closed. To secure the best effect this device is placed as far as possible in front of the lens.

In addition to the devices here mentioned the Goerz American Optical Company make some other attachments of similar nature and have devised means for attaching any of their devices to practically all makes and models of cameras.

METHODS OF PRODUCING CLOSE-UPS AND ECONOMICAL PRODUCTION OF TITLES

M. P. S.—How, when producing a close-up, do some of the producers secure the effect of the camera moving down upon the subject?

Will you kindly advise as to the best and most economical method to produce titles reading white upon a black ground as well as a suitable contrast developer?

Ans. After a thorough study of the correspondent's letter, we are not quite sure of what close-up effect he wishes the camera procedure described, but think it will be one of the following:

In some film subjects the scene proper will be faded out, the film reversed just the distance of the fade-out, the camera moved up the required distance and focussed by scale (on some instruments a direct focus can be taken) and the diaphragm opened on the new scene where the fade-out started. This procedure is known in cinematography as a dissolve and the particular procedure outlined above would be termed in a studio a "dissolve to a close-up."

Perhaps, however, the correspondent has in mind such scenes as are made with the camera on a movable platform mounted on wheels. While the camera is being operated the platform may be moved toward the subject, the focus gradually being changed by the photographer as the camera approaches the subject. If the camera is brought close enough to the subject the result would be a gradual transition from the scene proper to the important characters or action in same "close-up."

We believe one of the above outlined methods of securing a close-up will be explanatory of the effect the correspondent has in mind.

An Economical Way to Produce Titles

Regarding title production in an economical way we suggest the following as the easiest and best method:

Titles both negative and positive are always photographed in the laboratories on positive film stock. Therefore secure some raw positive stock and load the camera magazines so that in threading the camera, the celluloid side not the emulsion side of the film is toward the lens.

The title card should have black lettering (which may be either printed or painted) on a white ground. Ordinary white cardboard is the proper thing.

The title board or easel should be illuminated with strong diffused daylight (not direct sunlight) or artificial lights placed in equal number on each side of the board. Although we cannot state the correct exposure, not knowing the illumination to be used, we suggest that with Eastman positive stock, the lens be stopped down to f. 5.6 and the camera handle be turned at one half regular speed or one revolution of the crank per second. Shutter at ½ or ⅓ opening.

Presumably the correspondent has been attempting to make titles on regular Cine negative stock. As negative stock is prepared to give comparatively soft images no great contrast could be secured in titles made on negative film.

Titles photographed direct on positive film as per above instructions should show a satisfactory density upon being developed in any bath which produces a good positive. In compliance with the request for a contrast developer, however, we suggest that the following be tried:

SOLUTION NO. 1.

Hydrokinone	½ oz.
Potassium Metabisulphite	½ oz.
Water	20 oz.

SOLUTION NO. 2.

Water	20 oz.

For use take equal parts of solutions 1 and 2. Running the temperature up as high as 70 degrees may be tried to secure great density but is likely to be attended with chemical fog and a temperature of over 70 degrees could easily cause the film to frill or become reticulated.

SHADED LAMPS ON SIDE OF AISLES GIVE INTERIOR DISTINCTIVE APPEARANCE

THE J. O. Sachs Manufacturing Company, 318 East Seventy-fifth street, New York City, is putting out an ornamental lamp, specially designed for theatre use.

The experiment of having shaded lamps on the side of the aisles in the various Broadway theatres in New York City has been tried out most successfully and has proved to be very popular, as they are distinctive and out of the ordinary.

As the performance begins the ushers walk down the aisles, disconnecting the floor plugs and removing the lamps. The same thing is advocated for the motion picture houses and to this end should add considerably to the distinctiveness of the houses of those who make the installations.

These lamps in the side aisles can be kept going during the run of the picture as they do not give sufficient light to interfere in any way with the projection. They can also be used in the rest rooms and on the stairs leading to the balconies.

They are ornaments to any house and from this standpoint lend greatly to the appearance and attractiveness of interior theatre decoration.

McAULEY SELLS MOTIOGRAPHS TO THE MINING COMPANIES IN WEST VIRGINIA

J. E. McAULEY, road salesman of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, has been in West Virginia for the past two weeks selling motiographs to the coal mines for use in entertaining their employees. He reports numerous sales, among which is an order for three 1916 models from the Solvey Coal & Coke Company.

Sydney Blakeley, Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company salesman, who represented the company at the Atlanta convention, sold eight 1916 model motiographs at this conventions.

GULF CITY AND NEARBY PLACES MAKE LARGE DONATIONS TO ACTORS' FUND

THE Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund of America has now swept into the South. D. L. Nicholson, chairman of the New Orleans branch committee of the campaign, says that the donations of the Gulf City and surrounding district will be large. He reports to Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the National Executive Committee, that practically all the theatre managers in that section of the country will give ten per cent. or more of their receipts on National Tribute Day, May 15, and that the public is taking a lively interest.

BARTOLA MOVES TO GET MORE SPACE IN SAME BUILDING IN CHICAGO

ON May 15 the sales offices of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company will be moved from their present quarters in the Mallers building, Chicago, to Suite 707-712 of the same building. This will give them about three times as much space, which the increase in business has made necessary.

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

WOMAN WHO EMPLOYED MUSICIANS CONCLUDES THAT ONE-MAN ORCHESTRA IS BEST FOR THEATRE

THE following views of Pauline Regnitz may be of interest to many NEWS readers. The writer is a thorough, one-man orchestra enthusiast and from her article it would seem that her conclusions have been arrived at after many adverse and reverse experiences.

As the methods for presenting motion pictures are today in the evolution of great changes, we will allow that exhibitors as well as musicians should be flexible and progressive in their ideas, allowing them to change their fundamental ideas as the methods for presenting motion pictures become more and more artistic.

As I have so often said the one-man orchestra has filled a great gap for the exhibitor where local or business conditions made it necessary for him to employ cheap musicians.

We thank the writer for her interest in the department and certainly appreciate hearing views borne of experience from all our readers.

"Many exhibitors endeavoring to overcome competition book pictures and spend a great deal of money advertising them, only to give their competitors the benefit thereof. We are all familiar with the pictures of today, as they are being booked in almost every theatre. While they all carry good themes and good stories it is the exhibitor who tries to give the proper music so as to render his pictures most effective, who is most successful.

"Now the question arises as to the kind of music he can use that will give him the best results. I have traveled quite extensively, and have come in contact with numerous exhibitors. I noted particularly the various styles of music they feature and have come to the conclusion that the one-man orchestra played by a proficient operator is the only means by which an exhibitor can really interpret the pictures so as to bring out their real meaning. It is needless to say that the great musical problem that now confronts the exhibitors has come about through their own negligence.

"Instead of studying the situation and ascertaining the best results for picture music, they have gone ahead and employed cheap piano players and cheap orchestras, and, in some instances, are using the straight pipe organ in their theatres. Believing as I do that pictures can only be played by one man, is the reason that I endorse the one-man orchestra. It gives the player the chance and opportunity to put forth the best there is in him. He can change instantaneously from pipe organ to fife and drum, or to the piano should the occasion require it. A pipe organ, like a piano alone, is not sufficient, as its possibilities are limited. The orchestra, on the other hand, cannot play a picture and read music at the same time.

"Of course, the highest priced orchestras, such as are being used in the very largest theatres, and which are absolutely prohibitive on account of the price, for the five and ten-cent houses claim they can play pictures properly, but I have yet to see where an orchestra of three or four musicians without the aid of a leader who does nothing but watch the pictures and prompt the musicians can come anywhere near playing the pictures with the same satisfactory results as the individual playing of the one-man orchestra.

"Personal experience has taught the writer as to what it means to an exhibitor to employ the proper music. About four years ago, I entered the motion picture business, and in common with other exhibitors thought a piano all that was necessary to accompany pictures. I soon found out, however, that piano music alone grew monotonous. Desiring a change, I engaged a four-piece orchestra. While the music rendered by the orchestra was beautiful, it in no way portrayed the meaning of the pictures.

"I tried to correct the difficulty. I talked with my orchestra, got special music for them, tried to time the pictures, but I then discovered that they could not play unless they had a leader to watch the picture for them. After continuous complaints from my audiences, I decided to try the one-man orchestra, and installed the Seeburg Pipe Organ Orchestra. I then found that my music troubles were at an end.

"I am not writing this endeavoring to advertise the Seeburg instrument, but believe as do a great many others who have been fortunate enough to choose the proper music that with a good player using the one-man orchestra of the size proportionate to the size of the theatre that the music is rendered to the entire satisfaction of the patronage."

IN "RAMONA" IS A THEME FOR EVERY CHARACTER; IT IS VARIED ACCORDING TO THE CHARACTER'S MOODS

W. H. CLUNE'S production of the cinema-drama of "Romona" at the Forty-fourth Street theatre owes a great deal of its success to its really brilliant musical score, for which three persons are chiefly responsible. Lloyd Brown, Mr. Clune's associate, one of the pioneers in the practice of "cueing" dramatic music to the moods of a photo-play, supervised the synchronizing of "Ramona" with its score.

Emil Bierman of Los Angeles, Cal., is to be credited with the composition of "Ramona" music. Sixty per cent. of it is original, the balance frankly selected from sources that offered the best to be had for particular purposes. Bierman orchestrated the music. In collecting his material, he searched for months in libraries for unusual thematic music.

The third person responsible for the musical success of "Ramona" is Carli Elinor, the accomplished Los Angeles director. Elinor, as Mr. Brown's associate, is the first director in the country who put into execution the very difficult feat of bringing a great body of musicians into complete accord with every swift changing scene.

In the "Ramona" score there is a theme for each character, and this theme is varied according to the mood of that character at any given moment. For example, the "Ramona" theme is a light airy waltz when Ramona is in her merry moods; when she is going through her trials the theme is maintained, but so orchestrated that it expresses sadness graphically.

The same thing is true of the special motifs for other characters, and the way they are handled and dovetailed with the general scheme of the music is ingenious and highly effective. Mr. Bierman carried his scheme even to the selection of instruments for special purposes. The oboe, for example, stands forth in those places calling for the plaintive, the clarinet to express voice, the brass to express power and dramatic force. Similarly, various instruments tell of various characters. The violin leads in the Ramona theme; ments, and the clarinet leads in action in which Felipe is prominent.

scene depicting Juan Can's broken leg, where the dominating bassoon expresses the comic spirit of the picture with remarkable effect.

There is an orchestra on the stage in "Ramona" as well as one in the pit, and the tying of these two divided parts is a matter of such difficulty that special stage signals and lights are used. The complication is increased by the presence of special men for the big chimes and organ.

"Ramona" is really epochal in its development of music for dramatic purposes.

BERTRAM RECEIVES MANY HELPFUL HINTS FROM MUSICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE "NEWS"

THE following letter from the musical director of the Palace theatre, Burlington, Iowa, features on all of its advertising matter, the following phrase: "Photoplays exclusively, accompanied by appropriate music" was received with much pleasure. By reading the letter you will note that its very tone implies the fact that this theatre does make appropriate music a part of the entertainment.

I want to tell the writer, as well as my readers, that since receiving his letter I have been working on a system of musical analysis which will appear in this department in a few weeks. I would gladly give the method I use in my own library, but as my library consists of 25,000 different numbers, the method used would be more extensive than necessary and not as readily understood as a simplified system which I intend to publish in this department. I hope the writer will appreciate that the doing of this in such a manner that it cannot be universally criticised is no easy task and that he will be patient for a few weeks until I have it in the proper shape for publication.

"Ernest Luz,
"Motion Picture News,
New York City.

"Dear Sir:—I have enjoyed many of the really worth while articles in your department of the News and I am sure that you are doing much good for the music end of pictures. I also get quite a bit of assistance from your suggestions on plots of different pictures: As a rule, I see all pictures in the morning, but sometimes owing to late trains this is impossible and in such cases your plots are invaluable. When I do use one of them I know everything will be O. K., which is more than I can say of the average suggestion sheet.

"Now Mr. Luz, I will appreciate it if you will outline a system by which I may arrange my library and get maximum efficiency. At present I have a general system which I find very unsatisfactory. The order is: 2/4s which includes intermezzos and the like, 4/4s which takes in gavottes, etc., 3/4s, 6/8s, andantes and so on. I have been working on the matter for several weeks and am unable to reach a desirable solution.

"Thanking you for a communication with full explanations (I mean by explanations—citing some well-known number as instance in each division where there will be any chance of misunderstanding) at your earliest convenience, I am respectively yours,

"Dick Bertram, Director of Music,
"Palace Theatre, Burlington, Iowa."

STAGE SET, PAINTED ON VELVET, AND COSTING $10,000, WILL BE INSTALLED IN STRAND, NEW YORK, MAY 7

THE Strand theatre, New York, has just completed arrangements for the installation of a new stage setting which is said to be the most elaborate and most expensive set ever made for a moving picture theatre. The cost of this one set will be as much as is often paid for scenic effects of a whole production, the cost of material, painting and installation bringing the total to $10,000.

This is due partly to the fact that the flat pieces of the scene will be painted on velvet. The new stage set is being painted in the studios of P. Dodd Ackerman, the designer. The spirit of the setting will follow the trend of the new school in stage art, employing vivid colors and unconventional designs. It is hoped to place the new setting in the Strand by May 7, the week in which Geraldine Farrar will appear in her third photoplay, "Maria Rosa."

ALL Kimball Organs are masterpieces, whether they consist in a carefully selected group of orchestral tones for a house seating less than five hundred or whether they contain every instrument that can be utilized in the most exacting picture and enough of them to fill the largest auditorium with musical sound. The electrical mechanism is quick, accurate, dependable and puts the whole instrument as completely under the domination of the organist as the symphony orchestra the conductor.

The Globe Will Round Out Film Circles in New Orleans

Fichtenberg Interests Plan $200,000 Theatre on Site of Frey Building, Canal Street—Seats in the House Will Start on Level with the Floor at the Screen End of the Structure and Gradually Tilt Until Topmost Row Is Directly Over Lobby

Special to Motion Picture News.

New Orleans, La., April 20.

HERMAN FICHTENBERG, who kept quiet while all about him threw their hats into the ring with announcements of newer and bigger film palaces for New Orleans, selected St. Patrick's Night, on the eve of the biggest film celebration New Orleans has ever witnessed, to divulge his plans concerning a new theatre in Canal street costing $200,000.

The Fichtenberg interests have closed a deal for the Frey building, 614 Canal street, recently damaged by fire, and in a pivotal position in the business district of the town. The house will seat eight hundred and will not have a balcony. The seats in the Globe will start on a level with the floor at the screen, and gradually incline until the top-most seat will be at a position directly over the lobby.

At a point halfway in the theatre, there will be twelve loges which may be purchased in advance of any performance. The lobby will be thirty-two feet, the depth 130 feet, and fireproof materials will be used throughout. By a system of subdued lighting the house will present electrical effects according to the picture being projected.

Mr. Fichtenberg will begin from the ground floor up and in every step of construction the foremost thought will be that the theatre is being built for motion pictures exclusively.

Stucco cement will be the material used for the front, while the interior is to be finished in polished stone similar to that used in building the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York. There will be the latest model conveniences. Not the least of novelties to be introduced is an interchangeable electrical sign a la Broadway, upon which will nightly flash the names of the stars featured.

Music being an important part of exhibition nowadays, Mr. Fichtenberg is arranging for the purchase of a ten thousand dollar Austin pipe organ, and he will employ a noted organist to play it.

While $200.000 will be expended on the theatre itself, that sum does not represent the total expenditure, as the lease on the property, which is for ten years, runs well into a quarter of a million dollars.

Mr. Fichtenberg told Motion Picture News that he believes in an extension of his business in the city that started him on the road to fortune when he opened up a penny arcade in Canal street; rather than in one of the other Southern cities in which his interests operate. But it is not wholly a matter of sentiment, for listen to this optimistic outlook on conditions:

"New Orleans recently passed through a remarkable season. The Mardi Gras brought 20,000 visitors, the races, (and this is conservative) 10,000 more. All attendance records were broken. Indications point to an even better record for next and succeeding years.

"In addition there is a tremendous demand for pictures of the better sort. I believe in Crescent City real estate values, in its people and myself, in the feeling that I can deliver to the public what they want—and I am backing up my judgment with money."

PICTURE THEATRE BUILDING IN WISCONSIN KEEPS UP

Milwaukee, Wis., April 25.

THE approach of summer sees no let up in the boom in picture theatre building in Wisconsin which commenced a month or so ago when, as announced in the News, new theatres were being erected at the rate of one a day.

During the last ten days seven new theatres have been reported by the architects or builders. At Antigo P. J. Hanson has awarded the general contract for the erection of the new Palace theatre in that city to the Appleton Construction Company. The building is to be of solid brick, two stories, 45 x 180, composition flooring and hot air heating, to cost about $40,000 when complete.

Architects Parkinson and Dockendorff of LaCross have completed plans for the theatre to be erected by Otto Bell in Sparta. The building is to be brick, one story, about 50 x 100, with a stage large enough for theatre purposes. It will cost, when completed, about $15,000.

Architect Stanley Kadow, Milwaukee, is preparing plans for the erection of a theatre, 30 x 200, one story, brick, hollow tile and steel, fireproof construction, steam heating, book tile roof, tar and gravel covering costing about $20,000 to be located on Lincoln avenue near Howell.

At Edgerton a lodge hall and picture theatre is to be erected by H. E. Peters of that city. The theatre will have a seating capacity of about five hundred and will be 44x110.

A. F. Newmann, a contractor of Kiel, is preparing plans and will erect a theatre for Berth and Stecker of that city. The building will be one story, 38x112, will seat 450 and cost about $10,000.

At Elkhorn, Webster and Minett will erect a theatre this spring. The building will be of brick and concrete, one story, 24x125 and will seat 350. Indirect lighting, fan ventilating system and steam heating are contemplated. L. F. Burthard is the contractor.

Architect Byron Scheiderer, Milwaukee, has completed plans for the erection of a theatre for J. R. McKinley at Stevens Point. The building is to be of solid brick construction, one story and part basement, 40x130. The seating capacity of the theatre will be about five hundred and the building when finished will cost about $7,500.

FIFTY-SIXTH STREET THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA, IS DISTINCTIVE IN ITS DESIGN

FOLLOWING the familiar fashion of naming a theatre from its location, one of the newest of Philadelphia's photo play houses has been called the Fifty-sixth Street Theatre.

Situated in the popular part of West Philadelphia with a large residential as well as business section to draw from, this attractive new home of motion pictures bids fair to be a competitor to be reckoned with.

With a lot 80 by 140 feet to work on, W. W. Sharpley, architect, has made the most of his opportunities and evolved a building on lines different from most picture houses. The keynote is elegant simplicity.

From the exterior of straight lines carried out in substantial white brick, on through the long lobby the spacious foyer, the unobstructed interior, there is no jarring note.

The house is owned by the Fifty-sixth Street Theatre Company of which Joseph McCready is president and W. H. Yonkers secretary. Walter Jacobs, formerly manager of the Imperial Theatre, is in active charge of the theatre.

Mr. McCready, who as advertising manager of the Philadelphia American League Base Ball Club has taken charge of several World Series, is naturally a firm believer in publicity. He will personally supervise the advertising campaign of the new house. Advertisements in the daily papers supplement local advertising, mailing lists and house program. The theatre was erected at a cost of about $100,000. It is advantageously situated on fifty-sixth street, between Delancy and Pine. There are alleyways on the two sides not bounded by streets. With the nine exits the house can be emptied in three minutes.

There is no gallery, but the unusual slope of the floor, a sort of U shape arrangement, makes each one of the eight hundred seats a good one. Mahogany fittings blend well with the color scheme of ivory paint, old-rose brocaded walls, rich dark-red plush hangings bordered in gold. The deep red carpets complete the whole. Standing room 35 by 45 feet gives freedom from crowding. The natural ventilation of the house insures comfort on that score. The American Seating Company's leather upholstered chairs are used. The well known indirect system of lighting is carried out by artistic verdigris bronze chandeliers.

The operator's booth is worthy of mention, being new to Philadelphia. It is a three-room both, each compartment being fire proof and entirely separate from its neighbor. Two operators work the motor-driven, latest model Simplex machines which are equipped with Gundlach lenses, and a Wagner current converter. A Minusa Gold Fibre screen is used and a $7,500 Kimball organ is installed. There are three daily performances at 2.30, 7 and 9 P. M. The matinee prices will be ten cents. In the evening fifteen cents is charged.

STRATFORD, AT DIX AND FERDINAND AVENUES, DETROIT, IS APPROPRIATELY NAMED IN TERCENTENARY YEAR

ONE of the newest photoplay houses in Detroit, Mich., is the Stratford, at Dix and Ferdinand avenues. E. V. McGrath is manager of this house going from the Maxine theatre, where he has been in charge since the opening over a year ago.

The policy at the Stratford is daily change with prices ten, fifteen and twenty cents, the latter for the mezzanine boxes. The Stratford is built of brick and steel. Music is furnished by a Wurlitzer Unit Organ. The entrance doors and panel poster frames are mahogany in color. The interior is in the Adam period style of decoration. Ivory, gold and old rose are the basis of the color scheme. Shades of rose predominate; the draperies are in old rose and gold trimming. The curtain is an idealistic conception of Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-on-Avon.

A complete ventilating system has been installed, assuring fresh air at all times. Film projection is in charge of Frank L. Shannon, who has had extensive experience in several of the large downtown theatres. The equipment includes two Powers 6-B machines, special stereopticon dissolvers, spotlights and Wagner converter. The lighting system is semi-direct self-suffusing.

The Stratford is in an excellent location in one of the most thickly populated sections of Detroit. Its success is assured from the fact that it is the only large and real modern theatre in that district. It was opened March 11. F. A. Schneider is president and William H. Steffes is secretary of the company operating the Stratford.

amounting to $25,000 will be made. A new front will be built and other features added to the present theatre.

J. D. Wineland, manager of the Mystic theatre in Webb City and the Princess theatre in Joplin, finally has obtained a ten-year lease on the Auditorium, between Fifth and Sixth streets on Joplin street, Joplin, which will be converted into a moving picture theatre. William F. Halyard, owner of the Auditorium, made this announcement. The present plans of Mr. Wineland have not been announced, but it is expected that the work of remodeling the Auditorium will begin at once. The balcony on the second floor will be strengthened and enlarged so that the seating capacity of the entire theatre will be approximately 2,500.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Lyric theatre, Bristol, has been purchased by Lawrence Heath and Russell Caltey.

Frank Green has leased the Precinct Hall at Enfield for a year and will open it as a picture theatre and skating rink.

NEW YORK

The property at 372 to 374 Third avenue and 156 to 158 East Twenty-seventh street, New York City, has been leased for motion picture theatre and store purposes.

Fire broke out in the Central Park Motion Picture theatre, Main street and Fillmore avenue, Buffalo, on April 12, causing about $2,500 damage, mostly by smoke. A scrub woman discovered the blaze and turned in the alarm.

A real estate deal completed in Perry gives Clayton Wood of Hornell a site for a modern moving picture theatre, having a depth of 100 feet on Dolbeer place and a South Main street frontage of 77 feet.

George Cohen of the George Cohen Enterprises, controlling Cohen's opera house in Newburg, will erect a vaudeville and picture theatre in Walden. It will seat between 1,200 and 1,500 people.

Homecrest, a residential section of Coney Island, New York City, has a new motion picture theatre.

OHIO

Mr. H. Tallman, owner of the Tallman theatre, East Liverpool, has decided to put moving pictures into his house. The Tallman theatre formerly housed legitimate road shows.

Otto Motry has bought the Lyric theatre, Tiffin, from Nicholias Schachtler and Ambrose Fleek.

PENNSYLVANIA

Harry L. Sellers has just announced that he has relinquished the management of the new Strand Motion Picture theatre in Steelton to resume the management of the Standard theatre in the same city. Mr. Sellers was manager of the Standard until a few months ago when he took charge of the Strand, which was completed only last Fall. Before returning to the Standard Mr. Sellers had a number of important improvements made to the building. He has doubled the size of the projection booth and put in two new machines. He also is about to install a new ventilating system.

Ground has been broken for the new nickelette to be built near the corner of Luzerene and Wyoming avenues, Pittston, by the United Theatres Co., composed principally of West Pittston men.

The Cort theatre on the Boardwalk at Tennessee avenue, Atlantic City, has changed hands. Originally called the Savoy, the name was changed to Cort when that well known theatrical manager took it over and ran it as a picture house. The house which has recently been renovated and improved has been leased by Ed. J. O'Keefe of the City Square theatre of Atlantic City. The Cort has 1,000 seats and has always been a ten-cent house, but the new management has raised the price to twenty-five. An unusually fine orchestra of five pieces is conducted by Jacob Dein, well and favorably known as the former leader of the Atlantic City Keith's theatre orchestra.

Charles Bennett, who owned the Kumbak theatre at 731 East Ohio street, North Side Pittsburgh, has sold the property to Albert Haigh, a well-known business man of East Liberty, and the purchaser has taken charge of the theatre. Mr. Bennett will remain at the theatre for several weeks in order to introduce the new manager to the regular patrons of the theatre. The Kumbak theatre is a house with a seating capacity of three hundred seats and the new owner contemplates

A NEW CHAIR

That Enables Everybody to See and Be Comfortable

Press Catch

Tilt Forward

Push Back

Can be changed from an adult's chair to a child's chair by pressing the catch and raising as illustrated. Returns to adult's position and locks just as easily.

It provides a child with a seat proportioned to his body, a foot rest the right height and puts the child's eyes on a line with those of adults, enabling him to see without annoyance to others or discomfort to himself. The offers theatre owners something for which there is a real need. Fortunately it is not an extra expense but an added source of profit because it—

"All Eyes on a Line" FOCO

Adjustable Chair

Does away with the free kids.

Increases the patronage of children; also the adults who come with children.

Attracts patronage of adults who won't now attend because of discomfort of holding children on their laps.

Attracts patronage from theatres not equipped with Foco chairs.

FOCO Chairs cost new only a few cents more than ordinary chairs. Made in all sizes and finishes. Old chairs can be converted into Foco Chairs at considerably less than the cost of new chairs. Leading chair companies are licensed to make Foco Chairs and can supply you.

the remodeling of the theatre so as to give it a greater seating capacity.

W. J. Marrion, formerly manager of the Quality theatre, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has been appointed manager of the Cameraphone theatre at 1600 Fifth avenue. Mr. Marrion has had a great deal of experience with the management of theatres and is a first class motion picture man.

Work will soon be started on the new Clark and Rowland theatre in Bloomfield, a section of Pittsburgh. The theatre is to be erected on Liberty avenue and the present plans call for its completion early in the fall. The building will be three stories high, of fireproof construction, and it will be somewhat similar to the Belmar theatre. The basement of the building will be used for a bowling alley, the second floor for offices and the third floor for hall and lodge purposes. The building will be 145 feet deep and 45 feet wide. The theatre will have a capacity of eight hundred and the building and equipment will cost $50,000.

There are to be improvements made in the East End Cameraphone theatre, Pittsburgh, and with the completion of the same it will be one of the best equipped in that section of the city. H. B. Kester, the owner and manager, has arranged for one of the finest organs that is to be found in any theatre in that part of the country. The theatre will be thoroughly remodeled and repainted throughout.

TENNESSEE

John Wassman, brother of W. H. Wassman, owner of both the Crystal and the Knickerbocker, Nashville, has recently been made manager of the Crystal theatre. Mr. Wassman up to a few months ago had been in charge of the operating room at the Crystal theatre.

TEXAS

G. W. Bell, Jr., now is associated with M. Ulrich in the operation of the Rex theatre, Galveston. The theatre closed down for a few days in order to install several improvements. Mr. Bell has sold out his interest in the Palace theatre, Galveston, but announces that in conjunction with his partner, he will erect another house in Galveston, plans for which have already been drawn. The new theatre will be finished within four or five months.

J. C. Stevens, the successful manager of the Bell Airdomes, has taken charge of the new theatre at the corner of Congress avenue and Seventh street, Austin. Mr. Stevens has made every improvement possible for the comfort of the patrons. Possibly the most important improvement that has been made is the installation of a ventilating system that completely changes the air in the entire theatre every three minutes.

WISCONSIN

J. Friedman will open his new eight hundred-seat theatre in Racine in about three weeks.

Parkinson and Dockendorff, La Crosse architects, have completed plans for the new picture playhouse which Otto Bell is going to build on South Water street, Sparta. The plans have been submitted to the State fire marshal's department. The theatre will be one of the most complete and modern playhouses in the state, of brick and concrete construction, with a 50-foot frontage and 110 feet in length. The seating capacity, including main floor and balcony, will be 700.

FEDERAL ELECTRIC SIGNS MAKE GLOWING PUBLICITY FOR KNICKERBOCKER, NASHVILLE

ONE of the largest electric signs in Nashville, Tenn., was recently placed upon the Knickerbocker, the new ninety thousand dollar picture theatre opened there last month. The illumination can be seen all over the city. Another sign placed upon the Knickerbocker is over the front entrance. It is a Federal Attraction Board. The reading matter can be changed as often as desired, simply by lifting the letters off and placing new ones in their place.

NOW IS THE TIME TO EQUIP WITH FANS

We will furnish you (4) oscillating fans, the kind that distribute the air by swinging in different directions, for direct current at a total of $44.00. Alternating, $50.00. Also Ceiling Fans, Bracket and Ventilating.

WELL PLAYED, CORRECTLY STAGED PICTURIZATION OF CLASSIC.

Dustin Farnum in

DAVID GARRICK

Pallas-Paramount.

DIRECTOR	Frank Lloyd
AS A WHOLE	Delightful
STORY	Well-known classic
DIRECTION	Excellent
PHOTOGRAPHY	Very fine
LIGHTINGS	Effective
CAMERA WORK	Excellent
STAR	Seemed ideal in part
SUPPORT	Very well chosen
EXTERIORS	Atmosphere retained
INTERIORS	Very fine
DETAIL	Remarkably fine
LENGTH	Five parts

HERE we have a picturization of the well-known classic of by-gone days in London. In attempting to portray before the camera a story of this period, the director is marking out for himself a tremendous amount of work in the way of preparing proper detail as to costumes, settings and properties.

The Pallas company must be complimented on the production they have given us and Director Lloyd is surely to be praised for the manner in which the atmosphere of this period has been maintained. The best compliment of all is that the story moves along so humanly you forget the fact that it is a costume production and live the action with the characters.

Since this story is a simple tale of a human incident, the whole is, of course, not a tremendous offering, but it certainly is a little gem, in that it is an almost perfect presentation of a classic.

The photography throughout is remarkably clear, the lightings are good and we have intelligent use of close-ups. The atmosphere is not obtrusive, but still, is in perfect keeping throughout, and the detail has been given very careful attention, even down to the cutlery used at the table in the famous dinner scene.

"David Garrick" has been done before in a less pretentious way in the films, but this offering truly marks the advance which has been made in the production of films in the time which has elapsed between the previous offering and this one.

Mr. Farnum as Garrick seems exactly equipped for the role, because he has always been rather the matinee-idol type and in this, as the gentleman-actor, of the period of powdered wigs and duels, he fits in perfectly.

Winifred Kingston as the merchant's daughter gives us one of the best portrayals she has ever put over in any film offering.

Herbert Standing as the father is excellent. In the remainder of the cast we found some splendid types and every part was nicely handled.

In the titles we found the use of border designs made from old wood cuts, which helped decidedly in maintaining the proper atmosphere. These titles are following, in a way, the thought of Tom Ince, who has been giving us title cards for some time which suggested by the painting thereon the theme of the action at that period in the story.

Taken as a whole, I consider this offering to be one of the really splendid films of recent months, for the reason that it is a finished production, in every way, of a classic which can be shown to any audience with an assurance of genuine appreciation.

It is most decidedly very much "worth-while."

Others in the cast were Frank Bonn, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Olive White and Mary Mersch.

Goldberg in the Movies

—and the Story of a Young Man's Climb from Nothing a Week to a Millionaire's Income

Goldberg—cartoonist of the N. Y. Evening Mail and creator of "Foolish Questions," "I'm the Guy," "Father Was Right," and a half-dozen other syndicated cartoon successes known to 3,000,000 newspaper reading families all over the United States—has evolved a new kind of moving picture.

The House of Pathé has coaxed Goldberg into the moving picture field, and within a few days the Pathé Exchange, in conjunction with the N. Y. Evening Mail Syndicate, will show Goldberg Animated Cartoons in moving picture theatres in almost every city and town in this country.

For months and months, Goldberg has been sketching away in his studio in the tower of The Evening Mail office in New York, and now the Goldberg movie-comic is ready to step out. People who have seen advance performances of these new funny films say that every foot and flicker is a riot of laughter.

It is not strange that Goldberg has taken so well to the movies. Goldberg, beyond all other American cartoonists, is a cartoonist of action. Goldberg's characters are LIVE, living people. His newspaper cartoons themselves are almost moving pictures.

Goldberg Sees The Fun In Human Nature

But there is always more to a Goldberg cartoon than mere fun and action. Goldberg, in a good-humored way, gets human nature's number. He sees us with our coats and collars off—just as we are. He understands the human race—its foibles and its funny little frailties. And this explains why swarms of people buy papers with Goldberg cartoons day after day.

The biography of Reuben L. Goldberg reads like a moving picture romance, itself. Nine years ago he was graduated from an engineering college. Then he started to work at $12 a week drawing funny pictures for a San Francisco paper, after his father had advised him to stay out of the newspaper business because there was no money in it.

Sometime later he came to New York and got $50 a week from The Evening Mail, and he has been on The Evening Mail ever since. He jumped to $65 a week—then $75—then $100. Then other newspapers began to ask The Evening Mail to share Goldberg with them—their readers wanted him—and his cartoons were syndicated and it was not long before Goldberg had an audience of about 7,000,000 readers a day. At this time his earnings increased to $450 a week. Goldberg has now become a national figure, and 3,000,000 families contribute to his income. A contract just signed with The Evening Mail Syndicate gives him an annual salary of $50,000—and with moving picture royalties and other percentages his earnings the coming year will probably exceed $125,000.

R. L. GOLDBERG

Goldberg is the father of a dozen phrases that have swept the country like popular songs the past few years: "I'm the Guy," "Father Was Right," "It's All Wrong," "I Never Thought of That," and others. He is also the originator of "Old Man Alf of the Alphabet," "Foolish Questions," and other famous cartoon series.

In the new Pathé moving pictures Goldberg will introduce some of his old familiar characters and a troupe of brand new ones, and—for the first time ever—Goldberg's "Boob Weekly."

Get your double share of Goldberg fun—in your daily newspaper and at your moving picture theatre.

You want to know Goldberg. If your newspaper does not have him—ask why.

And ask the manager of your moving picture theatre to book Goldberg soon.

Dear Sir:

I desire to compliment you on the drawing power of your latest serial, The Iron Claw.

I find, upon looking into the matter carefully, that the patrons of my house in which I am showing the picture, are very well pleased and thoroughly entertained. I would heartily suggest that you increase the picture to twenty episodes.

I positively do not think that any harm could come of such an increase, as it would draw for the six episodes without any doubt whatever.

Hoping to hear of such a change, I am,

Very truly yours,

EDNA MAY

IN

"SALVATION JOAN"

SPECIAL BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

By MARGUERITE BERTSCH

THE EVENING MAIL

Set it down to Edna May's credit that she is a better screen actress right now than most of those who have been practicing the art for many months.

Her placid beauty, her big eyes, striking profile and persuasive smile are positive assets on the screen.

The New York Press

Edna May scores in new film play. Friends of the former "Belle of New York" crowded into the Fulton Theatre last night to see the one time comic opera star appear in "Salvation Joan," a stirring seven-part romantic drama filmed by the Vitagraph Company.

The World.

Her admirers last night were delighted with her appearance in the familiar costume and in familiar scenes.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

Edna May in "Salvation Joan" was a part of the reincarnation of her famous characterization of the Salvation Lassie in "The Belle of New York."

The Sun.

Still they "Follow On," when "The Belle of New York" returned to a voiceless theatre last night there was just as vigorous applause as when she used to sing that tantalizing song about the crowds that followed her. The old fervor was again made manifest in a big crowd in the Fulton Theatre, where she once more wore the Salvation Army uniform.

The Morning Telegraph

The character of Joan Crawford, heroine of this gripping drama of the screen, is fully within the dramatic and emotional grasp of Edna May.

New York American

Another film debut of unusual importance occurred at the Fulton Theatre last evening when Edna May, clever actress and noted beauty, appeared in a new film drama, entitled "Salvation Joan."

The New York Times.

Edna May returns as a movie star in "Salvation Joan." The charming beauty that made Edna May a musical comedy favorite, are still potent. It looked more like a Monday night at the Opera than a movie first showing.

FRANK DANIELS

For many months leading American exhibitors wrote the Vitagraph requesting a series of superlative one-reel comedies.

For many months Vitagraph sought a comedian who was different and who would be able to take his place at the head of all the motion picture fun-makers.

They finally sought out FRANK DANIELS.

That was the beginning—and the end is not yet.

"THE ESCAPADES OF MR. JACK" are the first samples of the soundness of the exhibitor's theory as to the market for superlative one reelers and redound to the credit of Vitagraph for selecting

I want every exhibitor in the United States to read what the N. Y. Evening Mail and Wide Magazine of April 22nd say about the new House Peters picture "The Closed Road" produced by that great genius Maurice Tourneur. See the picture. It will show you the quality you will find in all the "new day" subjects now being released on the one a week basis by the World Film Corporation.

Directed by Maurice Tourneur.

Reviewed by Patrick Kearney.

This Paragon feature is one of the few faultless pictures the writer has ever seen. It is faultless as to story, acting and direction. This is high praise to give to a film, but it is well deserved, and only the fact that it is not as to length a pretentious offering prevents its being one of the very best films ever made. A ten or twelve reel production, say, handled in the same perfect style and with the same amount of material, would sweep the country. It is too bad that this one is on such a small scale. As it is, the picture should prove a gold mine for exhibitors.

The story as seen through the film is one which O. Henry might be proud to have written. It is entirely without trite developments. Every incident is closely bound to every other; there are no forced climaxes or loose ends; everything coincidental or irrelevant has been carefully kept out, and the suspense is so well handled that no one can have the faintest idea, until the very last scene, as to whether the ending will be a happy one or a tragic. The whole thing is a marvel of clever workmanship.

This remarkable dramatic suspense is in a large measure due to the director. Suspense has been created without any of the old-time devices. Originality marks the director's every move. One striking instance of his talent is shown in his handling of the last scene, a scene which is in itself a much-used one and so often staged that one might expect it to be trite. The innocent man is in the electric chair, about to die. But the governor sends his pardon. Ordinarily the messenger suddenly rushes in and stops the proceedings. chair; then there is no death house nor electric chair. A switchboard is But here there is a hand seen to move one switch up toward the contact point. shown and a hand is seen to move another hand seizes the operator's and pulls it back. Then at the last minute another switch up toward the contact point. Such a scene, shown when the spectators are at the anxiety-breaking point, should drive any assemblage into storms of applause. It is a stroke of genius, and it is only one example of the sort of thing out of which the film is made.

Another series of scenes, wonderfully effective, is that one showing the agonies of the prisoner on the eve of his electrocution. He goes through various weird nightmares and sees visions, which are shown with excellent double-exposure work.

In fact, there is so much of the out of the ordinary in the picture that it would take three columns to do it justice. The thing to do is to see it, and it is a picture which will please every one.

House Peters and Barbara Tennant play the leading roles, and in support are Lionel Adams, George Cowl and Leslie Stowe

It's a Long Program That Has No Short Subjects

You know the old adage, "It's a long lane that has no turning."
This holds good in photoplays. Watch the restlessness of your spectators if you have nothing but long features.
Run a good short comedy or two and a short drama with a feature and see how their interest quickens.
Essanay is making a speciality of high-class one, two and three-reel dramas and comedies, with its stars featured. Book them and see how it pleases your patrons.
Truly it is a long program that has no short subjects.

Wanted: Picture Editors and Writers

A VERMONT exhibitor, after giving his audience the length and kind of pictures they asked for, found that only 62 per cent. answered "yes" to a card test asking, "Do our shows generally please you?"

This test agrees so well with other similar tests that we know of and so closely with the recent declaration of a New York critic that only 66 per cent. of the pictures produced to-day are acceptable to the average audience that we may accept the percentage as about correct.

IF so, there is something decidedly wrong.

If 50 per cent. of our reading matter were unacceptable the publication business would be in a pretty state.

If 50 per cent. of our pictures to-day are not wanted by the public, then the picture business is facing a serious situation.

THERE is no desire here to be smartly critical. It is very easy to find the faults in a picture and a very difficult task to make a perfect one. And the show business, as we well know, has always been a gamble, even upon the part of the best producers.

But the situation we face is a huge, fundamental one. If 50 per cent. of our pictures are utterly hopeless—"sheer bunk," a New York newspaper says, and among these are included many pretentious productions costing as much as $50,000—then it's time for those who have serious interests at stake in this fifth estate and industry to stop and take stock of the situation.

WHAT is the function of the picture?

The answer is simple—to entertain the public. We are speaking now purely of the pictures as an amusement business.

To entertain the public—successfully—is something of an undertaking. Men have always found it so. It is a specialist's work. It demands primarily a high order of intuitive sense—of what will please the public—and of creative ability.

Let us take the magazines and consider how they go about the business of entertaining the public—successfully.

BACK of each magazine there is one dominant publishing policy. It is the conception of some man or set of men who through special ability and special experience have reason to believe that they know what the public or a definite class of the public, prefers in the way of magazines.

Always this dominant policy rules. It is the genius of the publication and of its success.

To carry out this entertainment policy there are other specialists, writers and editors and illustrators—all specialists.

TO keep in touch with the public pulse they have various ways. I know of one publication which has a corps of salesmen, selling copies of the magazine over the retail counter and who interview every buyer on his preferences in the way of reading matter and illustrations.

Their sense of the public pulse is always close and keen.

But the point is that these makers of magazines are specialists—with a dominant policy, a big, firm, guiding policy—and organization.

ONE very successful publication has the best writers in the country—all of them—on its staff. Not on salary—the expense would be vastly prohibitive. But literally they are on its staff because this publication pays the highest current rate per word, and they know this; so the publication gets right along their freshest ideas, their best creations.

Are all accepted?

By no means. The magazine knows what it wants, what fits its dominant, guiding policy—which means that it knows and has proven what a large percentage of the public wants.

So its editors discriminate closely and select little; and often they take a feature or piece of fiction which is rich in color, characterization, etc., but lacking in construction, and mold it into the form in which the public likes it.

THESE creators of public entertainment are all specialists. They are not real estate men, nor department store men, nor engineers—they would probably be abject failures in other such spheres. But they do know about entertaining the public. It is their business.

Have we such men—enough of such men—making pictures? Have we these same clear-cut, dominant policies? Have we film editors and writers such as the world of the printing press has? Have we its knowledge of public likes?

No, we haven't—not by 50 per cent. at least. And that is why 50 per cent. or more of the pictures flashed on the screen to-day are not flashed into the minds and hearts of the audience. That is why patrons are not half pleased. That is why the newspapers are humorously caustic. That is why we hear doleful prophecies of the future of the pictures' hold on the public.

THESE are facts, and we had best face them.

It is just as idle to-day to send out a picture not ably, very ably, edited as it is to put a confusing conglomeration of word pictures into a magazine and expect the public to read through the maze—which it won't.

How many writers and—just as importantly—how many editors—are creating pictures to-day? How many as compared with over two hundred and fifty reels a week? How many of these men could hold down similar positions in the publication world?

Herein lies the answer for the Vermont exhibitor and his 52 per cent. of pleased patrons.

W. A. Johnston.

Extra Footage and the Exhibitor

TESTIMONY from an exhibitor on the availability and "marketability" of any length or kind of picture has a peculiar value to the picture-maker. It is first-hand information by which he can test his theories and ideas and check them up before he has gone too far in financial exploitation of them. For this reason the following letter from V. H. Oxley, vice-president of the Bradford Amusement Company, of Bradford, Pa., is worth a careful perusal.

MR. OXLEY is an intelligent observer. We have heard from him before on various subjects and he is always worth hearing from.

His opinion of the seven-reel feature in theatres and towns of the size of the Grand Theatre, and Bradford, Pa., is well worth noting, the more so because in the instance he cites the feature in question made "a most pronounced hit."

"THERE is something to which your attention should be directed," he writes, "that is, the growing tendency to make seven-reel features. This means useless extra footage, with a proportionate extra charge to the exhibitor.

"When the seven reeler is run, the house program is disturbed by the elimination of two other reels which the patrons have been accustomed to look forward to on their established days.

"Not only that, but the exhibitor has usually spent weeks shifting his fillers around to balance the program, only to have it disturbed at one blow.

"WE ran a seven-reel feature last night, and while it was a most pronounced hit, I made my decision not to run any more and am cancelling future bookings. That is the only way to convince the manufacturer that one concern cannot hog the show.

"The above has referenece to seven thousand feet of film. There probably are some pretentious seven-reel features, but with a couple of exceptions, such a production is generally footage—the extra footage displacing something that the manager knows is of real interest to his patrons.

AN extremely interesting statement. It is the more so because it is not Mr. Oxley who is speaking, but his audience. It is not the testimony of one man, but the consensus of opinion of five hundred or six or eight hundred theatregoers.

The difference between the program consisting of one seven-reel feature and the program made up of a five-reel picture, a reel of news and a reel of comedy or travelogue, is the difference between a novel and a magazine. And the American people, probably more than any other nation in the world, are a magazine reading people. The novel is their occasional, the magazine their steady mental food.

THIS is no disparagement of the seven reeler that is worth seven reels. As for what Mr. Oxley calls extra footage, that is equally unprofitable, for both producer and exhibitor in the long run, whether the picture be a padded two-reeler or an inflated ten-reeler.

But it is almost needless to point out that the extra-long picture will always labor under the disadvantage of its own length, for the same reason that the average magazine has many times the circulation of the average novel.

An Important Movement

THE establishment of a screen club in Des Moines, as noted in this week's issue of Motion Picture News, following close upon the organizations of similar and very promising clubs in Buffalo and Atlanta, indicates the growth of an interesting and significant movement throughout the country. We are just in receipt of a request from Louisville for information as to the proper formation of such a body.

These clubs are formed by local exchanges and leading exhibitors. They indicate the desire of these factors to get together and their ability to work together for their mutual good and for the benefit of the industry at large.

SIMILAR organizations already in active and powerful existence are the Pittsburgh Screen Club, the Cincinnati Screen Club, the Southern Motion Picture Trades Club of New Orleans, the Kansas Amusement Association, the Motion Picture Trades Club of Texas, and the Film Boards of Trade of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

These associations are all doing constructive work, constructive within and without the industry. They are solving their business problems and disagreements and raising their business standards. They are linking the picture business to other businesses and making the picture theatre and exchange factors in civic progress.

More power to these organizations and more of them!

Merger Rumor Denied by Famous and Lasky Companies

Dailies Contradict Their Own Statements Two Days After Announcement Appeared in Their Columns—Although Representatives of Triangle and the Other Two Companies were in Conference in Los Angeles, No Definite Agreement Was Reached

OUT of two months or more of rumors of mergers there came last week in the daily newspapers a definite statement that Famous Players and Lasky had made new contracts to release their pictures through Triangle. The statement went into details, tending to show that an entirely new group, and one of the most important yet assembled in the motion picture industry, had been formed, and, under the name of Triangle, would offer to the public the productions of the Famous Players, Lasky, Fine Arts, Kay-Bee and Keystone studios.

Two days later the same newspapers announced that they had been a trifle hasty, and that no new combination had actually been formed.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is in a position to state that neither Lasky nor Famous Players contemplates leaving Paramount, even were they in a position to do so. Furthermore, although representatives of all the concerns mentioned have been in conference at Los Angeles for more than a week, no definite agreement has been reached, and none of them has placed a signature to any document as party to any new agreement.

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players; Samuel Goldfish, vice-president and general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; Adam Kessel and C. O. Baumann, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, with H. B. Smithers, of F. S. Smithers and Company, bankers, and Oscar Cubelman, of Knauth, Nachod and Kuhne, bankers, returned to New York from the west coast on April 29, and immediately afterward it was announced that the negotiations commenced in the West would be continued in New York.

Announcement Premature

At the same time all the parties to the reported combine issued statements, explaining the situation as they saw it, and their several positions in the matter. A digest of these statements, which are presented herewith, indicates that the announcement of a new merger was premature.

Mr. Zukor, on his return, told MOTION PICTURE NEWS that the conference in which he had participated had discussed a "new affiliation" of film interests, and added:

"The genuine and most important object of the affiliation of film interests for which these conferences were arranged is the tremendous advantage that will thus be created for the production of bigger and better pictures. The coalition of producing facilities, equipment and staffs that would result from this arrangement would increase the efficiency of each of the companies involved in a remarkable degree. Talking for the Famous Players Film Company, I need not tell you that ever since its organization, more than four years ago, we have accepted every opportunity presented, and have constantly sought new means to produce greater and better photoplays.

"History repeats itself even in the film business. The same unfavorable conditions that existed in the industry four years ago have returned in a larger degree today. Then the easy success that had been won by film producers had led them to lower their standards and produce such inferior subjects that the public was already becoming tired of the consistently poor merit of the average moving picture program and was deserting the photoplay theatres in alarming numbers. The Famous Players Film Company was organized at that time in recognition of this situation and with the determined purpose to raise the falling standards of screen production. Similar disadvantages have again arisen. Due to destructive competition and new detriments, photoplay merit seems again certain to be lowered. Such an affiliation of interests as is now contemplated would remove at once all the unnecessary obstacles that have so far impeded the fullest progress of the photoplay art. In the event of the culmination of the efforts to form this amalgamation, the various companies affected will retain in every respect their total individualities and inherent organizations.

"It does not require any particular emphasis to indicate that the recipients of the greatest benefit of such an amalgamation would be the public and the exhibitors.

Great Problems with Producers

"It must be remembered that the great problems of the film industry are centered in the producers. Distribution of motion pictures, like the circulation of any other mercantile product, is a mechanical process, and can be simply regulated and conducted, but the producing faction involves all the hazards and difficulties of creative art, and upon the foundations of this branch of the trade rests the structure of the entire industry.

"The producing of a motion picture is a work of art, subject to all the varying influences that any artistic creation is dependent upon. When the photoplay is already produced, it then becomes a canned product, and in this condition comes under the head of ordinary business. The problems that confront one distributor of this product are elementary, and can be solved by the adoption of usual business methods. But a producing policy upon which depends artistic advancement and the very life or death of the industry is one fraught with constant anxieties and perplexities. It is to minimize these deterring influences and so make possible the greatest advance of the art that I have permitted the Famous Players Film Company to become an active factor in the proposed amalgamation."

Mr. Goldfish was less communicative. He said: "I have read the stories that appeared in the various newspapers, and wish emphatically to deny that any negotiations have been concluded. The Lasky company has no intention of releasing its productions through any other distributing concern than Paramount Pictures Corporation in the United States.

The local offices of the Triangle Film Corporation issued this statement:

"While there has been no merger of the motion picture interests of the Triangle and Paramount corporations, as erroneously reported, the New York office of the Triangle Film Corporation has received telegraphic advice from H. E. Aitken, its president, now in Los Angeles, to the effect that a new alignment of the interests of that corporation, and the addition of two other interests has been arranged, and that the business of all concerned will be carried on under the name and direction of the Triangle Film Corporation.

"The official statement issued by the Triangle Film Corporation definitely asserts that there are no interests of the new alignment in which the Paramount company will share, nor is the latter concerned therein. The new arrangement is being backed by financial interests in New York.

"The new combination of interests is by no means the far-reaching affair indicated in unauthorized reports of some weeks ago, but is a conservative realignment of highly important factors in the motion picture world. The arrangement comprises an affiliation of the Triangle Film Corporation, the New York Motion Picture Corporation, the Keystone Film Company, the Majestic Motion Picture Company and the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company."

W. W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount, made this statement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"The present merger of the Lasky and Famous Players companies will affect us in no way, as we have long-term contracts with our producers for the exclusive distribution of their product, and under the existing conditions there is no way in which they could distribute their product through other channels.

"It is a recognized fact at the present time that there is a tremendous waste in the cost of production, and for this reason it can readily be seen that if a consolidation of the producing companies could be arranged, a great deal of this expense could be eliminated, for instead of each producing company maintaining a large studio, one large studio, where all expenses were shared by the various companies, would be sufficient, and would at the same time effect a great saving in operating cost."

PECK IN LOS ANGELES PICKING LOCATIONS

C. Mortimer Peck who has been with the American for the past several months writing scenarios for two dramatic companies, is spending a few days in Los Angeles picking locations for the subjects to be produced in the near future. Mr. Peck was formerly in charge of the advertising department for the Box Office Attractions, when the William Fox subjects were released under that exchange system. He gave up his work there to accept a similar position with the Balboa Amusement Producing Company where he originated the series idea, and aided in the plot formation for "Who Pays" releases on the Pathe program.

While with the Balboa Company Mr. Peck created a new selling system which to a great measure was responsible for the growth of this organization. After resigning as vice-president of the Balboa Company, he for several months was engaged in free-lancing scenarios, and it was while engaged in this that the American Film people learned of him with the result that he was added to their staff.

CUMMINS WILL HANDLE MEXICAN PICTURE

Samuel Cummins of 1476 Broadway, New York, who has successfully exploited the Fatherland pictures of "Fighting the Allies," or, "Germany at War" by booking them in all the big theatres throughout the country and also on the Keith circuit, has taken control of the latest Mexican pictures in this country, known as "Across the Border," exploiting them under the Beacon Film emblem. He has already booked them for one hundred days with the Marcus Loew circuit.

Mr. Cummins intends to state-right these pictures, and dispose of them at once. Already options for half of the country have been given.

Arrow Directors Are Men of Wide Experience

Hansel Made Stage Debut with Modjeska and Later Supported Margaret Mather—McGill Gained Reputation as Being Able to Play Any Part on Call

THE directors of the Arrow-Pathé series, "Who's Guilty"?—Howard Hansel and Lawrence B. McGill—are men of wide experience in theatrical and motion picture work.

Hansel was born in Terre Haute, Ind., forty years ago, and spent his early life in railroading and newspaper work. His stage début was made in "As You Like It," with Madame Modjeska. He supported Margaret Mather, James O'Neil and Kyrle Bellew. He played second lead to Robert Edeson when Edeson was leading man in the old Boston Museum. Then for three years he was with Charles Frohman. After several stock engagements he went to the Castle Square Company, Boston, where he remained six years.

From Boston he went to the management of David Belasco, appearing in several successes with Blanche Bates. Then came his entrance into motion pictures as a member of the Thanhouser directing staff. In three years he produced more than 150 photoplays, including "The Million Dollar Mystery," which he directed in its entirety.

McGill, Hansel's co-director, is a native of Mississippi, having been born in the town of Cortlandt forty-seven years ago. His first show experience was with a traveling minstrel troupe, from which he soon graduated to membership in a repertoire company. McGill made a name for himself as a clever youth who could play any part on call. Soon he had money enough to start a company of his own. The first venture succeeded and there followed twenty years of stock company production, in which time McGill staged more than four hundred plays.

An early bird in the picture industry, McGill was for three years a director in the old Reliance plant. Then he became a feature director with All-Star, producing the Augustus Thomas successes. He also directed "Pierre of the Plains" and "The Grey Hound" for All-Star, and then went back to Reliance. There followed "The Sealed Valley" for Metro and "How Molly Made Good." Then he joined the Arrow forces and directed "The Woman's Law," which Pathé released.

"Activity" Is Their Middle Name at Santa Barbara

In Addition to Preparations Under Way for Reception Four Stars Recently Engaged by President Hutchinson, Work Is Pushed on Several Features

IN addition to the preparations now under way at the American-Mutual studios in Santa Barbara, Cal., for the reception of Mary Miles Minter, Richard Bennett, Audrey Munson and Helen Holmes, the new stars recently engaged by President Samuel S. Hutchinson, work is being pushed by the producing forces on a number of feature productions to be released as Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition.

Field work on four of these productions, "A Man's Soul," "The Highest Bid," "The Abandonment" and "The Reclamation," has been completed.

Director Edward Sloman and his company of players, headed by Winnifred Greenwood, Franklin Ritchie and Roy Stewart, recently returned to Santa Barbara from a lower Pacific Coast town where they put the finishing touches to several of the exterior scenes of "A Man's Soul," a five-part production to be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe.

William Russell is directing as well as starring in "The Highest Bid," another of the Masterpictures, De Luxe, now nearing completion.

The beautiful Santa Ynez mountains furnish the background for many of the exteriors in this production.

Mr. Russell and the members of his company, including Charlotte Burton and other players who have appeared in productions with him, spent more than two weeks in the mountains where most of the scenes were enacted. The picture was adapted from Arthur H. Gooden's story by J. Edward Hungerford of the American Mutual scenario department.

Helene Rosson and E. Forrest Taylor are the principals in "The Abandonment." This feature was filmed under the direction of Donald MacDonald.

Work on "The Reclamation," another of the four Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition, has been completed under the direction of Edward Sloman. The story is by Kenneth B. Clarke.

Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie are the featured players, supported by Dick La Reno.

"Britton of the Seventh" in Race for "V's" Blue Ribbon Pennant

"BRITTON OF THE SEVENTH," a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, is Vitagraph's big offering for the week of May 8. "His Dukeship, Mr. Jack," "The Double Double Cross," and "Out Ag'in, In Ag'in," provide three more reels, while "O'Hagan's Scoop" is the three-part Broadway Star Feature.

"Britton of the Seventh," written by Cyrus Townsend Brady and picturized by Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, is a tale of frontier days and the famous Seventh Cavalry.

This picture, taken in the plains of Texas, is enacted by Charles Kent, Bobby Connelly, Harry Northrup, Ned Finley, Darwin Karr and a list of prominent Vitagraphers. The services of a company of the Fourteenth Cavalry, now engaged in the Villa hunt in Mexico, and a tribe of Indians from the reservations in Oklahoma were also enlisted to make this a real historical reproduction of this sad page in American history.

In "His Dukeship, Mr. Jack," the latest of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," Frank Daniels has an opportunity to exhibit his character work. Jack poses as a Duke to get in soft with a pretty, young heiress. He gets away with the deception famously until the real Duke appears, and just to make matters worse, wifey happens on the scene. Mr. Jack finally makes his getaway in a pie wagon. Alice Washburn and Adele DeGarde assist Mr. Daniels in the enactment of this picture.

"The Double Double Cross" is another single-reel comedy in which William Dangman takes the leading part. He is assisted by Lucille Crane, Winthrop Mendell, Jessie Miller and William Lyttel, Jr.

"Out Ag'in, In Ag'in" is a comedy written by George McManus and directed by Lawrence Semon. Hughey Mack, John T. Kelly, Kate Price and Jewell Hunt play the important parts.

"O'Hagan's Scoop" is a newspaper drama in three parts, written by Ross D. Whytock and produced by Harry Davenport. The stellar roles are in the hands of Harry T. Morey and Belle Bruce, who have the assistance of Robert Gaillard, Thomas R. Mills and Harry Davenport.

New York League Exposition Is Under Way

Third Annual Exhibit Opens in the Grand Central Palace, New York—Manufacturers Took Liberal Space and Prepare for Big Displays to Make Strong Appeal to Exhibitors and the Public — Management Preparing for the Biggest Turnout of "Fans" in History of the Industry

THE past three weeks have seen unusual activities both mental and physical among the New York State Exhibitors' League. The just cause for all this hustle and bustle has been the third Annual Exposition given by this branch of the national body in Grand Central Palace, New York City. The exposition opens on Monday, May 1, at 2 p. m., and it is to continue for one week thereafter.

Co-operation having been secured with the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, the exhibits of the various manufacturers promise to be just as formidable and representative as in former years. All the space on the main floor of Grand Central Palace has been contracted for by producers, accessory manufacturers and allied trades, and the committee of exhibitors in charge of the exposition look forward to a large attendance and subsequent big receipts.

Scenic artists, carpenters, property men, painters, masons and the like have been laboring for ten days under the general direction of Art Director B. A. Rolfe to give the exposition an outward appearance of artistry and good taste. There are many innovations in the way of the erection of the booths promised from advance appearances, while the usual side shows, always popular with the motion picture loving public, will be a prominent feature of the exposition.

Metro's booth, which monopolizes as much space as is usually alloted to five or six smaller exhibits, is decorated on the style of a reception room. A fireplace in the center, handsomely decorated walls, conspicuous furniture and mirrored doors unite to create an impression of dignity and attractiveness. For several days the best scenic artists and property men in the Metro studio of New York were laboring to perfect the exhibit with as much heartiness as if they were constructing a setting for one of the company's big features. The result will surely speak for itself.

Universal's Booth

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has taken unto itself one of the best position in the palace. When the spectator reaches the top of the stairs, there on the right will be one booth gorgeously decorated in red to emblemize the Red Feather pictures. On the left is a booth in blue calling immediate attention to Bluebird Photoplays, Inc. Extending across the tops of these booths and bridging the center aisle is an electrical sign in red, white and blue, advertising the justly celebrated Universal Animated Weekly with the slogan, "Universal Animated Weekly Tops Them All." This striking exhibit is the result of weeks of labor by H. H. Van Loan, Universal's chief of publicity. Red Feathers and Bluebirds there will be in abundance and blind indeed will be the visitor who fails to catch the name of Universal.

Leon J. Rubenstein, publicity director of the Thanhouser film corporation, has in readiness a number of stunts with which to startle and attract the patronage of the exposition. There will be on view a new, specially built Pullman automobile, molded on the coupe style. The chasis will be exhibited undecorated and a prize of one hundred dollars will be given to the person who suggests the best color scheme for the car's decoration.

On the third night of the ball, Mr. Rubenstein will stage the Thanhouser beauty show at which all the far famed beauties of the New Rochelle studio will attend from Florence La Badie, Gladys Leslie, Doris Grey, Kathryn Adams and so on down the line of lesser distinguished but no less pulchritudinous maidens. Mr. Rubenstein states that the beauties will be selling something for the good of some charity.

Closing night will witness the appearance of Claude Cooper and Frank McNish, respectively Oscar and Conrad of the Falstaff comedies. These artists will appear in their eccentric character makeups and cut capers for the amusement of the assemblage.

Selig at the Fair

The Selig company, though located in Chicago and not expected to celebrate with the exhibitors, will do so despite the long distance that separates it from the exposition place. A special film presenting interesting scenes from the Selig Jungle Zoo, produced at Los Angeles, California, will be shown. This will include a panorama of the Selig studio, various views of the managerie. Inside information regarding the filming of a Selig Red Seal photoplay will also be exhibited via the celluloid.

The Vitagraph Company of America has signed for four booth spaces at this show and will make itself prominent in its usual unobstructive but still greatly noticeable style. The Vitagraph stars who are legion will be in attendance on every night to meet fans and friends, to sign their signatures for admiring beholders and to scatter souvenirs which, it is promised, will be treasured long after the exposition has been and gone. Various members of the Vitagraph studio will be on hand to introduce the players to the public, while it can safely be said that the Vitagraph beauties will add more color and charm to the six-day event.

William Fox will also be represented at the Exhibitors' Show. During the past few days there has been in construction a booth at the Palace that has kept everyone guessing. It looks like a minature theatre, and whether Mr. Fox plans to show his players off from high points of vantage or stage a minstrel show is a question that will not be answered until the opening of the exposition.

The Mutual Film Corporation, despite the fact that many of its subsidiary companies are attending individually, will be represented as its whole. Its exhibit at the Palace show will be molded on the same liberal scale as its other exhibit in the Madison Square Garden show. The stars of the various companies contributing to the Mutual program will be on hand in its interest when they are not acting as representatives of their individual companies.

There are many other exhibits scheduled to startle the patrons of the exposition. Each company to be actively represented has in mind some stunt that will make toward the good of the entire show. A complete list of these companies who have contracted for floor space follows: American Seating Company, Metro, Screen Club, General Electric Company, American Photoplayed, Vitagraph, Triangle, William L. Sherry, Famous Players, Lasky, Motion Picture News, Motion Picture Mail, Pease Piano Company, Mutual, Universal, Fox, National Cash Register Company, Pathé, World Film, Brooklyn Triangle, Morning Telegraph, Novelty Slide Company, Auto Film Rewinding Company, Motography, Moving Picture World, Exhibitors' Poster and Supply Company, Champion Sports Film Company, Menger and Ring, Wurlitzer, B. F. Porter and N. W. Electric Company, Precision Machine Company, Picture Theatre Equipment Company, Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, International Film Service, Edison, Paramount.

Exhibits to Appeal to Trade and Public

It can be seen from the above list that the exhibits are designed to appeal both to the exhibitors and the fans. There will be plenty of entertainment, instruction and revelations provided for both classes.

A special feature of the occasion arranged by the exhibitors will be the taking of a picture under the direction of Col. Joe Smiley, in which none but amateurs will partake. The scenario has been chosen from a large number submitted by amateurs and it is expected that this novel stunt will attract widespread attention.

B. A. Rolfe has looked after the general decorations of the Palace in fitting style. Around the balcony are pots of greens and green branches are hung from the railings of the mezzanine floor. Mr. Rolfe has also consented to allow the Strand orchestra to forsake its stage at the Broadway house for the afternoon of opening day, and at precisely two o'clock they will formally open the exposition by playing a number of selections.

On each day of the exposition a portion of the receipts will be donated to some charity. Monday is Allies' Day; Tuesday the Jewish war sufferers will be considered; some of Wednesday's receipts go to the German Red Cross; a portion of Thursday's will be donated to the Cripples and Orphans; while Saturday will be Actors' Fund Day.

The following list of exhibitors comprises the Executive Committee in charge of the management of the exposition: Lee Ochs, Louis Blumenthal, Benjamin Lyons, I. Hartstall, Sam Trigger, William Hilkemier, Gus Koenigswald, Charles Haring, Otto Lederer, Chas. Steiner, Max S. Oestricher, John Wittman, Henry Cole, John Bolte, Abe Coleman, Frank Peters, D. Newman, H. Newman, Sam Suchman, J. J. Haggerty, A. Bauernfreund, D. Picker, William Brandt, Ben Title, Louis Lavine, John Manheimer, Sam Lesselbaum, Julian Loeb, William Hollander, J. C. Mooney, R. Isreals, J. Foster, G. Schwartz, M. Glynn.

Newspaper Support to Exhibitor Is Important

"Film Industry Spends More Money on Advertising in Dailies Than on Any Other Medium of Publicity," Says Burger of International, Releasing "Myra"

J. K. BURGER, manager of exchanges for the International Film Service, points out the importance of newspaper support for the exhibitor in connection with the initial releases of his organization, "The Mysteries of Myra" and "Has It Ever Happened to You?"

"Do you know what newspaper support means for the exhibitor?" asked Mr. Burger. "Consider the fact that approximately nine out of ten people living in communities where theatres are located read one or more newspapers daily.

J. K. BURGER

"The film industry as a whole, compared with any other industry, spends more money on newspaper advertising than on any other medium of publicity. Moreover, the International Film Service is today devoting more white space in newspaper display for the exhibitor than any other distributing organization in the film industry. Twenty million people daily, reading the Hearst newspapers, can see what they read visualized on the screen."

Victor Herbert Writes Opera for Dixon Film

Famous Composer for Last Eight Months at Work on Operatic Score for Full Orchestra—"The Fall of a Nation" Will Be Put on in an Elaborate Manner

THE troubles in Ireland lend peculiar significance to the latest labors of that celebrated native-born Irishman, Victor Herbert, who is likewise America's greatest composer. President of the Friends of Irish Freedom and prominent in many other Hibernian organizations, Mr. Herbert is writing "The Fall of a Nation" in the shadow of the world war and at the very moment of the long-expected Irish rebellion.

The libretto of "The Fall of a Nation" is by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," "The Leopard's Spots," "The One Woman," "The Foolish Virgin" and "The Birth of a Nation" scenario; the musical score is by Victor Herbert, composer, bandmaster, symphony director, author of the only strikingly successful American grand opera, "Natoma," and of more than forty popular operettas. The collaboration of these two master creators is perhaps the most sensational departure of the picture season, in the novel field of that which they style "cinema grand opera."

"The Fall of a Nation" will be produced at a Broadway theatre, New York, next month on a scale of magnificence commensurate with the most costly and elaborate production that has yet come out of the Los Angeles producing district. The secret of Victor Herbert's connection with it has been closely held and is now for the first time disclosed. For the last eight months Mr. Herbert has been writing the operatic score for full orchestra, based on Mr. Dixon's carefully timed continuity story. For the last two weeks he has been revising the score, page by page, in exact accord with the screen showing of the successive reels as they have been shipped to him from the Coast. His assistant director, Harold Sanford, is in Los Angeles rehearsing musicians in the work.

Never before in this country, it is said, has a composer of the first rank devoted his talents to providing an original score for a picture production. The solitary instance of the kind in Europe is Humperdinck and his original orchestration of "Sister Beatrice." Herbert was induced, partly by the influence of Humperdinck's example, partly by his admiration for the genius of Thomas Dixon, to make this extraordinary departure from his usual musical activities and to plunge into "pictorial grand opera." It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the character of this attempt is entirely different from anything that has preceded it.

The famous composer comes well by his artistic inheritance. Victor Herbert is a grandson of Samuel Lover, the Irish painter, actor and author, who wrote the rollicking "Handy Andy," "Harry Lorrequer" and other stories. Born in Dublin, he was educated first in his grandfather's house in London and later, both as to general culture and musical training, in Germany. He lived for many years on the Continent, then in the eighties was brought to America by Anton Seidl as concertmaster and 'cellist. Here his abilities rapidly developed. In addition to writing many classical pieces for the cello, piano and grand orchestra, Herbert entered the musical operetta field and with extraordinary fecundity turned out several score of the most sparkling comic operas and musical comedies in which Francis Wilson, DeWolf Hopper, Frank Daniels, Lulu Glaser, Fritzi Scheff and other favorites starred. He was for several years bandmaster of the 22d Regiment, succeeding Patrick Gilmore, but left it to direct his own symphony orchestra. Several of his musical comedies are now on the road, and others are planned for next year.

"The Fall of a Nation," produced by the National Drama Corporation, has a thoroughly American story.

SHERRILL ON WAY TO WEST COAST

Jack Sherrill, whose most recent screen appearance was opposite Alice Brady in the World Film production, "Then I'll Come Back to You," has left New York for California, where he will investigate offers from several producers.

THELMA SALTER, CHILD ACTRESS, WITH HORSLEY

Thelma Salter, a child actress known the world over, has been especially engaged by David Horsley to play in the supporting cast of Crane Wilbur in the five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, "The Wasted Years."

She is a native daughter of California, having been born in Los Angeles in 1909. She started her motion picture career appearing in "Like Father Like Son" with the Majestic company. She then attracted the attention of the Keystone people, and appeared in a comedy entitled "How Villains Are Made," and after that she scored a big success with her work in the "Sign of the Rose," with George Beban, at the New York Motion Picture Corporation. She continued with that company and appeared in support of William S. Hart in "The Disciple" and numerous other dramas.

Although Thelma stands just three feet six inches tall and weighs but sixty-two pounds, she is an accomplished horseback rider, swimmer and dancer.

Big Themes Form Basis of Pathe's "Who's Guilty?"

Release Dates Are as Follows: "Puppets of Fate," on May 8; 'The Tight Rein," on May 15; "The Tangled Web," on May 22; "The Silent Shame," on May 29, and "Sowing the Wind," on June 5—All are Problem Plays Indicting Certain Phases of Modern Life.

IT NOW is certain that before May 8, the date of release of the first photo-novel in Pathé's "Who's Guilty?" series, produced by the Arrow Film Corporation, at least eight and probably nine of the fourteen photo-novels comprising this series will have been delivered by the producers to Pathé. This in itself marks a record in photoplay production even for a record-breaking series.

It has made possible the delivery by Pathé to the many newspapers which will run the "Who's Guilty?" stories of six complete novels prior to the publication of the first one. Thereby the newspapers have been enabled to give these stories unusually fine space and layouts.

It has been decided to release these pictures in the following sequence: "Puppets of Fate" on May 8, "The Tight Rein" on May 15, "The Tangled Web" on May 22, "The Silent Shame" on May 29 and "Sowing the Wind" on June 5. These are the first five of the "Who's Guilty?" series.

All of these photo-novels are problem plays that present an indictment of certain present-day habits and conventions of society. They are concerned with the moral guilt of the men and women back of those immediately guilty.

Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore, the co-stars of the "Who's Guilty?" series, are seen in a variety of roles that calls for the highest histrionic ability. No two of the stories alike in plot, set, or costume; the result has been to tax to the limit the energies of the players, of Howell Hansel and Lawrence B. McGill, who are directing the "Who's Guilty?" stories, and of Hickson, the Fifth Avenue modiste who has designed Miss Nilsson's gowns exclusively for the "Who's Guilty?" series.

"Puppets of Fate"

"Puppets of Fate," the first of the series, hinges on the moral and legal right of a surgeon to perform a serious operation on a member of his own family. Medical and surgical ethics frown on such a practice; but there is no legal prevention of it. When the surgeon in "Puppets of Fate" makes his big mistake, it is left to the audience to determine who actually is guilty—the surgeon, his wife, a wealthy widow who has perhaps over-encouraged his ambitions, a fellow-surgeon, or the latter's wife.

In the same manner the right of a parent to determine whom his son shall marry is presented in "The Tight Rein." Out of the desire of a Puritanical mill-owner to weld two fortunes through the mating of his son with another mill-owner's daughter, comes a cataclismic tragedy that affects the son, the daughter, the parents and many others.

In "The Tangled Web," the third of the "Who's Guilty?" series, there is presented the problem of love versus money, the primal instinct of a woman to possess her husband's love rather than to be merely the choicest possession his money has brought him. It concerns itself, too, with the validity of a marriage which has been entered into through a fraud perpetrated on one of the contracting parties, an offense for which there is but little legal redress under present conditions.

Attacks Divorce Evil

The fourth of the series, "The Silent Shame," attacks the divorce evil, which now is arousing the interest of ministers, jurists, law-makers and laymen everywhere in the United States. Between South Carolina—where there is no divorce under any conditions—and Nevada—with its complacent Reno—there is a wide gulf. But it is no wider than between the right and the wrong of it as portrayed in this tremendous "Who's Guilty?" story.

A too-hastily-formed judgment of an innocent man's act—whereby he is forced to take up the life of a haunted and hunted criminal—is the basis of "Sowing the Wind." The economic struggle—a wealthy wife and a poor husband—is shown in "Sold Out," the sixth of the "Who's Guilty?" series. "Truth Crushed to Earth" concerns itself with the attitude of parents toward their children, or punishment given in moments of passion, of truth and honor crushed when they should be rewarded. "The Weaker Strain" asks the question—should a wife be dependent on her husband or has she a right to a career of her own, gained solely by her own efforts?

It is on big but homely themes like these that the "Who's Guilty?" pictures have been built in this Arrow-made series released by Pathé.

Plans Under Way for Pittsburgh Convention

June 27-28-29 Set for the Event, President Herrington Announces—State League Is Tendered Use of Exposition Buildings by Chamber of Commerce

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Pittsburgh, April 29.

PLANS are being arranged for the holding of the State convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in Pittsburgh on June 27, 28, and 29, and a big exposition is a feature that is being counted on in the plans.

Fred Herrington, president of the league, made the announcement that the above dates had been decided upon and also stated that a big exposition with comprehensive displays of manufacturers and dealers in pictures and picture house supplies will be one of the important adjuncts of the gathering and visitors will be present from a number of States.

Just where the convention will be held in this city has not as yet been decided upon, but a number of places have been under advisement. The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has tendered the use of the Pittsburgh Exposition buildings, and it is possible that either the main building of this group or Machinery hall will be selected.

A number of the Pittsburgh supply houses have promised their support and it is possible that the manufacturers will be well represented at the convention. The members of the State league intend to make the affair the biggest thing in the State.

Reservations for space will start shortly and film and supply houses have been asked to let the management know what their requirements will be in order to book the exhibits as quickly as possible. It is hoped to make the exposition one which will be a credit to the industry.

Manufacturers in Sympathy with McAleer Plan

Pittsburgh Screen Club Intends to Wage Vigorous Warfare on Political Candidates in Favor of Censorship, and Will Try to Elect Men Favoring Exhibitors

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Pittsburgh, April 29.

JOHN McALEER, chairman of the campaign committee of the Pittsburgh Screen Club has returned from New York, where he was working in connection with the plans of the club to fight state censorship.

In talking of the trip Mr. McAleer stated he has received every encouragement that the manufacturers will stand back of the local organization and give it financial and moral support in eliminating from the state of Pennsylvania the board of censors who are ruining the business in this State.

The campaign committee is busy formulating plans for covering Pennsylvania and making a vigorous campaign for the election of men who will be favorable to the film men in the next legislature. Only candidates who declare themselves against the censorship law will be assisted by the organization.

The campaign committee expects the support of the exhibitors throughout the entire State. Mr. McAleer will shortly make a statement which he says will be of interest to all persons connected with the film industry in this State.

MARY A. MERSCH SIGNS WITH PALLAS

Mary A. Mersch has been engaged by Pallas Pictures to appear in important characterizations on the Paramount Program.

Her first theatrical experience was gained at the Belasco theatre in Los Angeles, where she appeared in stock for two years. Following this engagement, her work on the road in "The College Widow," with Clayton White and Marie Stuart in vaudeville, and in leading parts with other organizations, gave her a splendid training. With Lasky, Selig and other prominent film producers she appeared with personal success, her latest screen portrayal being evidenced in "The Heart of Nora Flynn," a Lasky photoplay.

The initial production in which Miss Mersch appears, under the Pallas Pictures brand, is "David Garrick," in which Dustin Farnum plays the title role. "Davy Crockett," another Dustin Farnum release, is the next Pallas offering in which she will appear.

INTEREST IN ACTORS' FUND SHOWN EVERYWHERE

Support of the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund is extending into the most remote parts of the United States. Not only are the large and important cities of the country working with enthusiasm in the movement, but even the smaller cities, towns and hamlets are giving evidence of their determination not to be left behind.

James Pooton, chairman of the branch committee of the campaign in Arizona, writes to Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the Executive Committee, that practically all the motion picture houses of that section will join in the donation of ten per cent. of their receipts on National Motion Picture Tribute Day, May 19. Mr. Pooton says that his list of supporters is headed by Manager Klinger, of the Opera House, Tucson, the leading picture house of the state.

Two World Stars in Important Stage Successes

Robert Warwick Creates Role of Captain Brassbound for Grace George—Holbrook Blinn Is Picked by Margaret Anglin as Leading Man for Wilde Play

TWO stars of the World Film forces are now playing in important legitimate successes, and several others have received offers from prominent stage producers.

Robert Warwick was selected by Grace George to create the role of Capt. Brassbound in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," and now Miss George is endeavoring to secure Warwick for her 1916-1917 repertoire season, but nothing definite has been decided. Mr. Warwick is said to lean strongly toward the studio. He is actively engaged for World Films on the first of five productions, "Friday the 13th," which is being directed by Emile Chautard under the personal supervision of William A. Brady.

Holbrook Blinn was picked by Margaret Anglin to play the leading male role in "A Woman of No Importance," now running at the Fulton theatre, New York. A syndicate of moneyed men are erecting a theatre in the Fifth Avenue district, calling it the Holbrook Blinn theatre, and where Mr. Blinn will not only be the principal player, but will stage the productions. Mr. Blinn will divide his time between the theatre and the World Film studio, appearing about eight times a year on the World program.

Alice Brady, for the past eighteen months in film plays for World, is said to have declined eight offers from various legitimate producers for this and next season. Gail Kane has also been offered leading parts in several stage plays, but has refused all offers up to the present calling for a division of her time and attention.

Chambers May Help Director with "Common Law"

Author Expresses Willingness to Render All Possible Assistance in Picturization of His Novel as Vehicle for Clara Kimball Young

LETTERS and telegrams of congratulation reached the offices of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation this week in response to the announcement that Lewis J. Selznick had purchased Robert W. Chambers' widely-read novel, "The Common Law," to be picturized for the first feature in which Miss Young will be presented by the new organization next October.

So great has been the response that the four personal representatives of Mr. Selznick who were to begin a tour of different sections of the country this week have been forced to postpone the trip in order to rearrange their schedules to accommodate the hundreds of important exhibitors whose names have been added to the list of applications by the announcement about plans for production of "The Common Law."

Miss Young, while not engaged at the studio on her present production, is making a close study of the Chambers' novel and sketching out her own scenario.

Mr. Chambers has announced his willingness to lend any assistance possible to Miss Young and her director in picturizing his novel and he has been invited to be present during the taking of the scenes and make any suggestions he desires.

Arrangements are being completed this week for the lease of a studio in town pending the erection of the company's own studio and plant. Work on "The Common Law" will begin on July 16, the day after Miss Young's present contract expires.

Picture Theatre Finance Is Topic in Capital City

Subject Becomes Storm Center of Controversy Among Managers, Who Publish Statements Radically Different in Tone—Savoy Management Declares That Business Is Not Profitable, and Offers Figures of Year's Net Profit as Proof—Management of Spanish Gardens Makes Declaration in Print That Profits Are Large

MOTION picture finance has suddenly become an important topic of discussion in Washington, D. C., which apparently seems to have been brought about by the announcement of the Spanish Gardens, which proposes to create a new epoch in photoplay circles. This will be located in an established amusement center in the residential section among other picture houses.

No sooner had the news of this $100,000 structure, built on distinctive artistic lines, spread over the city, than the Savoy, its nearest neighbor, comes out in the papers with a statement that the motion picture business is not a desirable money making one, and that as a house with a capacity of one thousand asking admissions of ten and fifteen cents, it had only made $5,204.49 net profit in the past year. This came in the form of a sworn statement, as follows:

ANNUAL STATEMENT—SAVOY THEATRE AND PARK

For year ending December 31, 1915

Gross Income

Total Admissions	$46,688.91
	$46,688.91
Income from Admissions	$46,688.91
Total Expense	41,484.42
Net Profit	$5,204.49

Deductions

Operating Expenses (films, labor, light, repairs, etc.)	$32,509.58
Rent	1,500.00
Salaries	3,700.00
Interest on Investment	2,400.00
Interest on Loan	345.00
	$41,484.42

Yet, despite these small earnings, the Savoy is preparing to enlarge its house with 450 more seats, and to make other improvements, which, according to its official statement, "will not come out of profits of the company, but by adding additional capital."

Crandall Issues Statement

Then comes a published statement from H. M. Crandall, president of the Crandall Amusement Company, operating Crandall's theatre, and proprietor of several residential houses, who proposes also to locate a large house near these other two theatres.

Mr. Crandall advises the public to use care in investing in motion picture theatres, stating that this is done purely to set at rest any false impressions and for the public's own benefit. His commands are as follows:

INVESTIGATE THE FOLLOWING:

First—What is the financial standing of those most interested?

Second—How much stock have they subscribed for, and how much actual cash did they invest.

Third—Are there any promotion fees, high prices to be paid for leases, or is there much watered stock?

Fourth—What salary (if any) are the officers of the company to receive?

Fifth—Will the total investment be so great that a profit would be utterly impossible?

Sixth—If there were a profit, would they declare dividends, and divide it among the stockholders, or would they dispose of the profits in high salaries to officers of the company?

Seventh—Have the organizers, whoever they may be, had any practical experience in the moving picture business, and have they been successful?

It must be further stated that Mr. Crandall has just taken over the Avenue Grand theatre, in the southeast residential section of the city. After being redecorated and thoroughly renovated, this house was reopened to the public under the Crandall management on April 15. It has a capacity of 1,000,

The Spanish Gardens theatre places a more hopeful aspect on the financial subject, announcing that this theatre is to be a community house, built by local capital with local interests at heart. The management states: "It is conservatively estimated that 78,000 persons in Washington attend motion picture houses daily. Of this number about 13,000 are drawn from the Mount Pleasant section, and many of these pay carfare in addition to their admission fee. It must be apparent that the Spanish Gardens, being near home, will attract many more than now take the trip downtown.

A conservative estimate places the daily attendance at the Spanish Gardens at 2,500—about equal to a full house at any one of the three daily performances. Based on the admission fee of 10 cents, this would give a gross revenue of $91,250 per year, or over 60 per cent. of the capital stock taken in every year.

Making full allowance for expenses of operation, etc., there should be a net revenue of $60,000 a year, or 40 per cent. on the investment.

The men behind this undertaking are successful business men, and are giving their time and experience in making their stock and your stock very valuable.

Motion pictures have come to stay, and their earning possibilities are not equaled by any other class of investment.

A large theatre can be operated on practically the same overhead expense as a small one. This is to be the largest and best.

By the partial payment method of becoming a stockholder or part owner in this enterprise you get in on the ground floor of a money-making institution without a large outlay of money.

It is advisable to act at once because the stock is being subscribed for rapidly.

Capital, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000), all common stock.

Shares, one hundred dollars ($100) per share, full paid and non-assessable.

In order to assure the public of the safety of their investment a list of those interested in the enterprise was published by the management. Among these are mentioned:

Hon. Isaac R. Hitt, United States commissioner; Hon. Samuel J. Nichols, member of Congress from South Carolina; R. C. Day, representing Underwood & Underwood, New York City; Lanier P. McLachlen, secretary McLachlen Banking Corporation; William Hinton Hollaway, attorney at law, secretary and treasurer Lyric Theatre Company; William L. Soleau, Banking and Insurance; H. C. Grove, manager Columbia Graphophone Company; Thomas Hampton, president Hampton Construction Company, former president Pittsburgh Construction Company; B. B. Wilson, secretary and treasurer Real Estate Trust Company; Arley B. Magee, attorney at law.

Depositaries—Federal National Bank, McLachlen Banking Corporation. The Federal Amusement Company, which will erect and conduct the Spanish Gardens, has been capitalized for $150,000, with shares at $100 each.

WILLARD HOWE.

PRINCIPAL THEATRES IN BIG CITIES FLASH ACTORS' FUND ANNOUNCEMENT ON SLIDES

National Motion Picture Tribute Day, May 15, on which a portion of the receipts of film theatres all over the country is to be donated to the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund of America, is only a few days off. The support the exhibitors are pledging in the mammoth humanitarian undertaking — the raising of $500,000 in fifteen weeks for the worthiest of all charities—is proving most gratifying to the executive committee of the campaign.

In all the motion picture houses of New York and the other important cities of the country, this announcement is being thrown on the screen this week:

NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE TRIBUTE DAY
MONDAY, MAY 15

Ten per cent. of the receipts of this theatre on that date will be donated to the

ACTORS' FUND OF AMERICA
HELP US SWELL OUR CONTRIBUTION!

Every exhibitor in the country should have this on his screen and do everything in his power to make the campaign the success it deserves to be.

SCHLANK COMPLETES MIDDLE WEST TOUR FOR UNICORN

Ike Schlank, general manager of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, has just returned to New York from a trip which took him for a tour of the Middle West, where he completed arrangements for the opening of Unicorn exchanges in the principal cities. Mr. Schlank will leave within a few days for New Orleans, Atlanta, and Dallas on a similar mission.

J. A. Eslow, formerly manager of the Universal exchange in Boston, has been appointed Western division manager for Unicorn, and is now engaged in work preliminary to opening branches in the Far West. The Eastern division is under the direction of Fred B. Murphy.

The company, which offers a program of twenty-one reels a week, composed of dramatic, comedy and Western subjects, announces that branches are now established in the following cities: New York, Boston, Springfield, Bangor, Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Detroit, and Cincinnati. Offices in the South and Far West will be ready for business May 15.

LOUISVILLE MAY RAISE PRICES

Louisville exhibitors are considering the advisability of raising admission prices in motion picture theatres. The Louisville Photoplay Association met recently and had this matter under discussion, and it is probable that the question will be settled at another meeting to be held soon.

Exhibitors declare that on account of high prices charged for film service they would be warranted in charging slightly higher prices for admission, and they believe that they can bring the public to see the justice of this action.

If an increase is decided upon, it is probable that the theatres which now charge ten cents will raise the price to fifteen cents, and that the five-cent houses will charge a dime. At the present time there are some theatres which occasionally charge fifteen cents when an exceptionally good film is being run, but the prevailing price there is ten cents. There are a few five-cent houses in the city.

SAN FRANCISCO PLANS BALL FOR ACTORS' FUND DONATION

The moving picture trade in San Francisco is giving its attention to the proposed half-million-dollar fund for retired actors and actresses. The committee recently appointed to work out plans has decided upon a ball.

It will be held in the municipal Auditorium in the Civic Center.

A number of screen artists from Los Angeles will be present, and the studios in the San Francisco Bay district will be strongly represented. Herman Wobber is chairman of the committee. Other members of the Actors' Fund committee are Louis Levy, M. Lichter and Irving Ackerman. The ball committees to be named by Chairman Wobber will include every one at all prominent in the industry in that section of the state.

Brenon Uses 6 Cameras in Taking Kellermann Scenes

Two "Boxes" Are Placed Side by Side Where Action Promises to Be Most Vivid and Other Four-Catch New Angles at Remote Points

BATTALION OF FOX CAMERAMEN WHO FILMED ANNETTE KELLERMANN SPECTACLE

DIRECTOR - GENERAL HERBERT BRENON, in making the Annette Kellermann spectacle for William Fox, did not depend on one cameraman, or two or even three. He took an even dozen along with him to Jamaica, and kept six of the twelve constantly at work "shooting" scenes, while a seventh was chosen to make still photographs.

The use of the six men meant just this: every time a big scene was made on land or sea six cameras were grinding away at it from different angles. Two cameras were side by side at the point where the action promised to be most vivid, and the other four were placed where they would get the action from new angles. Often the sixth camera, placed at the most remote spot, would pick up the action on the film in a way that made it superior to the work of the other instruments, and this strip of film would be selected as best depicting what the director wished to show in the finished offering.

Film taken today of a scene will differ materially from a duplicate picture of exactly the same scene taken a week or two later. This is due wholly to atmospheric and light conditions over which man can have no control.

Seats for Premier of Ince Play Sold in Less Than Day

"Civilization," Twelve-Reel Subject, Makes Record for Picture and Speaking Stage Attractions at Los Angeles Theatre and Is Compliment to Maker of Kay-Bee Subjects.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, April 29.

ONE of the big enclosed stages at the Culver City Ince plant was used by the orchestra of forty for rehearsals of the incidental music to accompany the Ince twelve-reel subject "Civilization." The rehearsal was conducted by Victor Schertzinger, who is the composer of the original score for the entire twelve reels. A new feature introduced in connection is the Greek chorus of seventy-five, who will sing the vocal accompaniment. The premier of this picture was given here on April 17 at the Majestic Triangle theatre.

The new Ince plant was practically deserted for several days as scenes for subjects in productions required that companies work on locations at Inceville and others outside of the studio. The staff here now consists of six directors working under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. They are Reginald Barker, Raymond B. West, Charles Giblyn, William S. Hart, Scott Sidney, and Walter Edwards.

In less than one day's time, all seats for the premier of Thomas H. Ince's twelve-reel subject "Civilization" were sold out at the Majestic Theatre box office. This is an unprecedented sale for a Los Angeles theatre where motion pictures or speaking stage attractions are given, and is a distinct compliment to the maker of Kay-Bee Triangle subjects.

A company of Ince players working in the fourth subject starring Frank Keenan, spent several days at Riverside taking scenes at the international polo meet in which champion players from all over the world took part. This subject is laid in New York City at the present day, and is being made under the direction of Charles Giblyn.

Monday a very large number of extras were used at Inceville, working in battle front scenes for a spy story dealing in a neutral manner with the present European conflict. The scenes for this were made under the direction of Reginald Barker, and the subject stars H. B. Warner star of "The Beggar of Cawnpore."

Many stories have been heard with reference to the coming of Mabel Normand to play in a subject made at the Ince studio, but no definite statement was given out by the Culver City producer, Thomas H. Ince. According to the unofficial stories, Miss Normand will arrive in Los Angeles and take up her work in drama within two weeks.

Censors Upheld in Pennsylvania Higher Court

Judge Moschzisker Hands Down Decision in Case of "Virtue"—Decree of the Supreme Court Hinges on Fact That Judge Barratt in His Decision Said the Censor Board's Actions Were "Minute," "Far Fetched" and "Without Merit" While Act of May 15 Requires Different Interpretation to Define Action of Censors

Special to Motion Picture News.

Philadelphia, April 28.

THE Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has spoken. The opinion of Judge Von Moschzisker in the case of the film "Virtue," produced by the Franklin Film Corporation, was handed down last week, and sustains the appeal of the Board of Censors from the findings of President Judge Barratt, of Common Pleas Court No. 2.

The decree of the Supreme Court really hinges on the fact that Judge Barratt in his decision said the Censor Board's actions were "minute," "far fetched," and "without merit," while the act of May 15, 1915, creating the present censorship, requires the actions of the board to be "arbitrary," "oppressive," and "an abuse of discretion," before the Court of Common Pleas can sustain an appeal from the edict of the censors.

As it is contended that any eliminations made without proper justification are "arbitrary, oppressive and an abuse of discretion," in the opinion of a prominent lawyer of Philadelphia, the Supreme Court decision is a "hair-splitting differentiation."

Judge Von Moschzisker goes on to find reasons and precedents for the right of review by the Supreme Court, and then defines the word "appeal," which at the present time in the law has no conclusive meaning. He then says:

Intent to Grant Right of Appeal

"In this connection a careful reading of the statute here in question convinces us, it was never contemplated that the Courts of Common Pleas were to be constantly called upon to permit moving picture reels to be reproduced before them, and sit as super-censors thereof in order to review the decisions of the administrative body created by the act. The evident intent was to grant a right of appeal to the Common Pleas so that tribunal could correct any arbitrary or oppressive orders which the Board of Censors might make and nothing more; in other words that the court might reverse the Censors when the latter were guilty of an abuse of discretion.

"We do not mean to say that the Common Pleas may not review eliminated pictures, when necessary so to do in order to properly comprehend the matter before them; but such inspection should never be resorted to unless, in their opinion, the ordinary methods of proof are inadequate. When, after hearing, the Court is convinced in any case that the Censors have abused their discretion the construction just placed upon the Act of 1915, supra, leaves ample power in the Common Pleas to see that the public is not denied proper entertainment, and to protect property rights, a power which they should not hesitate to use when occasion requires."

Then, after again pointing out the difference between "without merit" and "abuse of discretion," the opinion winds up thus:

"In the absence of such determination, the order complained of cannot stand. The several assignments of error are sustained and the order is reversed."

Deputy Attorney General Joseph L. Kun, who conducted the case for the censors, was much pleased at the verdict of the Supreme Court because in his opinion it upheld the contention of the Censor Board as to the powers of the Courts of Common Pleas.

When asked as to the effect the verdict would have on the cases of Fox's "The Serpent," "Kreutzer Sonata," "The Fool's Revenge"; Pathé's "New York" and "The Iron Claw," and Lubin's "Dollars and the Woman," the cases which were recently heard in Common Pleas Courts, Mr. Kun said that while in the cases before Judges Barratt and Wessels oral decisions had been given in the court room, no decree had yet been handed down in writing; but, said the deputy general, "If decrees that are handed down are not justified by the records in the case, the state will in every instance carry these cases to the Supreme Court."

Redress in Repeal of the Law

Mr. Kun further said, that if people did not agree with the Censor Board's standards of morality, the law of Pennsylvania had made them the arbiters of film destiny, and as such their verdicts must be accepted. If the people were dissatisfied, their course of procedure would have to take the form of an appeal to the Governor to remove the censors and appoint others.

In cases of the failure of such a method, the law could be repealed at any time by the Legislature, if it so desired. As present constituted, however, unless arbitrary decisions or abuses of discretion could be proved conclusively, there was nothing more to be said. As the Board of Censors will not grant any interviews, on the ground that they are not properly quoted, no attempt was made to get their point of view. One consideration that the censors have always fought in the court trials already heard is the property value of the films to the manufacturers, claiming that was irrelevant to the question. As Judge Moschzisker has, however, said the lower courts should not hesitate to protect property rights when necessary. It is expected the big loss usually involved in banning a film from a state will be given greater prominence in future trials arising from ruling of the state censors.

Ball and Convention Planned for Omaha on May 11th

Screen Club and Photoplay Managers' Association Set Time Few Days Before Motion Picture Campaign Day for Aid to Actors' Fund

Special to Motion Picture News.

Omaha, April 22.

A COMBINED ball and convention will be staged by the Screen Club and the Photoplay Managers' Association of Omaha, on May 11, a few days before the day set apart for donating to the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actor's Fund. Aside from the amount raised in this way the motion picture folk of the Middle West will give ten per cent., and maybe twenty-five per cent., of their theatre receipts on May 15 to the fund.

The committees in charge of the arrangements have telegraphed Samuel H. Goldfish, desiring the presence of as many picture stars as possible at the ball. The newspapers are back of them in the campaign, and the event is being extended to include all motion picture exhibitors in the Omaha territory. Various manufacturers will have exhibits, actors from the local vaudeville shows will stage attractions aside from the regular ball, screen shows will be given, pictures taken, and the various downtown theatres and exchanges will be decorated for the event. The grand ball, which will be held in the giant Auditorium of Omaha, will no doubt be attended by thousands. Such is the intention, at least.

The picture men here are meeting often, almost daily, to push the plans. They are co-operating in this as they never have in any other project.

Committees appointed are as follows: General Arrangements. S. H. Goldberg, of the Princess; W. O. Jensen, of the Lothrop; E. J. Monaghan, of the Boulevard; F. A. Van Husan, of the Laemmle Film service exchange; Jake Schlank, of the Hipp.

Advertising: M. J. Weisfeldt, of the Mutual exchange; Phil Goldstone, of the World exchange; Jake Mitchell, of the Bluebird exchange; C. E. Ellsworth, of the Orpheum, South Omaha; Harry Goldberg, of the Princess; the photoplay editors of the city's three big daily newspapers, and Samuel H. Goldfish, of New York, as honorary member.

Program and Tickets: Manager Williams, of the Park theatre; Harry Watts, of the Rohlff; George Monroe, of the Monroe; A. R. Pramer, of the Alhambra; E. J. Halgren, of the Suburban.

Dance and Reception: M. H. Thomas, of the Strand; J. E. Kirk, of the Pathé exchange; H. Goldberg, of the Princess; Manager Nickerson, of the Lyric; Manager Atkins, of the Besse, South Omaha; J. Rachman, of the Grand; Manager C. W. Taylor, of the General exchange; and Manager J. F. Stern, of the Fox exchange.

These committee members are from both the Screen Club and the Photoplay Managers' Association.

NEW QUARTERS FOR PITTSBURGH LEAGUE

The members of the Exhibitors League will soon be housed in new quarters in Pittsburgh. At present the organization meets in rooms in the Apollo Building, in Fourth avenue. At the next meeting of the organization it will be decided where the quarters will be located.

A number of rooms have been looked at by the committee in charge of finding a suitable home for the organization, and they will make their recommendation to the membership next Thursday.

ANN PENNINGTON OF ZIEGFELD'S "FOLLIES" WITH FAMOUS

Ann Pennington, one of the stars of the Ziegfeld "Follies" for the past three years, has signed a long-term contract with Famous Players, to star in productions of that company on the Paramount Program.

ANN PENNINGTON

"Susie Snowflake," a story of the musical comedy stage, has been chosen as the vehicle for Miss Pennington's screen debut.

The picture will be ready for release June 22, it is announced.

BEAL AND SELIG PLAYERS GO TO INDIANA

Director Frank Beal, of the Selig Polyscope Company, together with its principal actors, has gone to Indiana for a two-week sojourn, where scenes in the special feature production filming Indiana's history as a state will be taken. Mr. Beal has plans for the building of a complete frontier settlement and stockade at Lafayette, Ind., where historic incidents in Indiana's history will be picturized.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, is en route to Indiana, from his winter home in Florida, and has promised to do everything possible to co-operate in the filming of historic Indiana. A majority of the literary lights of Indiana will also participate in one way or another in the filming of this feature film which, when completed, will be shown not only in Indiana but everywhere Indiana's sons and daughters are to be found.

DIXON ON WAY TO NEW YORK FOR "FALL OF A NATION" PREMIER

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, April 29.

Thomas Dixon, general manager of the National Drama Corporation, has departed for New York to perfect arrangements for the Eastern premiere of this company's first subject, "The Fall of a Nation," which is now completed.

No information concerning the production has been given out at the studio, other than that this is a screen adaptation of Mr. Dixon's latest story, which appeared in serial form in the Associated Sunday Magazines. The company began work on this production late last fall, and the final cutting was made during the past week, it being given its first complete screen examination the morning before Mr. Dixon departed for the East. The picture's premiere in the East will be given the latter part of this month, and the opening here on the Coast will not be until some time in June.

Mr. Dixon is the author of "The Clansman," "The Leopard's Spots," and a number of other well-known novels.

ZIEGFELD'S NAME ON POSTERS FOR "GLORIA'S ROMANCE"

Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., the producer of the "Follies" and other musical entertainments, is responsible for the appearance of Miss Billie Burke in the George Kleine motion picture novel, "Gloria's Romance," soon to be seen in theatres all over the United States.

The films are nearing completion at the George Kleine studios in New York City, and both the film titles, the advertising in newspapers and trade journals and the posters will bear the legend "by special arrangement with F. Ziegfeld, Jr."

FATHER OF PHILLIPS SMALLEY DEAD IN LONDON

George W. Smalley, father of Phillips Smalley, the actor-director of Universal City, and famous as a journalist, died in London recently. The deceased was in advanced years.

George W. Smalley was one of the last of the famous war correspondents and journalists of the Civil War days.

During the Civil War Smalley was associated with Horace Greeley, editor of the New York Tribune and he it was who wrote the account of the battle of Antietam, of which he had been an actual eye witness.

"Compressed Lives" of Signal Company Players

Tabloid Biographies of Actors and Actresses Engaged in "The Secret of the Submarine," Patriotic Serial, Contain "Much in Little"

HERE are the tabloid biographies of eight members of the Signal Film Company forces now engaged upon the production of "The Secret of the Submarine," a new patriotic serial:

Juanita Hansen was offered leading roles in seven feature pictures before she had graduated from the Los Angeles high school. She was born in Des Moines, Ia., but went to California in time to become much sought after by producers.

Thomas Chatterton is a native of Geneva, N. Y., and probably would have been a university professor had he not accepted a theatrical engagement which changed the entire course of his career.

George Clancy, who plays "Hook" Barnacle in "The Secret of the Submarine," created the role of Philip in the famous Drury Lane production of "Sporting Life." He has written several opera scores, being a musician of merit.

William Tedmarsh at one time served as scout for the Royal Northwest mounted police in Canada. He was in the U. S. Army for five years and served with the British in South Africa. He speaks three Indian tribal languages.

Hylda Hollis is probably the only woman on the screen who speaks the Russian tongue. She resided for several years in St. Petersburg. Miss Hollis was born in Philadelphia and made her first stage appearance when she was seventeen.

Lamar Johnstone at one time held the record for running one hundred yards at the University of Virginia. He has been declared by artists to be "a perfect man." He is one inch under six feet in height; weighs 179 pounds.

George Webb, playing Mahlin in "The Secret of the Submarine," is an enthusiastic racing driver. His recreations are motoring and acting as umpire in "kids" ball games.

Hugh Bennett once managed a "wagon show" out through the West which was broken up when the audience in a now promient city took the play too seriously and actually shot and killed the villain who was "stage-choking" the heroine.

PAULIS IN CONTROL OF LOS ANGELES MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 29.

All interests in the Los Angeles Motion Picture Company, a California corporation capitalized at fifty thousand dollars, has been purchased by H. Paulis, who since the organization of the company has served as superintendent and general manager, and heretofore owned a large block of the stock.

Mr. Paulis will now continue in this capacity and will shortly announce a number of additions to the line of products. This company is the manufacturer of the Angelus line of cameras, made in three models, three types of tripods, two kinds of printers, rewinding machines, splicing sets and film measuring devices. Shortly a new film polishing machine will be ready for the trade.

The retiring members of the firm are William H. Clune, owner of several motion picture theatres in Los Angeles and southern California, and president of the Clune Film Producing Company, which is just now releasing its first subject, "Ramona."

The new sole owner has had a wide experience in the manufacture of cameras and other accessories for the cameramen and laboratories, having been engaged in this business since the early days of motion picture making.

REINHARD DEVELOPS INTO REGULAR "LIGHT HORSE HARRY"

John Reinhard is organizing a troop of cavalry at Jacksonville, Fla., which will offer its services to the government. Mr. Reinhard, who is a prominent member of the Gaumont stock companies wintering at Jacksonville, is himself an expert horseman. The present campaign for preparedness has so impressed him that he has determined to bend every energy toward developing a troop which can take the field in less than twenty-four hours.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

CHILDREN'S SHOWS MOVEMENT UNDER WAY IN LOUISVILLE, KANSAS CITY AND INDIANAPOLIS

KANSAS CITY, Indianapolis and Louisville report the spread of the movement for children's performances under the auspices of women's organizations. In each city, exhibitors are lending their aid, and in doing so are performing genuine live wire stunts.

The Collegiate Alumnae Association, composed of representative women of Kansas City, is behind the movement there. Their plan is to get a house manager to allow a committee to book the pictures for him on the night which he turns over to them. The women do not censor any pictures and their disapprovals are not known outside the exchange offices, the idea merely being to get pictures which they believe will be suitable for family programs.

The Alamo, a picture house in a select portion of the city, was the first theatre to adopt the idea, and reports indicate that the plan is a success. Other large suburban houses have promised co-operation.

Picture show committees representing fifteen Parent-Teacher associations of Louisville are seeking to enlist the aid of all patrons of motion picture theatres in a campaign for suitable pictures for children. Theatre managers are themselves interested in the movement and are working in harmony with the committees. The Central Committee of the Parent-Teacher League has recommended that the picture show committee of each Parent-Teacher association write letters to film manufacturers urging the making of films suitable for children. Picture show patrons are asked to co-operate by writing personal letters to manufacturers to the same effect.

A permanent organization to establish a standard for motion pictures that are shown to children, was formed in Indianapolis April 11, by representatives of about forty clubs and women's organizations, which held a meeting at the Young Women's Christian Association building.

N. S. Hastings, manager of Keith's theater, has offered the use of the theatre on Saturday mornings for a children's hour and the offer was accepted. He said he hoped the women would not go into the matter with the thought of condemning smaller theatres, or with a feeling that they are censoring such shows, but in the spirit of co-operating with the theatre owner in finding out just what class of pictures are desired for children. He said that theatre men only need to be shown what is wanted to carry out the idea of the mothers.

A committee of twenty-five women from the various clubs interested to serve as an advisory board in selecting the films to be shown, has been appointed. The first motion picture hour was held at Keith's April 29, when ten clubwomen were the hostesses.

DENVER THEATRES AID CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN-UP DAYS

In preparation for Denver's fourth annual clean-up and paint-up campaign, which will be held from April 30 to May 6, inclusive, the Denver Civic and Commercial Association and other organizations which will participate in the campaign have had printed 50,000 programs, telling the particular phases of clean-up work which will be taken up on each day, which will be distributed to the homes of the city through the motion picture theatres.

In addition, 10,000 buttons, calling attention to the campaign, and 50,000 fire-prevention cards, each bearing fifteen cautions for the avoidance of fires, are being prepared. The buttons will be distributed among the school children and through the picture shows, and the fire warnings will be sent to homes and business houses.

The moving picture theatres of the city will also exhibit slides, calling attention to clean-up during the week before.

"SCARE HEAD" ADVERTISING FOR "THE NE'ER-DO-WELL"

The Plaza theatre, Troy, N. Y., believes in newspaper advertising with a "punch." Here is the way its page ad. of "The Ne'er Do Well" began in last Sunday's Troy Budget:

EXTRA! EXTRA!
"KILL THE AMERICAN"
CRIES ANGRY MOB
TEN REELS OF LIFE AND ACTION AT THE PANAMA CANAL.

These four lines, set in heavy black type, occupied about a quarter of the page. The rest was taken up with two other "scare heads," and a description of the picture, cuts, time schedule, etc. Altogether it is a striking piece of publicity of the sensational sort, which has good pulling power if it is not repeated too often.

ATTRACTIVE POSTCARD STRIP FROM AN ATTRACTIVE GEORGIA HOUSE

The postcard strip is one of the advertising methods used by the Dreamland theatre, Augusta, Georgia. This gives views of the exterior, lobby and the interior from several angles. It is attractively printed.

We note from the illustrations that the Dreamland is itself attractive. The lobby looks particularly inviting. If the management will send us a photograph of the lobby, we shall be glad to run a cut of it. Unfortunately, the postcard view will not reproduce well.

NOVEL BILLBOARD ADVERTISING DONE BY MANAGER JENSEN AT HIS HOLLYWOOD, CAL., THEATRE—LITHOS ARE CHANGED DAILY.

TRIANGLE INDUCES EXHIBITORS TO START LECTURE CAMPAIGN

The Triangle Film Corporation has put it squarely up to the exhibitor to get the returns his service deserves. In addition to all the routine and accepted forms of promotion which it supplies the Triangle has introduced an innovation in a carefully prepared lecture, "How Triangle Plays Are Made." This first of a series is illustrated with a set of slides, sixteen in number, showing the directors, stars and various stages of production. William H. Kemble, president of the Big-T Corporation in Brooklyn, is the first exhibitor to accept the gage and put the theory into practice. Mr. Kemble occupies the dual position of exhibitor and distributor in his territory. He selected the Sumner theatre for the experiment and followed closely the lines suggested by the main office.

After a brief introduction Mr. Kemble outlined the six different stages of development: (1) Preparation of manuscript, laying out of scenes and casting; (2) technical construction; (3) selection of locations; (4) rehearsals; (5) actual photographing of scenes, and (6) the editing and assembling. Then he showed how from the negative as many prints as needed could be made, mentioning particularly the Billie Burke comedy, "Peggy."

The first slide revealed Griffith, Ince and Sennett. They were briefly introduced by Mr. Kemble, after which a picture of Inceville was shown. In rapid succession the screen displayed pictures showing how film is made on locomotives, automobiles and the like; interiors with directors and stars in consultation; stars off duty; applicants for work; mammoth sets, etc.

NOVEL WINDOW DISPLAY IN DENVER STORE ADVERTISES THE "THEDA BARA BOOT"

Manager Carmichael, of the Fox Film Exchange, Denver, has worked a neat commercial advertising stunt, which exhibitors in many cities can adapt and use. The stunt is advertising a new style high top ladies' shoe, in this case the "Theda Bara Boot."

Carmichael furnished Johnston and MacDonald, who handle the Regent shoe in Denver, a large sized photograph of Miss Bara, together with a complete set of photos sufficient to make an attractive window display. The window display was then set up by the shoe firm, with the Theda Bara Boot in the center underneath the large photo of the star, and other specimens of the Boot grouped around the various smaller photos.

This display was kept in the window for three weeks. Mr. MacDonald reports that over two-thirds of the business done by the company since it entered its new location on Sixteenth street was due to the sale of the Theda Bara Boot.

"NE'ER-DO-WELL" AND "RAMONA" DRAW BIG CROWDS IN FRISCO

The popularity of the filmed version of Rex Beach's story, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," was fully attested when this production was given a return engagement at the Portola theatre, San Francisco, and was shown to capacity houses despite the fact that it had been shown there previously for two weeks.

Owing to the re-opening of the regular theatrical season the Clune production "Ramona," which has been a great drawing attraction for four weeks at this house, has been taken to the Savoy theatre on McAllister street.

BRIEF HINTS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

If you read the story in this department last week regarding the undersupply of pictures suitable for children's matinees, you must have noted an interesting statement.

This was that youngsters in Milwaukee seem to prefer pictures acted by grown-ups to those in which children are the actors, the reason being that the child of today has been trained to admire the mature hero and heroine in the fiction he has read.

If this view is correct, it will figure importantly in the making of future children's pictures. What do you think about it? Why not make a test among your younger patrons to see what kind of pictures they really do prefer?

And when you have found out, let the producers know the result of your inquiry. Also let us know. We shall be glad to print what you find out about this vital matter.

Don't forget to follow the hint we gave you last week; keep after the producers until you are able to get a sufficient number of children's subjects.

AUDITORIUM, COATESVILLE, PA., PUTS OVER SCHOOL STUNT

The Auditorium, Coatesville, Pa., must also be numbered among those progressive houses which issue special advertising for children's performances. We have received its neat, four-page folder announcing two programs for May 6 and May 13.

The first page is reproduced here. Pages two and three contain well written synopses of "Rumpelstiltskin" and "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," and page four says: "The Senior Class of the Coatesville High School wishes to explain that the proceeds from the sale of these tickets is to be added to the fund now being established for the purpose of taking the graduating class of 1916 on their trip to the National Capital."

Incidentally, this is a good live wire stunt and ought to make the Auditorium solid with the school patronage.

PLANS BIG ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN FOR BILLIE BURKE SERIAL

Joseph Gilday, manager of the Willis Wood theatre, Kansas City, Mo., has just returned from Chicago, and announces that he has booked the Billie Burke serial, "Gloria's Romance," for twenty weeks and will soon start the largest advertising campaign ever pulled off in this section, it is said.

The plan is that of having a small sized ad as a starter. This is to be increased day by day until it will finally end up with full-page displays. It is Mr. Gilday's plan to run twenty-two full-page advertisements in all.

This will actually be the largest moving picture advertisement project ever engineered by a Kansas City firm.

Motion picture audiences have demonstrated with utter conclusiveness that they prefer "dress suit dramas" above all other kinds, and the invasion of the Orpheum screen by this Essanay masterpiece is going to bring elation to those who like this particular variety. "Vultures of Society" has the plot laid in the Utopian environments of the metropolitan "upper ten," and the story is filled with swift, telling action, breath-taking climaxes and unusually attractive settings. E. H. Calvert and Ethel Clayton are two of the most prominent stars in the Essanay roster, and both give admirable performances in this play.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE army of players now in the East is growing rapidly. Not only are they straggling back from the South and the West, in groups, pairs and singly, but the return of Herbert Brenon's company, which has been at work in Jamaica since last summer, producing the great Annette Kellermann feature for Fox, has dumped a big lot on the Eastern studios at once.

In addition to these, the Fox western companies are due back within a week or so. This will bring to Fort Lee, Oscar Apfel, with the stars under his control, including William Farnum and Dorothy Bernard. It is understood that Mr. Apfel will make at least five pictures for Fox in the East this summer.

George Irving has finished the interiors on "What Happened in 22," the feature he is making for the Frohman Amusement Company, for release through World, and the Frohman company has given up the studio in which it has been doing its work in West Fifty-second street. The next Frohman feature probably will be made in one of the Flushing studios.

Famous Players are just finishing up "Saints and Sinners," the screen adaptation of the celebrated Henry Arthur Jones play of that name. In this subject, Peggy Hyland, the English actress, is being starred, and the release of "Saints and Sinners" will mark her debut as a screen star in this country.

Orders 300 Country Parishioners

"Hello. Blank's Agency?"

"Yes."

"Famous Players talking. Send us three hundred country parishioners."

No, the agent did not even faint. He is used to having motion picture producers make remarkable demands from him. It is only the public that would be mystified to know what a producer could possibly want with three hundred parishioners, rural type preferred.

In this case they were to appear in a big church scene in an adaptation of Israel Zangwill's "The Moment Before," in which Pauline Frederick is soon to star. More than a third of the studio floor was given over to the erection of the setting for this part of the photoplay, which curiously enough is used in the very beginning and in the very end of the production.

It is in this church setting that Miss Frederick, as the duchess, while attending the funeral of her husband, is stricken with heart trouble. As she falls dying, there appears before her the vision of her former life as a Gypsy, and finally a refugee from England, whence she flees to Australia. At the completion of the story of former days, the scene in the church again flashes on the screen and we see the stricken duchess in the last brief moment before death.

So the three hundred "parishioners" were needed to fill the duchess' church. Why specify that they were to be parishioners? Because the director would not want the same type for a coal mine story that he needs for members of a congregation, and it saves trouble to specify the usage to which the extras are to be put.

Harry Durant, former magazine editor and well-known contributor to many periodicals, has at last "arrived." That is to say, he has had one of his poems read by Hugh Ford, who gathered several members of the Famous Players' directorial staff about him and proceeded to proclaim the versified offering of the scenario editor in stentorian tones. The room was emptied in three minutes and there has been some difference of opinion as to whether it was the "script" or the "production" which caused the sudden exodus.

Hazel Dawn, who has just returned to the Famous Players studio from the mountain district of northwestern Georgia, where she enacted "The Feud Girl" for the Paramount program, sighed with relief. "Now I can use my car without breaking my neck," declared Miss Dawn. "I never saw such frightful roads in my life as they have in that country. Saddle horses are the only safe means of transportation, and they have to be as agile as mountain goats."

Gets Water on the Knee from Fall in Stream

"Somebody else can do the next mountain story," remarked Frederick Thomson with a groan as he hobbled into the Famous Players studio. He has just returned from the wilds of Georgia, where the staged "The Feud Girl." Thomson's horse took a nasty fall while fording a mountain stream, kicking the director as he stumbled, and so badly injuring him that he has water on the knee as a result. "I have seen some rugged settings before, but it would take a Swiss guide to reach some of the locations that we found."

The spring season is very trying on motion picture stars. Marguerite Clark complains that she no more escaped from the clutches of Director J. Searle Dawley and completed "Molly Make-Believe," than she fell into the hands of her modiste. "It seems as though I am always standing in front of a camera or a dressmaker," complained the diminutive Famous Players star. "I begin to think that it is a conspiracy to keep me eternally busy."

A tabloid feature, in other words, two reels of compressed drama, portrayed by a cast of the multiple reel standard, is exemplified in "The Candle," written by Maude Thomas and Julian Lamothe, and directed for the Lubin Company by Leon D. Kent. The valuation set upon the two-reel drama by the Lubin Company is indicated by the fact that the cast of "The Candle" includes Helen Eddy, Grace Eddy, L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo, George Routh, Robert Gray, J. J. Colby, Jay Morley and one of the authors, Julian Louis Lamothe.

Stuart Paton, Universal Heights director, leaves Wednesday with his company for the Universal's California camp. He had been wanting a transfer to Universal City for a long time, as he had some pictures on top that required California atmosphere.

Director Rex Ingram, of Universal Heights, has been confronted with this selfsame problem—pictures requiring the California settings, at least in part—and may follow Mr. Paton West shortly. It was the request of Messrs. Paton and Ingram to work a while at Universal City that caused a Universal official to say facetiously: "Why not send the whole Eastern crowd West?" which remark, overheard by a visitor, who communicated the news to a press man, resulted in the recent rumor that Universal would send all their companies West. But then, as King Baggot once said, "What would the moving picture business be without its rumors?"

Violet Mersereau is doing a picture at Universal Heights in boy's clothes. Result: Studio management is being besought by all the local Mersereau admirers for passes to the stage.

For the "Short Length Fans"

Violet is doing a one-reel, "The Gentle Art of Burglary," for the benefit of the "short length fans"—the folks who like one and two-reelers. Despite the feature craze, she doesn't want to forget this class of fan. William Garwood will be featured in this with Miss Mersereau, and Raymond L. Schrock is the director in charge.

Another one-reel by Universal Heights stars is "His Little Story," now being made by Matt Moore and Jane Gail. It will be remembered that in the picture he produced just previous to this, Mr. Moore was forced to use a goat, which died "between the acts." The ensuing trouble may be imagined. Mr. Moore states as regards "His Little Story," that irrespective of its effect on an audience, it had no ill effect on him during production. Mr. Moore undoubtedly had the ill-timed death of the goat in mind when he spoke. Future Moore productions will include no animal of any sort.

Director Bob Hill is producing "The Flaming Eye," with Hobart Henley as star. Sidney Bracy, well known player of mystery parts, will help along the mystery atmosphere and Sydell Dowling has the female lead. It is J. Grubb Alexander's story.

Mary Fuller's next production is entitled "The Trail of Chance." Joe Girard, who has played a number of male leads for Miss Fuller of late, has that lead in this also. The pair work so well together that there is no doubt that Director Henderson will keep them teamed permanently. Another pair of Heights players who are "teaming" so well their union is predicted as permanent, are Harry Benham and Edith Roberts. This week finds them appearing in "The Sacrifice of Yvonne" on the Heights.

Other "this week" news from the Heights is that Clara Beyers is making a strenuous effort to lose weight, and succeeding, and that Andy Clark is striving to organize a baseball team. Andy was a mere rooter formerly, during his long Edison term, but now he considers himself grown up and his interest is no longer passive. He'll be a baseball magnate yet.

Six Sets for "V" Bay Shore Studio

A large open air studio is being erected at Bayshore, L. I., for the Vitgraph Company by Managing Director Ralph W. Ince. It will be located directly in the rear of the Bay Shore plant and will enable the Long Island forces to have six sets for use when required. This makes the task of those connected with the filming of the pictures very agreeable.

Mr. Ince announces that an up-to-date exhibition room, perfect in every way, has just been finished. This finishing touch makes the plant complete in every detail.

James O'Connor, an actor who has joined the William Fox forces to play in feature films, has done pictures for other producers and in their making has narrowly escaped drowning several times. He has played with William Faversham, Maude Adams, George M. Cohan and other equally well-known stars. Mr. O'Connor has a beautiful country place at Great Neck, L. I. He is very fond of horses, is a daredevil rider and a swimmer with a championship record.

Katherine and Jane Lee, the popular "Lee Babies" of the Fox films, are back from Jamaica and ready for work in other Fox pictures. They are to be widely featured with Miss Kellermann in the gigantic spectacle which Herbert Brenon has made for William Fox. The two youngsters have been down in Jamaica for eight months under the care of their mother, Mrs. Irene Lee. Mrs. Lee, by the way, had charge of making the 15,000 costumes that were required for the Kellermann picture and taking direction over 1,200 Jamaican sewing women she turned out this remarkable job in less than three weeks. This has been referred to as the greatest job of dressmaking and costuming ever done in the amusement industry.

Edward Arnold, one of Essanay's leading men, was married April 20 to Harriet Marshall, of Richmond, Va. Mr. Arnold came to the Essanay Company in Chicago from Richmond, where he was playing the lead in stock. It was while playing there that he met Miss Marshall, and the love romance started.

The marriage was celebrated in Chicago, only the immediate relatives attending, after which a reception was given to twenty people in the Walnut room of Hotel Sherman.

Mrs. Arnold is a southern girl of a prominent Richmond family. She is a talented musician, a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music. Mr. Arnold has made a rapid success in motion picture work, jumping quickly to leads in the short time he has been with Essanay. The prominent plays in which he has taken the leading role are "The Primitive Strain," "I Will Repay," "The Last Adventure" and "The Danger Line."

Carvill Formerly With Tree

Henry Carvill, the well-known English actor, who played a prominent part in the first Mirror Films picture and was reengaged for a part in the third picture put out by that company featuring Nat Goodwin, was among the first actors to be engaged by Sir Herbert Tree when the latter began his career as an actor-manager on the English stage. Mr. Carvill will have a character part in the fourth Mirror picture, featuring Mr. Goodwin.

Nat Goodwin and a company of players from the Mirror Films studio will leave on Tuesday, May 2, for Quebec, where they will appear in the exterior scenes of this fourth Mirror picture.

Frank S. Beresford, who put on the Fritzi Schiff musical comedies for Charles Dillingham for four years, and who more recently has been technical director of the Mirror Films, Inc., has been chosen to direct the making of this picture. Mr. Beresford will take a notable cast to Quebec for the exterior scenes.

Walter McNamara, scenario editor of the Mirror Films, Inc., is responsible for the photoplay, which as yet is unnamed.

The announcement a short time ago that Otis Harlan is engaged in making a comedy feature production for Edison, and that Francine Larrimore and Conway Tearle were also being starred in forthcoming feature productions being made by this company, is followed by the announcement that a number of other celebrities of the legitimate stage have been secured to appear in future Edison productions. The best known legitimate star among those announced most recently is Herbert Corthell, who has had a long and notable theatrical career and who only recently consented to enter the motion picture field. His first appearance in the silent drama will be in "Soap," a high-class comedy, based on a novel idea, written by E. H. Griffith.

The last appearance of Mr. Corthell on the legitimate stage was in "The Road to Mandalay," a current metropolitan musical comedy success. Some of his renown Mr. Corthell won in the Avery Hopwood plays, and he appeared in "Southern Days," "The Girl at the Gate," "A Full House" and others. One of the big successes of his career was his impersonation of the part of "Billy" in "Strong Heart." For many years Mr. Corthell was under the direction of Shuberts and H. H. Frazeee. A number of other players new to Edison productions also appear in "Soap," among them being Muriel Window, a danseuse who is widely known, and Harry McDonough, the character actor.

Smith Head Cameraman for Petrova

Robert C. Smith, who has the distinction of making more individual photographs than any man of his age in the United States, but who turned his talents to motion pictures more than six years ago, has been engaged by the Popular Plays and Players as head cameraman for all of Mme. Petrova's features made for the Metro program. For many years, Mr. Smith was in charge of the Dietrich Brothers famous boardwalk gallery in Atlantic City, where in season he had as many as forty photographers working under his direction.

A rumor along Broadway says that Edwin Thanhouser has gotten Gladys Hulette to sign a contract for a series of Thanhouser Classics, which means that the clever ingenue will now appear in five reel productions exclusively.

Murdock Advances at Kalem

Henry Murdock, the acrobatic comedian who made his screen debut in the "Sis Hopkins" comedies and has sprung into wide popular favor in those Kalem subjects, has practically decided to continue permanently in the motion picture field. The comedian made the first step toward this last week by cancelling his contracts to open in vaudeville in a new act on May 15.

Murdock joined the "Sis Hopkins" company in January following the conclusion of an Orpheum circuit tour.

So quickly did he take to the screen work and so rapidly has he forged ahead in favor that the prospects of a return to vaudeville or musical comedy grew dimmer and dimmer until last week he took the big leap.

"A Lunch Room Legacy" and "The Dumb Heiress" are two of the May Kalem releases in which Murdock is seen to good advantage in support of the famous Sis

Hopkins. Rose Melville and her principal support, Frank Minzey and Murdock, have all shown what the stage funmaker can do in the screen.

GRAHA REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS IN MICHIGAN

Bert M. Graha, Michigan traveling representative for the Universal Film Company, reports that business throughout the State is much better than a year ago and that exhibitors in both large and small towns are feeling exceedingly optimistic.

HARDY AND BODE HELD FOR GRAND JURY

After two hearings in Jefferson Market Court, New York, George Hardy and Harry Bode, accused of larceny by the Kalem Company, were held for the Grand Jury on April 28. The charge against the two, who formerly were in the employ of the Kalem Company, was the theft of a number of films, which later had been released to exhibitors by a film exchange at 729 Seventh avenue, at a greatly reduced rental. The accused men waived their defense, preferring to fight the case out in a higher court.

Attorneys for the Kalem Company said that the case will develop a remarkable story of wholesale thefts through the supposed "scrapping" of old film. It is charged that a contractor who buys this film from several of the larger companies, ostensibly to melt up and dispose of as raw material, has been able to secure film in good condition through the connivance of certain employes, and this film has later been put upon the market. More than thirty reels of film belonging to the Kalem Company were seized when Hardy and Bode were arrested.

Gustav Frieling, who has been a practicing attorney in New York and New Rochelle for more than five years, is one of the recent recruits to the ranks of motion picture actors.

Mr. Frieling is now playing the role of the district attorney in "Buttsy's Glory," a five-part Metro Wonderplay, in which Mr. Nigh and Marguerite Snow are starred. He is proving invaluable to Director Nigh in the production of "Buttsy's Glory," especially where technical legal points are portrayed as at issue.

"CHRISTIAN" AND "NE'ER-DO-WELL" GO WELL IN DOMINION

Reports from the V-L-S-E exchanges in Canada indicate that "The Christian" and "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which the V-L-S-E recently released in the Dominion, are finding a ready market in many Canadian cities and towns.

TOM MOORE AND ANNA NILSSON MAKING A SCENE FOR PATHE'S "WHO'S GUILTY?"

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, April 29.

TWO hundred people made up the audience of a theatre balcony scene filmed last week at the Horsley studio for the coming Mutual Masterpicture, "Wasted Years," which features Crane Wilbur. Several days will be spent during the coming week at an orphanage near Los Angeles, where seventy children will take part. Scenes showing dormitories, grounds and interiors of buildings will constitute a part of this, and the recreation, study conditions, anl religious services of the children will be filmed. Little Thelma Salter, who has appeared in a number of child parts in Ince productions, has been specially engaged for this subject, as have Buddie Harris and Thelma Burns.

"The Butterfly's Wings" is a two-reel Centaur feature just filmed by Charles Swickard from a scenario by Theodosia Harris. The scenes for this are laid in New York City and South Africa. William Clifford appears as an American who goes to the diamond fields, and is successful. He induces his former sweetheart to go there, and they are wedded, despite interferences on the part of a social parasite. Fred Montague is the heavy who causes the moving of the American's boundary line fence, but he is later trapped by detectives at a time when the social parasite kidnaps the diamond mine owner's wife. There are a number of melodramatic situations in this which are out of the ordinary. The part of the social butterfly is taken by Margaret Gibson. Jack Nelson appears as the parasite.

The mammoth wall at the end of a tunnel on Third street, Los Angeles, serves as a setting for Fort Jerry in a Horsley Cub Comedy entitled "Preparedness," which is now being filmed. This is spoken of at the studio as a thrilling, but humorous comedy, and in making a scene for it, the players occasioned so much excitement near the Los Angeles ball park that the game was broken up for several minutes. This instance occurred when George Ovey walked a wire from one telephone pole to another, and hanged a policeman by the neck. George George, the man in blue, escaped without injury, but his blood-curdling screams greatly shocked the baseball fans and players.

Peripatetic Cartoonist Makes Studio Rounds

Carl E. Schultz, cartoonist of national repute, who created the "Foxy Grandpa" series and other equally prominent comics, has been in Los Angeles for the past few weeks, and is getting up a series of travelogue cartoons which will be syndicated throughout the country. Every week he devotes a page to a different studio, and so far has cartooned several of the most prominent in the Los Angeles colony. After he makes the rounds of the producing plants here, it is his intention to do the same with the New York studios.

Olga Printzlau, Universal scenario writer now engaged in preparing the stories and script for the remainder of the "Peg o' the Ring" serial, is soon to have her first novel published. This is entitled "Nante of the Marshes," a European war story. It is to be published by the Watt Publishing Company. Scenario for this story has been sold to D. W. Griffith, and will be produced later.

Gene Hersholt, formerly staff manager of the Royal theatre at Copenhagen, and later with the Great Northern Film Company, has been added to the Universal stock company in the capacity of actor.

Harris Skinner, nephew of Otis Skinner, has been engaged by the Universal, and added to the staff of the production department office.

The series of one-reel baseball comedies has been entitled "Baseball Bill," and the first was filmed last week. "Smiling" Billy Mason is writing the stories, directing the production, and playing the name part. Other principals of the company are O. C. Jackson and Peggy Coudray. In the first number a financially embarrassed theatrical manager discovers the genius of the diamond in a tank town, and induces the townsmen to chip in on the collections to defray the expenses necessary to get him into the league playing. In making the final scenes, Mason and Miss Coudray were both injured when they jumped from a high wall to a concrete walk below, both sustaining a sprained ankle.

The Lincoln J. Carter thrilling melodrama, "The Fast Mail," is being filmed at Universal City in the same manner as it was staged twenty years ago. In this day and age, the screen version will prove a comedy. The script calls for a number of thrills of the old type. The villain will be there with his patent-leather boots, and the number of killing affrays are so numerous that it will be necessary to hold the picture down to two reels in order to not run out of members of the cast. The cast is made up of Ernie Shields, Eileen Sedgwick, L. M. Wells, Duke Worne, Edwin Clarke, Yona Landowska, and Victor Potel as the sleuth.

Dual Role for De Haven

"The Mollycoddle and the Rounder," a two-reel Universal subject being made by Director Richard Stanton, gives to Carter DeHaven a dual role, that of twin brothers, one of a decided effeminate type, and the other of the gay young man of the world. The supporting cast includes Marguerite Whistler, Jane Bernoudy, Peggy Custer and Vola Smith. The scenario is by Bess Meredith and Walter Woods.

The sacrifice of a free-born octoroon who gives up her freedom and becomes a slave to make it possible for the family to raise means to pay the gambling debts of the son with whom she has become infatuated from a photograph, is the instance about which the plot for "The Crimson Yoke" revolves. This Universal subject was written by George Hall and Harvey Gates, and is being produced by Cleo Madison and W. V. Mong, who appear as octoroons in the subject, playing the principal parts. Jack Mulhall plays the part of the son, Helen Wright the mother, and Frank MacQuarrie the slave dealer. The subject will be made in two reels.

The "Peg o' the Ring" serial company are now filming the fifth episode. The first four are remade versions of the ten reels filmed by Grace Cunard and Francis Ford. These were remade in order to introduce Ruth Stonehouse in all of the episodes. Story for the serial is being written by Olga Printzlau and Director Jacques Jaccard.

The tattooing of a will on the back of a young authoress by sailors, for a book publisher, just before she dies on a desert island, following a shipwreck, gives to "The Grasp of Greed," a five-reel melodrama now being made at Universal City from a story by H. Rider Haggard, an entirely new situation. The part of the authoress is taken by Louise Lovely, who is forced to sell one of her works for a beggarly sum because of the illness of her sister. Because of the book publisher's attitude in taking advantage of the girl, he and his sole heir, his nephew, quarrel. The publisher decides to disinherit his nephew and makes a new will. Following this he takes a steamer to a foreign land, and on the same boat is the authoress. After the shipwreck the two, with sailors and others, land on an island, where the publisher becomes ill. Realizing that death is certain, he requests material on which to write a will. This is not available, and tattooing on a sailor's arm inspires the authoress to find a way. Incidentally this affords opportunity for the display of another back (Kitty Gordon, please note). The authoress is returned to civilization, where the court views the tattooed will. Besides Miss Lovely, the cast includes C. Normand Hammond, Jay Balesco, Gretchen Lederer, and Lon Chaney.

"The Double Sacrifice" is a two-reel story of incidents in a professional singer's life. Dorothy Davenport appears as the singer, Emory Johnston the husband, Baby Kerrigan the child, and Virginia Southern the nurse. The story is by Betty Schade, scenario by Calder Johnstone, and the subject is being filmed by Lloyd B. Carleton. Director Carleton has engaged an artist, who is making subtitles containing suggestive scenes. These are being filmed in connection with the photoplay.

Red Book Story to Drive Away the Blues

A one-reel comedy drama from a Red Book story is being filmed by Rupert Julian. This is entitled "Romance at Random," with a fastidious dresser, ever alert to aid a woman in distress, as the principal character. He aids a woman, who feigns to be suffering from a fainting spell, to her home, and after being invited in, is advised that she is merely seeking evidence that will induce her husband to get a divorce. He is shown pictures of the prize fighters the husband has managed, and every moment he feels his courage ebbing. Then the husband, a mere wheeze, arrives and proves himself a regular fellow. Mark Fenton is the husband, Elsie Jane Wilson the wife, and Director Julian the other man.

For the first time since the organization of the Universal Company, all members of the producing staff were photographed at one time. This photograph was prepared at the request of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, to be used in connection with their exhibit at the first annual exposition of the Motion Picture Board of Trade. H. L. Massie, of the visitors' reception department, was in charge of collecting all the players, and the picture was made at noon. It is estimated that it cost the company approximately two thousand dollars for this picture, because of the loss of time occasioned by the producing companies leaving their sets for the period of almost an hour. Figures compiled by the production department of the studio show that the hourly cost of the organization averages this amount.

The 101 Bison company left the first of the week for Tia Juana, Mexico, where they will spend several days securing scenes at the races there for an untitled production. The party included Director Henry McRae, assistant Tom Walsh, Marie Walcamp, Lee Hill, Edwin Wallock and others.

The Universal company producing "The Silent Battle," a five-reel subject featuring J. Warren Kerrigan, are home from Pine Hills, east of San Diego, where they spent twelve days in the mountains filming scenes of the camp to which a young attorney goes in his battle to overcome the inherent appetite for intoxicants. This subject is being filmed by Jack Conway.

reel burlesque melodrama, entitled "What Could the Poor Girl Do?" A big cast is taking part in this subject, including the principals of the company, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Billie Rhodes.

Another Nestor organization under the direction of Horace Davey are filming "Almost a Widow," a one-reel subject by Robert F. McGowan. Those in the important parts are Neil Burns, Betty Compson, Ethel Lynn, Ed. Burns and Harry Rattenberry.

"The Clown," Next Lasky for Moore

The next Victor Moore Lasky subject has been titled "The Clown," and is now nearing completion under the direction of William C. deMille. In the past week the company went to Palm Springs for desert scenes, and all came home with new weather stories. To take the lowest estimate, the mercury hovered around the one hundred and ten mark, and their trip back to civilization was one of a hurry-up character, which ended with the consumption of a great quantity of cooling beverages.

George Foster Platt, former director of the Thanhouser Company, has been engaged by the Lasky Company, and arrived in Los Angeles to take care of the scenario department.

Another new member of the Lasky staff is Mary Mersch, who recently came to the Coast from New York, where she played in a number of Broadway attractions on the legitimate stage. Her first appearance will be in support of Mae Murray.

With the completion of "The Thousand Dollar Husband," the next Lasky subject starring Blanche Sweet, this actress will be placed under the direction of Frank Reicher, who will film a new story by Hector Turnbull. Ernest Joy and Tom Meighn will appear in this subject.

Director George Melford has been assigned to the direction of the third Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid vehicle, which as yet is unnamed.

The first comedy to be made by Harry Millard, of the Kalem company, who recently arrived at the Coast, is entitled "The Giggling Ghost," and features Ethel Teare in that part. She and her lover have a quarrel, and while employed as aid to a medium, he is one of the clairvoyant's patrons. As the ghost back of a gauze curtain, she leads him on to believe that he has lost his sweetheart, and he decides to carry out his original intention of suicide. His sweetheart prevents him just as he is about to leap from a high cliff. The principal supporting players in this are Victor Rottman and Fred Fralich.

"The Hazards of Helen" company are filming a one-reel subject which was written by Helen Rose Gibson, the star of the photo melodrama. She is an excellent horsewoman, and the thrills in this are occasioned by some of her daring riding.

Director James Horne, of the Kalem Glendale studio, is finishing the twelfth episode of "The Social Pirates," and will leave Friday for a week trip at sea. While absent he will produce "For the Service of the State," the thirteenth episode of the serial. The company will go as far north as Seattle, on a boat specially equipped for making motion pictures in the interiors, and also securing night effects. It is also the intention of Director Horne to make exteriors for several other subjects while on the boat, interiors for which will be filmed at a later date.

A number of new players have been added to the Kalem stock company, including E. Forrest Taylor, late leading man of the American, Ronald E. Bradbury, who has played at a number of Coast studios, and R. L. Dell, late of the Ince organization.

Mae Marsh Bears with Antics of 2 Bears

Mae Marsh, who is now working on a subject for which all scenes save two are exteriors, has been wrestling with a couple of bears for the past few days, and they have treated her so kindly that she has taken it upon herself to personally see that they are fed and receive water three times each day. Robert Harron and Wilfred Lucas are playing with Miss Marsh, and the direction is by Paul Powell.

Madame Claire, late of Maison-Claire, Fifth avenue modiste, now head of the costuming department of the Fine Arts studio, has completed a number of creations which Lillian Gish is to wear in the current subject now being made by Director Alan Dwan. This is to be a decided dress-up subject, and Mary Alden will also wear some equally stunning creations. Spottiswoode Aitken plays the role of a Southern father, similar to that of Dr. Cameron in "The Clansman," the father of Miss Gish. Sam DeGrasse is the sweetheart, and Mary Alden the other woman. DeGrasse marries the unsophisticated girl, and then the woman with whom he had a previous affair tells his bride that she is the rightful wife, and attempts to drive Miss Gish away. Throughout the subject a wilted rose symbolizes that all that is evil dies. Others in the cast are William DeVall and Jennie Lee, who appear as colored servants.

With the completion of the Fine Arts subject, "Going Straight," by the Franklyn Brothers, Norma Talmadge will be cast in a story to be produced by Edward Dillon in which she will be co-starred with Tully Marshall. The scenario for this is by Chester Withey and Roy Summerville. Dorothy Gish will be starred in the next subject made by the Franklyns, and in this the Fine Arts children will take part.

The Douglas Fairbanks fourth Fine Arts subject originally known as "The Bouncer," has been titled "Reggie Mixes In." This has been completed by Director Cabanne, and he is now taking up the filming of "The Assassin," with this same star. The first scenes for this were made at the Corona auto races, where Bob Burman met his death. Several auto loads of Fine Arts players went to the race course, and staged a number of interesting scenes. Conspicuous in the party were Harry E. Aitken, president of the Triangle, and DeWolf Hopper, neither of whom appeared in the scenes. In the cast for this production, which is from the Robert M. Baker story, are A. D. Sears, Jewel Carmen, Margie

Wilson, and W. E. Lawrence. It is a modern story.

This week, Fairbanks was presented with a Western horseman's outfit by the cowboys of the studio, which includes a wide brimmed Stetson hat, leather cuffs, holster, gun, and a pair of genuine chaps. The presentation speech was made by Jim Kid, and prominent contributors were Curly Baldwin, Smoky Peterson, Fred Burns, and Eagle Eye. On the same day Director William Christy Cabanne celebrated his birthday, and gave a dinner to the prominent players of the studio.

Stages at the Fine Arts studio last week were filled with large sets for coming productions. One of particular beauty is that for the Norma Talmadge subject, "Going Straight," and another gorgeous one was built for "The Assassin." The interiors for the Kentucky story, being made by Alan Dwan, represents a handsomely furnished Southern mansion.

The production department of the Fine Arts studio has completed negotiations for the motion picture rights of the California novel, "In the Carquinez Woods," by Bret Harte. All of the scenes for this are laid in California, and in producing it for the screen, an effort will be made to take the scenes on the locations described by the author. The principal characters in this story are Low Dorman, a half-breed Indian, and Teresa, a woman of the dance halls. The film version is being adapted from the story, and production will be taken up at an early date.

Fay Tincher Takes Rest

Fay Tincher has been granted a short vacation, following two years' work at the Majestic studio, which she is spending in the East. During her absence a special story is being written for her, and upon her return she will be starred in a Fine Arts subject.

The Triangle Kay-Bee feature, "Not My Sister," in which Thomas H. Ince costars Bessie Barriscale and William Desmond, has been completed. This is a dramatic story written by James Montgomery, the playwright, and C. Gardner Sullivan, of the Ince scenario staff. Miss Barriscale appears in the part of the girl who suffers infamy as the result of treatment by a young artist, played by William Desmond. Later the couple are happily married. The supporting cast includes Franklyn Ritchie, Alice Taffee, and Louise Brownell. Charles Giblyn directed the subject. In many of the scenes Miss Barriscale wears a dress purchased on a bargain counter at a local department store for $2.49. After reading the script for the story, the actress decided that although she was to play the part of an ambitious girl of a poor family, the girl must at least have good taste, and a day was spent in shopping to find a neat, attractive, low-priced garment. This subject will serve to introduce a novelty known as a transparent iris, which was worked out by Dal Clawson. It gives the same effect for the screen as the spotlight does for the speaking stage—distinguish the principal player from the minor ones. It serves to center the attention of the audience upon the individual work of the principal, and "gets over" the desired effect better than a close-up.

One playwright who has been successful with big productions for the speaking stage, has found the preparations of scripts for the screen far more difficult. This is James Montgomery, author of "Ready Money" and other theatrical productions, who in collaboration with C. Gardner Sullivan wrote "Not My Sister" for Thomas H. Ince. The photodramatic field, Mr. Montgomery found much wider, in view of the fact that stage productions must be restricted to three or four acts, but he has come to the conclusion that it is easier to put action into words than to put words into action.

The Ince Company, with Frank Keenan as star, and Charles Giblyn, director, are home from spending a week at Tia Juana, where they made scenes at the Mexican race course. During their absence several magnificent interior settings were built, and the members of the company are now the exclusive occupants of one of the mammoth glass stages at the Culver City plant. The story for this Kay-Bee Triangle was written by J. G. Hawks.

Films Brazilian Village

Director Walter Edwards is filming scenes about a Brazilian jungle village at the Inceville studio. In this Triangle-Kay-Bee, Dorothy Dalton appears in the most conspicuous part. A location at the seashore studio was found to be appropriate for this, and still pictures of the setting show that it is an exact duplicate of the picture from which it was made. This story was written by Monty M. Katterjohn, and besides the South American scenes, there are many in and about New York City. Howard Hickman appears as leading man of this subject.

After a brief vacation, Bessie Barriscale returned to the Ince Culver City studios last week to begin work in a new photoplay by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which she is to appear in the stellar role, that of a young girl. The day the new play was to be taken up, Miss Barriscale received a wire bringing the sad news of the death of her father, Samuel Barriscale, in New York City. Mr. Barriscale succumbed to pneumonia, after a very brief illness. This is the second bereavement for the beautiful actress in the past year, her mother having passed away in May, 1915.

Director Reginald Barker has finished the filming of the fourth H. B. Warner subject at the Ince Culver City studio. This is a narrative of war times, the important feature of which is the spy system. Warner appears as an army officer, with Enid Markey and Margaret Thompson in important parts.

William S. Smith, business manager of the Hollywood studios of the Vitagraph Company, has just returned from New York, where he attended a family reunion, occasioned by the arrival of George Smith, manager of the London Vitagraph office. The London representative accompanied his brother to the Coast, and here for the first time in twenty-three years met his brother, Director Dave Smith, of the Vitagraph forces. George Smith will sail for London on the twenty-ninth.

The technical shops of the Vitagraph Hollywood studio are decidedly busy in the preparations of settings and properties for the Blue Ribbon feature now being filmed by Production Manager R. S. Sturgeon from the Cleveland Moffit detective story, "Through the Wall." During the past week, Director Sturgeon, learning of a reception at the beautiful Cummings estate, induced the hostess to permit him to make several scenes there, using the guests for atmosphere. Corrine Griffith and Webster Campbell took part in this, mingling with the Hollywood society.

"Teacher's Pets," E. & R. Jungle

"Teacher's Pets" is the title of an E. & R. subject dealing with school days. Ralph McComas plays the part of the country boob, upon whom the wrath of the teacher falls. He decides to break up the school, and does so by hiring the two chimpanzees, Napoleon and Sally, who in their actions prove that the press agent has been fibbing about them with respect to their having been educated. Very little was left of the school room set at the studio when the photoplay comedy was finished. Charles Carter plays the part of the teacher, and other players are Lillian Brown Leighton and Claire LeMoyne.

The E. & R. Jungle Company has just filmed "The Nymph and the Fawn." Scenes for this were made at Pasadena Glenn, a private park, containing many beautiful spots, including waterfalls. This is the first time this park has been used in pictures.

One of the most interesting features of entertainment afforded at the first annual exposition of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, Madison Square Garden, New York, will be the unique five-reel feature prepared for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce by producing companies in and about Los Angeles.

Practically every studio on the Coast will be represented in this, and the past week cameramen have been busy making special scenes. At Universal City all companies were assembled, and panorama scenes made. This section of the film will show more photoplayers, directors, and writers than any previous screen offering. At the Selig Zoo, Acting Manager A. A. Davison had special animal performances, and wonderful scenes of the half-million-dollar public park were made. The New York Motion Picture Corporation studios, which include the Inceville, Ince Culver City, and Mabel Normand film company plants, show many of the wonders, including the Indian Village, the great set for "Civilization," mammoth studios, and the gigantic dressing room building, containing almost three hundred rooms. The Lasky film will show the marvelous growth of the plant, a trip around the world made possible by the great number of settings preserved, and the now famous bungalow dressing room prepared for Geraldine Farrar. All films will be assembled within the next few days and shipped East.

So Alive, He Sleeps with One Eye Open

This film was made at the suggestion of the Los Angeles representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and under the supervision of a committee selected by film company representatives on which he served as chairman. Another feature of the Los Angeles exhibit, named and planned by the NEWS, is the photographic travelogue, "Around the World in Eighty Stills—Made in Los Angeles," which will consist of 16 by 20 enlargements of settings used by companies and representing all parts of the globe.

Members of the Static Club were entertained at a dinner at a local cafe this week by members of the Motion Picture Directors Association. In all there were eighty-five present, forty-two cameramen, and forty-three directors. Following the dinner, at which Otis Turner presided as toastmaster, there were speeches by William Robert Daly, Edward Ulhman, Tom Mix, Hobart Bosworth, and Charles Rosher.

Gus Inglis, of the firm of Willis and Inglis, of Los Angeles, is this week departing for New York, where he will make arrangements for the opening of an office of the firm, and to work in conjunction with the Los Angeles organization. Messrs. Willis and Inglis have created a general clearing house for films, to serve as agents for publishers and authors for motion picture rights on books and plays, photoplay scenarios, acting as sales agents for films and machines, and publicity agents for players. They now have a long list of clients in the several different fields.

EVERYBODY GETTING READY FOR THE BALL IN SAN DIEGO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

San Diego, Cal., April 29.

Dan Cupid has been getting in his work at the Lubin studio in Coronado. He recently made two "killings" which will interest many people. For a considerable time, in the winter months, there were rumors that Bird Hopkins and Adelaide Bronti were acting out a romance, but not befor the camera. Mr. Hopkins was in the north for some six or seven weeks, recently, returning to the Lubin Company. Last week he and "Mother" Bronti, as she is familiary known to all attaches of the studio, went to Central Christian Church in this city, where the pastor, Rev. William E. Crabtree united them in marriage. The next morning the dressing rooms of the bride and groom, as well as the stage settings, announced the event, and the jolly couple were the recipients of congratulations on all sides.

Another secret was also divulged the past week, when it became known that, back in February, Josephine MacLaughlin, formerly Captain Melville's stenographer, and now in the scenario department, had been married to Earl H. Miller, a prominent young attorney of this city. Now that the well-kept secret is out, the bride is proudly showing the gold band on her left hand, and her friends are extending best wishes.

Much to the surprise of all his old friends, Julian L. Lamothe, formerly in charge of the scenario department at the Lubin studio, now connected with the American at Santa Barbara, came down for an over-Sunday visit last week. The Santa Barbara climate seems to be agreeing with Mr. Lamothe, as he has gained about twenty pounds since going there in February.

James Stuart Douglas, formerly a director with American, who has been connected with the stage since he was seven years old, and who has produced, among other pictures, "Mother," "Alias James Chauffeur," "Mammie Rose," and "A friend in Need," has joined the scenario department at the Lubin studio.

S. M. Curtiss, for many years in stock and on the road with his own companies, has been engaged for characters with the Lubin company.

"The Stolen Master" is the name of a three-reel picture just finished by Jack Byrne, director-author of the story. It deals with the purloining of a famous masterpiece. following the destruction of an Italian gallery by Austrian air-raiders. Alan Forrest plays the lead, with Evelyn Page as ingenue, Adda Gleason as an adventures and George Routh as her accomplice.

Director Byrne, last week, put on "The Black Sheep," by Josephine MacLaughlin. It is, in the main, a rural drama, but has a number of scenes along the "Great White Way," the "black sheep" being the wild son of doting parents; and he is the agency by which the father's banking house is ruined. Another man is suspected, but the son finally has enough manhood to leave a written confession before ending his disgraceful career. Alan Forrest is seen as the son, Adda Gleason as his sister, George Routh as Jimmy Pierce, Evelyn Page as Mollie, an unsophisticated country girl, and Bird Hopkins and Adelaide Bronti as the doting father and mother.

The other Lubin company, with Millard Wilson directing, has been busy with "Sons of the Sea," from a scenario by Josephine MacLaughlin from a story by Mr. Wilson. In the cast appeared Cecil Van Auker, W. J. Spencer, Lucy Payton and Mr. Wilson.

The annual ball of the photoplayers will be held at the exposition on the evening of May 6, the Cristobal cafe being the scene of the event. It is expected that more than two hundred players will come down from Los Angeles by special train. It is announced that the grand march will be led by Dustin Farnum and "Miss San Diego," who in ordinary life is Marion Vogdes, of this city. Following them will come Edna Goodrich and one of the exposition officials. The Cristobal is to be given over to the moving picture people for the evening, and special boxes are to be constructed, in each of which will be a star, with his or her friends, the box being named for the star occupying it. Thomas Ince, however, will have a box which will be named "Civilization," and D. W. Griffith will have one named "Mother and the Law."

During the day of the ball a number of pictures will be taken about the grounds, and Eddie Dillon will feature Fay Tincher and other Griffith stars in scenes. Hobart Bosworth will put on a scene for a picture which he is directing. The Nestor comedy company, with Al Christie, will move its entire personnel to this city for that day. Myrtle Stedman and Ruth Roland will be heard in a song at the big organ on Sunday, May 7.

Others who are expected to be present, include Jackie Saunders, Helen Holmes, George Walsh, Gladys Brockwell, William Farnum, Gertrude Selby, Mary Anderson, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Mae Marsh, Douglass Fairbanks, Blanche Sweet, Bessie Barriscale, Clara Williams, Francelia Billington, Jack Warren Kerrigan, Charles Murray, Anna Luther, Ford Sterling, Mabel Normand, Margaret Gibson, Marin Sais, Kathryn Williams, Victoria Ford, Eugenia Ford, Tom Mix, Audrey Munson, Wallace Reid, Mollie Schaeffer, Arthur Shirley, Louise Orth, DeWolf Hopper, Mack Sennett, Cleo Madison and others.

J. Warren Kerrigan and company have been busy in the Pine Hills section of the mountains of this county on some scenes in a big feature, "The Silent Battle." The locale of the story is supposed to be the Canadian forests, and the company ran into some genuine winter weather among the pines, which gave them just the right conditions. Jack Conway directed, with B. C. Hayward at the camera. Lois Wilson, Maude George and Harry Carter are in the cast.

Ruth Hampton and other members of the Our Country Film Corporation have been in the city taking some scenes at the exposition to be used in their big feature, which is to include pictures taken in every state of the union.

H. A. Erickson, a Coronado photographer, has joined the John Borden Arctic expedition for the making of a picture in the frozen North. Borden is a millionaire sportsman and explorer of Chicago.

Two companies were put at work at the Lubin studio in Coronado last week. Jack Byrne, late with Keystone, is down here as a director and has been putting on "The Green Fairy," the cast including Alan Forrest, Ada Gleason and Evelyn Page. Mr. Byrne has held important engagements as scenario writer, actor and director, and has been in the service of Biograph, Reliance, Majestic, Universal, Santa Barbara and Balboa.

Melvin Mayo is directing the other company and has been filming "The Code of the Hills," by Millard Wilson, who, with Mr. Mayo and Lucy Peyton, appears in the cast.

At the Hippodrome theatre Thursday night a special number was put on by Manager Smith, by the introduction, immediately after a "Phunphilm" had been projected on the screen, of the individual members of the company all of whom have been working on some pictures here for the past two weeks. Those who appeared on the stage to demonstrate how slap-stick comedies are made, included Miss Bebe Daniels, May Cloy, Margaret Joslin and Harry Pollard, Dee Lampton, Bud Jamison, Billy Fay, Harry Todd, Charlie Stevenson, Fred Newmeyer, Harold Lloyd, Sammy Brooks, Gilbert Pratt, Director Hal Roach and Cameramen Al Delang and Jim Crosby. The novelty proved a great feature.

The "Phunphilm" crowd was down at Tia Juana, Mex., at the reopening of the big race track, and worked out some interesting films on that side of the international boundary line. Some say that certain members of the company dropped some good coin while "playing the ponies." However, they were able to make good return to San Diego, as they had their own automobiles with them.

M. R. McKinstry, of the Pollard Picture Company, has been busy with his people making a photoplay on one of the islands off the coast. It is also planned to take some scenes at the exposition and also at the border town of Tia Juana.

PICTURES ON INTERNATIONAL SUBJECTS WILL NOT BE SHOWN ON MEXICAN BORDER

Los Angeles exchangemen last week were informed of the action of custom officers on both sides of the border at Mexicale and Calexico with regard to motion picture films dealing with international themes, the officers having petitioned the theatre owners of both cities not to show such subjects.

In all instances the theatre men have complied, believing that the showing might create a feeling which would result in riots. Films of this character will not be supplied to cities in the vicinity of the Mexican border or where there is a big patronage of Mexicans.

DES MOINES FORMS CLUB AND ELECTS OFFICERS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 29.

With war on censorship as one of its objects, the Screen Club of Des Moines has just been organized with the following officers: C. E. Smith, president; Abe Frankel, vice-president; Harry Heirsteiner, secretary, and A. Blank, treasurer.

The club will co-operate with the Iowa Exhibitors' League in the holding of their convention on May 23 and 24. A ball and banquet under the joint auspices of the club and the league will be given on the latter date.

BRADFORD CONFERS WITH PROCTOR FOR PATRIOTIC SUBJECTS FEATURING GERTRUDE ROBINSON

Gertrude Robinson, who is starring at the head of one of the Gaumont Florida companies, has requested that she be permitted to appear in a series of photoplays of a patriotic nature.

General Manager Bradford, of Gaumont, has taken up the matter tentatively with George D. Proctor, Gaumont's scenario editor. The latter is now at work, in line with Miss Robinson's suggestion, outlining the series. It is not the intention to prepare a serial, but to have the pictures all strung upon the same thread of nationalistic appeal to men and women of America.

WOMEN'S CLUBS IN BERLIN, N. H., BUY THEATRE TO RUN CHILDREN'S PICTURES

Special to Motion Picture News.

Boston, April 14.

The Women's Clubs of Berlin, N. H., have bought and are running a picture house which is devoted mainly to children. Some time ago the clubs made arrangements with a local manager to run their programs on Friday night and Saturday, but now they have bought a house, and run pictures which are chosen for them by Alice Rice Carroll, a woman who specializes in this line of work, recommending programs for churches, settlements and houses, seeing all the pictures and keeping her finger on the market.

Grace Cunard and Francis Ford Back with Universal

Players Will Resume Work in Sixth Episode of "Peg o' the Ring," Completing the Fifteenth Chapter—Original Supporting Cast to Remain

FRANCIS FORD and Grace Cunard, who a short while ago left the employ of Universal, have returned to this company in order to complete the serial "Peg o' the Ring." Any differences which may have existed between the heads of Universal and the two stars were patched up last week when Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard made a flying trip to New York to see President Laemmle. They left for Universal City again on April 29.

They will resume work immediately, starting with the sixth episode and completing the total of fifteen two-reel chapters. When seen in New York Mr. Ford said that the cast and story would remain the same as it was at the outset. He inferred that there would be no other leads in the pictures other than Miss Cunard and himself with the original supporting cast consisting of Pete Gerald, Mark Fenton and others.

This sudden return to the old order of things puts to rout the wild rumor that Dorothy Gish had been loaned to Universal specially for the completion of the serial. This report was never confirmed by the Fine Arts studio, but there have been many who placed more or less confidence in the rumor.

As yet, the heads of the home office in New York City are undecided as to what position Ruth Stonehouse will hold. She was slated to appear in the leading role of "Peg o' the Ring" after Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard had left. Miss Cunard's return will automatically displace Miss Stonehouse, as the Universal star has already appeared in the first five chapters, and she will continue to do so in the remaining numbers.

GLADYS FISHER, STAR IN HOFFMAN'S COMETS, IS A DENVER GIRL

Gladys Fisher, the Denver girl who has been made leading woman for the Hoffman Film Producing Company of Denver, is perhaps one of the busiest stars of the screen. Besides playing leads in Hoffman's Comet Grand Photoplays, she writes scenarios. In her lexicon there is no such word as "can't." Miss Fisher is a beautiful girl of nineteen. She owes her success to hard work and has an advantage over most scenario writers because she is "camera wise." Few in the business possess a more prolific imagination. She is always inventing new and clever "business."

Miss Fisher was born in Denver, Colo., and was graduated from the Sacred Heart High School of Denver.

Beatriz Michelena Aids in Move Against "Schools"

Star of California Motion Features Engages Support of Governor Johnson in Movement to Suppress Fakers Gulling the Public with Picture Acting Lure

THROUGH the enlistment of the support of Governor Hiram Johnson of California, Beatriz Michelena, star of "The Unwritten Law" and other photoplays, has started a definite movement against fake schools of motion picture acting.

With this end in view Miss Michelena made a special trip to Sacramento, the state capital, and in a five-hour conference covered the situation with the chief executive. It was the first time that the evil of these schools had ever been called to the Governor's attention, and he was prompt in promising his support to any action that promised to adequately eliminate it.

Following up this advantage, Miss Michelena is now interesting the leading legislators of the state in a bill, which will be brought before the assembly and senate at their next session, and she is sanguine in her expectations that it will be passed by almost unanimous vote. Thus far she has not found one dissenting voice.

The plan which she herself devised in detail calls for the regulation of all schools of motion picture acting in the state by a commission appointed by the Governor and composed of recognized authorities in motion picture producing circles. Any school to operate must be sanctioned by a commission license, which may at any time be summarily revoked. The commission, after licensing a school, will be expected to keep it under closest scrutiny.

This is the basis that the popular film actress has offered the Governor and legislators to work upon at the next session and, with possible modifications in detail, it is expected to be the substance of the law enacted.

Hill, Circus Fictionist, to Novelize "Peg"

Joseph Brandt, Also Conversant with Life in "Sawdust Ring," Will Collaborate with Him for Story to Run in Publications of Western Newspaper Union

WALTER K. HILL, an experienced circus fictionist, has been engaged to create a narrative of show life, under the title of "Peg O' the Ring," which will soon be presented to clients and readers of the Western Newspaper Union. It will be published in serial form, with every episode a complete story in itself.

The author has had extended experience with the principal circuses of the country, and his travels have carried him into every state in the Union. The struggles and trials of the circus procession it will be Mr. Hill's object to present in an interesting and human way.

Collaborating with him will be Joseph Brandt, who is also fully acquainted with circus life. The two writers will portray the life of the circus as it passes from town to town.

DIRECTS 3 COMEDIES AT ONCE AND PLAYS IN TWO

Directing three comedies at one time, as well as playing a prominent part in two of them, is the record established by Director Dillon, of the Vogue Mutual studios. In one afternoon, three separate companies were occupying as many stages in the studio under Dillon's direction.

MYERS COMPLETES HIS FIRST "VIM'S"

Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby have completed the first two comedies they engaged to produce when they signed a two-year contract with Vim a fortnight ago.

Number Three

The PREFERRED Trade Journal

YOU read the NEWS, don't you?

And isn't it a fact that you prefer it to any other picture journal?

You get it first; you read all its readable pages. It's complete, reliable, lively. You like it.

Well, then, it's plain good sense, isn't it, to figure that everybody else in the trade feels pretty much as you do about it—that the exhibitor who also gets it first, also prefers it.

Prefers it. That's a very important point for you, the advertiser.

We told you last week that only subscriptions could tell you whether a publication went to your prospects or not, and that news-stand circulation could tell you nothing—except figures.

True, as truth itself!

But you'll have to consider a little further.

Granted that your prospects subscribes to two or more publications, which of these is most valable to you—the advertiser?

Why, the one he prefers, of course.

The paper he prefers is the one he reads; and the one he reads, the one he's sure to read and read through, is the one in which he's sure to see your advertising announcement.

The paper that's read! This, in the final analysis, is the paper of surest, highest advertising value.

You cannot go by number of subscriptions alone.

I once advertised in a class-journal which had nearly 60,000 paid in advance subscribers. The subscriptions were genuine; no premiums were used in getting them. But it appeared that the publisher was a better circulation man than editor. Circulation, in fact, was his hobby, and he was a wealthy man. By a most comprehensive and ingenious system of solicitation he actually acquired these subscriptions. But he had subscribers only—not readers.

At the same time I used this publication I also advertised in a similar medium of less than 10,000 circulation. The latter brought in ten times as many replies.

This proved to be the paper that was read.

We have used for MOTION PICTURE NEWS—and justly so—the slogan: "The paper that's read."

It is read—for two very simple, irrefutable reasons.

Number one: It reaches the reader first. You well know how eagerly each exhibitor, each feature buyer, each manufacturer awaits the fresh, complete news of each week's market. You know how you yourself feel about it. Do you think there's any doubt but that the wrapper will be torn off of MOTION PICTURE NEWS — the first paper on the desk?

Number two: Once the wrapper's off then you have the most readable paper! It's complete—it carries all the news and all the advertising—its reliable. Any doubt about its being read through?

The papers that come later take chances; but never MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

It's "the paper that's read"!

C. A. Johnston

Next consideration tells you how to determine for yourself what paper is preferred. Look for it.

STATE RIGHTS

THE sale of state rights on "Where Are My Children?" now running at the Globe Theatre on Broadway, New York, offers to State Rights Men and to Exhibitors of America the biggest opportunity to "Clean-Up" presented in years. This is the production that caused the biggest sensation ever known on Broadway. This is the production that has packed 'em in for weeks. Produced by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, producers of "Hypocrites." This is the subject that has secured the endorsement of such people as the Rev. Doctor Parkhurst—Superior Paulist Father John J. Hughes—Rev. Thomas A. Daly—from the leading New York Newspapers and from thousands of people who have given written opinions.

A great big smashing production, done in a great big smashing way, sensational yet dignified, dealing plainly with the premediated destruction of the unborn. Pronounced "Humanity's most powerful weapon against insidious crime."

The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

STRAWS do not indicate the way the wind blows one-half so surely as the Exhibitors' NET PROFITS indicate "what the public wants" in the matter of pictures. When the Exhibitors of Feature programs quit kidding themselves and begin counting the NET instead of the GROSS, there will be fewer fat fees for the sheriff and many more regular movie patrons in your town. A glimpse at the character of the features released week of May 22 on the Regular Universal Program, as briefly reviewed below, will convince you that when it comes to variety, to stars, to all the qualities that make two and three reel subjects popular, you have to come back to the UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. If you can get its service NOW grab it quick. If you can't—watch your very first opportunity.

King Baggot in "Half a Rogue." With Edna Hunter and Clara Beyers. From the celebrated story by Harold MacGrath. Directed by Henry Otto. Eighteenth Red Feather Production. Released May 22. Here's a happy combination for you. One of Harold MacGrath's rollicking romances with the punch that has made his books "best sellers" for years; with King Baggot and lovely Edna Hunter; with the direction in the capable hands of Henry Otto, who produced the famous "Undine"; with an unusual cast and the usual lavish Red Feather production. King's reputation as "a gay dog" is largely due to his constant association with "actresses"—he is a playwright by "trade"—and it gets him in bad back in the little town where his aunt-mother lives in the old homestead. The girl lives there, too, and a most absorbing story tells how King let folks know that he wasn't as black as he was painted. Clara Beyers in a vampire character, who wasn't really a rogue either, adds spice to an all-round fine production. Book this for popularity and profit.

"The Woman Who Followed Me." Two-Reel Gold Seal Romantic Drama with Gladys Brockwell and Juan de la Cruz. Directed by Robert Leonard. Released May 23. By Gosh, if Gladys ever started following you the way she did the hee-ro in this punch drama, the chances are you'd forget all about your financee and foller her around like you liked it. Gladys Brockwell has already made a name for herself on the Universal screen and she gets better every picture. If this cast and story were in the hands of the average "feature" producer the only thing for you to do would be to put your hand on your watch and beat it. Story, acting, and production make this a mighty fine picture.

Mary Fuller in "The Limousine Mystery." Two- Reel Victor Detective Drama. Directed by Lucius Henderson. Released May 24. A detecatif drama as is. That is, as it should be. That is, again, the mystery of the death in the limousine is not solved (and your audiences can't guess how it happened) until the final scene of the picture. "Our Mary" in a new role, that will fill the fans with delight.

Thomas Jefferson in "Corporal Billy's Comeback." Two Reel Laemmle Memorial Day Drama. From the stirring Saturday Evening Post Story by Harry Leon Wilson, co-author of "The Man from Home"; Author of "Ruggles of Red Gap," and many other successful stories and plays. Directed by George Cochrane. Released May 25. Corporal Billy was the last of the G. A. R. boys in town. He had always led the Decoration Day parade, and when they left him out he was heart broken. How he proved his heroism and showed he was neither too old nor too proud to fight makes one of the strongest Memorial Day stories the Universal has ever presented. Book this special if you are not fortunate enough to be showing the Universal Program.

"The Unconventional Girl." With Edith Roberts and Joe Girard. Two Reel Unconventional Drama. Directed by Robert F. Hill. Released May 26. If Edith hadn't been an unconventional girl she wouldn't have tried amateur burglary, nor would she have learned of her lover's perfidy. It is quite possible, too, that she would never have met Joe, and a startling climax would have been deprived of a telling love scene.

Harry Carey in "The Wedding Guest." Two-Reel 101-Bison Western Romantic Drama. Directed by Jacques Jaccard. Released May 27. Harry is sure some sheriff, and as bold and brave as a real Western sheriff should be. There is only one person he's afraid of and that's old Colonel Dan Cupid. What he does to Harry makes the sheriff throw away his star in disgust. A particularly fine Western, with enough heart punches to make a five reeler.

Ben Wilson in "A Gentle Volunteer." With charming Dorothy Phillips in the title role. Three Reel Memorial Day Rex Special. Directed by Ben Wilson. Released May 28. Book this, good friends. Book it for Memorial Day, or do you call it Decoration Day? A wonderful drama of the Civil War. A really big production. Cut from four reels. You'll wonder how it was done, for it's packed so full of action now that it might easily be padded to five reels. This will make a wonderful picture for Decoration Day. Get busy, if you are not fortunate enough to be showing the Universal Program.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

FIFTEEN SHORT LENGTH FEATURES AND COMEDIES IN WORK AT AMERICAN, SANTA BARBARA

EVERY facility of the newly constructed studios of the American-Mutual plant at Santa Barbara, Cal., are being brought into play in the production of the numerous short-length features and comedies now under way. Fifteen productions are set for early release through the Mutual Film Corporation.

Principal among them are the three-reel productions, "The Wheel of Fate," known as "The Cycle of Fate" during production. E. Mason Hopper is the director and Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh the stars. "The Man Who Forgot" is from a story by Kenneth B. Clarke, with Frank Borzage, Anna Little and Jack Richardson in the chief roles; and "Out of the Rainbow," by Anthony Coldeway, directed by Thomas Ricketts and featuring Lizette Throen, Leona Hutton and Edward Coxen. "The Man Who Forgot," to be released under the Mustang brand, is a drama of the West, into which Director Borzage had introduced a number of realistic scenes.

The love of a rich man's son for a countess of striking beauty and charm and the wealthy young ward of his mother, furnishes the romantic setting for "The Wheel of Fate," the three-reel feature being directed by E. Mason Hopper. Vivian Rich appears as the ward and Alfred Vosburgh as the rich man's son.

Among the two-reel subjects under way or completed are "The Black Sheep," from the pen of Anthony W. Coldeway. The principal roles in this production fall to Edward Coxen, Lizette Thorne and George Field. "The Gulf Between," a Mustang release, features Queenie Rosson, sister of Helene Rosson, who is starring in American-Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, and King Clark, a newcomer to the Mustang-Mutual fold. "The Gulf Between" is a story of the mountains, trappers, and counterfeiters offset by the loves and hates of the denizens of the high Western ranges.

Work on "The Blindness," another of these two-reel features, has been completed by Director Carl M. Le Viness. Rhea Mitchell, William Stowell and Roy Stewart have the chief roles. William Bertram is directing "The Madonna of the Night," another two-reel subject scheduled for release late in May. It was adapted for the screen by Karl Coolidge from a story by Constance Crawley, the American-Mutual De Luxe star, and Larry Peyton. Nita Davis has the chief role, supported by E. Forrest Taylor.

Among the comedies now in work for release through the Mutual under the "Beauty" brand are "Billy Van Deussen, Masquerader," with John Steppling in the role of Billy Van Deussen, supported by Carol Halloway; "A Germ Gem," featuring Orral Humphrey and his company of players, and "When Adam Had 'Em," first known as "A Shakey Affair."

"A COURTESAN" NEARLY READY FOR RELEASE FROM MUTUAL

"A Courtesan," is a five-reel subject being filmed under the direction of Arthur Maude at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, Inc.

The cast includes Eugenie Forde, Nell Franzen, Hal Cooley, Charles Wheelock, Al Fordyce and William Carroll. It will be released in the near future on the Mutual schedule.

"ETERNAL SAPHO" FROM FOX ON MAY 8

In "The Eternal Sapho," the William Fox release for May 8, Theda Bara will be seen in a story of the rise of a young girl from the slums to the studios and fashionable society. During her ascent, she wrecks the lives of those who were her early benefactors.

"THE OVERCOAT" SOUNDS UNDER NOTE OF "BARBARY COAST" ANECDOTE—IT WON'T GET YOUR GOAT

"The Overcoat," by Forrest Halsey is now being filmed in five reels, from a scenario by J. Edward Hungerford, under the direction of Rea Berger.

This piece of fiction reproduces correctly a famous dance-hall of San Francisco's Barbary Coast, now extinct. In one night scene there are nearly two hundred people.

The cast includes Thea Mitchell, William Stowell, Perry Banks, Clarence Burton and Warren Ellsworth. The release date is to be announced in the near future by the Mutual.

"GHOST OF OLD MORRO" FROM EDISON

The story of "The Ghost of Old Morro," a coming Edison release, centers about Morro Castle, the grim fortress which has frowned down upon Havana harbor for more than three hundred years.

Interiors of the cells and chambers of the prison are revealed for the first time, it is said.

TENSE MOMENTS IN THE NEW SIGNAL PATRIOTIC SERIAL

ILLUSTRATING TYPICAL SCENES FROM "THE SECRET OF THE SUBMARINE"

RELEASES FROM ESSANAY INCLUDE 3 CHESHIRE CAT CHUCKLERS BY ADE

PRESIDENT GEORGE K. SPOOR of Essanay is confident that his company's offerings for May and June make as substantial a program as yet produced by Essanay. While there is no more thorough disciple of the doctrine of short subjects than Mr. Spoor in the whole film business, he is not overlooking the advantages of the feature film—where a story sufficient for a feature film exists.

He declares that the most obvious requirements of features are better stories and stronger casts. Dozens of subjects from recognized writers are rejected by Essanay before one believed of sufficient power for feature length is selected. The success which has met recent released will testify to their worth. It is not Essanay policy to make them the vehicle for the exploitation of one star supported by an indifferent cast.

"That Sort," a five-reel picturization of Basil McDonald Hasting's play, soon to be released, offers an example of this method. In it are four players of national reputation, Warda Howard, Ernest Maupain, Duncan McRae and John Lorenz, together with the best Essanay has in its company in support of them. So it is with "According to the Code," also in five acts, which includes Lewis S. Stone, Marguerite Clayton, E. H. Calvert and Sydney Ainsworth in its cast.

William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes," now ready in seven parts, is also supported by an exceptional cast, which includes most of the players who were with him on the stage and numerous Essanay actors, headed by Ernest Maupain, the excellent character actor.

"The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row," just issued, in five parts, also maintains the established Essanay standard. Sallie Fisher, the famous musical comedy star, is featured with Richard C. Travers and John Junior. The supporting cast contains such well-known players as John Cossar and Patrick Calhoun.

But with all this array of talent in its multiple reel features the shorter pictures have received just as much attention. In the three-reel offerings for May the best actors Essanay has are to be seen. Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig are to be seen in "Once a Thief." Ann Kirk, Edmund F. Cobb, together with Patrick Calhoun, Richardson Cotton and others appear in "A Rose of Italy." "The Jester" features John Junior and Gertrude Glover. "The Schemers" completes the three-reel offerings for May.

"The Song in the Dark" is a two-reel reissue due May 30, featuring Richard C. Travers. "The Condemnation" is an original two-reel offering with Darwin Karr and Nell Craig. Lillian Drew, Harry Dunkinson and Edward Arnold are the principals in "A Return to Youth—and Trouble," a two-reel light comedy adaptation from one of Albert Payson Terhune's short stories. "The Double Cross," also in two reels, is offered with Elizabeth Burbridge and Patrick Calhoun.

Leading the one-reel offerings are the new George Ade fables. "The Fable of the Willing Collegian who was Hunting for a Foothold" was filmed with some of the leading business and professional men of Chicago taking part. Others just completed are "The Fable of the Good Fairy with the Lorgnette and Why She Got it Good," and "The Fable of the Preacher Who Flew His Kite, But Not Because He Wished to Do So." Each one is a guaranteed scream. Cartoonist Wallace A. Carlson's Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 10 and Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of San Francisco, each in spit reel with a scenic, also are offered.

"OIL OF REVELATION" GIVES E. & R. "CHIMPS" COMEDY OPPORTUNITY

"The Oil of Revelation" is a one-reel comedy from a scenario by Lillian Brown Leighton filmed this week by Director J. J. Franz of the E. & R. studio. An aged couple buy medicine from a street faker, and in their dreams they see themselves returned to the forms of chimpanzees, wherein Sally and Napoleon, the company's educated chimps, go through all the every-day happenings of husband and wife around their own fireside, and serve as leaders at meetings held that evening.

This scenario offers opportunity for the E. & R. producers to show the wide range of talents of these two chimps.

UNIVERSAL FOR THE WEEK OF MAY 8th STEPS OFF WITH "A HUNTRESS OF MEN"

THE Universal program for the week of May 8 steps off with Mary Fuller in the five reel Red Feather feature, "A Huntress of Men," in which Miss Fuller is supported by Joe W. Girard and Sidney Bracey. On the same day Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson stage a Nestor comedy, "Potts Bungles Again."

On May 9, Herbert Rawlinson heads the bill in "The Mark of a Gentleman," a two reel light Gold Seal drama in which he plays vis a vis with Agnes Vernon. On the same day Cleo Madison stars with Edward Hearn in the Rex drama, "Virginia," and Vic Potel and Jane Bernoudy, cavort about in the Imp comedy, "When a Wife Worries."

"The Great Smash," a three reel L-Ko comedy featuring Alice Howell and Ray Griffith is the main event on May 10. The latest number of the Universal Animated Weekly, No. 19, is also released on the same day together with "The Go-Between," an Imp drama in which William Garwood plays the principal role. Two decided novelties are featured in the Universal program for May 11. In a Powers split reel, "Some Monkey Stars," a Ditmars educational, and "Mr. Fuller Pep—He Tries Mesmerism," a comic cartoon, vie for honors. On the same day Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnston are featured in the Laemmle two-reel domestic society drama, "Her Husband's Faith." Joe Martin, the famous Universal ape, attempts to excel Professor Ditmar's simians on the following day, May 12, in "A Strange Confession," a Victor drama built especially for him. Harry Benham plays the principal role in "The Capital Prize," an Imp two-reel detective drama on the same date and is followed by Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher in the Nestor comedy, "Never Lie to Your Wife."

On May 13, G. Raymond Nye and Roberta Wilson co-star in "A Fight for Love," a Bison two-reel underworld drama, and on the same day William Franey and Gale Henry give the Universal patrons a little comedy relief in the joker, "A Wife for a Ransom."

On the last day of the week, Sunday, May 14, the Rex three-reel drama "A Soul for Sale," shares honors with the Laemmle comedy-drama, "Her Great Part," in which Myrtle Gonzales and Fred Church play the principal roles.

The second episode of "The Adventures of Peg o' the Ring," entitled "A Strange Inheritance," will be released during the week of May 8. Ruth Stonehouse, Eddie Polo, Grace Cunard and Francis Ford all appear in this two-reel episode of the circus serial.

"POLICE DOG IN PARK" IS ANIM(AL)ATED CARTOON FROM PARAMOUNT

SHORT-REEL features, released by the Paramount Pictures Corporation on the program for the week of May 15, are headed by the Paramount Pictograph, showing films on scientific subjects and topics of the day. The other single-reels are the fifteenth release of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures, "Among the Head-Hunters," and the fun film, "The Police Dog in the Park," Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon, by C. T. Anderson.

Various stages of the chicken industry, from the hatching of the first chick to its highest development, are interestingly shown in the fifteenth release of the Paramount Pictographs, which include a continuation of Henry Reuterdahl's screen arguments for naval preparedness and the Trickids release, "Happifat's Dream."

Afternoon tea dances are unheard of festivities in the neighborhod of Bontoc, in the Philippines, but important occurrences are celebrated by the Canyao, a ceremony partly religious and partly social, combining dance and sacrifice, as Burton Holmes shows in the fifteenth release of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures, "Among the Head-Hunters." The beating of big gongs and the sound of many barbaric voices, raised in weird chants, makes this native dance mysterious and hypnotic. Head-hunting used to be good sport all the year round in the vicinity of Bontoc, and careless strangers were apt to find themselves sacrificial victims in the Canyao. Thirty-four miles from Bontoc, Mr. Holmes leads his travelers into the land of the Ifugao people, who have astonished the world with their engineering feats, irrigating mile after mile of rice terraces, which line the walls of their lovely valleys.

FOURTEEN THOUSAND FEET UNWOUND FROM "V" WEEK OF MAY 1ST

FOR the week of May 1, Vitagraph is offering a program consisting of fourteen thousand feet of comedy and drama. "God's Country and the Woman," a powerful drama of the Northwest, heads the list, and such pictures as "Mr. Jack Hires a Stenographer," "Jane's Husband," "Some Chicken," and the Broadway Star Feature, "The Resurrection of Hollis," lend support.

"God's Country and the Woman" is from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, and was filmed in California under the supervision of Rollin S. Sturgeon. This picture, which will be presented to photoplay lovers on May 1, tells of the strict standard of morality in the North. Her mother, having fallen into the clutches of Arnold Lang, a border ruffian, during her father's absence, Josephine Adare steps bravely forward and shoulders the responsibility of claiming the child which is born, as her own. Philip Weyman comes to the North to spend a year trapping and shooting, and falls in love with Josephine. In order to protect her own honor, she gets him to pose as her husband and the father of the child. He follows her and protects her, unaware of the true cause of her great sorrow, and knowing only that in helping her he is subjecting himself to great danger. The villain, who had betrayed her, kidnaps Josephine, and Philip pursues them. In the pitched battle which follows, the worthless scoundrel is slain by Josephine's faithful wolf hounds.

William Duncan as Philip Weyman, Nell Shipman as Josephine and George Holt as Arnold Lang, enact the leading parts.

"Mr. Jack Hires a Stenographer," is another of "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," with Frank Daniels. How Mr. Jack engages a "pippin" of a stenographer, and then gets himself into and out of a lot of trouble, and is finally forced by his better half to discharge the beauty, makes an interesting story. Alice Washburn and Betty Howe render assistance to Mr. Daniels in the enactment of this picture.

"Jane's Husband," another one-reel comedy, released on the General Film program, depicts the troubles of a homely spinster in securing a husband. She finally succeeds in cornering a helpless tramp, only to find him already married.

Edith Storey is the principal funmaker under the direction of George D. Baker.

"Some Chicken," another single-part comedy listed for Friday, was enacted by the Western division of Vitagraphers, under the supervision of Dave Smith. A crowing rooster starts a feud between two pairs of lovers, but all ends happily when the offender is devoured at the wedding breakfast of the two couples. Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell play the leading parts and are supported by Anne Schaefer and Otto Lederer.

"The Resurrection of Hollis" is the title of the Broadway Star Feature for the week, which is scheduled for release on May 6. This is a three-part picture, written by George Strayer Maxwell, and produced by Harry Davenport. The cast includes Walter McGrail, Belle Bruce and Arthur Cozine.

In a vivid dream Hollis, who had been in love with Nellie and had feigned suicide in order to make her regret her action in seemingly encouraging Ned Dunton, sees the possible tragic consequences of his cowardly deed, returns to her and is received with open arms when she finds he is still alive.

TALLOWS TO ELECTRICITY SHOWN IN PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS

HOW electricity stepped in to take away from women the work of cooling beef or mutton tallow in moulds to make candles and placed it in the hands of men operating switch-boards in enormous power houses is shown in the Paramount Pictograph feature "Science and Invention: Candles to Electric Lights." This Pictograph division is edited by Waldemar Kaempffert of the Popular Science Monthly.

The film shows how Grandmother made tallow into candles to place in her quaint old candlesticks. Then the scene changes to an enormous power house of the present day showing how electricity is turned into the home.

EIGHT SCREEN STARS IN FIVE WORLDS FOR MAY SUPERVISED BY BRADY

DURING the forthcoming month, beginning this week, the World Film Corporation will offer eight famous players in five of the newer productions which have been supervised by William A. Brady throughout.

On May 1, Clara Kimball Young will be seen in "The Feast of Life," a Chautard production, staged in the interior of Cuba and said to equal Miss Young's production of "Camille." A picked cast supports her.

On May 8, Kitty Gordon, last seen in "As In a Looking Glass," makes her appearance in "Her Maternal Right" staged by John Ince under the Brady supervision, the story by Willard Mack.

On May 15, Robert Warwick, the noted stage and screen player, comes again onto the World program, this time in a play entirely different from anything he has yet appeared in, entitled "Sudden Riches," based on a story by E. Richard Schayer.

On May 22, Alice Brady, last seen in "Then I'll Come Back to You," makes her appearance in a powerful dramatic document, "Tangled Fates," wherein her dramatic training stands her in good stead.

On May 29, Mollie King, recently seen in "A Woman's Power" makes her second World appearance in "Fate's Boomerang" which was staged in the mountain country about North Carolina and Tennessee and which owing to difficulty of finding proper locale, required more than two months to complete.

With the beginning of the releasing quarter, starting May 1 and ending July 31, the "Brady-Made" product will have begun to show its potency. The list of forthcoming releases following the last week in May, includes among other stars, Carlyle Blackwell, Gerda Holmes, Holbrook Blinn, Ethel Clayton, Robert Warwick, Clara Whipple, Muriel Ostriche, Frank Sheridan, Edna Wallace Hopper, and House Peters. Mr. Peters, now permanently with World Film, will appear on that program about seven times a year while Gail Kane will be seen at equal periods.

MANY DRAMATIC SUBJECTS FROM V-L-S-E FOR MAY RELEASE

THE V-L-S-E releases for the month of May present a number of dramatic subjects, in which appear many stars. Among these is William Gillette, who comes to the screen for the first time in Essanay's production of "Sherlock Holmes."

On May 1 the offering will be "The Law Decides," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon, with Dorothy Kelly and Harry Morey in the leading roles, assisted by Bobby Connelly, the child star. On the same day Selig releases "At Piney Ridge," presenting Fritzi Brunette in the role of a mountain girl heroine. She is supported by Al W. Filson, Leo Pierson, Edward J. Piel and others.

Another of Daniel Carson Goodman's psychological dramas is scheduled by the Lubin Company for May 8. It is entitled "Love's Toll," and features Rosetta Brice and Richard Buhler. The Vitagraph offering for that day is "Britton of the Seventh," a five-part war drama of the Indian plains, written by Cyrus Townsend Brady. Eleanor Woodruff, Harry Northrup, Logan Paul, Eulalie Jensen, Darwin Karr, Ned Finley, Lionel Belmore, Marion Henry and Rose Tapley are among those in the cast.

On May 15 Vitagraph will offer a six-reel drama entitled "The Ordeal of Elizabeth," featuring Lillian Walker and Evart Overton. With William Gillette posing as Conan Doyle's famous detective, Essanay has produced "Sherlock Holmes" in seven reels. Supporting Mr. Gillette are Alice Faulkner, Ernest Maupain, Edward Fielding and others. This will also be released May 15.

"The Redemption of Dave Darcey," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon of heart interest import, will be released May 22. James Morrison, Belle Bruce, Billie Billings and Mary Maurice are featured.

Kathlyn Williams, Guy Oliver and Harry Lonsdale appear in the Selig drama, "Into the Primitive," to be released May 29. In this a tropical hurricane is staged, and numerous wild animals are introduced. Another May 29 release is the Vitagraph five part drama, "The Suspect," featuring Anita Stewart and S. Rankin Drew. In this Miss Stewart will be seen in a role totally different, it is said, from anything in which she has yet appeared under the Vitagraph banner.

FROM PICTOGRAPHS TO STRAIGHT PHOTODRAMAS, PHILADELPHIA FEELS STIR OF BUSINESS

ALLEN MAY, old-time actor, known all over the country, now salesman for the World Film Corporation in Philadelphia, has won a prize in the salesmen contest running from March 15 to April 15. Mr. May captured one of the third prizes of ten dollars this time. He has been on the honor list before. The Famous Players exchange finds the Paramount Pictographs taking particularly well in the Philadelphia territory. Those exhibitors wishing to run a whole Paramount Program say the Pictographs fill a long-felt want.

H. Rodner, a special Metro representative, who has just returned from a trip through New York state, reports conditions there far better than in Pennsylvania, in spite of the fact that Metro is forging rapidly ahead in the Keystone regions.

Rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, C. V. Carrick says exhibitors booking "Peg o' the Ring" need not fear the defection of Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, who are still with Universal and will be seen in this "Special" serial. As Mr. Carrick has just returned from a conference in New York, he knows whereof he speaks. The serial, released May 1 in Philadelphia, is already booking rapidly. It will be seen first at 333 Market street, one of the Central Market Street Company's houses.

Mutualites are on the qui vive about the first Mutual Chaplin release of "The Floor Walker," which will appear simultaneously in several Philadelphia theatres on May 15. The Philadelphia office has already eighty-seven bookings on this picture to its credit. Business has increased to the tune of $400 in three weeks. B. R. Tolmas, formerly of the New York Twenty-third street branch of the Mutual office and well known in that section, is now representing the Philadelphia branch. Mr. Tolmas is just back from a trip through New Jersey, where he booked the Mutual Special Feature, "Fighting for France," in every single town in the state. Being strictly neutral, Mr. Tolmas, on his next trip, will try to equal or even surpass this record on a still later Mutual release, "The Fighting Germans."

Harry Scott has returned from Washington, where he made arrangements to open a Kleine exchange, which will be a sub-office of the Philadelphia branch. The exchange will be located in the Bank of Commerce building. The manager has not yet been selected. C. G. Powell, former manager of the Mutual office in Philadelphia, is acting as special representative for Kleine on "Gloria's Romance," the Billie Burke novel, in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina. The V-L-S-E, offices up to date, is working ten prints of the Essanay-Chaplin "Carmen," and they are all booked solid until June 1, with a minimum price of one hundred dollars per day. The burlesque is drawing record-breaking houses wherever it is appearing around Philadelphia, and J. S. Hebrew, who has just returned from Washington, says the enthusiasm is greater down there.

The New Film Corporation, Philip Greenburg manager, will move from its present quarters, 1335 to 1339 Vine next week, the whole building at 1335 having been taken over by the International Film Service, Inc., which will move as soon as extensive alterations are completed.

The International has added to its sales force Robert S. Vandegrift, formerly salesman for Pathé.

On "Who's Guilty?" the Pathé office has taken quite a number of bookings before the exhibitors even saw the prints. For "The Grip of Evil," with Jackie Saunders, Manager H. M. Osborn has had many inquiries by mail and 'phone, although the release is scheduled three months hence. Instead of taking another floor as contemplated, extensive additions and alterations will be made to the present quarters, thus having all departments in roomy offices on one floor. Changes will be made in booking, shipping, stenographers' and salesmen's quarters, the building being added to at the rear. Promotions are also in order. R. W. Ettris, Jr., has been advanced from booker to salesman. C. U. Marin will become assistant manager from cashier.

On April 24, Joseph Houseman, of the Stanley Company, will start as roadman, succeeding R. S. Vandegrift.

C. R. Seelye, efficiency expert from the Pathé home office, was in Philadelphia four days, looking over the ground. Business is increasing encouragingly in the territory for Pathé. Famous Players exchange reports twelve new Paramount contracts in the past two weeks. Oscar Bower, manager, thinks "The Heart of Nora Flynn," a Lasky release, is one of the best pictures that has come along recently. It is booked for a whole week at the Stanley theatre.

Frank E. Samuels, of New York, took in Philadelphia on his present Southern and Western trip for the Raver Film Corporation, making his headquarters at the "Masterpiece" office.

HOLAH SOUNDS KEYNOTE OF CO-OPERATION AT CINCINNATI DINNER

CO-OPERATION between exhibitors, film exchange men and newspapers for a stimulation of business was the key note sounded by C. E. Holah, manager of the Cincinnati office of the V-L-S-E Company in an address which resulted in the organization of the Cincinnati Screen Club at an informal meeting in the Cuvier-Press Club there on April 13. The co-operation outlined by Mr. Holah cut both ways, involving both the film industry and the newspapers.

He showed by quoting facts and figures how the publication of news of the film industry aids in the circulation of newspapers and, on the other hand, confessed that the film men need the co-operation of the newspapers. Guests at this meeting were a number of newspapermen and writers and the managing editors of all the Cincinnati papers. They were made honorary members of the club on its organization.

Paul J. Mooney, district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, a former newspaperman, spoke along lines similar to those expressed by Mr. Holah. The past experience of Mr. Mooney as a newspaperman has enabled him to bring about some big publicity results. A course dinner was served, a feature of which was an "epitaph" at each man's place. This consisted of some one of his best features, typewritten on pieces of film in its raw state. Arrangements were made to hold weekly meetings of the organization at which "stunts" will be arranged for the entertainment of newspaper representatives. The following officers were elected by the club:

C. E. Holah, president; Charles Weigel, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, vice-president; W. J. Beyers, Cincinnati Post, secretary, and W. S. Wessling, Pathe Exchange, Inc., treasurer.

STEEN ESCAPES A DILEMMA'S HORN, FOR HE CAST HIS LOT WITH UNICORN

Exhibitors in the territory controlled by A. G. Steen, Philadelphia manager of the new Unicorn Film Service, are more than pleased since it is whispered to them that Mary Pickford, Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet, Mack Sennett and others equally popular are in the galaxy of stars shortly to appear in the Unicorn firmament.

Although only a few days old, Unicorn has "caught on" in Philadelphia. On the second day of its life thirteen new contracts walked into the Philadelphia office. Superstition being left out of the management's makeup, all thirteen were welcomed. As a consequence of the quick popularity of the program, Manager Steen has had to increase his order of two prints for each release to four.

William Fait, of the Comedy theatre, Baltimore, was one of the first exhibitors, starting with Unicorn on its first release. So pleased was he at results, he called up Mr. Steen on long distance to tell him that all records for the eight years of his theatrical experience were broken on that day. Mr. Fait controls eight houses in Baltimore and expects to use Unicorn in them all.

Mr. Steen has a sign six by twenty-two feet of hand carved wood, with gold leaf letters on a green ground, large white unicorns supporting it at each end. The sign stretches across the whole front of the building at 1309 Vine, attracting favorable comment from every passer-by on Film Row.

CHAPLIN RELEASES MAKE HIT IN DENVER

Ward E. Scott, manager of the Mutual exchange in Denver, is very much pleased at the success of the Chaplin releases in that territory.

A special showing for the exhibitors of "The Secret of the Submarine," was held at the Swanson-Nolan Miniature theatre on April 25. This was atended by over two-thirds of the exhibitors of Denver, and was very favorably commented on.

Ernest Fred, former poster boy of the Mutual Exchange, was promoted to chief shipping clerk. J. A. Riblet was promoted from head office boy to assistant booker.

Oscar Carlson, former booker of the Mutual Exchange, who resigned on account of ill health, died at Belle Fourche, S. D., on Sunday, April 16. Carlson went to Denver two years ago from Chicago to regain his health. He is survived by his wife, mother and father, who reside in Chicago. The body was shipped to them. Carlson started with the Mutual of Denver two years ago.

UNITED OBTAINS ILLINOIS RIGHTS TO "VIRTUE"

The United Film Service of Chicago has secured the Illinois and Indiana rights to the Franklin Film Mfg. Corporation's five-reel comedy drama, "Virtue." This will open at a loop theatre in Chicago about May 1, after which it will be booked throughout this territory.

H. J. ROBERTS VISITS FOX EXCHANGE IN DENVER; PALMER MAKES RECORD RUN FROM COAST

H. J. ROBERTS, New York representative of the Fox Film Corporation, has been in Denver for the past ten days, having visited the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Salt Lake exchanges of the Fox Film Corporation. Mr. Roberts leaves Denver in a few days for Omaha, Kansas City, Cleveland, and then will go to New York City. Mr. Roberts reports a successful investigation of all the Fox exchanges he has visited. Mr. Carmichael, the Denver manager for Fox, received notice that the Fox production featuring Annette Kellermann would be ready for exhibitors by June. Mr. Carmichael holds a record for holding his customers in his territory, having on his books thirty-three exhibitors who have used the Fox feature service for a period of one year without any stop in their service. "Gold and the Woman," a Fox production, featuring Theda Bara, broke the three-day run of the Isis theatre of Denver under the management of Sam Baxter.

Martha Neal, former billing clerk for the Universal Exchange of Denver, has resigned to accept a position of publicity and advertising manager for the Swanson and Nolan Supply Company of Denver.

The Mutual Exchange of Denver, under the management of Ward E. Scott, has placed the Mutual service with the Star theatre of Fowler, Colo. The Star, with a seating capacity of five hundred, was bought by W. C. Bevard from E. M. Owens, and is being remodeled at a cost of $10,000. Ed. Calhoun, manager of the Star theatre of Scotts Bluff, dropped into the Mutual office and signed up for the new Chaplin releases.

J. W. McMahon, of Colorado Springs, is a frequent visitor in Denver on Sunday in his new Packard machine. The first place McMahon goes upon arriving in Denver is the Mutual Exchange, where he finds Mr. Scott hard at work, and from there they journey together to the parks and the mountains in the big machine.

Several new theatres have sprung up in the Inter-Mountain territory. J. W. Pace opened a new theatre in Chadron, Neb., last Monday, to run in opposition to the Rex theatre of that town. W. C. Bevard is remodeling the Star theatre at Fowler, Colo.

J. O. Taylor, former manager of the Rex theatre of Raton, New Mexico, is to work out of the Salt Lake Mutual office under the management of Billy Moran.

Denham Palmer, western representative of the World Film Corporation, made a record-breaking trip to Denver from San Francisco to take charge of the Denver Exchange. Charles L. Gilmore, the Denver manager, was operated on for appendicitis the early part of last week, and from all reports the operation was successful. Palmer will remain as manager of this exchange until Gilmore is able to resume charge.

The exchangemen are delighted with the result so far attained, and several of them have ordered additional prints of this feature for immediate delivery. Nearly every exhibitor who has played "The City of Illusion" has come back for more time and many of them are said to have offered twenty-five per cent. above regular rental.

EXCHANGES IN PITTSBURGH MOVE FROM FILM ROW TO KEENAN BUILDING

ONE of the latest moves of the exchanges in Pittsburgh has carried them out of Film Row and has taken many of the big exchanges into the Penn avenue district, a section of the city which has not been figuring in the exchanges plans until this week.

Several months ago two of the exchanges were moved to the Penn avenue section, near Twelfth street, and it was thought a wrong move had been made, as the two were far away from the rest.

Then the fire marshal, seeing that there would be little chance to protect the exchanges in the locality in which they were situated, gave a number of them the order to secure other quarters. Then the rush was on for new homes, and the Keenan building seemed to be the best place for them.

The Keenan building in one jump became the center of the motion picture industry, and many of the firms which were in Film Row are now housed in this big fireproof building in better and bigger quarters.

Among the firms which are housed in the Keenan building are the following: First floor—Feature Film and Calcium Light Company, both film and supply departments; Western Union Telegraph Company and The Exhibitors' Messenger Service Company. Second floor, Metro Pictures Service. Third floor—Independent Film Exchange. Fourth floor—Pathé Exchange. Fifth floor—World Film Corporation, International Film Service, and The Poster Exchange. Sixth floor—Liberty Film Renting Company, Independent Display Company. Seventh floor—The International Film Exchange and the Poster Exchange. ATWOOD OPENS OFFICE IN LOS ANGELES FOR INTERNATIONAL

George H. Atwood, selected as manager of the Los Angeles exchange of the International Film Service, Inc., has arrived in Los Angeles and opened offices at 912 South Olive street, a short distance below film row. The first release will be that of "The Mystery of Myra," a fifteen episode serial about May 1.

The serial story for this will appear in the Hearst newspapers, and other subjects to be released about the same time are cartoons by the famous artists of the Hearst newspaper syndicate staff.

NETTER ESTABLISHES MASTERPIECE FILM ATTRACTIONS IN QUAKER CITY

Leon D. Netter, the former general manager of Lesser's Pacific coast enterprises, has established the Masterpiece Film Attractions, and in partnership with Sol L. Lesser, will operate in the Pennsylvania and New Jersey territory on an extensive scale.

Spacious offices have been opened at 1325 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa. Among the productions now being booked are "The Spoilers," "Neptune's Daughter" and "Cabiria."

Mr. Netter has just purchased the L. & R. Feature Film Company, of Washington, D. C., and will consolidate both exchanges into one, and handle all business out of Philadelphia.

Netter recently left the Pacific Coast after he had gained an experience of the exhibitor's requirements covering a period of five years, through constant association with them. Announcement of other productions which he will handle will be made shortly.

BROWN SELLS STOCK HOLDING IN METRO, WASHINGTON, D. C.

It is with deep regret that film circles in the Washington, D. C., territory learn that J. Frank Brown has disposed of his stock in the Metro Company, for this means the severance of his connection with that corporation in the near future. Mr. Brown will remain with Metro for a few months longer and is at present on the road in the South, giving his best energies, as always, for Metro. He is vice-president and sales manager of the film exchange for Washington territory and has aided materially in establishing Metro features in that section, especially in the South.

"Exactly where I shall make my next connection," stated Mr. Brown, "I have not as yet fully determined, but I shall remain in the film business. It is too exciting, too fascinating, to leave."

Mr. Brown has been with Metro since its inception, and before that he was with Paramount, and previous to that he was with the Famous Players.

KENDALL MADE V-L-S-E SALESMAN; STEINSON IN OKLAHOMA TERRITORY

The promotion of J. C. Kendall from booker to salesman is announced by Manager C. E. Holah, of the Cincinnati branch office of the Big Four. Mr. Kendall has earned an enviable reputation by his sales promotion work, and during several years spent in the motion picture business has accumulated a fund of experience likely to prove of great value to him in the future.

At the Dallas office the engagement of J. A. Steinson as salesman has caused widespread satisfaction among the trade. Prior to his joining the Dallas staff, Mr. Steinson was an exhibitor at McAlister, Okla., and booked V-L-S-E features at his theatre. Having a large circle of acquaintances among the Oklahoma exhibitors, he will be held responsible for that territory, in which it is confidently expected that he will reap rich results.

BERMAN FINDS BUSINESS EXCELLENT IN KANSAS; GILL GETS FEATURE RIGHTS

H. E. BERMAN, manager of the Metro office here recently took a week's trip into the territory and on his return announced that he had secured Metro bookings in the largest theatres in the following thriving Kansas towns: Independence, Wellington, Wichita, Arkansas City, Saline and Winfield. A recent visitor to that office was Sol J. Berman, brother of the Kansas City manager, passing through on his way to Excelsior Springs for a short rest. S. J. Berman is connected with the Clara Kimball Young Corporation and was formerly located in Kansas City.

Max Kravetz, manager of the Capitol Film Company, Denver, Colo., was a recent visitor to the office of the Western Film and Supply Company, visiting his friend, "Pat" Hall. Mr. Kravetz was there on his way back home from a trip to Chicago.

A new traveler with the Associated Film Service is E. W. Parker, formerly manager of the Orpheum theatre in Enid, Okla. Mr. Parker will act as special representative for the Associated and will for the present be located in the Oklahoma territory. He has been in the show business for nearly thirty years and is a veteran in the moving picture business.

H. G. Gill, manager of the Associated Film Service, announces that he has secured for his firm the Missouri and Kansas rights for the following pictures: "The Melting Pot," "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and "Cabiria." Annette Kellermann's picture, "Neptune's Daughter," he also has obtained for Missouri releases. According to Mr. Gill, his greatest picture now is the "Mutt and Jeff" series. By personal persuasion he has secured permission to run a five-inch advertisement, the same size as the Mutt and Jeff pictures, in a local newspaper, in the same space as the cartoons, reading as follows: "Mutt and Jeff now in moving pictures. See them at your favorite theatre." In this way he is getting the fact before the public. One house in this city is showing these pictures the first four days of the week, and is more than pleased with the opportunity.

The Gate City Feature Film Company has taken the world's rights for the pictures of the Panama-California International Exposition, and is handling them with success. They are being placed in the surrounding territory rapidly and will probably be taken East soon. The firm is planning the adoption of a unique selling plan.

FULLER USED DAILIES FOR TRADE SHOWING NOTIFICATION

George W. Fuller, manager of the World Film Exchange in St. Louis, recently announced in the Sunday newspapers that a special showing of the latest World releases would be shown at the Delmar theatre, 4936 Delmar avenue, on April 24, and that every exhibitor who cared to avail himself of the privilege was cordially invited to attend the exhibition. Many out of town exhibitors, both users and prospective users of the service, were on hand besides the local theatre managers.

The International Film Company, which recently established an office in the Plaza building at 3300 Olive street, St. Louis, with E. W. Dustin as head, has installed a projection room on the second floor of the building, where it will show the latest films to any exhibitor who cares to look at them before deciding on his program.

FOSTER IS PICKED AS HEAD FOR TRIANGLE IN DETROIT

The Triangle Film Corporation has leased the second floor of the building at 318 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich., and will open a complete exchange there by May 1. From this office all Michigan bookings will be made, and the office will be under the management of L. W. Foster, who will represent the Triangle company.

This floor is 30 by 100 feet in size, and will be equipped with a projection room and poster department and general offices. All film for Michigan exhibitors will come from Detroit. Mr. Foster has been manager of the Cincinnati and Cleveland offices for the Triangle, and during the four weeks that he has been in Detroit he has made a host of staunch friends. Over twenty-five of the leading Detroit theatres are playing Triangle films.

MERRILL IS OLD TIME FILM MAN

W. L. Merrill, manager of the New York branch, Unicorn Film Service Corporation, is one of the oldest film managers in the United States. He first entered the film business in Kansas City in the days when the Independents first started, having owned his own exchange in Kansas City, Mo.; Butte, Montana; Fargo, N. D., and Little Rock, Ark.

Mr. Merrill has been connected for the last three years with Warner's Features and later with the United Film Service as manager of the Minneapolis office, later purchased by him.

The headquarters of the exchange are at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

LESSER IS FIRST TO SECURE "WHERE ARE MY CHILDREN?"

A quick-fire deal was consummated between Carl Laemmle and Sol L. Lesser, whereby the All Star Features Distributors secure "Where Are My Children?" for California, Nevada and Arizona.

Lesser was the first man to get the rights, and has secured the only territory that was disposed of, so far.

H. M. DAVIS WITH UNICORN

H. M. Davis, formerly of the Universal Film Exchange, is now connected with the Unicorn Film Service Corporation of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, in whose interest he is calling upon the exhibitors of Greater New York.

KRONACHER WITH PATHE EXCHANGE, NEW YORK

G. Kronacher, formerly proprietor of the Eldorado, Nickoland and Republic theatres, in the Bronx, is now soliciting for the Pathé New York branch.

Film News From Foreign Parts

AN AUSTRALIAN-MADE FILM ON EVERY PROGRAM MAY BE GOVERNMENT ORDER

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. W., March 22.

THE applause that greeted the conclusion of the first performance of the Triangle Film productions at the Lyceum theatre on Saturday, March 18, proved that from the picture fans' point of view Australasian Films, Ltd., were fully justified in conducting a gigantic advertising campaign in connection with these feature pictures. The Triangle Play-House, as the Lyceum will be known in future, is perhaps one of the best known Sydney theatres.

Very few of the older patrons would recognize the theatre as it is now, after being completely renovated, painted anew, and decorated in a color scheme of red, gray and green. A big colored Triangle surmounts the big gray draperies, and altogether an air of originality pervades the whole theatre.

The opening program consisted of "Crooked to the End," Keystone; "The Coward," Kay-Bee, and several topical and scenic films. The prices range from 6d. to 2s. (10c. to 50c.). Previous to screening the Triangles the prices were only 3d., 6d. and 1s. (5c., 10c. and 25c.). A high class orchestra has been engaged and will render appropriate scores for each production. The first three programs will be presented for one week each, after which bi-weekly screenings will be given.

In view of the recent discussions in Parliament, it is extremely likely that as soon as local productions become active enough to warrant it, a bill will be introduced to the effect that an Australian made picture must be included in the program of every photoplay theatre in the Commonwealth.

"Should a Mother Tell?" and "The Devil's Daughter," both productions from the Fox studios, form the double bill at J. C. Williamson's Theatre Royal this week.

"Britain Prepared." As the title suggests this ten-reel topical feature which is to be presented at the Sydney Town Hall next Saturday deals with naval and military preparedness in Great Britain. The series favorably impressed Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, in London, while Senator Pearce, Commonwealth Minister for Defense, has given his consent to the pictures being shown in their entirety, and intends viewing them shortly himself. Union Theaters, Ltd., are controlling the picture, which will probably run for a fortnight at the Town Hall.

J. C. Williamson, Limited, announces that it has received by the Ventura the world famed feature, "The Birth of a Nation." Accompanying this film, which together with the accessories connected with it occupied fifty-one cases, were a stage director, musical conductor and three mechanical experts. George Bowles has completed an arrangement with Hugh Ward on behalf of J. C. Williamson, Ltd., whereby the picture is to be put under this firm's direction. "The Nation" will begin its initial presentation at the Theatre Royal during Easter week at the usual theatrical rates. It will be certain to score a high success.

METRO'S TRADEMARK PARROT, SOME BIRD AND NO LAME DUCK, TALKS "TURKEY" IN LONDON

EXTERIOR OF THE COURT IMPERIAL PLAYHOUSE, WEST END, LONDON

DESPITE unfavorable local conditions motion pictures are enpoying a liberal patronage in London, according to advises received by the Metro Pictures Corporation. Metro is leading the field in the matter of advertising and in the presentation of their photoplays in London. The Metro parrot, which is the official trademark of that company, is one of the most familiar sights in the world's greatest metropolis. On every hand the Metro parrot is seen—newspapers, magazines, posters, trams, buses, underground stations, and in front of the leading theatres. The accompanying photograph, just received from London, shows two of the Metro parrots, eighteen feet in height, towering above the cornice of the Court Imperial Playhouse in the West End of London.

J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd., of Charing Cross Road, one of the biggest distributors in the world, forwarded the photograph to President Richard A. Rowland, of Metro, with a letter which reads, in part, as follows:

"The trade in this country is now beginning to appreciate the fact that without any doubt whatever Metro films are one of the best advertised makes on the market. They have attained a position which everyone on your side would be proud of, and moreover, I am sure financial results to yourself are more than satisfactory, all the more especially as I know they are far better than those received from other makes of films over here.

"I enclose a photograph of one of our big theatres in the West End of London, which is an example of the way we handle a number of theatres from the advertising end. I refer to the two big parrots on either side of the house. These are about eighteen feet high. This theatre, the Court Imperial Playhouse, has nothing to do whatever with Ruffells, Ltd., Metro's foreign agents, but is just an ordinary customer."

DES MOINES OFFICIALS TRY TO SHUT OUT "BIRTH OF A NATION"

The Des Moines city council, on April 21, by a vote of four to one, decided that "The Birth of a Nation," which was scheduled to show there starting April 30, for an indefinite run at the Berchel theatre, could not be shown to the thousands of picture-goers in Des Moines.

The decision came following several secret conferences between the city fathers and delegations of colored citizens and members of the G. A. R., to which meetings newspapermen were not allowed to enter, because "newspaper publicity was an advertisement for the film." The vote was taken after Corporation Counsel H. W. Byers informed the council that an exhibition of the film would be in violation of city ordinance No. 1,433. The ordinance forbids the exhibition of plays or films that stir up race hatred or prejudice.

"I do not know what steps will be taken, but the film will be shown," said J. A. Getchell, of the firm of Elbert and Getchell, owners of the Berchel theatre. "There is nothing in 'The Birth of a Nation' that creates race hatred or prejudice."

City ordinance No. 1,433, upon which the council's authority in the matter rests, has been the occasion of trouble to motion picture exhibitors there before. "The Primrose Path," a Universal feature in which Gladys Hanson was starred, was recently forbidden to be shown by the police authorities on complaint of citizens. The ordinance in effect prohibits the showing of any films or plays to which any person or persons may offer objections. Under protection of a court injunction, "The Primrose Path" was subsequently shown in Des Moines, despite attempted action on the part of police officials.

COURT UPHOLDS TAX ON VENDING MACHINES

The San Francisco ordinance imposing a tax on merchandise vending machines has been held valid by Superior Judge Muransky in a decision sustaining the conviction and jail sentence of Ralph M. Richardson, who owns several hundred of these devices.

Richardson succeeded in having the first ordinance taxing these machines declared valid, and the board of supervisors passed a second measure. In case the appeal that will be made is lost it will probably mean that the candy vending machines so extensively used in moving pictures theatres will be taken out by the owners of the theatres.

OHIO SUPREME COURT MAY GIVE "REFORMERS" HOPE IN SUNDAY CLOSING CRUSADE

THE Ohio Supreme Court, in refusing to review a case brought up from Ross County, has made it possible for a crusade against Sunday performances. The case involved was that of Clarence Myers versus the State of Ohio. Myers was convicted in the Mayor's court at Chillicothe for running a show on Sunday.

It was alleged by the authorities that a picture show was a "theatrical performance," and the Supreme Court passed in review upon the sole question whether a film exhibition is a theatrical performance, which is prohibited by general state law.

The Court of Appeals of Ross County took the view that the matter comes within the provisions of the state law and affirmed the conviction of Myers. The refusal of the Supreme Court to review the case may be regarded in the nature of an affirmance, as the prosecuting attorney had conceded the general public interest.

A conflicting decision by another Appellate Court will cause the Supreme Court to hand down a dictum on the point involved in the Myers' case.

It is generally believed that motion picture theatre managers in the larger cities of Ohio, such as Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo, Dayton, Springfield and Youngstown, and in many of the smaller cities will continue to disregard the state law and not be molested.

In Cincinnati a few years ago it was the custom to arrest all theatrical performers after the Sunday matinees, and they were booked at the police stations. Small fines were assessed the next morning and the performers arrested for violating the Sunday law never had to appear in court. No attempt has ever been made there to molest motion picture theatre managers, as the theatrical performances have been given without interruption for at least twenty years.

Cleveland motion picture theatres have been opened on Sunday for years, but, outside of a few spasmodic efforts by reformers, there have been few arrests for Sunday exhibitions.

If the reformers get a foothold in the smaller cities, it is liable to cause a campaign in the larger cities.

PAUL ALWYN PLATZ

AGITATORS SEEK AID OF CONGRESS IN ATTACK ON "BIRTH OF A NATION"

UNABLE to secure prohibition of the showing of the "Birth of a Nation" at the hands of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, it is understood that those who oppose the exhibition of this feature film in Washington and elsewhere have gone to Congress for aid. However, Congressman L. C. Dyer, of Missouri, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives which would make it unlawful for any person to deposit or cause to be deposited in the United States mails, for mailing or delivery, or to deposit or cause to be deposited with any express company or other common carrier for carriage, or to send or carry from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or to bring or cause to be brought into the United States from abroad, any film or other pictorial representation based or founded on any adaptation of any book, play, or publication under whatever name, which is designed to be used for purposes of public exhibition and would reflect or tend to reflect on any race or nationality, and subject it to unjust and unwarranted criticism, or which may disturb the peaceful relations existing in a community. It is also made unlawful for any person to take or receive from the mails, or any express company, or other common carrier, with intent to sell, distribute, circulate, or exhibit, any matter or thing referred to in the proposed law to be deposited for mailing, delivery, or carriage in interstate commerce.

It is provided that any person violating any of the provisions of the proposed law shall for each offense be fined, upon conviction, not more than $1,000, or sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for not more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

The bill has been referred to the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce. This latter already has a calendar filled with matters of pending legislation which will keep it busy far into the summer, if Congress does not adjourn in the meantime, so that it is hardly likely that it will be reported out of the committee unless influence is brought to bear upon it.

GAUMONT RELEASES "THE ISLE OF LOVE" ON MAY 15

Gaumont's "The Isle of Love" will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition, May 15. In this production Gertrude McCoy appears for the first time as a Gaumont star. The drama, which was written by Paul M. Bryan, was found so suitable for Miss McCoy that she was taken from another Gaumont feature, despite the fact that a number of scenes had already been made.

"The Isle of Love" has been produced at Jacksonville under the direction of Edwin Middleton.

Iva Shepard has an important role. Others in the cast are Robert Clugston, W. J. Butler, James Levering, and Mathilde Baring.

TRIANGLE LEAVES KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE

The Knickerbocker theatre, New York, for several months the Triangle Film Corporation's model for its exhibitors, closed its doors on Griffith-Ince-Sennett motion picture productions last Saturday night. Thus the Rialto, S. L. Rothapfel's new "temple," becomes the first-run home of Triangle pictures.

Announcement of the closing states that Mr. Rothapfel, who has been managing director of the Knickerbocker for several months, can no longer give the time necessary to maintain the high standard agreed upon by the Triangle and himself. The Knickerbocker has been leased for a term of years by Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, the former lessees.

ALLEN JOINS V-L-S-E

Harry P. Allen, formerly with the Ramo films in Kansas City and later with the V-L-S-E at Atlanta, has accepted a road position with the Triangle Film Corporation, having for his territory the states of Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida and the Carolinas.

Thanhouser Ball and Minstrel Show Spell Success

Function Brings in $850 for Fund for Aid to Performers Injured While at Work or Who Fall Ill—One Thousand People Present—Warde Makes Opening Speech

THE night of April 27 was a notable occasion for those who reside and visit with more or less frequency the thriving berg of New Rochelle, New York. The members of the Thanhouser studio gave a minstrel show and ball in Germania Hall, the proceeds of which are to go toward aid for the ill or injured performers of the studio. First returns on the receipts of the ball show that the fund can start with a nest egg of $850.

There were over a thousand people in the hall when Frederick Warde made the opening speech. Following this introductory Director Frederick Sullivan led the orchestra in "The Lost Chord," which was composed by Mr. Sullivan's uncle. Thomas Burke and the Thanhouser sextette sang the same song during the progress of the minstrel show.

Wayne Arey acted as interlocutor while Gordon Hollingshead, Walter Hiers, Harry Bates and Billy Bowers were end men. The large crowd enjoyed every joke cracked by the minstrels whether it had long whiskers or merely a little silky hair. The Grand finale was in the shape of a patriotic review and the various symbolic characters introduced together with the rousing songs brought the audience to its two thousand and more feet.

Frank Grimmer was in charge of the arrangements and Grimmer's orchestra supplied the music. Practically every member of the Thanhouser studio except those in Jacksonville attended and helped make the affair the success it was. Edwin Thanhouser and other executives of the concern were present themselves.

A grand march followed the minstrel show which Florence LaBadie in her famous Golden Bowl costume of Madison Square Garden fame led. Harry Benham of Universal was her partner. William Garwood, also of Universal was the second male in line of march. Mr. Garwood made a hit when he entered the hall bearing a huge box of candy which was auctioned off for twelve dollars.

The miniature army of Thanhouser beauties consisting of Doris Grey, Gladys Leslie, Kathryn Adams, Lillian Vanderveer, Mabel Henry, Isolde Illian, Ethyle Cooke, Janet Henry and others under the charge of Lydia Meade sold everything but tickets and materially assisted in swelling the fund.

"Where Are My Children?" Is Approved

Straw Vote Taken at Globe Theatre, Following Universal's Request That Board of Review Have Picture Passed on by Laymen, Results in 52 to 25

THE controversy between the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, producers of "Where Are My Children?" and the National Board of Review, over the merits of this film took a new turn last week when the company asked the board to show the picture, which had been "turned down" at the first censorship showing, to as many laymen interested in censorship work as the board cared to gather.

The board granted this unusual request and the result was the largest and most novel "review" meeting ever held, five hundred persons gathering at the Globe Theatre as the National Board's guests, the number including prominent New York educators and social workers. Cards were passed out to them on which to note their views, and the film was flashed on the screen.

The vote favored showing "Where Are My Children?" to audiences not consisting of children, by 52 to 25. The ballot, of course, was an unofficial one, but it is believed will have some bearing on the efforts of friends of the picture to have the National Board see it in a new light. These friends include Dr. Parkhurst, Rabbi Kohn, Father Cashin and other well known New York clergymen who feel that the picture has a mission to porform.

Sol Lesser had purchased the rights to the production for one state—California—for $20,000. The total American rights, sold at this rate, are expected to yield $200,000.

Among the bids now before Universal are some for straight booking, one leading theatrical circuit offering $2,000 a week for a booking of three weeks.

Lucy Payton and Franklin Hall together wrote the story, which Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley) made into scenario form. In fact, it is said of Mrs. Smalley that she has never produced a picture yet of which the scenario wasn't her own.

Sis Hopkins Makes Daily Talks to Public

"Sis Hopkins' Own Chats," Syndicated in Three Hundred Newspapers, Prove Invaluable Aids in Kalem's Exhibitor Co-operation Campaign

ONCE a week Sis Hopikns now has a heart to heart talk with the photoplay fans of the country in Sis Hopkins' Own Chats, which are being syndicated in a list already including three hundred of the best known dailies.

The Sis Hopkins talks are the latest step in "exhibitor co-operation" taken by the Kalem Company. In addition to the general publicity secured for the Sis Hopkins comedies from the talks the newspapers in the syndicate have also volunteered to mention the current releases in the weekly talks.

The value of the Sis Hopkins name may readily be seen by the representative publications on the list and the ease with which a list of over three hundred was compiled through the regular channels of Kalem's "exhibitor co-operation" department. Close to five hundred newspapers applied for the service, but since exclusive territorial rights are granted it became necessary to narrow the list down in giving the service to the first applicant.

Many exhibitors have already signified their intention to take advantage of this unusual publicity aid when the service starts in their local newspapers by special Sis Hopkins advertising in the particular publication. The talks, which are a humorous satire on the time-worn "Advice to the Love-Lorn" gush, will run weekly for several months.

Among the principal publications on the Sis Hopkins list may be mentioned: Detroit Journal, Pittsburgh Dispatch, Cleveland Leader, Louisville Courier-Journal and the Times, Milwaukee Free Press, Houston Post, Montreal Herald, Toledo Blade, Kansas City Gazette-Globe, Paterson News, New Hoven Times-Leader, and Jackson Patriot. Nine Canadian cities are on the list, while the United States is covered from California and Texas to New England.

Florence La Badie Is Dynamo of Human Emotion

Leading Lady, Who Made Hit in "The Million Dollar Mystery," Will Soon Make Another Bid for Popularity in Thanhouser Classics—She Will Be Given An Opportunity to Portray a Style of Character She Has Never Before Attempted

FLORENCE LA BADIE, Thanhouser's leading lady, heroine of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and soon to make a new bid for popularity in the Thanhouser Classics, which will give her opportunity to portray a style of character she has never before attempted, is an interesting study off the screen.

It is almost six years now that she has appeared in Thanhouser pictures—probably a consistency record in the studio profession. Aside from driving her high powered Pullman coupe, Miss La Badie's activities are mostly of the self-culture order. She is a reader of "heavy" literature.

ETHYLE COOKE

Philosophy, world-politics and psychology make up the attraction she finds in her books. Between scenes, in the studio, the ever-present tome takes her time. Her mind on current affairs is that of one who is excellently informed; her opinions are sound, and she is not afraid to agree with her authors. In fact, she says that a book seems more interesting when she can form some ideas of her own from it. She points out Nietzsche as an example.

This spring weather finds her out and about New Rochelle with her easel and pencils. She sketches cleverly, and will take up color work as soon as her time allows of it. The stage directors have learned not to be surprised when she brings in a sketch of what she believes to be an ideal "location," found and drawn while out for a spin. She belongs to a number of dinner clubs, which meet at the Biltmore, Knickerbocker and Astor hotels, and through them knows personally a great number of the leading lights in the world of art and letters.

She is an expert swimmer. She owns "Kewpie," one of the smartest, fastest canoes seen on the Sound waters about New Rochelle. When her work allows, in hot weather, her lunch is preceded by a dip.

But most interesting of all is Miss La Badie's home on quiet Claremont avenue, New York, where she lives with her parents. Here Florence's art reigns supreme, it might be said. Daring decorative schemes prevail, and her memento collection fills every nook and corner. There are autographed pictures, rare little knick knacks and a complete assortment of period bronzes. People whose names mean big things in life are associated with the collection in various ways, the articles ranging from art pillows to cleverly gotten-up tokens of regard from film fan admirers.

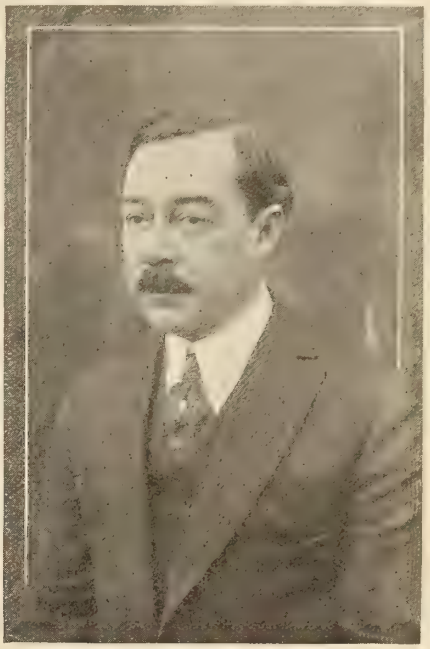
Miss La Badie's striking personality is excellently adapted to the screen, as a glance at the supplement to this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will show. Her command of facial expression enables her to take successfully roles widely differing, a fact which Edwin Thanhouser has recognized in projecting the new five-reel Classics.

FLORENCE LA BADIE

An idea of her new efforts is gained from a statement by her director, Frederick Sullivan, who says:

"Miss La Badie seems to me the most striking personality of her sex on the screen today. While of a very quiet and unassuming personality, she is a dynamo of human emotion. The one great point in her favor is that she knows herself and I can safely say to Miss La Badie's admirers that in "The Fugitive" and "Woman, Saint and Devil," both forthcoming classics, they will see their favorite in the greatest artistic heights to which she has yet risen.

These two plays are from the pen of Philip Lonergan, of the Thanhouser staff. He is now at work on other plays especially designed for her. The same care in preparation will be seen in the casts supporting Miss La Badie, it is announced. Ethyle Cooke, who has played second leads in a number of productions, will be seen in the Classics. Hector Dion, George Marlo and Robert Vaughn cover the more important male positions in the casts.



FREDERICK SULLIVAN

Miss La Badie will be seen in only eight productions a year. These will have a separate publicity campaign embracing some features which, it is said, will be entirely new to exhibitors.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, INC., MOVES to 440 FOURTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

The General Film Company, Inc., has moved its headquarters from the Fifth Avenue Building to the Passavant Building, 440 Fourth avenue, corner of Thirtieth street, where the top floor has been entirely remodeled, with a view of providing the necessary requirements in the way of space for the different departments of the company.

The branch office of the General Film Company, Inc., in West Twenty-third street, will remain where it is.

OLD TIME VAUDEVILLIANS TAKE MANY PARTS IN KLEINE COMEDY

Among the well known faces recognized in George Kleine's "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," with Harry Watson, Jr., are those of the old time vaudeville team of Crimmins and Gore, who have been seen in each of the ten episodes of the series.

Because of their versatility and knowledge of make-up, they have played a score of characters in the comedy.

MAN AND LION FIGHT PUT STRENGTH IN FRAGILE "BUTTERFLY'S WINGS"

A furious struggle between a man and a lion is one of the features of the two reel drama, "The Buterfly's Wings" in which little Margaret Gibson and William Clifford are starred. The scene was taken in the jungle at the David Horsley studios.

Charles Gay, known all over the world as an animal trainer, and one of the Bostock wild beasts stage the fight.

When Director Swickard called for action between Gay and the animal, it was the plan to take but a few feet, bring the two close together for scarcely more than a minute. The lion, however, displayed a very different disposition than in past performances and when the man and beast came together the latter was unmanageable.

For fully five minutes Gay battled the beast. The big lion tore in as it never had before and its great sharp claws clutched its weaker opponent furiously. Suddenly the beast released its hold and ran to the back of the jungle. Gay then examined his sides and found them badly torn all the way from the hip to neck.

"THE SCARLET WOMAN," WITH MME. PETROVA, A METRO RELEASE FOR MAY 22

"The Scarlet Woman," with Mme. Petrova in the stellar role, will be released on the Metro program May 22. This five-part feature was produced by the Popular Plays and Players for Metro.

The story was written by Aaron Hoffman and produced under the direction of Edward Lawrence. Mme. Petrova is surrounded by a strong cast, which includes Arthur Hoops, Edward Martindell, Eugene O'Brien and Frances Gordon.

BILLY BURKE IN A SCENE FROM "LOST IN THE EVERGLADES," CHAPTER ONE OF GEORGE KLEINE'S SERIAL, "GLORIA'S ROMANCE"

EXHIBITORS the country over, who have booked and will soon be showing the new George Kleine motion picture novel, "Gloria's Romance," from the pen of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, in which Billie Burke is the featured star, by special arrangement with F. Ziegfeld, Jr., are getting curious as to just the nature of the story unfolded in the first chapter, so they will naturally be interested in the following brief synopsis:

Miss Burke appears as Gloria Stafford, the daughter of Pierpont Stafford, a wealthy banker, and sister of David Stafford. She goes with her father and brother to spend the winter in Palm Beach, Fla. Being sixteen and vivacious, bubbling over with fun and good spirits, she naturally resents the rigid rules and regulations under which her governess, who has cared for her since the death of her mother, would have her live. She takes advantage of every opportunity which offers for a lark and frequently escapes from beneath the vigilant eye of her governess to romp about like a veritable tom-boy. Judge Freeman and his daughter, Lois, friends of the Staffords, also arrive in Palm Beach, Freeman being attended by Dr. Royce, who at once becomes interested in Gloria. David Stafford finds much to attract him in Lois Freeman, and Richard Freneau, a young broker in charge of the Palm Beach branch of his firm, scrapes an acquaintance with the Stafford and Freeman families and soon becomes David's rival.

One night, Gloria, eluding her governess, slips out of her room, ventures downstairs, looks in upon the gay throng in the ballroom of the hotel, and then noticing her brother's auto in the street, decides it will be a great lark to go for a moonlight spin all by herself. She throws on the power and whirls madly away down the hard-packed sands of the beach. Suddenly something goes wrong with the car, she loses control of the steering gear and the big racer swerves straight out into the ocean. Gloria finds her lark at an end, but succeeds in getting safely out of the motor, her Paris gown drenched and bedraggled. As the chapter ends she sets out to find her way home afoot, but loses her way and dawn finds her wandering in the Everglades, a lonesome, homesick little maid.

Quite naturally this first chapter of "Gloria's Romance" has been entitled "Lost in the Everglades."

Kalem Company Will Not Extend "Social Pirates"

Wright Says That the Swift Pace Set for Themselves Cannot Be Continued Beyond the Fifteen Week Period—A New Serial, Yet Unnamed, Is Under Consideration

IN reply to numerous requests from exhibitors that "The Social Pirates" be continued beyond the fifteen-week period originally announced, Kalem has issued a definite statement that the series will not be extended. In explaining the decision of the company, Mr. Wright declared last week to a NEWS representative:

"We appreciate the spirit that prompted the wires and letters we have received from hundreds of exhibitors urging us to extend the 'Social Pirates' series. While it may seem strange that we do not wish to profit still further by the overwhelming success of the productions we feel certain that exhibitors will agree with the decision reached after hearing our explanation.

"The Bronson-Howard series is the result of months of preparation, careful selection of stories and preliminary tests of the most exacting character. That was why we were so confident in promising that, strong as the first episode was, each release of the series would be better, more powerful than the preceding one.

"That promise was not made in a carefree manner, nor have we forgotten it. Exhibitors have been kind enough to assure us that the five episodes already released have more than lived up to the promise. Our position now is that of

"We would rather have the series end in a burst of glory with the fifteenth episode than take the chance that the sixteenth would drop even a shade from the high standard achieved. And frankly, I feel certain that it would have to drop, because I do not believe it is possible for anyone to keep up the swift pace we have set for ourselves beyond the fifteen week period.

"With this decision followed we are now in a position to devote our attention to the preliminary details of our new series. While it is not yet possible to make public any details I might give exhibitors just one little hint: The new series will have popular. That's a hint that should promise even bigger box office receipts than 'The Social Pirates.'"

Among the May releases in Kalem's series by George Bronson Howard are, "The Missing Millionaire," on May 22; "Sauce for the Gander," on May 15, and "The Rogue's Nemesis," on May 8. The end of May will bring the series up to the release of the tenth episode.

Everything Ready for Board of Trade Exhibition

Well-known Manufacturers Represented—Each Day of the Exposition Is Known by a Special Designation—Exhibitors' Day, Manufacturers' Day, Distributors' Day, California Day, Bankers' Day and Fire Insurance Day—A Number of Lectures Are Scheduled

NEXT Saturday (May 6), at 3 o'clock, the exposition of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America will open at Madison Square Garden, and continue daily, from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. until and including Sunday, May 14.

The exhibitors are giving their support and co-operation to the Board of Trade show and will be in attendance daily after the close of their own exhibiton at the Grand Central Palace.

All the exhibition space at Madison Square Garden has been sold and the exhibitors include: Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Mutual Film Corporation, Vitagraph Company of America, J. H. Hallberg, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Paramount Pictures Corporation, Famous Players' Film Company, New York Morning Telegraph, Nicholas Power Company, Fox Film Corporation, International Film Service, Houston, Texas, Chamber of Commerce; MOTION PICTURE NEWS, National Cash Register Company, Bell & Howell, Simplex Photo Products' Company, Typhoon Fan Company, Motion Picture Magazine, Eastman Kodak Company, Acme Lithograph Company, Novelty Slide Company, Motography, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Cooper Hewitt Company, Motion Picture Apparatus Company, National Carbon Company, Universal Electric Stage Lighting Company; Los Angeles, Cal., Chamber of Commerce; Moving Picture World, Unicorn Film Corporation, Kinetikartoon Company, Childrens' Program Society, Essanany, Selig Polyscope Company, Lubin Manufacturing Company, Arthur Leslie, and half a hundred other concerns.

The only important company not represented at the First National Motion Picture Exposition is the Pathé.

Many manufacturers and "last hour" exhibitors are now trying to obtain space and efforts are being made to provide accommodation for them in other sections of the building, the arena and the first balcony spaces all being taken.

Trade Talks a Feature

Special importance is attached to the many business discussions and trade talks that will be held daily during the exposition that are designed to insure a closer co-operation among the various branches of the industry in future work for its advancement and development. This has always been the purpose of the Board of Trade conducting an exposition, though ample provision has been made to attract the general public, and special features have been provided for each day in addition to the making of pictures in a specially constructed studio, the showing of the biggest and best first runs, a monster band and orchestra for concerts, and also to provide music for the dance floor that will be open to the public as well as to the actors and actresses from the companies of the various film producers who have exhibits in the show.

Each day of the exposition has a special designation, as: Exhibitors' Day, Manufacturers' Day, Distributors' Day, California Day, Bankers' Day, and Fire Insurance Day.

Board of Trade Day and Bureau of Standards' Day, and in conjunction with the questions considered on these days the exposition's program includes a Fashion Day and a Society Day, each of which is becoming a new and important factor in the motion picture field.

Few, if any, subjects are of more interest to the exhibitor or theatre owner and the manufacturer of films than the insurance problems, fire appliances and safety devices, construction of studios, vaults, inspection rooms, the general reduction of fire risks and insurance rates and the securing of better protection against accidents and property loss in studios, exchanges and theatres. All these matters will be considered on Fire Insurance Day and discussed by experts, including New York Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson and Chief of the Fire Prevention Bureau Hammitt.

The importance of financial support to any industry is too generally recognized to call for any explanation of Bankers' Day and when subjects of interest to the film industry will be discussed by members of the American Bankers' Association.

In the list of important subjects that will be intelligently discussed at the Madison Square Exposition are the "Educational Value of Motion Pictures, covering their importance in our schools and the education of future generations"; the "Motion Picture Machine and Its Evolution"; the "Value of the Motion Picture in Crime Detection and Police Work"; "The Moralizing Force of Motion Pictures," a subject recognized and appreciated by leading clergymen; "Recruiting the Army and Navy by Motion Pictures," the importance of this field having been shown in England, and the "Motion Picture and Commercial Progress," a broad and important subject appealing to practically every branch of the industry in the world, one small sub-division of the broad subject being presented in the fact that commercial travelers in many lines are now carrying portable projectors on the road with film displaying their factories and products.

Universal will announce the winner of its "Handsomest Man" contest at the Madison Square Garden Exposition on Wednesday, May 10.

California Day has been designated to commemorate the arrival of a special train of motion picture favorites who are coming to the exposition at Madison Square Garden, supplemented by members of the California Society in New York, and also of the special exhibit which will be presented by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Gaumont Turning Attention to 3 Reel Features

First Release Is Set for May 25 and One Every Two Weeks Will Appear Thereafter—Company Will Continue Its Output of Mutual Masterpictures

IN less than a month there will be a great demand for three-reel features by amusement parks and summer theatres. The Gaumont company has recognized the importance of supplying photoplays of this length. Beginning late in May, Gaumont three-reel features will be seen on the screen, in addition to the Mutual Masterpictures which it will continue to release.

"With that rare discernment which is so characteristic of Leon Gaumont," explained F. G. Bradford, general manager of the American Gaumont interests, "he saw the immense possibilities of three-reel productions which would be the same as our five-reel photodramas in everything but length. As you know there are thousands of vaudeville houses which wish to run pictures as a regular part of the program, yet do not wish to give up all the time required for a five-reel feature. Then, too, there are the smaller picture houses which must have a varied program, yet must 'turn over' their spectators many times during the day. Their patrons would not be content to see only a five-reel photodrama, but they would consider they had their money's worth with a three-reel feature, a one-reel comedy, and a reel of The Mutual Weekly, 'See America First,' or Gaumont's new single-reel release, 'Reel Life,' the Mutual Film Magazine.

"These small picture houses and vaudeville houses using pictures create an enormous demand. We have suggested to the Mutual Film Corporation that such three-reel releases would be instantly snapped up by exhibitors. President Freuler recognized that this field was not covered completely. Hence Gaumont will put two companies in the field for the making of three-reel features only. In fact, work has already begun. It is our present plan to release the first one May 25. One will be released through Mutual every two weeks thereafter."

"NOTORIOUS GALLAGHER" FROM METRO ON MAY 22

"Notorious Gallagher," with Marguerite Snow and William Nigh in the stellar roles, a five-part Metro play produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, will be released on the Metro program May 22. Mr. Nigh, who wrote the story of "Notorious Gallagher," also directed its production.

The supporting cast contains most of the members of the "Nigh family," as they are called.

"THE FEAST OF LIFE"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG is the star of this second "Brady-made" feature. It was produced in Cuba, and at the Paragon studios in Fort Lee under the direction of Albert Capellani. The Cuban scenes offer some exceedingly pretty expansive views, the native vegetation creating unusual atmosphere, casting the story in an artistic as well as intentionally realistic background.

Miss Young carries the role of Aurora Fernandez, a Cuban girl of aristocratic but penniless family. She is forced into a loveless marriage with Don Armada, her mother's creditor. Aurora has met Pedro, a stalwart fisherman, with whom she is in love. Pedro, learning that Armada has caused the death of his sister Celida, goes to his home and severely injures his face with the butt of his pistol. Armada is temporarily blinded, and Aurora and Pedro enter upon a life of romance. Armada regains his sight and spies on his wife. He learns of their meeting place, and one day attacks Pedro, stabbing him in the back. He tells Aurora of this, and she, summoning all her strength, half strangles him. He dies from the shock while Pedro recovers.

This melodramatic plot was conceived by Frances Marion. For five-reel use it leaves quite a little to be desired. The theme is not new, and shows slight original development. Its climaxes, such as they are, are reached with very small measures of suspense.

Mr. Capellani's direction is, if we may look at it with a view unobstructed by the story, thoroughly acceptable. The interiors are excellent; for instance, the church scene and the tavern setting. The costumes add a pleasing dash of color and originality to the picture.

It is perhaps not the fault of Cameraman Lucien Andriot that the photography of "The Feast of Life" falls below the standard of past Paragon work. Many of the Cuban scenes are overlighted, and in some of the full pictures, the backgrounds are granulated and indistinct, faults probably caused by poor film. It may chance that in other prints the photography will show improvement.

Miss Young as Aurora is an attractive figure. Her beauty and the sympathetic character of her role combine pleasingly. Paul Capellani as Armada is quite too posey to be natural, while Robert Frazer as Pedro is inclined to overact. Mrs. E. M. Kimball, E. M. Kimball and Doris Kenyon are others.

It would be to the advantage of the picture if a close-up showing Armada's face covered with blood were considerably cut. The film editor has also seen occasion to employ a close-up of Miss Young in four different places in the picture. Two of these might be dispensed with with better effect.

"THE MAN WITHIN"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

TOM MIX has been writing, acting in, and directing one-reel Westerns for a long time, and the public is pretty familiar with his style of production. With three reels' elbow-room he has been enabled to introduce more complications and work up more suspense, but the release is of the same type as its abbreviated fore-runners.

The plot development is along the well known lines, involving among other incidents the race to the claim office to register a mine, and the desperadoes' chasing of the heroine.

Action is, of course, the main element, the acting merely serving, for the most part, to make possible the riding and shooting stunts. The Mix brand of horsemanship is too well known to require comment.

In Mr. Mix's support Victoria Forde, Pat Chrisman, Sid Jordan and Joe Ryan appear.

Tom, a ranch foreman, marries Vi, his employer's daughter, but the father disowns her for it. The young couple are very happy, except when Tom is overpowered by his craving for alcohol.

A baby is born to them, and while Tom is away on a round-up it dies. Tom goes on a spree, and does not return home. Vi is forced to become a cook in a saloon.

When Tom sobers up he decides to make good, and looks for a gold mine. He finds it, and after an exciting race, registers it. He returns to find that Vi is being pursued by some bandits, but he finally rescues her.

"LYING LIPS"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

YOU have probably had the experience of seeing screen characters agonize through five reels of tribulation and sorrow simply because the author made one of his puppets too stupid to clear up a misunderstanding with an obvious explanation. It is hard to get your sympathy aroused for the misjudged photoplay person when you know he ought to have said in reel one: "Look here, it was like this—" and thus save 5,000 feet of negative, not to mention the feelings of the audience.

SCENES FROM THE LATEST WORLD FILM VEHICLE FOR CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG: "THE FEAST OF LIFE"

It requires considerable dramatic ingenuity to swiftly pile one mischance on another, and yet make all of them inevitable and inexorably logical. Karl Coolidge has done it here, and evolved a well-knit, plausible story. Coincidence is an important factor in the play, but it isn't worked into a lather to help out a lazy imagination.

The players selected to interpret the piece are of the right types, and they handle their parts with considerable deftness. Winifred Greenwood is especially good. Others in the cast are Franklin Ritchie, Eugenie Forde, Clarence Burton, Roy Stewart and George Webb.

The directing and photography are high grade.

Neal Frazer, an artist, marries Emily Alden, a popular actress. His sister, Wanda, is married to Howard, a broker. When Howard asks Frazer for $5,000 he turns over this sum from the funds of a club of which he is the treasurer.

Howard loses the money in speculation, commits suicide, and Wanda comes to live with the Frazers. Worrying over replacing the $5,000, Frazer becomes sick. His wife, against his wishes, and without his knowledge, returns to the stage in order to earn the lost funds.

Wanda has become the mistress of a rich idler, and circumstances lead Frazer to believe that his wife is the man's paramour. After an intricate series of misunderstandings, Frazer and his wife finally discover the facts, and are made happy once more.

"A MAN OF SORROW"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A SMASHING climax, a central situation which calls forth sympathetic interest, and William Farnum unite in making this subject strong in its appeal. Not everything in its handling has been done skilfully, but the salient points have been carefully looked after, and even if the continuity is not unbroken and the introduction clumsy, there are always Mr. Farnum and his capable assistants, notably Dorothy Bernard, to provide strength.

Founded on "Hoodman Blind," a stage success of some twenty years ago, the authorship of which is credited to Henry Arthur Jones and Wilson Barrett, the story provides Mr. Farnum with a role peculiarly suited to his emotional abilities. The performance he gives is, as always, expressive, full of power, and permeated with that singular pathos which seems to surround all the parts he plays. He is here rendered a man of sorrow because he believes he has seen his wife, whom he loves passionately, "sweethearting" with a gypsy lover in the park. He, in fact, did not see his wife at all, but her double, who was also her half sister.

Abandoning his wife and child, he goes to New York, and apparently becomes an outcast, interested only in a crippled newsboy, whom he makes his companion. The gypsy sister also leaves the little New Jersey village for the city, and is finally abandoned by her lover, when she falls ill. The sorrowful husband, going one night to the pier to drown himself, sees her jump into the water, and plunges in to save her. Just before she dies she reveals her identity, telling him that the incident in the park was a trick, to which she was urged by a rival of his.

Then comes the climax to which we referred above. The husband, enraged at having been brought to believe his wife unfaithful when she was not, goes back to the village, finds his rival, and gives him a terrific beating. Then, followed by an excited crowd of villagers, he drags his rival through the streets to a public square, and denounces him before the crowd. As the miscreant is also guilty of murder, he is handed over to a detective. Husband and wife are reunited.

In few pictures we have seen has the climax been more thrilling, and it is one, too, which Mr. Farnum makes very real. Miss Bernard, in the dual role of wife and gypsy girl, is excellent. Others are Willard Louis, H. J. Hebert, H. A. Burress, Fred Huntley, Mary Ruby and William Scott.

Direction was in the hands of Oscar C. Apfel, who did not fail to give us some artistic lighting in the rescue scene, and to make good use of California exteriors. Other sets and locations are right also.

"THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF BARGAIN ROW"

(Essanay-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

SALLIE FISHER, well known on the speaking stage, makes her screen debut in this, and draws a clever character sketch of a resourceful young woman. Miss Fisher is not beautiful, according to the conventional standards, but she can act, and she photographs well. Her work is convincing throughout, and stands in sharp contrast to the story which, while it is at all times interesting, is not free from improbabilities.

THE DEAD BEATS CONFRONT NORA

The picture is a pleasing mixture of comedy, tragedy and thrills, with a touch of detective stuff. This variety should make it acceptable to any audience. It will appeal especially to women, because of Nora Blake, the figure-in-chief, who is, of course, Miss Fisher.

Nora fights her way from humble surroundings to a responsible position as private secretary to Henry Hyman, head of the Hyman jewelry house. Hyman's two sons are ne'er-do-wells, and Nora occupies the place they should be occupying in the establishment. Travers, manager of the store, is jealous of Nora, and also in love with Lucile, fiancee of Joseph Hyman, the elder son. He steals a $3,000 necklace and presents it to the brainless Lucile.

When Hyman, Sr., dies, Travers gets the upper hand, and very nearly wrecks the store by giving credit to dead beats, one of whom is Lucile's mother. Nora has in her possession a note written by Hyman before his death, specifying that he wished her to run the store until his sons learned the business, but for some reason Nora does not reveal the note until the very end. This is one of the weak points in the plot.

ILLUSTRATING "SUSAN ROCKS THE BOAT," A FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE, WITH DOROTHY GISH AND OWEN MOORE

Joseph is injured in an automobile accident and rendered a cripple. Lucile then refuses to marry him, and Nora comes to the front once more. She gets the necklace away from Travers, has him arrested, and shows up Lucile and her mother. Her love for Joseph is then revealed, and all ends happily.

A love affair between the irrepressible younger Hyman son and Nora's protege supplies much of the comedy, largely because John Junior is perfectly fitted to the part of the irrepressible one. Alice MacChesney is very pretty as the protege.

Richard C. Travers is very good as Joseph Hyman, as is Florence Oberle as Lucile's mother. Others are John Cossar and Richardson Cotton.

Fred E. Wright had charge of the direction, which is superior. The automobile wreck is most realistic, and other details are well managed. Many of the subtitles are in slang, and should help along the laughs at proper points. The story is by Howard McKent Barnes.

"THE BUGLE CALL"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THOMAS H. INCE made no mistake in selecting Willie Collier, Jr., for screen stardom. The boy has distinct ability, and if the Ince people can continue to find stories as good as "The Bugle Call" for him, Collier, Sr., should be able to retire in time.

Although the picture is largely occupied with boy psychology of an emotional sort, it is not wholly that, for the atmosphere is that of an army post, and this makes possible some stirring battles between U. S. soldiers and Indian marauders. In this division of the piece, we get some typical Ince panoramas in which thrilling riding, falling from horses, and fighting are shown. These scenes are absolutely realistic, and splendidly directed by Reginald Barker, whose work elsewhere is also excellent.

The battle views are cleverly knit to C. Gardner Sullivan's main theme, which depicts Billy's struggle between love for his dead mother and his attitude toward his stepmother, whom he at first bitterly regards as an intruder. The attack by the Indians gives Billy a chance to play hero by conducting his stepmother to a place of safety, after which he jumps on a riderless horse and dashes from one hill to another, sounding his bugle. This deceives the Indians, who imagine that the main body of troops is approaching. They retire from the attack, pursue the bugler, and wound him. He manages to escape, however, and eventually the fort is saved by the timely arrival of Billy's father at the head of his cavalrymen.

Besides young Collier's excellent impersonation, there are gratifying renditions by Wyndham Standing, as the father, Anna Lehr, as the stepmother, Thomas Guise, as a sergeant, and Joe Goodboy, as Chief Lame Bear. The Indians are the real thing.

A large set, representing Fort McPherson, plays a conspicuous part in the action. Other details were also carefully looked after.

We are quite sure that your patrons will be very much pleased with "The Bugle Call."

"SUSAN ROCKS THE BOAT"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THOUGH we have seen Dorothy Gish in roles better suited to her sterling abilities, she is thoroughly acceptable in this. Looking at the picture from all angles, we find no difficulty in saying that it will go over, because of the care with which it was constructed, and the work of the principals.

Like all the Fine Arts subjects, "Susan Rocks the Boat" is possessed of a genuine dramatic idea, which is: that the present state of society produces "sweet young things," who imagine that they can become reformers, although they are entirely ignorant of the perils into which they may fall in doing so.

Miss Gish is seen as such a character. Inspired to become a modern Joan of Arc, Susan opens a settlement house, and tries to uplift the people of the slums. The road leads straight to Cardigan's saloon, and to a room above, where the little reformer comes very near violence at Cardigan's hands. She is rescued by Larry O'Neil, a young man of the slums, with real manhood. The upshot is that Susan and Larry find they love each other.

A failure to use enough close-ups in the first reel puts the spectator a trifle out of touch with Miss Gish's work in the beginning, but this is overcome later. Her work should please most picture-goers, though Susan does not seem to us to be one of her happiest parts. Owen Moore does well as Larry, and Fred J. Butler is a great type for Cardigan. Others are Fred A. Turner, Edwin Harley, Kate Bruce and Clyde E. Hopkins.

Two allegorical scenes, showing Susan's vision of herself as Joan of Arc, add considerable interest. The Griffith idea of relief is demonstrated also in the appearance of a middle-aged Oriental, who appears at several points in the action. The reason for his presence is never explained, but his appearances arouse curiosity so that the spectator can forget for a moment the tense situations.

Continuity and suspense are managed skilfully by Director Paul Powell, and the picture is fully equipped, particularly in the scenes depicting life in the slums.

"MARIA ROSA"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE manner of the telling makes this old story of the triangle seem new. Its mountings, settings and acting are sufficient to make it distinctly a "worth-while" picture, and its star, Geraldine Farrar, is a guarantee of box-office quality.

Miss Farrar is a charming Catalonian. She is supported by an excellent company, while the locations, architecture, and even manners are unusually convincing. The atmosphere of the mountains of northern Spain is compelling, and it is difficult to realize that the picture was actually made about as far from the real Spain as it is possible to get in this country. The make-ups and costumes appear to be faultless, and there is something ultra-Gallic in the work, not only of Miss Farrar, but also of Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, Horace Carpenter and Anita King, her principal support.

MARIA ROSA SWEARS VENGEANCE

Maria Rosa, a peasant, is loved by Andreas, whom she also loves, and by Ramon, his friend, whom she does not. Ramon kills Pedro, a fisherman, and manages to throw the blame on Andreas so successfully that the latter goes to the Ceuta Penal colony for ten years.

Ramon takes advantage of Andreas' absence to press his wooing, but is unsuccessful. He then causes a letter to be written, saying that Andreas has died in prison. Maria, broken-hearted, still refuses to marry Ramon, until he compromises her in the eyes of the villagers, and then she capitulates, and an elaborate and typical wedding is staged.

In the meantime, Andreas has been released because of an act of heroism. He appears at Maria's home just before the party returns from church, and dashing into her room, while the others are at the banquet, Maria finds him hiding. When she has recovered from her great shock at seeing the supposed dead man, she tells her story, and promises to find out whether Ramon was a conspirator in reporting Andreas dead. She lets Andreas out through a window and returns to the revellers. When all are gone but she and Ramon, she plies her new husband with wine, and then he confesses all.

In a rage she stabs and mortally wounds him. The uproar brings the neighbors, including Andreas, who is near by. As the best reparation he can make, Ramon declares with his last breath that he stabbed himself accidentally, and Andreas leads Maria Rosa out to happiness.

James Neil and Ernest Joy play smaller parts with earnestness and conviction.

"THE RED WIDOW"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE RED WIDOW" is a sure bet. It has the situations and the comedian, John Barrymore, and such a combination is invincible when it comes to comedy. If the exhibitor would prefer to have direct proof that "The Red Widow" is a winner, we might add that the Sunday audience at the Broadway theatre fairly shrieked with mirth at the antics of the leading comedian.

Whether the comedy tricks so ably executed by Mr. Barrymore are products of the lively imaginations of Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, the authors of the original play, or whether they were supplied by the scenario writer is a conundrum that the leader of the picture did not answer. But at all events they are extremely fine bits of business. The chief comedy situations of the melodramatic plot are equally funny.

In fact "The Red Widow" reaches such a complete plane of excellence that one is unable to do anyone of those responsible for its appearance full justice. Without Mr. Barrymore the picture would have been lacking a star comedian. Without the business furnished him by the script writer, Mr. Barrymore would have been lost. And there is always Mr. Pollock and Mr. Wolf to consider.

The story deals firstly with the wedding of Cicero Hannibal Butts, a corset salesman; secondly, with his meeting with a Russian dancer, who lists Nihilism as a side line; thirdly, with his wild mix-up with the dancer in Russia when that lady poses as his wife and introduces him to the rest of the Nihilists, who give him the job of killing the Czar. The conclusion is reached by the arrival of Hannibal's wife, and the ultimate honor conferred upon the salesman by the Russian government for saving it from the Nihilists. It is a weird story, grossly impossible, but even funnier for this reason.

One particular series of incidents in the picture offers a fine opportunity for a theatre organist. Hannibal arrives at the scene of the wedding, and in his confusion gives the organist a copy of the latest song hit, "Good-bye, Girls, I'm Through," instead of the wedding march. The results can best be imagined.

Happy John Barrymore romps his way through the picture as Hannibal and Lillian Tucker makes him a very pretty wife. Flora Zabelle plays the dancer, the same part she carried on the comic opera stage when the play was produced on the boards. George E. Mack, John Hendricks, Eugene Redding and Millard Benson complete the named cast.

The production and photography need only be alluded to as being typically Famous Players.

"BURTON HOLMES' TRAVELOGUES—PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS"

(Paramount—One Reel Each)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

MR. HOLMES' interesting story of travel into out-of-the-way corners of the globe, takes us this week through Luzon, and to Benguio, the Filipino summer capital atop of the Benguet Mountains. This chapter is entitled "The Dog-Eaters of Benguet," and the pictures give a graphic view of these queer Igorrote tribes, who eat dog "because it is cleaner than pig."

Striking views of the mountain trails to the summit are pictured, with illustrations of the improvement in transportation methods since Uncle Sam took hold of Philippine affairs. There are also views of Mrs. Kelley, who has civilized large classes of girls in these mountain villages, and taught them to say "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley," to such good effect that whenever a native meets a white man nowadays, he shouts, "Good morning, Mrs. Kelley."

The thirteenth number of Paramount Pictographs, also offered as a supplement to the regular Paramount program, contains articles on preparedness, by Henry Reuterdahl, with pictures of United States naval vessels in action. Articles on "Superstitions," showing the Thirteen Club in action, "Better Babies," and the "Trickids," complete the film.

ADMISSION PRICES WILL REMAIN AT FIFTEEN CENTS IN VANCOUVER

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Vancouver, B. C., April 29.

IN furtherance of a movement toward an increase in admission prices at local picture theatres, a meeting of exhibitors was held recently at the Famous Players exchange, and the matter was gone into thoroughly.

While some of the managers expressed themselves as being in favor of increasing admission from fifteen cents to twenty-five cents, others felt that conditions do not warrant any such move at this time, and it is thought that the matter will be dropped.

"MASTER SHAKESPEARE, STROLLING PLAYER"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE celebration of the Shakespeare tercentenary has called forth this offering from the Thanhouser studios. It is an unusual picture, with its story based upon the eternal Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, which, it seems, will not down.

The picture is a combination of the modern, and the costume play, the latter being introduced as sections of a dream of Shakspeare and his times.

Miss Gray, daughter of an army officer, has a quarrel with her fiance, Lieutenant Stanton, over the authorship of the Shakespearian plays. She holds that they were the work of Sir Francis, and Stanton as firmly believes that Shakespeare himself wrote them. So they separate.

IN THE COURT OF ELIZABETH

Stanton, at his own request, is transferred to a post on the Mexican border. There he engages in a fight with bandits, which gives opportunity for some very stirring and timely scenes. He is wounded, and the news of this, reaching Miss Gray, stuns her, and leaves her in a delirium.

In this state she dreams that she is the daughter of an earl. in the Elizabethan epoch. With a party, she visits a wayside inn, and there finds Bacon. A fight over her starts, and the girl recognizes Lieutenant Stanton in the person of her chief defender. Shakespeare appears, as a strolling player, and helps to rescue Stanton from overwhelming odds.

Later the girl secures from her father a commission in the guard for Stanton. Then, at a performance of one of Shakespeare's plays, Bacon bribes a scholar to say that the play was stolen from him. The young soldier of the guard exposes the plot, and Bacon, unmasked, brings about a duel with him, in which the soldier is killed. Miss Gray throws herself upon the prostrate form, and then awakens, to find herself in her own room in the twentieth century, after weeks of delirium. Her fiance, who was merely wounded in the Mexican fight, appears from the next room. He finds the girl cured of her defection from the ranks of Shakespearian doubters.

"THE MOMENT BEFORE"

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN a role widely different from those she has previously assumed, Pauline Frederick is seen here in an adaptation of Israel Zangwill's story. Though she portrays the same person in youth and in age, the role is practically a dual one. In the first Miss Frederick depicts a dignified, sorrowful, white-haired duchess, and in the second, a wild, impulsive gypsy girl. She makes the contrast between the two without difficulty, but neither, it seems to us, is very happily suited to Miss Frederick's excellent abilities and her beauty.

It is a little disappointing to find Miss Frederick's features obscured by a make-up which gives the general impression of faded tan, or to see her bowed with age. Nevertheless, she makes the most of both roles, and gives a strong performance.

The story is depicted in an unusual form; it begins with what would be the end of less worthy pictures. After hearing a sermon, the duchess makes her will, leaving her wealth to charity, and falls dying before the altar in a church. In the moment before death her whole life flashes before her and is enacted on the screen.

She was Madge, an impulsive gypsy girl, with strong tendencies to evil. Married to Gypsy John, she found it easy to desert him for the younger son of an earl, himself a black sheep. The latter quarreled with his brother, and felled him with a heavy blow. Almost immediately after, Gypsy John, searching for Madge, entered the house, and in a fight with the injured man killed him. Madge and John fled from England to Australia, and so did the younger son, thinking he was the murderer.

Years later, they met in the Australian Bush. Madge, who still despised John thoroughly, agreed to go back to England with the nobleman. John arrived just as they were about to escape and the two men agreed to fight a duel for the girl. Just as John was about to shoot his adversary, Madge fired, and John was disposed of.

Thomas Holding is very good as the young nobleman, and J. W. Johnston gives a fair performance as Gypsy John. Others are Henry Hallam, Frank Losee, and Edward Sturgis.

As a whole, the picture is characterized by plenty of action, and a degree of suspense. Settings and locations are entirely appropriate. Many of them are beautiful. Robert G. Vignola directed.

"THE YOUTH OF FORTUNE"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CARTER DeHAVEN is introduced once more in "The Youth of Fortune" as a seventeen-year-old school boy. He possesses all the motion picture accessories thereof, including sport shirts, silk shirts, blazers and coat shoulders that have been pressed so neatly that they appear as wings. Mr. DeHaven's miniature physique serves him in good stead in playing the seventeen-year-older, although at times the sophisticated lines of his face tend to make one doubt the truth of the subtitle that gives this juvenile information.

THE MISCREANTS DINE IN STATE

"The Youth of Fortune" is a comedy and taken on the whole it is a very good comedy. At times throughout the five reels some of the players are at a loss as to what to do to consume footage and they substitute the waving of arms and the nervous shifting of feet for any attempt at acting, but on the other hand there is plenty of genuine comedy furnished both by the twists of the story and the players themselves.

From all appearances, exhibitors will consider "The Youth of Fortune" a fortunate investment. Much of the comedy is old style—stuff that we are all well acquainted with, but it serves its purpose, while happily the star has a sense of comedy values; and he serves as a good medium for the transmission of the fun to the spectator. The subtitles have been written in a style that is generally humorous as well and when the action slows up a bit they prevent any disastrous feeling of tedium.

The story for the picture was written by Otis Turner, while the detailed scenario was prepared by Ford I. Beebe. Mr. Beebe's script is meritorious, for he has overlooked no chances to get a laugh and to our notion he has made an abbreviated story as good as it possibly could be made. Mr. Turner was again active when it came to the direction and there is no fault to find with this end of the production.

The plot relates to Willie O'Donovan's pranks at boarding school, how he is successful in claiming the hand of the milkmaid and how he inherits some odd millions of dollars that his divorced parents were both eager to possess.

Flora Parker DeHaven is the milkmaid and a very engaging one at that, while Harry Depp makes himself humorously prominent as the rival. Harry Carter, Maude George, J. Hope and a large cast lend creditable support to the DeHaven team.

"PLAYING WITH FIRE"

(Popular Plays and Players-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

SUPERIOR direction by Francis J. Grandon and excellence of work on the part of Madame Petrova and most of her fellow players make this sex subject absorbing nearly every foot of the way. The continuity is sustained remarkably well, and there are numerous touches which enrich the whole in a gratifying degree.

Despite the fact that Aaron Hoffmann's story is a variation of the eternal triangle theme, it is put together very well, and rendered distinctive by short, rapid scenes, which are introduced by allegorical subtitles. These are cleverly done, and amount to a sort of running comment on the plot. For example, instead of the conventional "A Year Has Passed," we have the figure of an old man, representing the dying year, faded into the figure of a child.

Madame Petrova has a thoroughly congenial role, which she interprets in a refined, artistic fashion. She is given opportunity to play in a strong emotional key, as Jean, who, in a moment of weakness, steps from the path of marital honor.

When she discovers that her stepdaughter is about to marry the young artist with whom she sinned, she tells the girl of her misstep. The girl, of course, forgives the man. Then the older woman saves the girl from violence at the hands of the lover, who is accidentally killed. The trial is quickly over, and girl, stepmother and husband take up their life anew.

Arthur Hoops is seen as the husband, and does excellent work. Evelyn Brent, as the young girl, gives an unusually expressive performance, one which indicates that Miss Brent has genuine screen ability. Pierre Le May's interpretation of the lover is only fair. Minor parts are taken by Catherine Calhoum and Philip Hahn.

Since the atmosphere is partly that of studio life, a couple of flashes show a model posing very nearly in the altogether. The scene wherein Jean gives herself to the young artist, and the struggle between the artist and the young girl, are enacted as such scenes usually are on the screen.

Handsome interior sets are used almost exclusively. A realistic shipwreck scene is staged, however, and this, like all of Mr. Grandon's directorial efforts here, is very fine.

STRIKING MOMENTS FROM "SPELLBOUND," A KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE, WITH LOIS MEREDITH

"A WOMAN WILLS"

(Sun Photoplay—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A MELODRAMA in a novel setting possessed of one of those athletic heroines, fully capable of climbing a high telegraph pole, of falling off a galloping horse and of performing any wondrous feat not to be surmised by a layman, is offered in "A Woman Wills." Elsie LeClaire is the actress who carries away these daredevil honors. She is a very fearless young lady, but she is an equally good actress.

"A Woman Wills" was produced in Europe—in France, judging from the character of its story, its atmosphere and its players. It deals largely with a war, not the present war, for it comes to a close before the picture's termination. Furthermore the picture is not part of any nation's propaganda, for it has its own story to tell and the war is merely employed to further the interests of the plot.

The scenes laid on the battlefield are most realistic, judging from the topical pictures of the European conflict. In these we are treated to the startling fall that Miss LeClaire takes from her horse and also the explosion of a trench. The photography in these scenes as well as all the others is excellent. The settings deserve unusual notice as they have the depth and the detailed definition of many of the foreign-made pictures.

The story tells of Marion Duval (Miss LeClaire), a mischievous young lady who is attending boarding school when the picture opens. She runs away finally, disguises herself as a boy scout and goes to war. She makes the acquaintance of a young lieutenant and immediately falls in love with him.

In after years she seeks to win the love of the lieutenant, but he is wrapt up in another young lady who happens to be in the power of a foreign spy, bent on procuring certain papers from the officer. Suffice it to say that she is instrumental in defeating their conspiracy and the lieutenant at last sees her worth.

The story is purely melodramatic. In some places it waxes unusually wild, specifically in giving the heroine such a supernatural suspicion of the falsity of the other woman. But like all melodramas, "A Woman Wills" is exciting to the last. Its comedy in the boarding school scenes and its thrills in the war flashes and the following sensational battle between the two women lend just the right ingredients that a successful melodrama needs.

The editing of the picture is good on the whole, but open to improvement in a few places where the story jumps suddenly from one scene to another. A newspaper insert might also be improved upon as the story running under the head is by no means the right story.

John Maguard as the lieutenant, Cuzanne Armelle as the adventuress and Joseph Morris as the spy complete the cast of principals.

"SPELLBOUND"

(Knickerbocker Star Feature-General—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LOIS MEREDITH is starred in this mystery story, which was produced for the Messrs. Horkheimer by Harry Harvey. Miss Meredith is seen as an English girl, over whom a strange influence is wrought by an idol, which her guardian brings from India.

She invites a noted yogi to speak to her friends at a reception, and the yogi discovers the idol. He returns at night, kills the guardian, but fails to get the idol. Graeme, Elsie's lover, is caught on the scene with the knife in his hand, and is charged with the murder. He is acquitted on the volunteer testimony of one of the yogi's servants, who bears his master a grudge.

The picture then depicts the married life of Graeme and Elsie. Elsie takes to gambling, and Graeme spends his evenings with an actress. A child is born to the Graemes, but Elsie despises the infant. Finally, the yogi, attempting to steal the idol again, is accidentally made a prisoner in a room with a spring lock. He calls on the idol to deliver him, and the idol moves, upsetting a lamp. The house is set on fire. Elsie risks her life to save the child, and Graeme returns in time to rescue both. The yogi loses his life in the fire, and Graeme and his wife at last discover that they are happy in their child.

In the supporting cast are William Conklin, George Burrell, Edward J. Brady, Frank Erlanger, Edward Peters, Joyce Moore and Daniel Gilfether.

The interior sets are elaborate, and the exteriors bring to view some pleasing bits of California scenery. In some of the scenes, the lighting is quite artistic. The photography, in general, is good.

FOUR THOUSAND EXPECTED AT DETROIT'S FIRST SCREEN DANCE ON MAY 15

DETROIT is to have its first annual screen dance on Monday evening, May 15, at the Arcadia Auditorium. Arrangements are being made to handle a crowd not less than 4,000 people. Tickets will be sold from all of the local theatres at $2 per couple. Whatever profit there is will be turned over to the Actors' Fund of America.

There will be one orchestra of 20 pieces and a band of 20 pieces. The committee handling the details consists of Harry I. Garson, of the Broadway-Strand theatre, chairman; Joseph Kent, of the World Film Corporation, and William Bailey, of the Detroit Universal Exchange.

The committee is now working to secure as many screen stars as possible.

"BLAZING LOVE"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

FOR Virginia Pearson's first appearance in William Fox photoplays, a domestic tragedy has been selected as a vehicle. It gives Miss Pearson opportunity to play two contrasting roles—a woman in the prime of life married to a man far too old, and the same woman, just as she is reaching the estate of gray hairs, married to another man far too young for her. The theme is that youth cannot mate with age; and the lesson is that when it does, there is tragedy—for age.

Miss Pearson appears to excellent advantage both as a young wife, and as an old one. Perhaps she is a little better as the older woman, but this is probably because she is aided by an unusually good make-up. In both instances she is striking, and her acting, added to that of her fellow-players and the natural heart interest of the theme, puts the picture over in good style.

The story is one to command sympathy from any audience, although it has not been told in the strongest possible fashion. In the beginning we have a lover going to Labrador on an exploring expedition. We see him killed there by a man who afterwards returns to become purveyor of scandal against Margaret (Miss Pearson). The reason for the murder in the Arctic is not clear. There is also slight confusion in the introduction of characters, and in getting the story under way, but this does not affect seriously the good effect of the piece as a whole. Kenean Buel's direction is good, and is at its best in the planning of settings, both exterior and interior. At certain points in the action Buel showed a tendency to overdo the cut and flash, which retarded the movement of the plot.

In the cast are Wilmuth Merkyl, the young husband, and Frank Burbeck, the old one. Lew Stern appears as Margaret's father, Mattie Ferguson, as her maid, and Louise Huff, as a cousin of the young husband's with whom he falls in love when age begins to creep upon his wife. Frank Goldsmith is seen as the villain, who, rebuffed by Margaret, deliberately sets out to drag her name in the mire, and finally gets killed after he has killed the aged husband. The cast throughout is admirably selected as to type, and does good work. Merkyl deserves second honors, Miss Huff gives a gratifying ingenue rendition.

Worked out to its logical conclusion—a fact which makes the denouement very impressive—the story calls for the suicide of Margaret after she has discovered that her husband has ceased to love her. This brings out in the strongest manner the heart interest upon which the plot pivots.

GENERAL FILM BRANCH MANAGERS REPORT HEAVY BOOKINGS ON "SPELLBOUND"

THE five-reel Knickerbocker Star feature, "Spellbound," was screened last Wednesday at a private showing to which General Manager Gilmore of the Twenty-third street branch of the General Film Company had invited a number of out-of-town bookers. Several local exhibitors, who happened to be present, also attended the "first run" of the film, which all declared a most auspicious beginning of the series of five-reel features announced for release in the General service every four weeks.

The manager of one of the largest exchanges in the East summed up the prevailing opinion thus:

"I have already got more than forty bookings for 'Spellbound' solely on the quality of the three-reel Knickerbocker Star features and the advance publicity. I shall be able to tell my customers that it's a winner. The star is beautiful and a splendid actress, the supporting cast couldn't be better, and the production is gorgeous. As for the story, it's novel and very impressive, the title especially being calculated to provoke curiosity, and that's what every exhibitor wants."

CHAPLIN BURLESQUE ON "CARMEN" MAKES HIT AT CRESCENT THEATRE IN NASHVILLE

THE Chaplin burlesque on "Carmen" drew large crowds during its two-day run at the Crescent, Nashville, on Friday and Saturday, April 14-15. The Friday night showing was one of the greatest records in the history of this theatre. The evening performance taxed the theatre to overflowing. Even out to the sidewalk in front of the theatre a surging mass of enthusiastic fans stood waiting an opportunity to purchase tickets. At times the crowds got so thick, President Sudekum had to call the police.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Girl Across the Way." (Biograph. Reissue. Mon., June 5.)—Depicting a laggard's making by the love of a girl and the winning over of his mother after the marriage. Rather unconvincing in its development, this picture is perhaps a little too reminiscent to warrant reissuing. One set is employed, while the story repeats itself a number of times during the one reel. Mae Marsh, Robert Harron and Mildred Manning are the leads.

"The Yaqui Cur." (Biograph. Reissue. Two reels. Tues., June 6.)—A pathetic and most absorbing Indian story based on the biblical passage: "Greater Love hath no man than this, that a Man lay down his life for his Friend." The story is an unusual one and the character of the Indian who after showing the yellow streak turns hero to save his companion, is one that will command much attention. Robert Harron in this part registers effectively. His support includes Walter Miller, Lionel Barrymore and Victoria Forde. There are several lengthy spectacular scenes showing rival Indian tribes in battle.

"Playthings of the Gods." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., April 27.)—A conventional melodrama concerning the father who attempts to spoil his son's marriage. It is done very slowly and becomes tiresome shortly after its nature has become apparent. Some of the situations are so improbable that they will excite laughter instead of sympathy as intended. The acting is poor. Cecil Van Auker as the villainous parent employs a sneer as his main expression and his acting never convinces. He is a villain of the very old school. Allan Forrest is rather a simpering hero with no back-bone at all. Others are Adelaide Bronti, Ruth Saville and Evelyn Page. Wilbert Melville directed.

"Love and Bullets." (Lubin. Sat., April 29.)—An enjoyable comedy depicting the manner in which Louise gets rid of her father's chosen son-in-laws. Once in a while it resorts to extremely elementary tactics to produce its laughs, but on the whole it may be depended upon to please. June Daye, Francis Joyner, John Sherman, Kempton Greene and Adelaide Hayes make up the cast. Clay M. Greene wrote and directed.

Selig-Tribune, No. 31. (Mon., April 17.)—Zouave regiment arrives at Saloniki, Greece; baseball season opens in San Francisco, Cal.; children attend circus day at Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, Cal.; baptism ceremony conducted by negroes at St. Petersburg, Fla.; David R. Francis leaves for Russia from New York City; Apache Indians hold War Hop before leaving to join American troops in pursuit of Villa, Columbus, N. M.; prominent business men enlist for service in summer training camps, El Paso, Texas; opening of American league baseball season in Chicago, Ill.; 6th Field Artillery drills at Nogales.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Pierre Brissac the Brazen." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 1.)—All the irresistible humor and quaintness of character is brought out by the most competent cast. This is a comedy, and a comedy considerably above the average in worth. There is no slapstick, but the situations and characters will appeal to everybody. George Field and John Gough are especially good, while Edward Coxen, Lizette Thorne, and Marie Van Tassel do much to add to the pleasing ensemble.

Pierre Brissac, a burglar, and Le Petit Jean, his apprentice, are looking around for a promising house to rob. They select one belonging to John Brand. Some hours before, Brand had quarreled with his wife, and gone to the club. His spouse had gone home to her mother. Brand returned home, and finding the door locked, sits down on the steps. The two housebreakers inside telephone for the police, and the protesting owner is jailed for the night. Next morning Mrs. Brand decides to return to her domicile, and finds it looted. She telephones the police, and they invite her to see the thief. When she sees her husband at the station house they embrace rapturously.

"The Dashing Druggist's Dilemma." (Falstaff. Mon., May 1.)—This comedy gives the eternal triangle a rather unexpected twist. The dashing young drug clerk is the center of all feminine eyes. Things come to a crisis when two sisters receive an offer from their wealthy uncle of $10,000 to the one who gets married first. One rings the night bell, and when the clerk appears, seizes him forcibly and carries him toward the minister. The other interferes, and both arrive at the parsonage with the weeping clerk. He struggles for freedom, and finally is allowed to go to the 'phone. After a hasty conference he hangs up the receiver and waits. Presently a large, determined-looking woman appears, and seizes the clerk. "Come back home, hubby," she says, "I'll protect you." Frances Keyes, Elise Jordan and Jay C. Yorke head the cast.

"The Skillful Sleigher's Strategy." (Falstaff. Mon., May 8.)—This comedy of the snow should be welcome just as the days promise to show a little heat. The girl is carefully protected by her guardian, but she gets word to her sweetheart that she is to be taken away to school on a certain day. Sweetheart, with the aid of several shovellers, blocks the road with snow, and the auto is stalled. Then he happens by in his sleigh, and offers to take the girl. Guardian goes too, but by a little skillful driving, the young man manages to tip guardian out. When the unfortunate man next sees his ward, she is a bride. William Swan, Gladys Leslie and Frank E. McNish compose the cast.

"M. T. Dome's Awful Night." (Cub. Fri., May 5.)—Action seems to be the key-note of this comedy. M. T. Dome and his young wife quarrel because he has selected a pretty maid for her, so he spends the evening at the club. He induces some friends to accompany him home, but once arrived there he falls against and over things, arousing the house, and smashing the stair rail. Dome promptly gets a carpenter, and by the time the irate wife and servants get down, a gang of carpenters is busily repairing the damage. Wife is not fooled, however; she quickly selects Dome from the crowd and gives him what is coming to him. In the cast are Billy Armstrong and Ethel Turpin.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"A Huntress of Men." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., May 8.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Potts Bungles Again." (Nestor. Mon., May 8.)—In which Betty, the new arrival on the police force, proves her worth by capturing the robber and forcing a pardon from her reporter-lover who neatly roasted her when she took up her duties. Betty Compson, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Ed. Burns in character makeup help to make this a very fine comedy. Louis Huber is the author while Al Christie produced.

"The Mark of a Gentleman." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., May 9.)—Showing how an athletic millionaire shed his name and posed as a physical trainer and how while in this position he won the heart of a young girl. This is one of the most entertaining and pleasing comedy-dramas that Universal has issued for some time. Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon are featured and in romantic parts one can go a long way before finding their equals. F. McGrew Willis prepared the scenario for Director William Worthington.

"Virginia." (Rex. Tues., May 9.)—Rather gruesome drama portraying the manner in which a girl of the slums made good against heavy odds. Cleo Madison is the girl and while her performance is very good, the makeup on the actress who plays her fallen sister is repelling. Miss Madison worked on a scenario by Harvey Gates.

"When a Wife Worries." (Imp. Tues., May 9.)—This shows hubby's efforts to procure something for his baby to cut teeth on, and poor hubby is fooled and joked by his friends. His wife rages at home anxious for his return and the slavey helps the agitation along. Jane Bernoudy as the slavey is exceptional, while Victor Potel is the husband. This is a very good comedy, written and produced by Hal Clotworthy.

"The Great Smash." (L-Ko. Three reels. Wed., May 10.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Go Between." (Imp. Wed., May 10.)—This co-stars Wiliam Garwood and Violet Mersereau, who must divide credit for the picture's success. The story tells of a chemist who loves May. He suffers an attack of typhoid and May stays away while Rosemary, who had before been the go-between for the lovers, nurses him. Realization of the comparative worth of the two girls finally dawns upon the chemist. Jean Dumar as May is attractive but she is no actress. The story is almost too simple and obvious for enjoyment, while the direction seems inadequate. Samuel Griner wrote the scenario and William Garwood directed the picture.

"Her Husband's Faith." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., May 11.)—Showing how the husband preferred to believe in his wife and her version of her past rather than to take a derelict's explanation of her former days. Emory Johnson, Dorothy Davenport and Trockwood Crittenden are the leads in this release which is averagely strong. Miss Davenport adds much to the picture. Lloyd B. Carleton directed.

"The Capital Prize." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., May 12.)—This excellent drama produced by Edwin Stevens was reviewed at length in the issue of April 1.

"A Strange Confession." (Victor. Fri., May 12.)—Joe, the ape of the Universal zoo, plays a prominent part in this drama. He steals a wallet and the distrustful father believes that his gambling son has committed the crime. But finally the ape enters again and brings back the wallet, thus clearing the son's name. Joe is a very clever actor but the picture as a whole is unconvincing. Jay Hunt directed Colin Chase, Golda Coldwell, Rex de Roselli and Mrs. Jay Hunt in the leading parts.

This drama was reviewed in a previous issue, but was subsequently withdrawn from the program and advanced to the above date.

"Never Lie to Your Wife." (Nestor. Fri., May 12.)—Father and son-in-law plead sickness as an excuse from going to the opera but after much trouble the two wives discover their perfidy and the game is up. This makes a most amusing release with Harry Rattenberry, Ray Gallagher, Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams and Neal Burns in the principal parts. Horace Davey directed from a scenario by Al Christie.

"A Fight for Love." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 13.)—Showing how a member of the Camorra deserted his cause long enough to save the daughter of a detective from the clutches of his own fellows. G. Raymond Nye acts forcibly in the main role of the Italian. There is a gruesome third degree and a knife fight that quickens the interest to a great extent. James Conway, Hector Sarno and Roberta Wilson are the main supporting players. Jacques Jaccard and W. B. Pearson collaborated on the scenario while the former directed.

"A Wife for Ransom." (Joker. Sat., May 13.)—Sweethearts are married and her parents object, whereat the young husband enlists the aid of the police and kidnaps his mother-in-law and thus forces a blessing from the irate father. Gale Henry is at her best in this reel, which means that it is unusually laughable. Excellent support is given by William Franey, Charles Conklin, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock. Allen Curtis was back on the job as director.

"A Soul for Sale." (Rex. Three reels. Sun., May 14.)—A melodrama produced in England that is hardly worthy a place on the Universal program. An elementary story is treated conventionally in practically every instance save for the denouement which by reason of its good handling manages to create suspense. On the whole, however, the picture falls far below the home product of the company. The acting is average, the types are good and the atmosphere convincing.

"Her Great Part." (Laemmle. Sun., May 14.)—Curing wife of a longing to go on the stage is a familiar and fairly reliable plot but as Lynn Reynolds has handled it here it fails either to interest or amuse to any great extent. Myrtle Gonzales, Fred Church and George Hernandez are featured.

PREPAREDNESS

Are you getting ready to be represented in the next Studio Directory Number of Motion Picture News, published September 9?

THE SUNSET TRAIL

After spending a week in the Hanging Glacier Country, they started West over the celebrated "Sunset Trail." They passed through a beautiful country, splendid camping places every night, plenty of wood, water and grass, and the only wild "thing" they met was a friendly bear. While scaling a cliff above Sunset Falls, Cæsar, the Great Dane dog which was with the party all summer, slipped and plunged 25 feet to the swirling stream in the canyon and was carried 100 feet over the falls to the pool below from which he was rescued with great difficulty.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

88—Which type adjustable choke-coil is the simplest to design and construct?

Ans.—The single coil or solenoid surrounding a rectangular core as illustrated in Figs. 43 and 44, is the very simplest possible form of choke-coil construction. In the early days when A. C. was used for picture projection, after the great loss in rheostats with high amperages as required for A. C., became evident, almost every electrician in the country got busy making choke-coils and they were at that time constructed along the design illustrated in Fig. 43. While this design may be simple to manufacture, it is also an inefficient design because there is a great waste of energy, due to the fact that such a choke-coil has to have a greater number of turns of wire in series with the arc in order to produce the required number of lines of magnetic force to give the necessary reactance.

89—What improvement in choke-coil design can be made in order to reduce the losses and to increase the reactance and regulating quality of the coil as illustrated in Fig. 43?

Ans.—The choke-coil design can be materially improved by making a shorter magnetic air-gap. This is accomplished by changing the design of the iron core so as to prevent excessive magnetic leakage outside or through the windings of the choke-coil.

In Fig. 45, is shown a common design for a choke-coil, employing the "U" core.

In following the illustration, you find that upon the "U" core A, which is of rectangular cross section, there is mounted a magnetizing coil or solenoid B, the terminals C and D of the coil B are connected in series with the line and the arc as would be an ordinary rheostat.

In operation the choke-coil parforms in a similar manner to that described in answer to question No. 87, but you will find by studying the illustration and comparing it with Fig. 43, that the magnetic lines of force shown by the dotted lines E E are carried through the iron instead of through the air space and there is a comparatively short air gap for the magnetic lines to travel, as illustrated by F in Fig. 45, as compared with the great length of air space, indicated by F F in Fig. 43.

What effect has the application of the "U" core on the design of the choke-coil, as illustrated in Fig. 45, as compared with the straight core in Fig. 43?

Ans.—Due to the shortening of the air gap in Fig. 45, by applying the "U" core to the choke-coil the magnetic reluctance or resistance to the flow of magnetic lines of force is reduced many times and in consequence thereof the same choking effect can be accomplished with many less turns of wire than required for the straight core as shown in Fig. 43. On this account the wire is shorter, therefore, its resistance is lower and the apparatus runs cooler, which means a saving in current. It is also a fact that by applying the "U" core, better regulation is obtained for the control of an arc and as iron is generally cheaper than copper, the cost may be slightly less. The cost, however, is practically the same for the two designs, using either the straight or the "U" core, but the efficiency of the choke-coil with the "U" core for the control of the arc is better

91—How would you regulate the ampere flow when using the "U" core for a choke-coil?

Ans.—The same principle of regulation as illustrated for Figs. 43 and 44 holds good for the "U" core. In other words, the current flowing in the circuit across the arc can be increased by lifting the coil B so that a lesser number of turns will influence the magnetization of the "U" core and in a similar manner by lowering the coil B, so that all of the turns surround and influence the leg of the "U" core, the current will be reduced to the lowest amount.

There are many choke-coils on the market constructed as illustrated in Fig. 45, and they are giving fair satisfaction, but there is one thing to remember, and that is, that a choke-coil takes from the line the same number of amperes as delivered at the arc. In other words, if you wish a 50 ampere arc on a 110 volt circuit, you must take 50 amperes from the line which is 5½ K. W. If you require 50 amperes at the arc with a choke-coil on a 220 volt circuit, you still take 50 amperes from the line, and that represents a load of 11 K. W.

Please understand and remember that when you are using an A. C. choke-coil, while you may take so many apparent watts from the line as indicated by the 5½ K. W., or 110 volts and 11 K. W. for 220 volts, you require not more than about 60 per cent of this amount in actual wattage from the line, because of the kicking or choking effect of the coil which produces a counter-voltage and current which is not indicated on the watt meter. This wattless current not indicated on the watt meter represents only capacity in amperes and requires a larger generator, line, transformer, meter and wiring installation, but does not consume the fuel, and is therefore termed "A Wattless Current," it is current without power, merely surging back and forth.

PALACE, ONE OF LONG ISLAND'S NEWEST HOUSES, CATERS TO PATRONS' COMFORT

ONE of the newest theatres opened on Long Island is Sheer's Palace theatre at Kingsland and Way avenues, Corona.

The house is a beautiful brick structure, with an imposing front, the exterior dimensions being 40 x 107. The lobby is spacious, 15 x 20, and is equipped with a double automatic ticket selling and cash register.

The seats are entirely on the ground floor, affording capacity for about six hundred people. Particular attention was given to the interior decorations, which follow a golden brown color scheme. The walls are hung with velvet hangings, and a large velvet drop curtain hides the screen from the view of spectators, until the moment for the pictures to be projected.

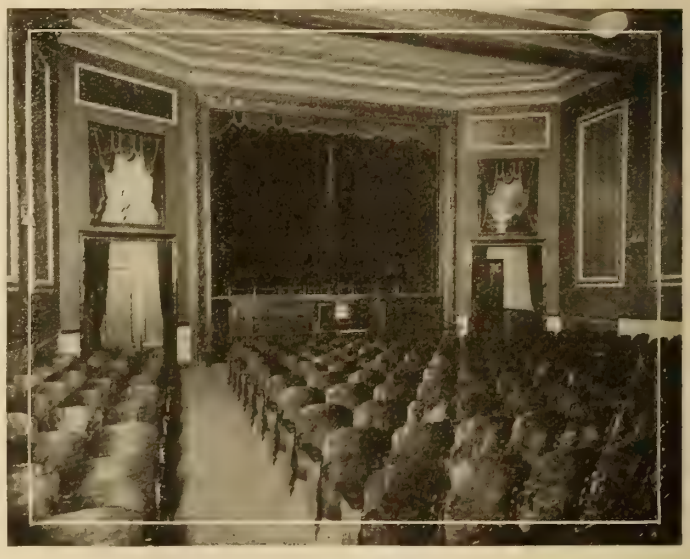
The management takes pride also in its arrangements for the comfort and convenience of patrons. Realizing that proper ventilation is a prime necessity of the modern picture theatre of the first class, an underground cap and exhaust system was installed, and this has been found to give excellent results. Steam is used for heating, and the Queen's Electric Alternating System supplies light. The lobby is also distinctive in respect to lighting. It is equipped with two indirect bowls with ball bulb drops.

The comfort of patrons is also looked after by uniformed ushers, who are instructed to give close attention to the wants of picture goers. In all, the house has ten employees, and they are kept busy by the crowds which attend the three daily shows of eight reels each. The admission price at night is ten cents while the matinee prices are five and ten cents.

For the musical accompaniments to photoplays, now recognized as vital to proper presentation of pictures, the Palace has found the American Fotoplayer of excellent service. Mutual service is employed, the management selecting picked features in addition to this regular service.



INTERIOR OF THE PALACE THEATRE

The house prides itself on its good projection, two Powers 6-A Motors being used. The length of the throw is ninety feet to a Minusa Gold Fibre Screen.

The up to date ideas expressed in the construction and operation of the theatre find their counterpart in its methods of advertising. A house organ gives good service, and this is supplemented by display ads in newspapers.

The Palace theatre is owned by Daniel Sheer, who also owns the Hyperion theatre, Corona, another house which is similarly equipped with the most modern accessories and where the music is also supplied by a Fotoplayer.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA

THE Family theatre at Fruitvale has been opened under the management of Smith and Hobson, after having been dark for some time. New equipment is being installed.

F. Veseley has taken over Brown's Opera House at Salinas, this house being the finest in that city.

J. Hill has purchased the Piedmont theatre at Oakland and has placed A. Tipple, formerly a resident of Canada, in charge.

The Palm Beach theatre has been opened at the Palm Beach bathing resort, Alameda.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new theatre of Ellis Arkush at Redwood City, and the house will be opened about the first of July. It will seat more than six hundred persons and will be handsomely appointed.

CANADA

The Allen Theatre Company, which took over the theatre on Main street, Moose Jaw, Sask., originally started by the Monarch Theatre Company, recently resumed construction work on the building, and will rush the house to completion. The former plans have been altered to include a stage, and various minor improvements will also be introduced. The lobby of the new theatre will be entirely of marble, and the exterior will be finished in marble, tapestry brick and ornamental iron work. The seating capacity of the Allen will be approximately 950, and on the opening, about August 1, will be added to the Allen string of houses presenting the Paramount program.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Harry Crandall has announced the taking over of the Maycroft Park in the northeast section of Washington. This has been a popular airdome for the past few years and will continue as such under the new management. It formerly was managed by Fred Stein. Just who will succeed to this position has not yet been determined. The Maycroft will not be opened for some time yet, as weather conditions point to a late patronage of parks in the Capital City. According to Mr. Crandall, the park will probably remain a family airdome with an admission of five cents.

IOWA

The Colonial, Olewein, closed late in the winter, is now opened again.

B. L. Ireland is the new manager of the Majestic, Seymour. He employs a four piece orchestra and crowds his house of 450 capacity six nights a week.

Louis Frana has opened the Frana theatre at Calmar.

A. L. Porter has started showing pictures in the opera house at New Hampton.

William Allinson has opened the Palace at Boone.

Guy Curtis, formerly of Harlan, has bought the Isis at Independence.

Stacy and Youngman are the new owners of the Lyric at Charles City.

L. D. Hendrix is the manager of the Star, Mount Vernon, the former manager having died.

Nicholas Webber, at Waterloo, has turned the Crystal theatre into an exclusive motion picture house.

L. E. Carnes has opened the Star at Sioux City. It is a cozy downtown house, seating four hundred. He shows features. Carnes formerly operated the Palace, a suburban house.

KENTUCKY

W. B. Carvell is treasurer of the management which has opened a new picture house in Allensville. Shows are given on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights.

MARYLAND

The new Aladdin theatre, located at 930-932 West Baltimore street, Baltimore, has changed hands. The theatre has been enlarged recently and it now seats about five hundred persons. B. Friedmann, the new owner, contemplates in the near future to make a number of improvements. He also will install modern appliances in place of the old equipment. Saturday, April 29, was the opening day under the new management.

MASSACHUSETTS

Work has begun on the construction of a motion picture theatre at the junction of Western and Holland avenues, West Lynn. It is planned that it will be ready on Labor Day next after an expenditure of $35,000. It will seat eight hundred.

The Phelps theatre, Southbridge, erected for Mrs. T. F. Murphy and managed by William Brouillette, has opened.

MICHIGAN

R. Von der Goltz, assistant to Manager M. W. McGee of the Majestic theatre, Detroit, has tendered his resignation and will hereafter cover the northern part of Michigan for the Pathé Freres, making headquarters at the Detroit exchange. Mr. Von der Goltz was at the Majestic since it opened and was former manager of several of the Kunsky theatres.

Flint is to have a Duplex theatre—the same as in Detroit—at the corner of West Kearsley and Beach streets. Fuller Claflin, designer of the Detroit Duplex theatre, has secured a site in Flint and is now arranging for the financing of the proposed structure. He is negotiating with an Eastern manager to take over the lease of the theatre. The Duplex has two auditoriums—the object being for the audience to see the feature from the beginning without any interruption. Actual work will start in May and the house will be opened early in September.

The Palace theatre, Saginaw, owned by the Hoffman Bros., of Detroit, was opened on Monday, April 24. The policy is vaudeville and pictures.

Menominee is to have a new $25,000 theatre, according to Manager Campbell of the Grand theatre, who is behind the proposition.

The Washington theatre, Bay City, is to be remodelled starting May 15. The house has been running pictures for the past four weeks as an experiment. The owners are satisfied that the public want pictures and they propose to make the picture policy a permanent one.

MISSOURI

Warner Brothers opened the first two airdomes of the season in St. Louis, on Easter Sunday, April 23, when the Queen, 4700 Maffit avenue, and the North Grand, Grand and Natural Bridge road, were each thrown open to the public. The opening of another airdome owned by the Warners, the Zelphia, on St. Louis avenue, west of Grand, was postponed until April 30. These outdoor theatres show an all picture program, with five cents admission, except on Saturday and Sunday, when a special feature is added to the program and ten cents is charged. Warner Brothers control two theatres besides the three airdomes, and it is their intention to add to the string of amusement houses until they have ten or more under their control.

Barrett Brothers, who own and operate the Chippewa theatre at Broadway and Chippewa street, have just bought the Knickerbocker theatre, at 3145 Park avenue, St. Louis. The Knickerbocker will be operated under the same policy as the Chippewa, and the airdome in connection with the theatre will be made ready to open within a few weeks. The Knickerbocker was opened several years ago by Meyer Brothers and Pracht, who now own and operate the Shaw theatre, at 39th and Shaw avenue.

NEBRASKA

F. C. Broz has started a theatre at Prague, a town of 350, running only Sunday evenings. Soon he hopes to have enough patronage for a regular evening show. He charges ten and twenty cents admission.

H. E. Swan, proprietor of the Empress at Kearney, recently had a picture taken of his house at 9 o'clock in the evening. The photograph shows automobiles lined up and down the street for half a block each way.

W. H. Hughes, of the Community theatre, David City, is having his house remodeled and enlarged.

Joe Garman has leased the city auditorium at Lincoln, to show features until the middle of September.

Charles A. Beghtol, of Denver, has leased the theatre now being constructed at Hastings by William Branch. He will take possession September 1. The theatre, Mr. Beghtol says, will have no superior in the West. The lobby will be especially elaborate, with tile floor and marble trimings. An $8,000 orchestra organ will be installed.

The new Muse theatre, Omaha's magnificent $60,000 photoplay house, which will open in the near future, is said to be the most complete and best appointed motion picture theatre in Nebraska. Special attention has been given to the projection equipment. Two of the latest motion picture projectors have been installed and a Gold King screen purchased from the Omaha Film Exchange.

NEW YORK

The town hall will be open for moving pictures, according to a vote of the town board of Potsdam at a recent meeting. The board voted to install a fireproof operating booth for moving picture machines.

PENNSYLVANIA

The Stroud theatre, Stroudsburg, opened April 22 with moving pictures.

WEST VIRGINIA

P. N. Barrett, proprietor of the Bijou and Star theatres at Parkersburg, has decided to knock out the partition between the two theatres and make it into one large house. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of more than 800 and will be repainted and remodeled. A new ventilating system costing $3,000 will be installed and the total cost of remodeling will be more than $14,000. The work will be rushed through as rapidly as possible and it is expected to have the theatre completed and ready for business again by July 1.

WYOMING

Two new houses are to be opened in Thermopolis. The Isis, owned by J. B. Bogard, has a seating capacity of four hundred, and is being constructed at a cost of about $15,000. It will be thoroughly modern.

The Big Horn theatre, owned by Otto W. Schmitt, also has a seating capacity of four hundred. The Big Horn Theatre Company is erecting a theatre with a seating capacity of five hundred at Basin.

NOVELTY SLIDE WILL TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS OF EXHIBITORS ENDORSED BY LEAGUE

ANY exhibitor or operator visiting the Motion Picture Exhibitors League exposition, which is being held at Grand Central Palace May 1 to 6 inclusive should not overlook the booth of the Novelty Slide Company, where a demonstration will be given, showing the various processes of which lantern slides are manufactured.

The souvenir which is being given away by this company is also most novel. Every exhibitor whom the League endorses will have his photograph taken in the Novelty booth and from this photograph a hand colored slide will be made and presented to the exhibitor.

WURLIZTER SEEKS LARGE DEMONSTRATING ROOMS IN DETROIT

THE Rudolph Wurlizter Company is looking for a larger location in Detroit where it can have a big room for demonstrating to exhibitors its various theatre organs. G. B. Schulten, manager of the Detroit office, has just installed a large Wurlizter organ in the new Stratford theatre, situated at Dix and Ferdinand avenues.

CHANGES MADE AT RIALTO

A CHANGE has been made in the projection equipment at the Rialto theatre which was taken up in detail in the May 6 issue of the News.

Two Baird projectors which were originally ordered by Mr. Rothapfel over nine months ago were put in on the night of April 25. These machines were installed by the Baird Motion Picture Machine Company and will be described in detail in a later issue.

CARBON TROUBLE AND HOW TO REMEDY IT.

P. L., Mitchell, S. D.—I have been a constant reader of Motion Picture News ever since it has been out, and will say that it is the best magazine for operators that I have ever read. I am much interested in the questions and answers, and I know that every operator appreciates them just as I do.

What carbon on the market today do you think is the best? I have tried all of them, and I find the National to be the best. I cannot get a good light with Speer carbons as at times they burn even, but then they hit a bad spot and sputter, and also find that at pulling 60 amperes A. C. they needle at times.

Is it possible to strike two arcs at the same time with one compensarc, and leave them on at any length of time? What would you mean by using a connector? Why can't you strike two arcs at the same time? What do you think would cause a compensarc to go out after you put in a new trim and then go to strike your arc, but find that you can get no current after looking the fuse plugs over and finding that they are all right. Then you find that you have current as far as the lamp, and then when you strike your arc again you get a light. What do you think would cause this and why?

There is one thing about the News, and that is, that you can always turn over and find the union label on it. I am a member of Local 103, I. A. T. S. E. I know that all the boys down there read the News, and would not be without it. All union men ought to patronize it.

Ans.—Your letter has been noted with a great deal of interest, and we thank you for your appreciation of Motion Picture News, and are also pleased to note that you appreciate the questions and answers which are published in the "Simplified and Projection departments."

It is difficult to say which make carbon is the best. Under specified conditions most any of the good carbons will produce results, and if you have tried the National carbons and found them good, they are not expensive, and should give you perfect service.

Concerning the Speer carbons which you say you found unsatisfactory, I would advise that you send to the Speer Carbon Company, Saint Marys, Pa., the carbon stubs as they burn when you find them unsatisfactory, telling the factory on what current they were used, state make and style of transformer, economizer or compensarc you are using, with the ampere rating.

I take it from your description that you are using the Ft. Wayne compensarc, and that you are operating on the 50 ampere notch. If this is correct, then I am sure you will find that the speer carbons should be of the ¾ inch diameter for perfect results, because if the carbon needles it is a sign that it is too small or maybe too soft, and I am sure the factory will be more than pleased to receive a letter setting forth your trouble with samples of your carbons complained of.

It is not possible to strike two arcs on one compensarc at the same time. I don't know what is meant by a connector without further description from you. A connector is usually a clamp or brass sleeve arrangement with two or four screws connecting two wire leads together.

The reason why you cannot strike two arcs at one time on a compensarc is that it is made for the operation of only one arc at a time, and if you should connect another arc to the wires coming out of the compensarc, then when you put the carbons together on the second lamp you will find the first one will go out, due to the fact that the compensarc is of such design that if you put an additional arc upon it when touching the carbon points together, the voltage drops way down, and then the first arc, having no potential, will go out; but you will immediately get the second arc in place of the first. This is the correct design for all transformers of that kind, but you can secure transformers made to operate two arcs at the same time, but they are more expensive.

Often you will find that a transformer of any kind, like the compensarc, will operate perfectly and then without a moment's warning, if you have shut down the lamp and want to restart it, it will not pick up just as you describe, although upon examination the fuse plugs and everything is all right, and you may get current for a test lamp at the carbon jaws. Then again, you may put the carbons together in a few minutes and get a light. This condition is generally brought about through a poor contact, somewheres on the lamp side of the compensarc. On the lamp side the amperes are high and the voltage is low. Therefore, the contacts must be perfect at all points. A broken lead, for instance, at the lugs in the lamp house will cause just the trouble you describe, or a roughened and burned carbon clamp will make poor contact with the carbon, and cause the same trouble. I have also found that sometimes the carbons glaze over on their points, forming a high resistance surface, which will give you a small spark at the carbon points without lighting the arc. This latter difficulty can be overcome by a stroke of a rough file on the upper and lower carbon point just before you are ready to start.

PUTS BACK CURTAIN TO MAKE 75-FOOT THROW

A. S. B., Rockland, Me.—In one of our theatres we are using a lens purchased for 67½ feet throw, giving us a picture of 14¾ feet width and 11 feet 2 inches height. In making a new stage setting, we are desirous of putting back the curtain so that it will make a 75 foot throw. We understand, of course, this will increase the size of the picture slightly, but we are not quite sure whether or not by using the same lens it will cut down the brilliance of the picture and whether or not it will be necessary to purchase a different size lens to fit the new throw.

Also would you be good enough to advise us whether it is possible to obtain a lens that will overcome the machine throw being off center in the theatre, which of course, you realize by so being, it throws our picture slightly out of the correct angle. Could this be overcome by special lens?

Ans.—The projector lens which you are using at the present time must be approximately 4¼ inch E. F. which at about 67½ foot throw will give you a picture as you specify and this very same lens will give you a picture approximately, 12 by 16 at a distance of 75 feet.

It would not be necessary for you to change any part of your lens or machine equipment in moving the machine back so as to make the throw 75 feet, because the lens which you have will focus perfectly and properly by merely adjusting the lens focus in the regular way. The change on the screen will be a larger picture and if your present curtain will accommodate a picture about 12 by 16, then you are O. K.

The difference in the brilliancy of the picture due to the increase of the throw less than 10 feet, will not make any particular difference and will not be noticeable in your case. Many schemes have been proposed for correcting distortion due to the machine being placed off centre relative to the screen, but none of these devices have proven satisfactory.

As you do not state how much your machine is off centre I cannot advise whether there will be any serious effect on the screen, but under normal conditions with a distance of 75 feet there is no reason why you should not be able to place your machine 10 feet off centre, without noticing any change on the screen and if you focus the picture on the principal part of your subject, you ought to secure perfect satisfaction. As you say that your picture is only "slightly out of the correct angle," I take it that your machine is less than above specified off centre, so you need not worry about this matter.

REDUCING SIZE OF PICTURE WITHOUT GETTING NEW LENSES

R. E. J., Burton, O.—Is there any way of reducing the size of the picture without getting new projection lenses or moving the machine? If there is, would you let me know as soon as possible?

ANS.—It is possible to reduce the size of a picture projected on a screen, by increasing the distance between the front and rear lens cells in the combination of the projector lens. This method of changing the size of picture is possible within reasonable limits. That is, you could reduce the picture maybe 10 per cent.; in other words, one foot in width on a ten-foot picture, by setting a bushing or spacer in the tube which separates the front and rear lens cell. With this arrangement you would have to put the entire lens tube closer to the aperture. In other words, push it in the jacket about as much further as you separate the lens cells or a little more.

In case of an emergency, pictures have been seen projected with the front lens cell taken away all together, projecting with the rear combination only, and then the picture becomes about two-thirds smaller than the regular size. Then again, I have for emergency projected with the front lens only, leaving the rear combination out and then the picture becomes one-third smaller than the regular size with the ordinary combination as mounted for regular use, but the focus will not be perfect. It might do for temporary work in case of an emergency, but lens tubes are so cheap nowadays that it does not pay to use a makeshift lens even for temporary use, although it is possible.

HALLBERG WILL LECTURE TO PREVENT WASTE IN PROJECTION BOOTHS

WE wish to call the attention of all exhibitors, manufacturers and operators, who are to be present at the Motion Picture Exposition to be held in Madison Square Garden May 6-14, to the fact that the afternoon of Wednesday, May 10, is to be devoted to PROJECTION.

It is stated that $20,000 per day is being lost throughout the country in Projection Rooms because of the lack of technical knowledge. The cause of this waste will be discussed in detail at this time, with the aim of teaching those present exactly wherein they can eliminate all possible waste.

J. H. Hallberg, editor of the NEWS Projection Department, will take up the question of projection illumination, discussing the effect of direct and alternating current, as well as the progress which is being made in the use of the incandescent lamp for this purpose. Mr. Hallberg's talk will be graphically illustrated, and will prove to be of greatest interest and value.

At the close of the various lectures the meeting will be thrown open to a general discussion, at which time all present are urged to bring up questions which are troubling them, as this will be the best possible opportunity for having them explained.

This meeting will open at 2:30 in the concert hall at Madison Square Garden. Mr. Hallberg's lecture will take place at 3:15 sharp.

NEW APPLICATION OF GAS-FILLED HIGH EFFICIENCY TUNGSTEN LAMP

By Herbert W. Andem

A NEW application of the gas-filled high-efficiency tungsten lamp is in the lighting of motion picture studios. It is said that in one instance to illuminate a single stage for photographing one of the more costly films, there were used eighty-six of the 1,000 watts size of these lamp bulbs. Ordinarily from fifteen to twenty of the large sized units of 1,000-watt each suffice for this illumination.

The advantage claimed over other illuminants which have been used for this work in moving picture studios, is the correction of color values possible with a lamp giving a constant, continuous spectrum. The make-up which moving-picture actors have had to use to bring out the features of the face is avoided, and a better balance is given to the flesh tints, it is claimed.

The so-called nitrogen lamp, or more properly speaking, the nitrogen-filled lamp, is a tungsten lamp of high-efficiency. It is interesting to note that ever since tungsten came into use for lamp filaments, there has been a constant endeavor to produce lamps of higher efficiency.

The earlier investigations and experiments were more or less a matter of groping in the dark. All sorts of variations in the methods of making the filaments, as well as in the methods of exhausting the lamp bulbs, were tried in vain, that some might lead to an improvement in the life of the lamps.

It was possible to improve these lamps from ten to twenty per cent. in life by certain means, but this corresponded to only a gain in efficiency of power expended to a few hundredths of a watt per candle.

It was known that tungsten lamps could be run at an efficiency as high as 0.20 watt per candle, for a few seconds only. The melting point of the filament prevented any further increase of efficiency. When burned at a higher current consumption than 0.5 watt per candle the bulbs blackened badly within a couple of hours. The blackening of the interior of the lamp bulb was the chief cause preventing the burning of these lamps at higher efficiencies.

An idea of long standing was that the blackening of the lamp bulbs was due to the presence of gas. Experiments were made by filling with the different gases likely to form within the bulb, which clearly showed that the only gas that might exist to cause this trouble was water vapor.

The action of this water vapor was then carefully studied. It was found that the water vapor attacked the filament, producing a volatile oxide of tungsten and atomic hydrogen. The oxide that thus collected on the bulb was then reduced by the atomic hydrogen. The deposit was thus changed to a black layer of metallic tungsten, while the hydrogen combined with the oxygen to form water which again acted upon the filament.

Further experiments showed that the blackening of the bulb with filaments at high temperatures goes on even in the absence of water vapor. This kind of blackening was considered probably due to ordinary evaporation of the tungsten.

The line of attack led then to the introduction of gases, such as nitrogen or mercury vapor, at atmospheric pressures, into the bulb, and also to the changing the location of the deposit by means of convection currents in gases, so that the bulb opposite the filament does not blacken.

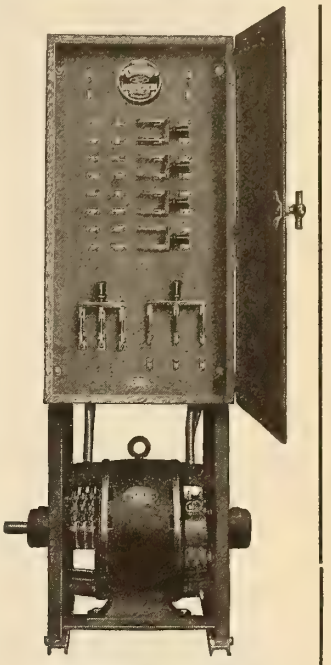
With helically wound filaments in nitrogen, very high efficiencies can be obtained and yet the life of the filament may be more than 1,000 hours. The blackening of the bulb is avoided; and in properly designed bulbs the tungsten that evaporates produces only a slight brownish deposit in the upper part of the bulb, where it does no harm.

A number of types of nitrogen-filled lamps have been made and tested, among these the most interesting on the market are the following:

Large units of very high efficiencies (0.4 to 0.5 watt per candle with a life of 1,000 hours or more). These take current of at least 20 to 30 amperes and (except units of over 4,000 candle-power) are therefore best run form alternating-current circuits by means of small transformers, giving voltage depending on the size of unit desired.

Smaller units of low voltage; these take currents of ten amperes or less at voltages, in some cases, as low as four or five volts. The efficiencies with 1,000 hours life vary from 0.6 to 1.0 or even

The "MARTIN" ROTARY CONVERTER



FOR REAL "SUN-LIT" PICTURES

AND PERFECT REEL DISSOLVING

The machine they are all talking about

The voltage of the Martin poly-phase converter is maintained constant so that the starting of the second arc positively does not disturb the light given by the first arc. This makes the dissolving of the reels as simple as if the arcs were operated in a Direct Current district.

Our emergency panel provides A. C. for the lamps in case the rotary should be out of service and thereby eliminates the cost of compense-arcs for emergency purposes.

The placing of the converter in base of panel board makes it a self-contained outfit and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

1.25 watts per candle, according to the current used. These lamps are adapted for series street lighting on 6.6 amperes circuit; for stereopticon lamps, automobile headlights and, in general, wherever a source of high intrinsic brilliancy, steadiness and white color is needed.

Lamps to run on standard lighting circuits (110 volts). Large units of this type (several thousand candlepower) have efficiencies of 0.5 watt per candlepower or better. With smaller units the efficiency is not at so high a standard.

Some of the special advantages claimed for these nitrogen-filled lamps are the color of the light. The temperatures of the filaments being several hundred degrees higher than that of ordinary tungsten lamps, causes the light to be of a very much whiter color so that it comes more closely to daylight than any other form of artificial illuminants, except the direct-current arc and the special Moore tube containing carbon dioxide. The color is almost exactly like that which can be obtained for a few minutes by running ordinary tungsten lamps at double their rated voltage.

High intrinsic brilliancy. The intrinsic brilliancy is five to ten times that of the filament of the ordinary tungsten lamp. This renders it especially suitable for projection work, such as head lights and stereopticon lanterns. Although the intrinsic brilliancy is less than that of the electric arc, this difference is often more than offset by the fact that the wandering of the crater of the arc prevents as sharp focussing as is possible when the source of light is fixed in its position.

The ultimate failure of these nitrogen-filled lamps is due to the breakage of the filaments. The candlepower is usually well above 80 per cent., even just before rupture.

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY DISPLAYS GOLD FIBRE SCREEN AT GRAND CENTRAL PALACE

THE Minusa Cine Products Company is going to have a very attractive display in connection with its New York distributor, the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, at the exposition in Grand Central Palace, New York. The company will have a Miusa Gold Fibre screen nine by twelve in the booth of its representative, and also a screen in one of the model theatres.

Their director of sales, Nat. I. Brown, has been in New York for the past ten days attending the opening of the Rialto theatre and making arrangements to purchase special equipment to be installed in its new factory, rapidly nearing completion.

This factory will have almost four times the floor space of the present building. An additional building, to be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of screens for home, lodge and school use, has been leased.

MARKENDORFF AND ECKART GET CREDIT FOR WORK ON RIALTO THEATRE, NEW YORK

IN the Rialto Supplement of the May 6 issue, there are two typographical errors which we desire to correct.

The lobby frames referred to on page 2734 were manufactured by S. Markendorff, of 122 West Twenty-third street, New York City, who have made a specialty of this branch of equipment.

Also on page 2742, it was William Eckart, of the Eckart Studios, 1416 Broadway, New York City, who was responsible for the beautiful interior decoration and finish of the house.

We would call the attention of our subscribers to these two errors in order that the companies who did this work may have full credit for it.

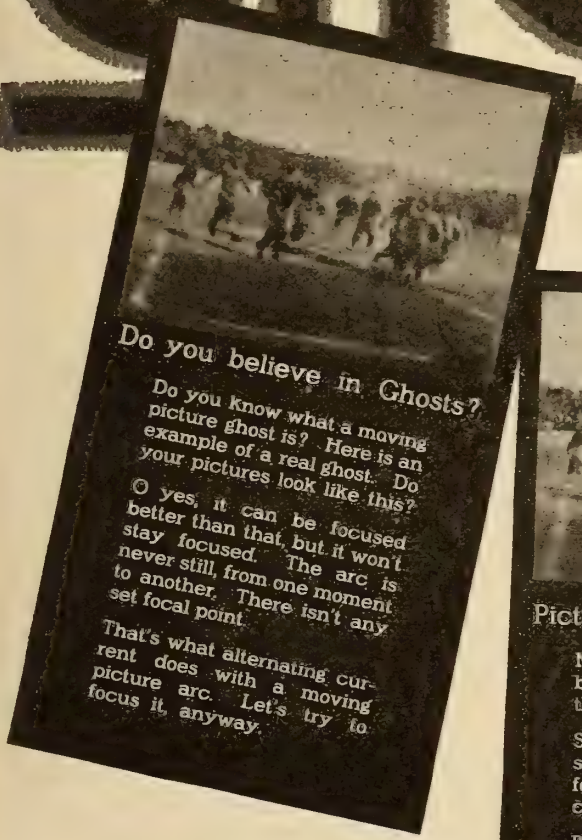
THE U. S. Cinematograph Company of Chicago is issuing a thirty-two-page catalogue, which fully describes, with numerous half-tones, their different styles of camera, and their studio and laboratory equipment. In this catalogue is listed practically every piece of apparatus, which is used by producing companies in the running of their laboratories and studios.

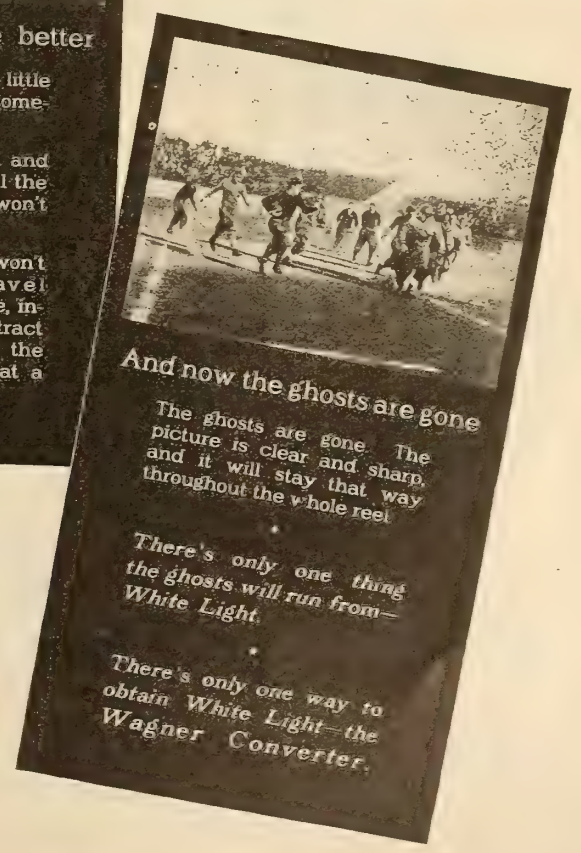
Capt. L. A. Boening, secretary and general manager of the Company, states that they are now ready, with greatly enlarged facilities for manufacturing their studio cameras, and studio and laboratory equipment, to double their former output.

GHOSTS



Do you believe in Ghosts?
Do you know what a moving picture ghost is? Here is an example of a real ghost. Do your pictures look like this?
O yes, it can be focused better than that, but it won't stay focused. The arc is never still, from one moment to another. There isn't any set focal point.
That's what alternating current does with a moving picture arc. Let's try to focus it, anyway.

Picture looks a little better
Now the picture looks a little better, but there's still something radically wrong.
Some nice, clear spots and some hazy ones, and all the focusing in the world won't correct this.
Besides, the hazy spots won't stay still. They travel around, blur the picture, injure the eyes, and distract the audience. Look at the next page and see what a picture should look like.



And now the ghosts are gone
The ghosts are gone. The picture is clear and sharp, and it will stay that way throughout the whole reel.
There's only one thing the ghosts will run from—White Light.
There's only one way to obtain White Light—the Wagner Converter.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA IS SCENE OF GREAT ACTIVITY IN THEATRE BUILDING

MORE moving picture theatres are being erected, or are being planned in this territory at the present time than ever before in the history of the industry, many of these houses being of unusually large size. Most of these are in San Francisco or its suburbs, such as Berkeley, Oakland, Alameda and Richmond, but there are a number in the interior towns, and some of these are of fair size. In many places a large house is being erected to take the place of two or more smaller theatres so that the construction work under way does not necessarily mean that there will be any actual increase in the number of houses conducted.

Prominent among the San Francisco houses being erected is the New Mission theatre of the Kahn & Greenfield circuit in the Mission district. This theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,800, and will be opened early in May. It is regarded as being a distinct advance in art of theatre building, and would be a credit to any city, no matter how large. The new Rialto theatre will also be opened at an early date, this house being on the site of the old American theatre on Market street. Here more than $70,000 has been expended in remodeling the old building and transforming it into one of the finest moving picture theatres in this city.

The largest project of all is that of the recently incorporated Market Street Realty Company, which has secured a large corner lot at Fourth and Market streets, and is planning to erect a moving picture theatre to cost a quarter of a million dollars. Plans are now drawn for this structure under the direction of Eugene Roth, manager of the Portola theatre, and work will be commenced as soon as it is possible to secure structural steel and to wreck the building now on this site. This theatre will be one of the very finest in the country, and will have a seating capacity of at least three thousand.

In the Polk street district of San Francisco a new theatre is in course of erection by I. Oppenheimer, S. Karski and Frank Levy. The steel work for this sixteen hundred seat house has been completed, and concrete is now being poured. The structure will be completed and opened for business about August.

Extensive additions are being made to the Haight Street theatre at Haight and Cole streets, San Francisco, by S. H. Levin. The work in this house will cost about $20,000, and includes the installation of a balcony. Plans have been prepared by Architect M. Mattanovich, and contracts have already been let for some of the steel work.

Contracts have been let by Albert Rosa and L. Boitano, 626 Front street, San Francisco, for the erection of a frame moving picture theatre at Twenty-eighth and Church streets to cost $8,000.

At Oakland work is progressing rapidly on the erection of the new T. & D. theatre, which will have a seating capacity of fully three thousand, and which will be the largest moving picture house on the Pacific coast when it is completed. The William E. Miller Estate Company is also erecting a large theatre in this city, practically all of the contracts for the work having been let. The architect of this house is Edward T. Foulkes, Crocker building, San Francisco.

In Redwood City there is considerable building activity, ground having been broken for a moving picture house on Broadway, with the Masonic Hall Association rushing plans to completion for the erection of a lodge and theatre building on Main street. The former of these will be occupied by E. Arkush, and will have a seating capacity of about 700.

From Sacramento word has been received that the Turner & Dahnken circuit has had plans completed for a splendid new house, and that actual construction work will be under way in May. It is also announced that a new theatre will be erected there for Charles Goddard, who conducts the Liberty theatre at the present time.

At Santa Rosa a new theatre is in course of erection for C. Reavis, formerly of Berkeley, and this will be ready for occupancy within a few weeks. Howell & Moore are erecting a fine theatre at Porterville, in the heart of the citrus district, and a theatre is being erected at Fowler by A. Walters.

STANLEY, PHILADELPHIA, CELEBRATES ITS SECOND ANNIVERSARY IN NOVEL WAY

THE Stanley theatre of Philadelphia, known throughout filmdom as one of the most progressive motion picture houses in the whole country, is again in the limelight. The week of April 24 marks the second anniversary of the photoplay house.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley company and manager of the theatre, which, through his genius, has become so prominent, celebrated the anniversary—not by a bigger program or unusual orchestral effects, or the giving up souvenirs—but by establishing a system of profit sharing and protection for all employees.

The Stanley runs a Paramount program interspersed with scenics, Burton Holmes Travelogues, educational, news pictures and high grade comedies.

It was the first Philadelphia theatre to employ a fine orchestra in addition to a grand-concert pipe organ. There are two organists. Rollo Misland, of St. Paul's church, Overbrook, Pa., and Otto Schmidt. The organ is an Austin. The symphony orchestra of seventeen is under the leadership of Harry W. Meyer, a well known and finished conductor.

One of the novelties organized by the Stanley is the darkening of the theatre during the musical numbers while a strong spotlight plays on the figure of the leader.

Former members of the Philadelphia and Chicago orchestras, with a sprinkling of foreign musicians from the Stanley Symphony Orchestra as follows: Alfred Lorenz, Fred Cook, Nathan Frey, Walter Schmidt, Adolph Hirschberg, Hans Schlegel, Fritz Dietrich, William Gruner, Fred Wagner, William Schlechtweg, Louis Eschert, Richard Bach, Otto Schmidt, Benjamin D'Amelio, Albert Wayne, Joseph D'Angelo and Albert Bode.

The Stanley has nineteen hundred seats. "Standing room only" is the rule between eight and nine p. m. almost every evening. Lasky's "The Heart of Nora Flynn," with Marie Doro and Elliott Dexter, was chosen for the whole of anniversary week.

PROVINCIAL AUTHORITIES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA MAY TAKE OVER LICENSING POWER

PREMIER W. J. BOWSER, following his conference with committees representing the operators' unions of Victoria and Vancouver, regarding changes in the law governing the examination of operators, has just introduced in the legislature a bill embodying the changes suggested, in the form of an amendment to the Moving Pictures act. By the terms of this bill the cities of the province are not allowed to issue licenses to operators, but all such licenses msut be issued by the provincial authorities, after examinations conducted under the administration of the censor's office.

It is stated that all examinations of the first class will be held in Vancouver, while examinations for licenses of the second class will be held in various parts of the province. The Vancouver examining board will include members of the local operators' union, while the other examinations will be conducted by a member of the censor's staff whose present duties consist of inspection of motion picture theatres and operating rooms.

SHARP ARRANGES SPECIAL MUSICAL PROGRAM FOR "UNWRITTEN LAW"

WILLIAM E. SHARP, a well-known leader in San Francisco orchestra circles, has arranged a special musical program for the initial presentation of the California Motion Picture Corporation's production, "The Unwritten Law," featuring Beatriz Michelena, now being shown at the Alcazar theatre.

He is working on musical arrangements for future productions of the company and is following producing activities on "The Woman Who Dared." He is also making a study of Oriental music in order that the musical program for "Kismet," featuring Otis Skinner, may be of the highest order. As Beatriz Michelena is a famous opera singer, with a wide following in California, special efforts are being set forth to secure the best.

THE PERFECT

Because of its simplicity in operation, its perfection in projection, its economy, durability and general superiority the American Standard Motion Picture Machine has everywhere won the favor of the public, the esteem of the exhibitor and the admiration of the operator.

The Standard lasts. Proof of this is shown by the fact that even in 1916 may be found old models of the Standard

The Camera

A Department Devoted to Motion Picture Photography in All Its Phases, Studio and Laboratory Work

Picture Lenses Are Ultra-Rapid Anastigmats

They Are Corrected Lenses of Large Relative Aperture—An Ultra-Rapid Lens May Be Readily Told from Slower Lenses of the Same Focal Length by Its Having a Much Wider Free Diameter of Its Glass Surfaces

LENSES such as are generally used in taking motion pictures belong to the class known as ultra-rapid anastigmats; in other words they are corrected lenses of large relative aperture.

An ultra rapid lens may readily be told from slower lenses of the same focal length by its having a much wider free diameter of its glass surfaces. The diameter of the glass at the largest or wide open diaphragm opening compared with the focal length determines the relative aperture or speed of the lens.

For example let us suppose that we have a lens of two inches focal length. The diameter of the largest stop in the diaphragm is one quarter of an inch. Dividing two inches, the focal length of the lens, by ¼ inch, the diameter of its largest or wide open stop, we find that the aperture measures one-eighth the focal length of the lens. The relative aperture or speed of the lens is therefore f.8 or about the speed of a common Rapid Rectilinear lens.

For the successful photographing of motion pictures in studios and in all kinds of weather, a lens of considerable speed is needed, and thus lenses of such great rapidity as f.3.5, f.4.5 and even faster are issued by all of the well known photographic lens makers, in short focal lengths to take care of the film makers' requirements.

Heliar Considered an Ideal Lens

The slowest lens in quite general use by the film producers is the Heliar lens which has a speed of f.4.5 and is made by the well-known firm of Voigtlander and Sohn. This little lens has been selected by many of the most artistic and discriminating producing firms in the country, and by many cameramen is considered the ideal lens for cinematography. It is in the nature of a portrait lens and imparts a plastic roundness to all objects photographed, making them stand out from the background. The Heliar lens comes nearer to creating stereoscopic effect than any other lens in present use for motion picture work. Being a little slower than the lenses of f.3.5 speed, and also having been designed along special lines it has greater depth of field at a given stop than the other cinematographic objectives. With a Heliar lens focussed for infinity, or a distant view, objects will also be in focus much closer to the camera than with any of the other lenses in general use, all conditions being equal.

Perhaps the popular lens with the greatest number of cameramen, however, is the genuine Carl Zeiss Tessar, Series 1C, having a speed of f.3.5 at full aperture or about twice as fast as the Heliar lens. Although it is seldom necessary to utilize the full intensity of the IC Tessar, cameramen like to have a lens with such an amount of reserve speed in case of an emergency. The genuine Zeiss Tessar is an extremely well corrected lens and possessed of great covering power, although it is not quite the equal of the Heliar for rendering very fine detail such as the fine blades of grass in an exterior scene or the individual hairs of the head in a studio close-up.

Tessar Lenses of the IC. Series Made by Bausch and Lomb

Tessar lenses of the IC. series are also made in this country by Bausch and Lomb of Rochester, in England by Ross Ltd., of London, and in France by E. Krauss, of Paris. These firms are licensees of the Zeiss patents in their respective countries and make lenses based on the formulæ of that renowned optical firm. In most instances the Tessar lenses made by Bausch and Lomb, Ross, and Krauss are equal in performances to the genuine Carl Zeiss objectives, which are made in Jena, Germany, the home of high grade optical glass.

There are other lenses for motion picture cameras, also of prominent make and such good performance that mention must be made of them here.

In addition to their Heliar lens the Voigtlander concern list another objective working at the considerable speed of f.3.2. It is called the Helomar and is an anastigmat of high correction consisting of three separate glasses, there being no cemented elements. While not possessing such depth of focus as the Heliar this faster objective, the Helomar, has proven to be an article of high efficiency and has been chosen by some experimenters in natural color motion photography to secure their records with.

Very similar in optical construction to the Helomar is the Kino Hypar lens supplied by the C. P. Goerz American Optical Company, which is the American branch of that well-known Berlin concern. Lenses of Goerz manufacture have held a leading place in photography for many years. The Kino Hypar objective has a speed of f.3.5 and is a modification of the celebrated Goerz portrait lens of like name. In addition to giving very crisp definition over the standard size of motion picture film image the Kino Hypar lens shows greater depth of field than the other lenses of like speed.

Taylor, Taylor and Hobson, the famous English lens makers of Leicester and London, who are responsible for the well known Cooke anastigmats, supply their Series II a. Cooke lens in the cinematograph size and it has many adherents. The Cooke lens system consisting of three single non-cemented elements has always been a popular one. The corrections of the Series II a. Cooke cinematograph objective are of the highest order, which is made possible by their lens construction, and the mounting of this lens is a fine example of exact machine work.

No article on the subject of the taking lens for motion pictures would be complete without some mention of the extremely rapid cinematograph objectives made by the celebrated London firm of J. H. Dallmeyer. In addition to a very good 2-inch focus lens with a speed of f.3.8, called the No. 1, they make in the 3-inch focal length a lens called the No. 3 with a speed of f.2.4, and their well-known No. 2 objective, having the phenomenal aperture of f.1.9, which makes it the fastest lens obtainable for the purpose of photographing motion pictures. The Dallmeyer firm at one time advertised their willingness to make on special order a cinematograph taking lens working at f.1.

In regard to the characteristics of the f.1.9 Dallmeyer lens it has been the experience of most all who have ever used one, that this ultra rapid objective at full aperture has little or no depth of focus and, owing to its peculiar construction, stopping it down does not materially improve the depth or definition. It is strictly an emergency lens for filming topicals in bad weather or interiors where artificial light is not available.

The writer has a lens of 2 inches focus, constructed on principles formulated by himself, which has an aperture of f.2. With it scenes of street illumination at night can be made at the rate of sixteen exposures per second, while upon stopping down, the lens has all the crispness of definition and depth of field of a regulation motion picture camera objective of like focal length.

WHEN we set forth a few weeks ago some of the points to be borne in mind in selecting a motion picture camera, we had not seen the Photo Cines Topical Camera Model 3 which is offered by G. Gennert.

This little instrument fulfills in many ways our ideal of the simple and reliable exhibitors' special event camera and should also be welcomed by those about to take their first steps in cinematography.

A brief description of the Model 3 Photo Cines Topical camera will show that it possesses many of the advantages recommended in our former article. It can be secured in 100-foot capacity at the extremely nominal price of $55, while for $60 it may be had in the 200-foot size, the box and magazines in this case being somewhat enlarged.

At the prices mentioned the optical equipment of this little camera could scarcely be excelled. The lens while not an anastigmat is a 2-inch focus objective with a speed of f.2.9. Such speed ensures sufficient exposure under most any condition of light and when stopped down to the apertures generally in use in clear weather yields crisp negatives showing good depth of focus. In addition to a focussing mount this lens has also a sunshade the use of which we have strongly advocated if high class results are expected.

The intermittent movement of the Photo Cines Model 3 camera is of the claw type which guarantees accurate registration of the images, one sprocket accomplishes both feeding and taking up of the film, and the case is neatly covered with black grain leather.

This camera is deserving of the serious consideration of all exhibitors and others taking an occasional film of topical nature.

LINE OF ACCESSORIES, INCLUDING CAMERAS, PRINTING AND POLISHING MACHINES WILL BE HANDLED BY PENNYPACKER

A NEW line of motion picture producing accessories including cameras, printing and polishing machines and tripods, and later an automatic home projecting machine, are to be put on the market by the Pennypacker Machine Company of Los Angeles. The camera has been given tests to the extent of making ten thousand feet of negative, and it did this without the loss of a single frame of film. This is accomplished by a direct view on the ground glass so that no film is wasted in focusing.

The camera is smaller than any on the market today and contains a vacuum air chamber which keeps the film in the same temperature all the time. A rewind can be made without a shift, and the only time a waste of film is occasioned is when magazines are changed. The direct view device makes it possible to change focus while scene, the net and dissolve is being made. In connection with the tripod, a panorama without a blur can be secured by an intermittent revolving device.

DIXON PLANT, LOS ANGELES, WILL BE OPERATED ON COMMERCIAL BASIS BETWEEN PICTURES

BETWEEN pictures of the National Drama Corporation, which has just finished "The Fall of a Nation" in twelve reels, the plant known as The Dixon Studios and Laboratories, Los Angeles, will be conducted on a purely commercial basis. William C. Thompson, head of the photography department, will be in charge and supervise all laboratory and camera work.

Mr. Thompson is a graduate chemist of Columbia University, a member of the American Chemists Society, and has been engaged in photographic work since 1902. In 1908 he did his first motion picture photography, and has since worked in all departments for such organizations as All Star, Reliance and Metro, also the Canadian Bioscope. He was supervising photographer of the first production of the national Drama Corporation, and this film is said to excel in photographic wonders.

HOWARD O. PIERCE, publicity manager for John H. Kunsky, Inc., Detroit, and former manager of several of the Kunsky theatres, has resigned, and will devote his attentions to the Satin Goldfibre Screens, Inc., of which he is a stockholder, and other theatrical enterprises.

Mr. Pierce will maintain permanent offices at 2030 Penobscot building, Detroit. Mr. Pierce has been editor of the Weekly Film News, the house organ of the Kunsky theatres.

CINEMA CAMERA CLUB REMOVES FROM WHITE RATS BUILDING TO TIMES BUILDING

THE Cinema Camera Club announces the removal of its headquarters on May 1 from the White Rats Building to the Times Building, Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City.

It is the plan of the club to conduct a bureau and furnish expert cameramen to any company who may desire to engage a caapble man. At a recent meeting of the club it was unanimously voted to raise the initiation fee to twenty-five dollars.

FULTON RECEIVES SHIPMENT OF POLAR CUB FIVE-DOLLAR IMPROVED FAN

THE E. E. Fulton Company of Chicago, who are the exclusive motion picture jobbers for the Polar Cub five dollar fan, has just received the shipment of the new improved fan. This fan is equipped with three-point connections, so that it can be run on either alternating or direct current. The mechanism of the new fan is larger than that of last year and better balanced throughout, with the result that it runs more smoothly.

FULTON COMPANY BRINGS OUT CATALOGUE FOR MANUFACTURERS AND EXCHANGES

THE E. E. ALL-STAR MOVIE JUBILEE FOR ACTORS' FUND

AN "All-Star Movie Jubilee," to be given at the Hippodrome in New York, is a new plan of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Arrangements are now well under way, and the date has been set at Sunday, May 21. The proceeds of the big show are to go to the Actors' Fund.

Negotiations are now on with the management of the Hippodrome, and with the largest film producers in the East; it is planned to give part of the regular Hippodrome show, supplemented by personal appearances of a number of the best-known motion picture stars. More detailed announcement is promised for next week.

WORTHINGTON REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS

C. L. WORTHINGTON, district manager for the Fox Film Corporation, Philadelphia, has just returned from a trip of two weeks in Washington, D. C., and two weeks in Pittsburgh, and reports a large increase of business for Fox pictures in that territory. The Philadelphia office, under George Dembow, has obtained new Fox contracts every week for the past seven weeks. Great interest amongst exhibitors is being manifested in the next Theda Bara picture, "The Eternal Sapho." W. J. Madison, a new Fox roadman for the Pennsylvania territory, is very well known all through that region, having been one of the pioneer Quaker City exchangemen before the day of big features.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

Music Classified for Libraries in Picture Playing

Settings of Musical Programs to Pictures or Music Plots Will Be Greatly Simplified by Proper Division of Appropriate Picture Music in Your Library—Programs Can Be Set in Half the Usual Time From This Method

THE setting of musical programs to pictures or music plots will be greatly simplified by the proper division of appropriate picture music in your library. With the proper classification of the music many ideas of setting music to pictures will naturally appeal to you. Your programs can also be set up in half the time.

The method that follows contains forty-five different musical classifications all of which are required at certain times in picture playing. These classifications should be numbered from 1 to 45.

No. 1 should be your marches, for parade or military use. Marches in common or 4/4 time should appear under this head only. No. 2 should contain your 6/8 marches for parade or military use. The reason for separating these marches is found in the fact that you can quite often create a more varied program by using 6/8 marches at certain times and 4/4 at others. No. 3 should contain all your characteristic marches whether they be of humorous nature or foreign country suggestion. No American or Spanish numbers should appear among these as provision for them is made later. No. 4 should contain your intermezzo marches or two-steps. These are very light marches, not very brassy and used more specially in outdoor sport scenes. These marches are more effective when played lively as they should be for the aforementioned scenes. No. 5 should contain all your rags. No. 6 covers your tangos, trots and all modern 2/4 dance numbers other than medley dance numbers. No. 7 should contain all your polkas, quadrilles, lanciers, Virginia Reels and all old-fashioned dance numbers.

No. 8—All gallops. No. 9—Medley 2/4 dance numbers. No. 10—Medley waltz dance numbers. No. 11 should contain all your concert waltzes with slow and impressive introductions, having a romantic, pathetic or heavy dramatic appeal. Such numbers are very valuable in picture playing and you should make a thorough study of the temperamental value of each introduction classified under this number. No. 12 should contain all your concert waltzes having light, frivolous or no introductions of value. Your catalog should always show a temperamental value of the introductions of all these waltzes. No. 13 should contain all your waltzes appropriate for legato or sustained playing. No. 14 should contain all your waltz lentos where minor key or oriental style is predominant. These waltzes should be known as heavy waltzes. Minor keys create plaintive or passionate appeals and are good to follow what are known as heavy characters in the picture cast. No. 15 should contain all your very light ballet waltz movements. Only waltzes having frivolous movements should be classed under this number. No. 16 should contain all your waltz lentos in major key which are appropriate for legato effects and can be played very slow without injury to the composition. No. 17 should contain all sentimental songs or ballads that have value for picture suggestion. No. 18 should contain all your lively song numbers such as are used in cabaret, etc., having a sugestive appeal to picture screen action.

No. 19 Should Contain Light Descriptive Concert Number

No. 19 should contain all your light descriptive concert numbers having no special appeal. These numbers are very essential to break the monotony of a program and care should be taken to have no numbers under this heading either too light and frivolous, nor serious. No. 20 should contain only slow numbers with a semi-serious appeal known as semi-heavy numbers. No. 21 should contain all your slow melodius numbers having a pathetic or romantic appeal. These numbers dare not have any heavy or dramatic phrasing. Numbers with agitato or hurried tempo should not be classed in this number. Numbers in minor keys should also not be classed among the above. No. 22 should contain all your slow numbers of heavy pathetic, romantic or dramatic appeal. Under this number all your serious numbers not appropriate for No. 21 should appear. No. 23 should contain your light 2/4 intermezzos or descriptive numbers other than those known as Western or cowboy intermezzos which are taken care of later. No. 14 should contain all your light 4/4 intermezzo numbers which are usually known as light descriptive intermezzos. No. 25 should contain all your light 2/4 oriental numbers. No. 26 should contain all your heavy or slow oriental numbers used for descriptive playing or dramatic suggestion. No. 27 should contain all your humorous and characteristic descriptive numbers other than marches or numbers having a national or oriental suggestion. No. 28 to contain all your foreign national descriptive numbers other than marches or American characteristic numbers.

No. 29 should contain all your Spanish or Mexican music. Your catalog should classify each number under this heading according to its serious or other temperament. No. 30 should contain all your overtures containing but two movements, namely, a slow movement to open and then an allegro to end. Overtures such as "Semeramide," etc., having a dramatic effect throughout, should also be classified under this number. No. 31 should contain all your other overtures which have continued changes of tempos and can only be appropriately used for concert playing in neutral pictures such as scenic and educational film. No. 32 should contain your large concert numbers other than overtures. Nos. 31 and 32 can be combined if necessary, the same rules governing both. No. 33 should contain all selections having only lively movements for neutral playing accompanying light and meaningless introductory action. Medley selections can also be classified under this heading. No. 34 should contain all selections having slow movements and a semi-romantic appeal throughout. No. 35 should contain all your selections having a heavy and dramatic appeal. Most of your grand Opera selections will come under this heading, such as "Tannhauser," "La Boheme," "La Tosca," etc. No. 36 should contain all selections or potpourries of a characteristic nature such as "Carmen" or foreign folk songs, etc. No. 37 should contain all your American or Southern characteristic numbers. No. 38 should contain all your numbers of positive religious suggestion. No. 39 should contain all your grand marches or pageantry numbers. No. 40 should contain all your numbers characteristic of the American Indian, such as Indian intermezzos or Indian love songs. No. 41 should contain all your Western 2/4 intermezzos suggestive of the Western life of the American cowboy.

Melodramatic Hurries in No. 42

No. 42 should contain all your melodramatic hurries and agitatos. No. 43 should contain your melodramatic mysteriosos or heavy dramatic descriptive suggestion. No. 44 should contain all your melodramatic andante numbers. Make note in your catalog whether the andante is of plaintive (minor key), romantic or pathetic appeal. Always remember that romantic is the least serious, pathetic the more serious and the plaintive the most serious appeal. No. 45 should contain all your melodramatic numbers containing on one sheet more than one of either No. 42, 43 or 44.

You will have no difficulty with the above classification to find the proper place for each and every number that you may have or get in the future. There are a great many numbers published which have no positive picture value. Consequently you should not classify a number until you have put it to the proper test. If after such test you cannot determine the true value of the number, classify it under No. 31 or 32 in which numbers you will usually look for concerted numbers suited only for playing to neutral pictures.

By neutral in music we mean numbers that have no positive temperamental appeal. By neutral in pictures we mean pictures or portions of pictures which have no positive appeal to the human temperament.

I shall be very glad to further explain this classification as a whole or in part to any of my readers through these columns upon request.

ORGAN PIPES FOR THEATRE DECORATION SATISFY PUBLIC TRADITION THAT THE MUSIC COMES FROM THE PIPES

"IN churches and cathedrals you have seen serried rows of organ pipes, graduated in size, and naturally you have supposed that the music was emanating from them," says Jerome B. Meyer, metal organ pipe manufacturer, Milwaukee. "As a matter of fact, the rich tones of the organ were being formulated in far less imposing-looking pipes, tucked out of sight somewhere in the rear. These elaborate, soundless pipes have become ineradicably identified in the public mind with expensive, high-grade organs. If you try to persuade the ordinary man that the modern self-playing or one-man orchestra and pipe organs have the tonal qualities and volume of a church organ, he will notice the absence of the big pipes, and remain unconvinced.

"Realizing that the prejudice against the compact, unadorned theatre pipe-organ is entirely psychological, the manufacturers of these instruments are now recommending that decorative pipes be used in conjunction with them. These show-pipes not only satisfy the audience that your musical equipment is the finest possible, but they also make most artistic decorations.

"If these pipes are not made just as carefully and substantially as the ones installed in churches, the impression of elaborateness you are trying to create will be destroyed. To be really effective, these pipes should be made out of durable sheet metal, formed on mandrels, and finished like a regular pipe-organ Speaking Pipe. When finished in a rich gold bronze, and lacquered so as to retain

SUBSCRIBER OFFERS HINTS TO PUBLISHERS OF MUSIC FOR PICTURE PLAYERS

THE following letter explains itself. The suggestions offered by the writer should be of value to the producers of film as well as exhibitors. Music publishers should also take note of what the writer feels is their duty toward the motion picture musician:

EDITOR, MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

DEAR SIR:—Regarding the editor's note following Mr. Licome's article on "The Proper Standard for Musical Accompaniment to Films" in the March 11 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, I am glad you doubt the success of compelling the use of set music for films. things as an acid? (1) Review of picture incidents from musician's standpoint. (2) Suggestion of musical numbers as a foundation for a subject to be reverted to several times, to form the correct atmosphere. There might be several suggestions—one to the orchestra, two grades to the organist. (3) Suggestion of several numbers for special events in films. (4) Suggestion for "fill in" music, soft and dimly outlined but characteristic, as a means of setting forth special numbers.

The publishers could aid by getting up carefully selected libraries of music that is appropriate, conveniently classified and arranged. I have often wondered why exhibitors do not place the console of the organ in the rear of the theatre, so the organist can catch the spirit of the scene and also save his eyes, because pictures are grotesque at close range.

Organists in houses where the pictures are changed daily and where there is no chance to see the film before the regular performance certainly need some sort of help of this kind. So please consider this an S. O. S. call.

Very truly yours,
JULIA P. GOSS.

Notes:—The church bell imitaion called for in 3 and 10 should be made without music. This imitation is called for later in the picture and should be closely followed. During Nos. 33, 34 and 35 pistol shots are very important. Other hurried and struggle effects are also called for. Nos. 1, 5, 7, 17, 20, 25 and 31 are all slow numbers having a pathetic or heavy romantic appeal. No. 2 is a short legato waltz. No. 6 and 8 must be church numbers of choral style or organ alone. No. 9 should be a slow number of semi-religious suggestion. No. 11 and 13 should be numbers of positive gypsy suggestion.

Nos. 14 and 29 must be slow heavy numbers of dramatic appeal. Numbers with minor key predominant and played legato are the better. Nos. 15, 18 and 26 should be slow waltzes played lento and very legato. No. 28 should be a concert waltz with a slow romantic introduction. No. 37 can be well covered with the song "Rock of Ages" or "Abide with Me." Nos. 2, 3, 4, 12, 16, 19, 22, 23, 24, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36 are all short melodramatic numbers as suggested in the plot.

While the organ cannot be appropriately used throughout the entire picture it is nevertheless highly necessary to the better presentation of this feature.

While the plot might make this picture seem difficult to play, nevertheless when the proper music is used it will not be found very difficult but rather interesting. The picture is very good and deserves your best efforts.

THE LIBERTY, OKLAHOMA CITY'S NEW $125,000 HOUSE, IS HAVING GRATIFYING SUCCESS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Oklahoma City, April 29.

THE Liberty, Oklahoma City's new $125,000 motion picture theatre and one of the finest photoplay houses of the entire southwest, is having gratifying success. Prof. Giovanna Arcella, formerly leader of the Symphony Orchestra of New York City and violin soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, is director of music.

The theatre was erected and is conducted by the Oklahoma Amusement Company, of which W. M. Robinson is president; H. W. McCall, secretary and general manager; Allen Street, treasurer, and C. W. Finney, a New York theatre man, assistant manager. Dr. J. G. Street, city commissioner of public property, is a prominent stockholder and director in the corporation.

A plot of ground 55 by 175 feet is occupied by the theatre, and it is built of terra cotta and concrete. It was designed by Architect Leonard H. Bailey of this city and is fireproof throughout. There are three front entrances, above which is a large glass panel to be used as an illuminated program sign. This is both original and unique in the manner it meets the problem of theatre advertising and making the sign a part of the architectural composition of the building. Interchangeable ruby letters on glass panels are inserted in the whole. Blue and white are used in outside decorations.

The lobby has a floor of vitreous ceramic tile with marble base and marble stairways leading to the mezzanine floor. The foyer is equipped with drinking fountains, with women's rest rooms, children's nursery, toilets and manager's offices adjoining. The foyer is hidden from the auditorium by an elaborate loggia screen.

The arrangement of the theatre itself is such that every one of the 1,5000 seats has a perfect "sight-line" on the stage and there is not a pillar or post in the entire auditorium or balcony. The lighting effects are unique, a self-diffusing system making it possible to throw the entire house or any part into sunlight, moonlight, dawn or shadow in keeping with the requirements of the occasion and stage settings. The theatre is arranged like a huge megaphone, the stage occupying the mouthpiece.

Exhaust and huge electric fans provide thorough ventilation, the air being forced through heating chambers in the winter and ice chambers in the summer.

There are six concrete stairways leading from the balcony and eight emergency exits from the balcony to alleys on either side, which with the three front entrances give a total of seventeen exits if needed.

The theatre uses two Baird projection machines and a gold mirror screen has been installed.

Oklahoma City now has eight standard motion picture theatres, the Liberty, Empress, Lyric, Folly, Strand, Metropolitan, Dreamland and Majestic.

EMPRESS, DENVER, OPENS DOORS ON EASTER, AFTER EXTENSIVE REMODELING

THE Empress theatre of Denver opened its doors on Easter in a brand new Easter suit, after being completely remodeled at a cost of $25,000. For months decorators, painters, carpenters, and upholsterers have been at work remodeling the old Empress theatre of Denver, tearing down here, building up there, beautifying and cleaning until the famous theatre shines with a new glory inside and out.

The two little stores that formerly cramped the street entrance have been torn out, and now there is room for the good natured crowds to "mob" the box office without having to crush one another. Paint and the arts of the decorator, and the electrician have transformed the street appearance of the theatre, while inside the house is one of the most beautiful in the state. The indirect system of lighting has been installed, and at night there is a pleasant soft glow within the theatre that brings out the green, old rose and ivory color of the decorations.

The Empress has a seating capacity of 1,650. The seats have been covered with linen slips to protect the dresses and waists of the women patrons from dirt and dust. These slips are changed twice weekly. A modern ventilating plant similar to the one in operation in the Strand theatre, New York, has been installed to carry the fresh air into the house, and remove the vitiated atmosphere.

The Empress is a vaudeville and motion picture house combined, showing a feature, a comedy and six acts of vaudeville. Manager Danny McCoy of the Empress was forced to hang out the S. R. O. sign each performance of Easter Sunday, but this is only a common occurrence at the Empress.

NEW $35,000 PICTURE THEATRE OF ARTISTIC DESIGN OPENED IN LOUISVILLE

THE Aristo theatre at Second and A streets, Louisville, Ky., a new $35,000 motion picture house, was formally opened to the public April 24. The initial attraction was "The Gentleman from Indiana." The Aristo is one of the handsomest motion picture houses in Louisville and is the "last word" in regard to architecture, lighting, ventilation, comfort, and safety.

The building is of brick construction. The front is of cream enameled brick with stone trimmings and the lobby brown tiling. The site fronts eighty feet on Second street and the house itself occupies seventy feet front. The theatre being in a fashionable residential section, the management has departed from the usual plan of having the entrance touch the sidewalk. It is set back from the street with two stone steps leading from the sidewalk to a concrete plaza. On either side of this is a grass plat with a flower bed in the center.

A feature of the building is its facilities for excellent ventilation. This point is being emphasized by the management. In addition to the modern ventilating devices, the auditorium has fourteen windows which will be thrown open every morning to admit sunshine and fresh air. Besides being fireproof, the theatre has, as additional protection for patrons, six exits—more than the law requires. The building was planned by Joseph & Joseph, architects. Admission is ten cents. There will be a change of program daily. Prof. Pappalardo, violinist, is in charge of the orchestra.

The principal stockholders are R. W. Bingham, A. H. Mann, J. J. Douglas, George K. Dehler, Max L. Simons and the estate of the late Aaron Kohn. The management advertises that only high grade pictures will be shown, the principal lines being the Paramount, Metro, Blue Bird and V-L-S-E.

MONITOR FILM COMPANY ENTERS FIELD TO PRODUCE COMEDIES AND FIVE-REEL DRAMAS

THE Monitor Film Manufacturing Company, with offices in Washington, D. C., and New York, has entered the field to produce five-reel features, and one and two-part comedy pictures. Frank P. Donovan is general production manager.

Mr. Donovan, who is known as the producer of the Fad Comedies, Manhattan Features and Harvard Comedies, intends to make about ten features a year, starring popular film players. To date Devore Palmer, Vera Franklin, George Ross, Billy Sadler and Florence Wright have been engaged. Charles A. Hutchinson, formerly with World Film and Popular Plays and Players, will be producing director, with Palmer as his co-director.

PRIMA DONNA SUGGESTS SUITABLE MUSIC FOR SCREEN SCORES

"MUSIC is a prime necessity for the future success of moving pictures."

Frieda Hempel, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera House, made this comment in a recent interview, when she was told the Paramount Pictures Corporation would hereafter send out complete scores with every play on its program, the proper musical selection being supplied for each scene appearing upon the screen. Fraulein Hempel's views on the proper musical accompaniments for the film drama are being sent broadcast over the country.

"By the proper adaptation of music the photoplay house will be raised to a much higher artistic plane," the prima donna declared positvely when it was explained to her that Paramount had taken one of the important steps in the history of the motion picture industry by arranging with Schirmer, the music publisher, to prepare scores for each film released on its program, made up of selections from all of the great composers, and absolutely matching the moods portrayed on the screen.

"It seems to me," she continued, "that in Wagner's music there is everything adaptable to any drama ever conceived. I would like to suggest to motion picture producers that there was no greater love theme ever written in music than the love motif of 'Tristan and Isolde.'

"Take Bach's music for instance. I can imagine nothing so suitable for a scene in a Pullman sleeping car than some of his fugues. The music of the 'Barber of Seville' would be excellent for thrilling situations. There must be substance and thought to the music selected for a big dramatic story, not only tunefulness and emotion.

"I was particularly impressed by the fact that in the production of 'Diplomacy' I enjoyed the poetic feeling of the play because of the ideal music selected, which I had not felt when I saw the play produced abroad. You see, music will always idealize, and that is something we can never get too much of. As I watched the progress of the play, with its many opportunities for improvement over the mere theatrical production on the stage, I couldn't help wondering what the great Sardou would have thought of it himself. Sardou, by the way, would have made a wonderful scenario writer for moving pictures, wouldn't he?

"It seems to me that there must be a great opening in this country for the large number of students to help out with their musical education by playing in these motion picture houses in the evenings. And, with carefully chosen scores, like Paramount's, how charming—what an appeal to people who like pictures, as well as music—it would be!"

CRANDALL ADDS THE SAVOY TO HIS THEATRES IN NATIONAL CAPITOL

HARRY CRANDALL has added another link to his theatre chain in Washington, D. C. Instead of causing further competition in the Mount Pleasant section by adding another theatre, as originally proposed, Crandall has just consummated a deal whereby he becomes the owner of the Savoy theatre and park, possession taking place at once. It is stated that the figures in the transaction reached $75,000.

With the Savoy in his possession, Mr. Crandall has now a large picture theatre located in each important section of the National Capital. The Apollo and park are in the northeast section; the Avenue Grand is in the southeast; the Savoy in the northwest, and Crandall's Joy in the downtown section.

The present theatre has a seating capacity of 800, and the park has 2,000, but it is Mr. Crandall's intention to enlarge the house and make other improvements consistent with his up-to-date ideas.

Already a five-piece orchestra has been installed, culled from the United States Marine band. First run features in the neighborhood will be the rule. J. P. Morgan, formerly proprietor and manager of the Princess, will be the manager of the new Savoy.

With the taking on of the two additional theatres in the past month, Mr. Crandall has found it necessary to seek an assistant as treasurer. This place is being filled by George Crough, who has been associated with Mr. Crandall since the opening of the Joy theatre.

March 1, 1916.

The Berger Mfg. Co.,
Canton, Ohio

Gentlemen:-

We are more than pleased with the effective manner in which you installed additional Berger's "Classik" Steel Ceilings in our recently enlarged theatre.

These ceilings stand out in bold, sharp, relief, and present an unusually attractive appearance Aside from their beauty, we appreciate the fact that they offer utmost safety for our audiences.

It is our frank opinion, considering them from every standpoint, that Berger's "Classik" Steel Ceilings are especially ideal for theatres, and we can heartily recommend them to our fraternity brethren.

Warning!

We coined the phrase

Perfect Developing and Printing

And when associated with our name it represents the supreme degree of film quality.

Imitators have counterfeited our coin, but remember there is only one home of Perfect Developing and Printing—the original—and we own, occupy and operate that home in its entirety.

Any parrot can memorize phrases.

Sometimes piracy unwittingly is committed where one confuses memory with thought. Plagiarists skirt the limits of business ethics by lifting bodily and using boldly, studied statements built to identify a particular institution.

There's a difference between the unwitting and the witless, but each is a menace to honest advertising.

Your safety first demands that you investigate our claims and compare the result with what you find—or fail to find—back of the claims of those who imitate our expressions.

It is your business duty to determine the difference between sound and noise.

To interest in his theatre a constantly increasing proportion of the available population is a necessity for the exhibitor who not only wants to make money now but wants to keep on making money. The theatre having the right to display the Paramount Trademark is constantly and consistently increasing its profits and, incidentally, widening the circle from which it draws patronage.

THANKS, MR. BARRETT; THE SENTIMENTS AND MULTITUDE OF YOUR

Chicago, Ill., April 21, 1916.

Without any solicitation from your office and purely from a business standpoint I cheerfully express my opinion of the merits of the Serial "IRON CLAW". In the heart of Chicago, we cater to transient trade only, very few regulars, until the screening of the above named serial. With "THE IRON CLAW" the business assumed abnormal proportions and the fact that the production has been extended to (20) chapters fails to hurt the feelings of the management. We are glad from a box office point of view and our patrons' expressions in favor of the continuance of the "IRON CLAW", to voice our opinion in writing.

Very respectfully yours,

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S BURLESQUE ON "CARMEN"

An Essanay-Chaplin Comedy In Four Parts

from the Germantown, Philadelphia, "Independent-Gazette"

POLICE FAIL TO CHECK CHAPLIN CROWDS

Squad From Station House Swept Aside by Enthusiastic "Movie" Fans

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY

Curiosity to see Charley Chaplin in his latest Essanay scream, "Carmen," caused such a jam at the Orpheum Theatre, on Monday evening, that Manager Lord was compelled to phone to the police station for a squadron of "cops" to hold the crowd in check.

Although the doors were opened early, the house was quickly filled and a waiting line established. This line grew in numbers every minute, so that in a short time there was a small sized army, packed together like sheep, waiting for the second show. They stood there for nearly two hours, blocking the sidewalk and complaining because the theatre was not big enough

When the first show was over people nearly pushed the doors down in their frantic efforts to get a seat. Attendants were swept aside. So were the police. The second house, both upstairs and downstairs, was soon filled and the show started over again.

Manager Lord says it was the biggest day's business ever done at the theatre. Hundreds, he said, were turned away.

During the three days Mr. Lord says, over 12,000 people saw "Carmen" at the Orpheum Theatre.

SUPERLATIVE PICTURES

Neither competition, hot weather nor other adverse factors have any terror for V. L. S. E. exhibitors.

They occupy a commanding position. They have stepped above any conditions which hamper progress.

Big Four productions have been their stepping stones.

The advantage which these exhibitors enjoy will be even more manifest during the next few months.

At their call will be a line-up of truly extraordinary offerings, destined to crush lobbies as they have never been before.

These include:

"Sherlock Holmes"
With William Gillette--in Seven Parts

"The Combat"
Ralph Ince's Super Picture--in Nine Parts

"The Crisis"
Another "Spoilers" with the Same Cast

"The Iron Trail"
A Rex Beach Master Play.

Chaplin's Burlesque on "Carmen"
The Comedy which is Shattering all Box Office History.

"God's Country and the Woman"
A Play which will Re-play Everywhere--in Eight Parts

"The Barrier"
Another Rex Beach Offering of Super Merit

"The Ne'er-Do-Well"
A Success so Big that it Dwarfs any Comment

These are "Special" Features principally, in the sense that they offer extra stimulus to a service which in its general high average has never been surpassed in the moving picture field.

They are offered on the same equitable basis that all Big Four productions are booked; i. e., on their box office value.

Will you be one to share in the added profit which these pictures are certain to insure.

If so, it would be well to place yourself in the position where you will not only have first call on them, but where the prestige gained from Big Four's general releases, will aid you in making the most of these special offerings.

Gentlemen:

I have never had as many people in my house as I had with your last picture, and that is saying a whole lot. The feature was perfect and if there was a better picture ever made, I have never heard of it.

Not only this picture but every picture that I have used of yours has been far in the lead. I have never had a bad one.

If you wish to use this letter, you may, and anyone that doubts what I have said above, can use these pictures, and if I am not right, I will pay his film bill.

If I were to try to tell you all that I know about your features, it would take as much time to write it as it did the Holy Bible. A man who has used one of your features and never uses another one, has something very wrong with him.

If at any time I can help you, please let me know.

With best wishes, and all the luck in the film game, as I know you can deliver the goods.

Yours very truly,

J T. Hatch

The World.

"God's Country and the Woman," a feature film adapted from James Oliver Curwood's novel, was seen last night. The feature was an interesting story of primitive emotions in the far North, better in quality than the average film of its kind.

The Journal of Commerce AND COMMERCIAL BULLETIN

"God's Country and the Woman" a drama of the North West is from the story by James Oliver Curwood. There have been many pictures shown of life in the wilds of the North West but none that exceed this in interest and artistic treatment. The photography is splendid, and each and every member of the cast is a finished player. The result is one of the best pictures that the Vitagraph Company ever has produced and shown.

The Evening Telegram

Superb pictures of hunting and camping in the Canadian wilds, stirring views of dog teams in action and a thrilling melodramatic story make "God's Country and the Woman" in the Fulton Theatre a record breaking motion picture play.

The Morning Telegraph

"God's Country and the Woman" is a production of which the Vitagraph can well be proud, for it embodies qualities of excellence to a degree not always found in the productions that are being set forth these days.

The Sun.

"God's Country and the Woman" is a stirring drama of the western plains, which proves equally as interesting as its predecessor which was Edna May in "Salvation Joan."

The New York Press

Realism feature of "God's Country." The "atmosphere" and local color of the Northland has been worked to a degree unusual even in this day of feature films, so realistic that nature herself feels pale beside them.

THE NEW YORK HERALD.

The play is based on James Oliver Curwood's story of the North West and its stirring scenes were well portrayed by one of the Vitagraph's western companies.

The Evening Sun.

"God's Country," as placed in the new photoplay, "God's Country and the Woman" at the Fulton Theatre, is a land of deep winter and wonderful snow scapes. The drama has no equal on the screen. The acting is of the best and as a whole the picture will be one of the memorial Vitagraphs.

The Globe and Commercial Advertiser.

A gripping story of primitive emotions of the far North is told in "God's Country and the Woman," a Vitagraph feature film adapted from James Oliver Curwood's novel of the same name. The interest of the audience is held throughout by the enormous dramatic situations which the play contains.

THE EVENING MAIL

Exhibitors will receive a startling but pleasant surprise when they see on the regular V-L-S-E program this massive eight part feature. The writer believes that it is too good for regular program distribution. HE BELIEVES THAT IF THE PROPER MUSICAL SETTINGS WERE GIVEN IT, AND A LARGE ORCHESTRA WAS SUPPLIED, THE PICTURE COULD HAVE A LONG RUN AT $2 PRICES IN A BROADWAY THEATRE. THEATRES HAVE BEEN RENTED ON SLIGHTER PRETEXTS. It is one of the very few stories which are full enough of the right sort of material to make long films, and as directed and acted it is gripping from start to finish. In the final climax, which had been so well prepared for and which was handled in such an uncandidly EFFECTIVE WAY THE SPECTATORS WERE READY TO RISE UP AND CHEER.

SUCH MARVELOUS EXTERIORS AND SNOW SCENES AS ARE IN THIS FILM HAVE NEVER BEFORE BEEN SEEN IN A PICTURE. The film is worth while for them alone.

"Lip-Service"

Mrs. Johnson returns from the film matinee. "How was the fillum? not appealing," says she.

And so all the family remains close at home for, asking for bread they were handed a stone!

Word-of-mouth Ads always carry the punch —yes, it's the lip-service that brings in the bunch!

And so it is wise to book pictureplays that are favorably mentioned in various ways—

So Susie, or Margaret, or Willie, or Jim will advise the home folks to take the show in.

And Select Selig Service to see, they're advising—which is purely and simply word-of-mouth advertising!

They'll tell the home folks to go and see "The Test of Chivalry" with Fritzi Brunette, and "A Five Thousand Dollar Elopement," with Tom Mix, both General Film Releases.

Keep Your Ear to the Rail!

Remember when you were a small boy how you put your ear to the rail and listened for the oncoming train?

You heard the rail click when the train was miles away, long before others knew it was coming.

This is the busy age when conciseness, clearness and terseness are demanded in every line.

If your ear has been on the rail you will have heard the call of the public for Essanay's short classics, its one, two and three reel subjects. They are concise, clear, terse, with action in every foot.

Don't fail to have them on your program. It spells filled houses.

Dorothy Gish in "Susan Rocks the Boat"

May 14th is the week for the release of the TRIANGLE-Fine Arts Picture, "Susan Rocks the Boat," the latest picture in which Dorothy Gish appears. This popular star, who has been seen in such TRIANGLE Successes as "Betty of Greystone" and "Little Meena's Romance," has an indefinable charm about her that goes straight to the hearts of the most disinterested patrons.

In "Susan Rocks the Boat" she isn't satisfied just to stay home and enjoy life—to be of no benefit to the world at large. She wants to do things, to turn bad into good—to be an important figure in the community.

So dainty Dorothy set out to open a settlement house, reform a saloon keeper, and make bad boys drink ice cream sodas instead of whiskey.

Dorothy Gish

Owen Moore Wins the Fight

Just because she was sweet and innocent the big burly saloon keeper thought he could take advantage of her, but he failed to take Owen Moore into consideration.

It was a real fight to a finish with fists, chairs and other things—one of those swift moving affairs that make your audience sit up straight in a hurry. Out went the light and in an instant he had escaped with her in his arms.

She Longed to Reform the World

When your patrons see this play they'll find themselves asking the question, "Suppose I were a pretty young girl surrounded with wealth and luxury, would I spend my time in idleness and pleasure?" Dorothy Gish tried to settle the question for herself in this latest TRIANGLE PLAY. She tried to correct the social evils of the world, and narrowly escaped ruining her life.

Bessie Barriscale in "Not My Sister"

This is the title of the TRIANGLE-Ince Picture for the same week. Should a wife happily married confess to a husband a misstep made in her youth? Should she risk her happiness in this way? That's the question to be decided from this picture, and when the play is over there's not a patron but will agree with the course Bessie Barriscale adopted.

If you are an exhibitor and are not running TRIANGLE PLAYS send us in the attached and we will send you information in regard to their presentation in your theatre.

The lily springs up from the murky tarn, pure as chastened silver.

The Little Shepherd rose from the muck of the foul tenements as untainted as the lily of the mire.

As the lily radiated beauty and sweetness on the tainted swamp air, She spread love and sunshine amid the dank drafts reeking from the dens of vice.

It is the story of a girl's brave fight from the depths of poverty and vice to the heights of purity and success.

The Two Shows and Chicago

IT is too early to draw deductions at all conclusive from the two expositions, the second of which is now fully under headway.

But some important facts have already come to the surface.

One is that the recent muddle is clarified.

ON Tuesday evening a remarkable turn-out of exhibitors from Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx and New Jersey planned to march from the New York headquarters with bands playing to and into the Board of Trade show and Madison Square Garden.

A very fine spirit and a very fine deed,—one that was highly appreciated, and one that reflects much credit upon every man who marched.

Best of all is the spirit in which the proposition was met. There was not an exhibitor but who said spontaneously: "Fine! Count me in. It's a good idea. I'm for harmony."

THE Palace show was a financial success. A large business was done the last four nights and as a result of good and economical management a substantial profit was cleared, which will go into the treasurers of the national, state and local leagues.

The Madison Square Garden show looks big. It will undoubtedly draw heavily from the public. It is greatly to be hoped that the exhibitors' patronage will be larger than that of the Palace show and indeed of all previous New York expositions. But at any rate, the Garden show ought also to put a goodly sum into the organization fund of the M. P. E. L. of America.

WHICH brings us to a consideration of the League and its outlook for 1916.

The situation is most hopeful.

For the first time in its existence, the League will face its National Convention at Chicago with a treasury solidly foundationed, if not opulent. It will be in a position not to have to invite new members in for the sake of their dues, but to ask most any exhibitor if he can afford to stay outside of and unaided by the constructive work the League proposes to inaugurate at Chicago.

Constructive policies are in the air.

You do not have to interview many leaders here in the East to know that some very practical plans are stewing that have to do with such important problems as exhibitors' competition, advance payments, censorship and the like.

AGAIN, in point of membership, the League is better off now than it ever was. This is a fact. We may disagree in some ways with President Fred J. Herrington but of this we are sure, that he has done for organization this year what few others would or could have done.

He faced an organization, after his election in San Francisco last year, which was worse than nothing. He could more easily, in all probability, have built up a brand new league. But with only apathy to work upon he has extended the national organization to a point which only the convention at Chicago will clearly disclose, and we have every faith that this convention will prove by all odds the strongest exhibitor convention thus far held in this country.

THIRDLY, and of more importance than finances, and membership, is the exhibitor spirit which is manifesting itself this year.

It has found its expression here in New York in the open hand extended to the Board of Trade show—a spirit of bigness and broadness which are, as they have always been, the surest evidence of successful organization, progress and future strength.

It has found its expression in Cincinnati, and many other cities, where the exhibitors have joined the local Chambers of Commerce and are working hand in hand with other leading business men for the betterment of their city—and right here in our Palace show, where a portion of each day's receipts, in the shape of a good sized check, were donated to a city hospital for crippled children, to the Red Cross Society and other worthy charities.

IF the picture theatre was once regarded as a sort of sideshow, a transient and unrelated part of civic life, certainly that situation does not prevail today.

Exhibitors are looking upon their houses for what they really are, not only in a physical way an institution of admirable appearance, but more importantly, an established civic centre of education and entertainment, a very vital, central factor in local life, culture and progress.

Exhibitors, through their leaders, committees and organizations, are conferring today with high city officials, not only over their own problems but about city problems. This is real progress.

ORGANIZATION, and on a higher order than ever before planned, is in the air. We look to Chicago to see its realization.

We look for a convention that will do things, that will leave behind it and in force constructive policies, that will make exhibitor organization history.

And we don't believe that any exhibitor, any exhibitor who counts himself an established factor in this industry and in his own town, will miss, if he can possibly help it, the Chicago national convention—July 11-16."

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

An Unanswerable Indictment

ONE of the most sensible and penetrating newspaper editorials recently published is one that we reprint here from the Pittsburgh Post, entitled "Film Censorship Discredited." It is an unanswerable indictment of censorship for faults that cannot be separated from it.

It is a pleasure, in passing, to call attention to the excellent work the Pittsburgh Post has been doing in educating and enlightening the public with regard to the dangers and injustices of censorship.

In gratefully acknowledging their activity in this regard, MOTION PICTURE NEWS is confident that it speaks on behalf of the motion picture industry in general, and every exhibitor and exchange man in and around Pittsburgh in particular.

Intelligent co-operation with the public press by the film men in any section of the country will, we are confident, produce just as gratifying results as in this instance. It has been done in several other instances. We trust that the good work will continue.

THIS is the editorial:

FILM CENSORSHIP DISCREDITED

"Pennsylvania's board of moving picture censors cannot serve any public good by ruling with prejudice. It is shown that the censors reject things which due conception of the properties would retain. A scene that did not conform to their notion of what is fit for young eyes to see represented a wife sewing baby clothes and holding them up for her intoxicated husband to see. The censors also ordered the elimination of views showing a drunkard sprawling in a haymow, and other incidents, though all designed rightfully to fill onlookers with disgust for drunkenness.

"THIS is the defect of censorship, the chance that it offers unreasonable inclination and possibly malicious purpose to override another's rights. For that reason a censored press is intolerable. It is impressing itself on public thought that the motion picture censorship is assailing the fundamental right of free expression.

"REPEATEDLY the courts have upheld film views which censors had ordered cut out. When pictures condemned by the censors were shown in the New York common pleas court, the judges were at a loss to understand the motive that impelled rejection. They dwelt forcefully on the arbitrary suppression of entire films when objection could be justly raised against only some parts.

"TO illustrate, a film which the censor pronounced entirely unfit told about a husband killing his unfaithful wife and plotting revenge on her admirer. All that the court deemed it advisable to exclude were scenes showing a girl chloroformed and the jamming of a butler into a closet, as not exactly in keeping with right judgment.

"In another condemned film the court found no justification for the sweeping elimination. It is seen how far the censors exceeded their authority in the view of these judges when it is recalled that the one episode which the court directed to be excluded was the sight of a squirming villain with his hand crushed in a vise.

"AS for the proposed Federal censorship of moving pictures, like State censorship, it involves an assault on the constitutional guarantee of the liberty of expression, to be resisted by all who believe in free speech. Let the moving picture have the right of the free press, the free platform and the free stage, uncensored by anybody, but answerable to the laws which prohibit impropriety.

"Police supervision of show places can proceed against an immoral screen as it does against an immoral exhibition on the stage."

Footage and Merit

THE increasing number of features more than five reels in length directs attention once more to a fundamental principle, which is: that length is no criterion of merit; neither is it an earmark of inferiority. The most successful motion picture ever made—successful financially and successful artistically—is twelve thousand feet or more. On the other hand, there are in existence one reelers which surpass many of the five reelers being made today.

The whole question reduces itself to this: very few directors have any business venturing over the five reel limit. Some of them ought to be kept under that. They haven't the imagination or the ability to make multiple reel photoplays. The few directors who have the ability and the imagination do not exhaust themselves in pictures of ten thousand feet or more. Whether a picture is ten thousand or one thousand feet the public will pay to see it if it has real merit.

Attendance at Palace Touches High-Water Mark

Third International Exposition, Held Under Auspices of the New York Branch, Brings Out Big Crowds—Manufacturers of Accessories and Supplies Find the Week a Profitable One—Many Out-of-Town Exhibitors Present—Novel Booth Displays Attract Attention

AFTER a busy six days, the third International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art, held by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, at Grand Central Palace, New York, was closed Saturday night, May 6. Throughout the week the exposition was marked by unusual interest not only on the part of the picture industry, but also by the general public, which thronged the Palace afternoon and evening.

No estimate of the attendance had been prepared by the league up to the time of going to press, but it is known that the crowds which surged around the exhibition booths broke all records. Manufacturers of accessories and supplies, and film producers also report that the week was a profitable one for them, one producer reporting that more than $15,000 worth of business had been booked at his booth during the week.

Exhibitors from all parts of the country attended. From Buffalo, Philadelphia and other cities in the eastern section, special trains were run to New York, bringing delegations of exhibitors from those cities, and picking up others on the way.

The presence of the unusual number of out-of-town exhibitors was also reflected in the offices of the various producers and exchanges, and hundreds of theatre owners took advantage of the trip to New York to arrange new bookings. A considerable amount of new business transacted outside the Palace is directly traceable to the exposition.

An elaborate advertising campaign has prepared the public for the event for days before the opening. Many of the firms prepared elaborate souvenirs and special advertising, and visitors to the Palace at every session departed with their arms full of gifts and literature.

The exposition went on record strongly against the Wheeler censorship bill, now before Governor Whitman for signature. Thousands signed the protest against the measure, which will be laid before the Governor this week.

The executive committee of the Exhibitor's League, in charge of the exposition, consisted of Lee A. Ochs, Louis Blumenthal, Benjamin Lyons, I. Hartstall, Samuel Trigger, William Hilkemeier, Gus Koenigwald, Charles Haring, Otto Lederer, Charles Steiner, Max S. Oestreicher, John J. Wittman, Henry Cole, John Bolte, Abe Coleman, Frank Peters, D. Newman, H. Newman, Sam Suchman, J. J. Haggerty, A. Bauernfreund, D. Picker, N. Goldman, William Brandt, Ben Tittle, Louis Lavine, John Manheimer, Sam Lesselbaum, Julian Loeb, William Hollender, J. C. Mooney, R. Israels, J. Foster, C. Schwartz and M. Glymm.

Crowds Surge Around Bushman

The excitement on the part of the visitors culminated Thursday night, when Francis X. Bushman appeared in the Metro booth. The word went around the big room immediately, and the crowds poured toward the Metro exhibit. Special guards were summoned, but the eagerness of the crowd to get within sight and hand-clasp of their idol, would not be stayed; the railing around the booth was broken down, and scores trampled over the ruins to grasp Bushman's hand.

The representation of all branches of the film industry was practically complete. From slides and projection machines, to a continuous motion picture show in an improvised theatre in a corner of the palace, the several phases of making and marketing a motion picture film were spread before the public. This included a fully equipped and lighted stage, on which scenes from an amateur scenario were staged by real directors, with real cameramen at the cranks of real cameras, in full view of the crowd. This exhibit, perhaps, attracted more general attention from the visitors than any other.

The exposition was formally opened at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon May 1. B. A. Rolfe, of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., the art director of the show, made a short speech of welcome, and the third annual exposition was pronounced in full swing. Two bands and an orchestra, posted at the west end of the main floor, struck up alternately, and for the balance of the week the Palace was filled with music.

No detailed program was prepared for the week; the attractiveness of the booths and the general interest of the subject was depended upon to hold the attention of the public, and as special features, some of the most prominent photoplay stars appeared from time to time in the booths of their respective companies, where they held impromptu receptions, and autographed their photos for the clamoring crowds of admirers.

Part of Receipts Turned Over to Charity

Monday, the opening day, was officially termed Allies' Day; Tuesday, Jewish Relief Day; Wednesday, German Red Cross Day; Thursday, Crippled and Orphaned Children's Day, and Saturday, Actors' Fund Day. Part of the receipts for each of these days was turned over to the various charities mentioned. Friday was California Day and Frolic Night, and on this evening, when an unusually large number of screen stars appeared, the attendance reached its high water mark.

Manufacturers of accessories, film producers and others who took exhibition space, all report a gratifying interest on the part of the public. Lee S. Ochs and Samuel Trigger, of the New York State branch of the exhibitors' league, were on hand constantly, and it is largely due to their energy and initiative that the show went forward with so much snap. The hearty co-operation of the Board of Trade and of the individual producers also had much to do with making the show a success.

Metro had perhaps the largest exhibit. The Metro space occupied the greater part of the south side of the main room. It was decorated in imitation of the reception room of the palace built by Louis XIV at Versailles with furniture of this period, handsome rugs and draperies. The walls were covered with life-size oil painting of the Metro stars, including Francis X. Bushman, Ethel Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Valli Valli, Beverly Bayne and Marguerite Snow, while paintings of Mme. Petrova and others were displayed on easels.

Across the aisle Vitagraph had an elaborate chain of booths, in which numerous Vitagraph stars appeared personally every evening. In one of these booths Vitagraph comedies were shown continually on a miniature daylight screen.

The Fox booth was also unusually artistic. It was arranged as a grotto, cozily furnished inside with seats arranged in a semicircle, and in these were groups of Fox stars who dropped in from time to time.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES BOOTH

Irrepressible Harry on the Job

The World Film Corporation's booth was buried in a profusion of flowers of many kinds, and here literature descriptive of the "Brady-made" pictures was handed out to the crowds, under the supervision of Harry Reichenbach. Facing this was the Paramount booth, where another galaxy of stars was on exhibition.

The feature of the Pathé exhibit was a set of wax figures, representing Pearl White, Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis, the leading figures in "The Iron Claw" serial.

Triangle, Universal, Mutual, International, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the Morning Telegraph, the Moving Picture World, the Nicholas Power Company, the Typhoon Fan Company, the Simplex Projection Machine Company and a number of other accessory manufacturers all had attractive displays scattered about the floor.

The International Film Service devoted its space and time to the circulation of ballots, calling upon Governor Whitman to veto the Christman-Wheeler censorship bill. These ballots were distributed all over the place, and every one entering the building received one. In the International booth was a huge ballot box, where the ballots were deposited after being signed.

"Sandwich Girls," Everyone a "Paragon"

Paragon also aided in this real service to the industry, by sending out "sandwich girls" with signs calling upon the public to aid Paragon in its fight against censorship. Another feature of this campaign was a figure dressed to represent the motion picture industry, struggling about the room with a heavy ball and chain, representing the censorship of films, impeding his progress. The work in opposition to this bill during the week is reported to have been very effective.

The demonstration of studio work, carried on with a full stage with a complete battery of lights, cameras and sets, was done under the direction of Joe Smiley. An amateur scenario by David Schooner, entitled "His Daughter's Sacrifice," was selected, and was produced by a cast which included Mrs. Ida Sidley, Alice Ashton, Elsie George, John McGraw, Lou Reimer, Walter J. Eise and George H. West. The production, which occupied nearly the en tire week, was complete, even to the taking of still pictures. The result was exhibited in the theatre on the closing day of the exposition.

Large crowds of admirers of Gertrude McCoy hovered around the Gaumont booth in, the Palace, on Friday night when the actress made her appearance. The fans were thus able to see in the flesh the popular player who would be seen on the screen three days later in one of her best pictures, "The Isle of Love," a Mutual Masterpicture.

Motion Picture Men Will See Governor Whitman

Heads of Big Manufacturing Concerns Organize Great Get-Together Movement Against New York State Censorship Bill—Hearing Is Arranged

AS the first step in organizing a great get-together movement to oppose the Criston-Wheeler censorship bill, which has been passed by both houses of the New York Legislature, and is now before Governor Whitman for signature, the heads of all the large producing and manufacturing concerns gathered at luncheon at Delmonico's, Monday, May 8. Plans for appearing before the Governor in a body were discussed, and a special train to carry the New York picture men to Albany for the hearing in the executive chambers on May 11 is being arranged for.

J. Robert Rubin, counsel for the New York State Exhibitors' League, announced that he had found in the records a decision by Judge Cullen, formerly of the State Court of Appeals, attacking the legality of censorship, and this will be advanced as an additional argument before the Governor.

Those who attended the luncheon included W. W. Hodkinson, Raymond Pawley, J. Stuart Blackton, John R. Freuler, P. A. Powers, Jesse L. Lasky, A. S. Friend, Richard Rowland, Joseph Engel, Lee Ochs, George Kleine, William A. Johnston, W. S. Bush, Adolph Zukor, J. J. McCarty, Jules Brulatour, Samuel Goldfish, W. W. Irwin, Marcus Loew, Percy L. Waters, J. R. Rubin, Harry E. Aitken, Edwin Thanhouser, J. A. Berst, J. C. Myers and Martin Littleton.

LOEW BOOKS BEACON WAR FILMS

"Across the Mexican Border," said to be the only authentic films taken since the recent invasion by the American expedition, and "Fighting the Allies," a series of views from the German battle line, have developed considerable drawing power, according to Samuel Cummins, who has charge of booking them, under the direction of the Beacon Film Company.

Marcus Loew has booked the Mexican film for his New York circuit of theatres, and also for his Baltimore, Washington and Boston houses. Mr. Cummins intends to state rights both films shortly.

Board of Trade Exposition Fills the Garden

Madison Square Is Packed with Throngs of Eager Picture Fans—Screen Favorites Parade from Columbus Circle on First Day—Leo Stevens Ascends from Roof and Drops Literature from a Balloon Proclaiming Formal Opening—Many Noted People in Public Life Present

THE second trade show in as many weeks is now under way in New York under the auspices of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, at Madison Square Garden. On Saturday, May 6, all things collaborated for a successful opening. The New York Police Parade, held on the same day, wound up in Madison Square, amid a large throng of spectators. When the police forsook them they turned to the Garden. Then there was the parade of motion picture talent from Columbus Circle to the exposition, and this brought another crowd of eager townsfolk. Thirdly, there was the balloon ascension from the roof of the Garden, and literature dropped by Balloonist Leo Stevens proclaimed all the way from Twenty-third street to Canarsie that the show was ready.

J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph company, delivered the opening address, in which he outlined the purpose of the exposition, cordially greeted the attendance, and spoke of the wonderful growth of the motion picture besides giving the censorship evil a dig. Regarding this last question he said:

"The greatest peril that menaces the photoplay is the attempt by professional agitators, by hypocritical reformers and office seeking politicians to apply censorship to the motion picture, which under the Constitution of the United States of America should and must be as free and untrammeled as the press, the stage and the right of free speech. The attempt to apply official and political censorship to the photodrama is equally an endeavor to deprive the public of its inalienable right under the Constitution to decide for itself what it shall read, what it shall see, to what it shall listen, and at what it shall look. No group of five, ten or fifty paid officials, has the right to decide what pictures one hundred million American citizens shall see."

Blackton's Speech Greeted with Applause

This speech was greeted by rounds of applause by the crowded floor. Commodore Blackton then introduced Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, who continued the attacks against censorship and spoke enthusiastically on the magnitude of the motion picture art. Other speakers were Rear-Admiral R. N. Usher, Rabbi Wise and Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady.

The Rialto theatre orchestra, conducted by S. L. Rothapfel in person, played "America" previous to the addresses, and following rendered "The Board of Trade March," composed for the occasion by Mr. Rothapfel. Following the official opening, the spectators were entertained by pictures and dancing until the evening when many of the players appeared, their late arrival necessitated by their promise to lend their presence to closing night of the Exposition at the Palace.

During all this time and even before the preparations to receive the crowd were completed on the main floor, Leo Stevens was preparing for his flight upon the roof. He had been engaged by Universal to ascend, scattering announcements of the winner of the Handsome Man Contest, Roy Fernandez, and stacks of Bluebirds and Red Feathers over all New York state, New England and eastern Canada. But the wind upset such inter-state plans and Mr. Stevens, after attaining an altitude of 19,000 feet, was obliged to descend in the wilds of Canarsie. However, several pounds of literature dropped by Mr. Stevens gave those in New York who were not already aware of it a complete idea that something was doing in the general direction of Madison Square. Cameramen from all the companies were on hand to "shoot" Mr. Stevens and pictures of his departure have already been exhibited at the Garden.

The layout of booths in the Garden has been done in excellent style. With the exception of three or four small booths scattered over the floor all the exhibits are ranged around the side, while over the usual boxes has been erected somewhat of a temporary mezzanine floor, back of which are still more booths. On the east side of the floor is a large stage, equipped with screen and studio lights. Extending back to the center of the Garden are chairs, and throughout most of the day pictures of various companies are exhibited. The Rialto orchestra, when it can forsake the newly opened Broadway house, is on the stage to furnish the music, and here also will be made real pictures for the edification of the public. At the other end of the building, a large portion of floor space has been roped off for dancing purposes.

Arrangement Prevents Crowding

This arrangement prevents crowding in the center. The space before the booths is wide and the crowd is kept moving continually. A complete list of the various exhibits will be found in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Among the booths of the producing and accessory companies is the stall of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. This place has been attracting great attention to date. The glories of California are continually on display and the public is enlightened as to the tremendous number of pictures that are produced in the environs of Los Angeles.

The exposition opened most auspiciously, the attendance on the opening day making new records. On Saturday afternoon and evening, 5,783 persons passed through the gates into Madison Square Garden, and the cash receipts for both Saturday and Sunday show that the second day's business was practically as large.

Among the more distinguished visitors on Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, M. H. De Young, of the San Francisco Chronicle; Fred J. Herrington, William J. Sweeney, and other officials of the National Exhibitors' League of America.

J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, gave a luncheon at the Hotel Astor to W. J. Sweeney, and other officials in charge of the Chicago exposition, on Monday.

Every Day Exhibitors' Day

Everyday of the exposition is Exhibitors' Day, while the various producing companies have each been allotted a day on which they have first right on the screen. May 7 was Universal Day; on May 8, Bluebird held sway; Essanay predominated on May 9, and George Spoor was in attendance himself; May 10 is Mutual's Day, when Mary Miles Minter will bid her friends goodbye before departing for the West; Paramount holds the screen on May 11, and Famous Players, Lasky and Morosco will then have their turn; May 12 goes to the Fox Film Corporation, and Theda Bara promises to be present; Vitagraph gets May 13, and the International Film Service has the last day of the exposition, May 14.

Besides the regular showing of pictures, the dancing and the array of screen stars, there will be speeches on various angles of the business given every day by prominent men in the business. Among the speakers are John R. Freuler, William A. Johnston, Nicholas Power, F. H. Richardson, J. H. Hallberg. These addresses will take place in the concert hall of the Garden where those in the trade will be specially invited to openly discuss questions of prominent import.

Friday "Preparedness Day"

Friday, the 12th, will be Preparedness Day. Marjorie Sterrett, who started the Dime for a Battleship fund, will be present and it is expected to materially swell the proceeds of this cause at the Garden exposition.

The Board of Trade made good on their announcement that Sunday, May 7, would witness the appearance of famous soloists. David Bispham rendered three song selections in the evening and hugely entertained the crowd. First he gave a selection from Mendellsohn and he followed this by singing a piece the words from which are taken from Shakespeare's "Seven Ages of Man." "Danny Deever," Kipling's poem, was his last rendition.

Ethel Gilmore, a well-known toe dancer, until recently with the Winter Garden show, took the stage after Mr. Bispham and gave an exhibition of her art.

There are the usual souvenirs given away in abundance by the players and booth tenders. Several of the companies have representatives in costume. International has half a dozen or more pretty girls dressed as Red Cross nurses; the Paragon studio has Bad Bill Censor parading about with Justice enchained; the Vim company has a trio of clowns which give a short performance on the stage at frequent intervals.

FULL THEATRE SET FOR MISS MICHELENA

The producers at the studios of the California Motion Picture Corporation, at San Rafael, declare they have built the most pretentious theatre set ever devised for the screen, for Beatriz Michelena in "The Woman Who Dared."

Miss Michelena's role in the production, the scene of which is laid in Rome and Paris, is that of a French opera singer. Much of the story develops in the opera house.

In the biggest of these scenes the stage is fully set for the garden scene in "Faust." The boxes tier on either side, while the orchestra, augmented to symphony size, is ranged in front of the stage. In this particular scene Miss Michelena, in the role of Marguerite, sings the "Jewel Song."

The scene is declared by the California Corporation to be very impressive.

Minneapolis Exposition Proves a Great Success

Crowds Throng Armory for Four Days and Testify to Public Interest in Picture Industry—Special Entertainments and Events Are Arranged for Show Week

Special to Motion Picture News.

Minneapolis, May 6.

THE exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest closed here last night after four days which have made history for the motion picture industry of this great section.

The exposition has been an immense success in every way, and the National Guard Armory, where the sessions have been held, has been thronged night and day with crowds which have testified eloquently to the interest taken by the northwestern public in motion pictures. Nothing in recent months has advanced the industry along all lines so much as has this event.

The armory was beautifully decorated, and the exhibits arranged in excellent order. Two motion picture theatres, where the latest films were shown, were in operation simultaneously and continuously, and both were crowded all the time.

Exhibits lined three sides of the big main room, and additional booths were ranged across the middle of the floor, leaving a large open space for dancing. Several bands and orchestras were on hand and music filled the air constantly.

Practically every exchange, and supply dealer in the northwest was represented, and every branch of the industry had its niche at the big show. The companies maintaining exhibits included:

Badtola Musical Instrument Co., Theater Equipment Co., American Seating Co., Seaburg Piano Co., Fotoplayer, W. J. Dyer & Bro., National Film Co., New Film Corporation, Independent Film Corporation, Zenith Feature Film Co., Inc., Fox Film Corporation, Mutual Film Corporation, M. R. Dick Features, Twin City Film Renovating Co., Metro Pictures Service, Triangle Film Corporation, Laemmle Film Service, Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., Favorite Feature Films, Famous Players-Paramount, Friedman Film Corporation, Supreme Features, General Film Service, V. L. S. E., Pathe Exchange, Inc., Amusements, Williams Frame Store, Arcus Ticket Co., American Coupon Association, Transverter Co., Feature Film Co., Unicorn Film Service, Electrical Engineering Co., Excel Feature Film Co., Great West Film Co., Peerless Electric Co., Raths-Seavolt Film Manufacturing Co., Photodrama, Force Bros., photographers, National Cash Register Co., Rialto Theater Supply Co., Cushman Motor Co., Twin City Scenic Co., Twin City Scenic Co., Northwest Weekly, Refreshment Co., Kimball-Cobb Film Manufacturing Co., R. L. Lunt Rexolux, Monogram Slide Co., T. C. Motion Picture Co., Sterling Electric Co., Northwestern Motion Picture Equipment Co., Pathescope Co., National Carbon Co., The Wurlitzer Co., The Dayton Co., Collins Co.

Mayor Frank Nye of Minneapolis opened the exposition with an address of welcome, and in connection with the event in the armory, special entertainments were arranged in other parts of the city. There was a cabaret entertainment at the West Hotel, midnight performance at the New Palace theatre, a banquet at the West, and a grand ball at the armory on the closing night.

William J. Sweeney of Chicago was present, delegated by the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America to extend the best wishes of that organization, and assurances of moral and financial support to the exhibitors of the northwest in fighting adverse legislation, as well as in any other matters affecting the welfare of the industry.

At the same time, in his capacity of Chairman of the National Convention Committee, Mr. Sweeney tendered a hearty invitation to the northwest exhibitors to attend the sixth annual convention and exposition in Chicago in July.

At the Thursday morning session, a motion was made by Mr. Furniss of Duluth, and seconded by Mr. Rogers of Minneapolis, to extend a vote of thanks to W. A. Johnston and Motion Picture News, to W. Stephen Bush and the Moving Picture World, and to Motographhy for the manner in which they have championed the cause of the exhibitors during the past year.

C. H. Fulton, of the E. E. Fulton Company, Chicago, was present as the representative of his concern. The new 1916 Motiograph was on exhibition, and attracted general atention. The Precision Machine Co. exhibited a beautiful white and gold Simplex projection machine.

Oh, What Is So "Lovely" as a (12th) Day in June?

When Louis Appears in "Bobby of the Ballet" and Will Be Seen in Regular, Not Rare, Intervals as a Star Under the Bluebird "Grade-Mark"

"EXHIBITORS have coming their way, during June, four of the best pictures we have released under the Bluebird 'grade'-mark," declares General Manager M. H. Hoffman, of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc. "In strength of story, skill and elaborateness of production, in meritorious stars and in the even balance of the acting companies our June releases will maintain the purpose of our organization in giving exhibitors a consistently good routine of attractions."

Mr. Hoffman continues with the enumeration of his June releases, starting with Tyrone Power and Lois Weber in "The Eye of God," a psychological crime drama, devised by Miss Weber, who contributes both story and scenario, acts a role of equal prominence with that of Mr. Power and furthermore assists her husband, Phillips Smalley, in directing the production.

The release for June 12 will be "Bobby of the Ballet," with Louise Lovely appearing in her regular interval as a Bluebird star. Its title indicates the nature of the picture—a story of the stage.

June 19 brings Harry Carey into the list of Bluebird stars to enact the leading role in "Three Godfathers."

Violet Mersereau appears as the star of the June 26 Bluebird, in Rex Ingram's personally directed scenario, "Yellow and White," a story with its scenes and incidents located in both New York and China. The Oriental locations are devised to give the feature an atmosphere of sumptuous beauty.

With four big productions, each of equal strength and entertaining value, and all varied as one from the other, Manager Hoffman expresses full confidence in not alone satisfying the exhibitor but delighting the public that has so enthusiastically received a great majority of the Bluebirds thus far disclosed.

Bostock Animals from West to Coney Island

Horsley Will Ship the 130 Trained Beasts in Ten Cars for Exhibition at Luna Park During the Summer Season—Pictures Will Be Made in the East for Mutual Release

PREPARATIONS are under way at the Horsley-Mutual studios in Los Angeles for the transportation to Luna Park, Coney Island, of the Bostock collection of trained animals which during the last year have been appearing in productions released by the Mutual. The collection, numbering 130, including many groups of diverse species, will be an added attraction at Luna Park during the coming season.

The entire collection will be transported to the East in a special train, comprised of about ten cars in addition to several others to be devoted to the trainers and keepers who will come East with them. David Horsley, who has been negotiating with the Luna Park authorities for the housing of the collection, left for the Coast a few days ago to supervise the transportation of the animals.

During the Luna Park season, the animals will be used in a number of pictures to be produced in the arena for release through Mutual. These motion pictures will be taken with the public as spectators.

VITAGRAPH ACTORS AND ACTRESSES CONTRIBUTE $500 to ACTORS' FUND

The motion picture campaign for the Actors' Fund of America was given a decided impetus last week when several members of the Vitagraph Company contributed between them five hundred dollars. Anita Stewart, Edity Storey, Dorothy Kelly and several others separated themselves from enough of their weekly stipend to total that amount.

Before the campaign closes, the Vitagraph Company, according to J. Stuart Blackton, treasurer of the picture fund, will be among the biggest contributors.

Metro Plans Elaborate Summer Feature Production

Irene Fenwick Will Begin Work in a Series of Plays with Ralph Herz—Her First Vehicle Will Be "The Purple Lady," a Five Part Subject by Sydney Rosenfeld—Mabel Taliaferro Signed for Eleven Productions—Breese Soon Begins Another Robert W. Service Feature

METRO'S early summer announcement includes plans for the production of many elaborate features and the engagement of new talent, including Irene Fenwick, the popular stage and screen star, who will begin immediately upon a series of Metro Wonderplays. Ralph Herz, one of the foremost comedians in the country, is also a new member of the Metro family and will appear with Miss Fenwick in all her productions.

The first production in which Miss Fenwick will be starred on the Metro program is "The Purple Lady." This five-part feature was written by Sydney Rosenfeld, the playwright. All the Fenwick screen plays will be produced under the supervision of Edwin Carewe, one of the foremost directors in the profession. Miss Fenwick was last seen on the screen in five feature productions in which she was starred and which were produced last year by George Kleine. Miss Fenwick will not give up the speaking stage altogether, but, like Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens and other Metro stars, will find time away from the studio to appear at the theatre. At present she is playing a starring engagement at the Fulton theatre in "The Co-respondent."

Mabel Taliaferro, who has appeared on the Metro program in "The Snowbird" and "Her Great Price," two five-part productions that have been pronounced artistic triumphs, has signed a long time contract with Metro which insures her appearance in at least eleven productions on that program. She will begin work on the first one immediately, which will be called" The Good Little Bad Girl." This feature was written especially for Miss Taliaferro.

Taliaferro Pictures Directed by Carewe

Edwin Carewe will personally direct all of the Taliaferro productions. He produced both "Her Great Price" and "The Snowbird" for the Metro program. Every production Mr. Carewe has made for Metro has been unusually successful, and he has never made a failure. Among some of his best efforts are "Destiny; or, the Soul of a Woman," starring Emily Stevens; "The House of Tears," with the same star, and "The Final Judgment," with Ethel Barrymore in the stellar role.

Another important addition to the long list of Metro stars, who will begin work on her first production, is Viola Dana, formerly of the Edison forces. She will make her debut on the Metro program in "The Flower of No Man's Land." This feature was written by John Collins, who will also direct its production. Mr. Collins is one of the ablest of the younger directors, and produced all of Miss Dana's features at the Edison studio.

Among the notable Metro productions of the year will be the six-part feature, "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar roles. This production will be made apropos of the Shakespearean tercentenary, which is being celebrated throughout the civilized world. Within a short time Metro will make an additional important announcement regarding the program planned for the presentation of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne on the Metro program.

The scenario department, under the direction of Arthur James, has been enlarged considerably. The staff includes Harry O. Hoyt, Charles W. Taylor, Howard Irving Young, L. R. Stark, Leander de Cordova and others engaged in reading scripts and rewriting scenarios. On account of the high-class material demanded for the Metro-Drew one-reel weekly comedies, produced by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, difficulty has been experienced in obtaining the manuscript for them. They are always in the market for good, live, clever and wholesome comedies, and the top price is being paid for them.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison have begun work on their second Metro play. The previously announced name of the production, "The Night Rider," has been changed to "The Masked Rider." The exteriors for this feature are being made in the hills of North Carolina under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer. The two stars have a strong supporting company, including Lester Cuneo, the well-known heavy leading man.

"The Quitter" Next Barrymore

Lionel Barrymore, whose next production, "Dorian's Divorce," is scheduled for release on the Metro program June 5, is also engaged on a new production, "The Quitter," which is novel in both theme and production. This five-part feature is being produced under the direction of Charles Horan. Mme. Petrova, who has just completed "The Scarlet Woman," is at work on a new five-part production which will likely be called "Dress." Marguerite Snow and Director William Nigh are the stars of "Notorious Gallagher," a unique story of the slums and the upper crusts of society, written and directed by Mr. Nigh. It will be an early release on the Metro program.

Edmund Breese, who has just completed "The Spell of the Yukon," will begin work shortly on another big five-part feature, based upon another poem by Robert W. Sergice, the "Kipling of the North." Some time during the early summer Metro will put into production picturizations of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's greatest poems. Metro has exclusive rights to all her writings and they will be adapted for the screen by Charles A. Taylor.

Triangle Will Produce Two Reel Subjects

Pictures of This Length Will Be Made at Intervals by Regular Directors and With the Same Fine Art Stars Appearing in the Five Reelers

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, May 6.

THAT two-reel subjects for the Triangle program are to be made at the Griffith studio in Hollywood, became known this week when announcement was made by Frank E. Woods, manager of production. According to the plans at present laid out, subjects of this size will be made at intervals by the regular directors of the staff, with the same Fine Art stars that appear in five-reel subjects. The reason for this, it is stated, is the insistent demand from exhibitors for shorter subjects to run in connection with five-reel productions.

The two-reel photoplays will consist of light comedy dramas, with the same quality of story as used in other Fine Art productions. This plan has so far progressed that two directors were assigned filming of such photoplays this week.

The first to begin work was John Emerson, who has just completed the production of "Macbeth," with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Douglas Fairbanks is to be the star of this subject, and when it is recalled that Emerson directed the filming of "His Picture in the Papers," with Fairbanks, there is cause for expectation of a very good picture. This is a radical departure, as Fairbanks is one of the highest-salaried players of the producing staff. This actor realized the advantage of appearing in short and long subjects, and willingly accepted the role in this picture. He is to play the part of a secret service man of a different type than usually seen in pictures. The play deals with a class of wealthy persons who are under suspicion by government officials, as there is no visible source of their income. Fairbanks will have the support of A. D. Sears, Alma Ruben, W. E. Lowery, Eagle Eye, George Hall, with Bessie Love in the opposite lead.

The second two-reel subject is that which will star Fay Tincher. She will be remembered as having characterized the stenographer in the one-reel Komic brand made at this studio, and will have the support of Max Davison, Jack Cosgrove, and Edward Dillon, who will also direct the production. Miss Tincher plays the part of an unusually fresh sales girl.

HOADLEY COMPLETES HIS FIRST SCENARIO FOR "BEAUTY"

Harold Hoadley, who recently became a member of the Beauty-Mutual scenario department, has completed his first scenario. It will be released under the title of "Perkin's Mystic Manor," and will feature Orral Humphrey.

"NEWS" CRITICISMS OF FEATURES ARE INVALUABLE

Mr. William A. Johnston,
President, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

My Dear Mr. Johnston:—

I am very thankful to you for sending me a reminder that my subscription had run out for the Motion Picture News.

I am candid enough to say that it would be utterly impossible for me to take care of the twenty-six theatres I am booking for, without your trade magazine as a guide.

The information I receive from same is invaluable and the unbiased and independent way in which you handle your criticisms saves me from reviewing a great number of features that are useless.

Will you kindly renew my subscription for the coming year. Trusting that you will conduct the criticism end of your magazine in the same fair way that you have in the past, I remain, Sincerely yours,

R. C. MILLER.

KANSAS CITY MEN ORGANIZING SCREEN CLUB

Special to Motion Picture News.

Kansas City, Mo., May 6.

A movement, recently started among the more progressive exchange men of this city, is under way for the organization of a Screen Club. Only once in the history of the moving picture industry in this city have the motion picture men come together for a social time, and very rarely for business purposes. The former gathering was then brought about when two of the most prominent exchange managers of the city left here for other quarters. A farewell banquet was tendered them.

The organization committee consists of the following: E. R. Pearson, Kansas City manager of the V-L-S-E exchange; R. O. Proctor, Kansas City manager of the Universal Film and Supply Company; F. C. Mills, publicity agent of the Mutual Film Corporation; and Joseph Gilday, manager of the Willis Wood theatre. Present plans contemplate a membership limited to exchange men, exhibitors, and accessory dealers. The plan will probably take on very definite shape before the first of June.

Rialto Film Corporation Organized by Goldburg

First Production Is Under Way at Victor Studios, New York, with Cast Headed by Frank Mills—Marshal Farnum Is Head Director

THE Rialto Film Corporation, with Jesse J. Goldburg as managing head, has just been organized under the laws of the State of New York. The first production is already under way at the Victor studios in New York, the cast being headed by Frank Mills, whose work in "The Golden Claw," "The Edge of the Abyss, and "The Moral Fabric" for the Kay Bee-Triangle Company has brought him wide recognition within the past few months.

Marshal Farnum, whose last production was "Driftwood," made for the Ocean Film Corporation, is head director for the Rialto. It is also announced that Bliss Milford, a former Edison player, is the ingenue lead in the Mills picture, entitled "The House of Mirrors."

Detroit capitalists are the financial backers of the Rialto Corporation, the majority of the stockholders, however, being I. and S. T. Goldburg, heads of the Lillies Cigar Company of Chicago and Detroit. They are president and treasurer, respectively, of the new film corporation. It is the plan of the company to build one of its plants in or near Detroit.

A contract has been entered into with the Popular Pictures Corporation, lately organized, providing for the first release of the Rialto concern to be followed by regular releases beginning September 1 on the program of one a week to be inaugurated by the Popular from that date on. It is understood that franchises are to be awarded by the Popular concern to independent exchanges for the release of features to be made by certain manufacturers. The booking is to be upon an open policy.

Big Four Issues Booklet Listing All Its Players

"Who's Who in V-L-S-E Plays" Is About Those Who Do Things in Pictures These Days—Also Contains Pithy Paragraphs About All Its Releases

AS aid to exhibitors and newspapers in assembling out-of-the-usual personality sketches, of the prominent players of the producing companies making up the V-L-S-E, the advertising department of that organization has just published a forty-eight page book, called "Who's Who in the V-L-S-E Plays." It is in handsome style, with a striking two-color cover, and rich duotone illustrations. Supplementing the biographical sketches is the complete list of Big Four releases since its inception, with pithy paragraphs describing each.

This is the first time that all the V-L-S-E plays and players have been listed under one cover, and in this brochure, they present a combination of talent who have won for themselves a country-wide following. But besides being a book of interest and information, it has been designed to be of especial service to exhibitors, to act as a ready reference guide, and an ever-handy aid in compiling press notices and other publicity suitable for newspaper of program use, the biographies being written from a human interest angle to appeal to editor and public alike.

Many previously unpublished details in the lives of these players are divulged in this book for the first time.

Talent, Moved by Mercy, Gives Last Aid to Charity

Geraldine Farrar and Other Notables in Acting and Musical Professions Lend Services to Final Public Event in Behalf of Money-Raising Campaign for Actors' Relief

THE final public event in behalf of the Motion Picture campaign for the Actors' Fund will take place Tuesday, May 16, at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. Prominent members of the acting and musical professions will lend their talents to make up the program.

Geraldine Farrar, through her notable double association with both the films and the operatic stage, will be the bright particular star of the Metropolitan affair. Miss Farrar will present the second act of "Madame Butterfly," assisted by Signor Scotti. The accompanying orchestra will be conducted by Signor Polacco. Such artists as Mme. Alda, Lucca Botta, Fritz Kreisler and Leopold Godowsky will complete the musical offerings.

The dramatic division of the program will be equal to the musical, it is announced. Among the stage celebrities, who will be seen may be mentioned Nat Goodwin, who, with an all-star cast of associates, will present "Lend Me Five Shillings."

Newspaper Promotion for "The Fighting Germans"

Plan of Mutual Company Will Mean Opportunities for Co-Operative Effort Between Exhibitor and His Local Newspaper Picture Set for Release on May 8

WHAT are said to be vivid, close views of what has happened in the conflicts along the German-Russian border are presented in "The Fighting Germans," a five reel special release from the Mutual Film Corporation, scheduled for presentation on May 8.

The pictures portray Germany at war, giving glimpses of life on, in front of and behind the battle lines. They were taken, it is announced, with the consent of the German military authorities by A. K. Dawson, and were obtained by the Mutual from the American Correspondent Film Company, Inc.

The Kaiser is seen on the firing line, close up; the Crown Prince is shown in command of his regiment; and the storming the fortified village of Invangorod is shown in detail, according to the announcement.

A plan of newspaper promotion giving opportunities for co-operative effort between the exhibitor and his local newspaper has been arranged by the Mutual and the syndicate department of the Buffalo Times.

Herbert Brenon, the director of the William Fox Annette Kellermann picture, is working night and day, putting his wonderful photo-spectacle into shape. He took 220,000 feet of film and this must be cut to a presentable length. He expects to have it ready for showing about July 1.

CHRISTINE MAYO IS OPPOSITE BREESE IN ALASKAN PICTURE

Christine Mayo, who was recently engaged by the Popular Plays and Players, will make her debut as a leading woman on the Metro program in "The Spell of the Yukon," a five-part play in which Edmund Breese is starred. This production has just been completed. It is an adaptation from the poem of the same name by Robert W. Service, often called "The Kipling of the North." Wallace C. Clifton wrote the scenario. The role played by Miss Mayo was written especially with her in mind, as was the role of Jim Carson, essayed by Mr. Breese.

CHRISTINE MAYO

Miss Mayo has been in motion pictures for some time. She was starred in "A Mother's Confession," a feature produced by the Ivan company. Following this she played opposite William Farnum in "The Broken Law," on the Fox program, and was the leading woman for Henry Kolker in "The Warning," produced by the Equitable. Miss Mayo followed this success in a starring engagement, "A Fool's Paradise," produced by Ivan. Next she was seen with Robert Warwick in "The Supreme Sacrifice," a World production.

PARAMOUNT PLASTIQUES LATEST PARAMOUNT NOVELTY

Ashley Miller's "Plastiques" are the latest short subjects announced for release on the Paramount program through the Bray studios.

Mr. Miller, producer of the novelty, is well known as a director of Edison features, and his work bears the same relation to the cartoon that sculpture does to the pen and ink drawing. Carved on a background in high relief, his figures and scenes produce effects that are said to be beautiful, fascinating or comic. "Plastiques" contain unlimited possibilities for comic effects and give promise that pictures of great artistic beauty may be evolved later on, Paramount officials believe.

Mr. Miller has copyrighted his invention under the general trade name of "Plastiques."

Enthusiasm for "Civilization" Sweeps Coast

Los Angeles Papers Unanimously Praise Ten-Reel Ince Spectacle—Governor of the State and Magnates Congratulate the Producer

FLASHLIGHT OF CROWDS LEAVING PERFORMANCE OF THOMAS H. INCE'S "CIVILIZATION" AT MAJESTIC TRIANGLE THEATRE, LOS ANGELES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, May 6.

TWENTY performances of the ten-reel peace spectacle "Civilization," at the Majestic theatre, Los Angeles, with the house sold out for every performance, leads to the conclusion that this photo production, advertised as Thomas H. Ince's million-dollar spectacle, will in every way prove up to the expectation of the producer. Seats are now being sold far in advance, and there is every indication that the picture will run for many weeks.

Los Angeles newspaper critics have praised the production in glowing terms, and Ince has received many complimentary letters and telegrams which praise the stupendous production. Of these he prizes one from Governor Hiram Johnson, of California, most highly. The governor was unable to view the production, but sent his congratulations in the following wire: "I thank you very much indeed, for your kind invitation to be your guest at the premier to be held in Los Angeles of 'Civilization.' I regret that I am compelled to remain here. I feel, however, that I may in advance congratulate you upon a very wonderful achievement. It will be my pleasure to witness your great work in the very near future. I wish you every success."

"After witnessing 'Civilization,' I wish to attach my name to the list of many admirers of your wonderful production," writes Harry H. Culver, California realty magnate, and founder of Culver City. "The manner in which you handled the delicate impersonation of Christ, intermingled with the realistic war scenes, cannot help but leave in the minds of those who have the pleasure of witnessing the production, the effect of a divine sermon. Looking at it from all angles, it is without a doubt the most efficient production I have ever witnessed."

David A. Hamburger, millionaire California merchant, was profuse in his praise. "I enjoyed it more than any performance that I have witnessed on the screen. It furnishes food for deep thought, and I really believe that if it could have been brought to the attention of President Wilson, before the serious aspect of the U-boat controversy he would have hesitated a long time before taking serious steps in the matter. You certainly have shown a spirit that is worthy of admiration, and the production is proof of your masterly ability, in which you have made such a great success."

An unusual interest in the picture is being shown and southern California organizations have made application for certain nights to be dedicated to them. Members of California National Guard will attend the showing on nights set apart for them, members of the Chamber of Commerce will attend on another, and the school teachers' association has requested special evening.

Producer Ince, feeling that his subject is now an assured success, is planning on New York, Chicago and Washington openings. Which city will see the film first is not known, but about the administration building there are rumors that the capital will have the next premier. With this in view it is said, negotiations are now being completed for a private showing to be given for the President, his cabinet, and other government officials.

"THE HIGHEST BID" WILL BID HIGH FOR PATRONAGE ON MUTUAL

"The Highest Bid" is the title of a five-reel masterpicture nearing completion under the direction of William Russell, who also plays the leading role opposite Charlotte Burton.

"The Highest Bid" is soon to be released by the Mutual Film Corporation.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

PLENTY OF LIVE WIRE STUNTS IN KANSAS CITY TERRITORY

Kansas City exchange men claim their territory is as productive of live wire exhibitors as any in the United States. Missouri and Kansas theatre managers are continually doing different stunts to attract attention—and business which naturally follows. A few of the acts pulled off by houses which secure films from the Kansas City district are summarized here:

Under the auspices of the Commercial Club of Smithville, Mo., the moving picture house at that place is thrown open Saturday afternoons for all who desire to attend, but a special invitation is extended to farmers who live in the county and who get in but once a week. Three shows are given in the afternoon and no admittance is charged. The president of the Commercial Club says that it "sure does pay!" Osceola, Mo., is another town that does practically the same stunt, calling it "Merchant's Afternoon." On the opening of the Bluebird theatre in Girard, Kan., Thomas Miller, manager, gave away handsome souvenirs to the ladies. He imported a Kansas City comedian, who pulled off the fake clown and policeman stunt in the Girard streets—and the policeman or clown, whichever it happened to be, was viewed by a large crowd all day. So was the show at night!

The Hip theatre in Topeka, Kans., during its early exhibition of the "Battle Cry of Peace," got Battery A, of the Kansas National Guards, to give a drill in front of the house that attracted a number of people. The Iris, in the same town, always does its advertising in a two-column spread, blocked with quarter-inch lines around the entire ad. It has recently started the habit of holding a Children's Day on Saturdays, something new to Topeka.

CANADIAN TROOPS LEND MARTIAL COLOR TO UNIVERSAL WAR DRAMA

Stirring scenes, which resulted in considerable publicity, were witnessed recently at the Bijou theatre in Winnipeg, where the Universal production, "The Campbells Are Coming," opened a week's engagement. Canadian Highlanders take an important part in this picture, so a battalion of the Cameron Highlanders, 500 strong, were invited to witness the performance on Monday evening.

With bag-pipes playing, the soldiers marched through the streets to the Bijou, and as they filed up to the balcony, which had been reserved for them, they were given a rousing reception by those occupying the lower floor. When the Highlanders appeared in the picture the pipers in the balcony played stirring airs on the bagpipes, and patriotic enthusiasm was kept at a high pitch throughout the picture.

NEW MISSION, 'FRISCO, ISSUES ATTRACTIVE INVITATION

Again the attractive invitation card. This time it is the New Mission theatre, San Francisco, which announces its official opening by means of the dignified, well-printed "Admit Two." It compares very favorably with anything of the sort we have seen, and its general appearance indicates that the New Mission is a high-class house.

CHILDREN'S SHOWS STARTED BY NELSON, B. C., HOUSE

The Starland theatre, Nelson, B. C., has started a series of special performances for children on Saturday mornings, and the first one, held recently, was distinctly successful. Admission is five cents, and the pictures shown included comedies, a cartoon, and a Paramount Travelogue.

GOOD SENSE AND GOOD TYPOGRAPHY

¶ It takes more than a star to make a photoplay—the addition of a real story and a real producer does not assure success—

¶ It does take a star, a story, a producing organization and adequate support and, above all, a director.

¶ It takes more than a few chairs, a canvas screen and a machine to make a picture theater—it takes more than a fiddler or two, a piano and a mechanical organ to make good music—

BUT—

¶ To make a complete show it takes a real star, playing a real story, produced by a real company and directed only by an expert—it takes a regular orchestra to interpret it and an especially constructed and not reconstructed motion picture theater in which to present it.

FOUR PAGE LEAFLET DOES GOOD SERVICE AS HOUSE ORGAN

George Van Alstyne, of the New Glove theatre, Gloversville, N. Y., sends in a four-page leaflet which the New Glove decided upon, after several experiments, as the most serviceable, and least expensive, form of house organ. Its inside pages are given over to a calendar of features for the month, with name of pictures, date, star and producer in each case. The first page is occupied by a cut of the theatre interior, and the back page by ads.

This is certainly inexpensive. It could be improved by eliminating the cut on page one, setting the page the narrow way, instead of the long way, and running a little house talk. The back page would look better also if it were set up the narrow way. The calendar could be left as it is.

Of course this would increase the cost of composition somewhat, but we think it would be worth it. The cut is not distinctive, and is too great a space killer, when one realizes that house talk, properly written, is far more effective. If a cut of the theatre is to be used, why not use a smaller one, across the first page the narrow way, leaving room for house talk? At present, one cannot tell which is the back cover and which the front.

In general, however, the idea is good. The New Glove management finds that patrons take the leaflets home and keep them for reference.

NOVEL VEST POCKET DIARY FROM NEW YORK EXHIBITOR

An out of the ordinary advertising stunt is offered by the Pastime theatre, 1034 Second avenue, New York, in the shape of a handy vest pocket diary, bound in a flexible paper cover, and wire stitched.

It is a complete record for the month of May, and contains space for memoranda for every day of the month, with the name of the feature attraction for the day at the Pastime printed at the bottom of the page. Patrons appreciate this kind of advertising, because it is useful to them. For the exhibitor's purposes also, it is excellent.

Fred Wehrenberg, of the Best theatre, St. Louis, gave away souvenirs on Easter Sunday and ran a special feature program in honor of the day. Both houses were crowded at all performances.

NEW FORM PRESS SHEET AIDS TRIANGLE EXHIBITOR

The publicity department of the Triangle Film Corporation has begun a campaign of education, in which school the exhibitor is the pupil. A new form press sheet is the text book. In a recent bulletin to branch managers the plan was set forth as follows:

"Only lately have motion picture manufacturers realized that there are other departments on a newspaper besides the dramatic, or photoplay section, and attempted to break into print there. Generally speaking, the regular departments on a metropolitan daily are city and general news, politics, art, fashion, humor, music, drama, automobile, society, sports, woman and the home, juvenile, real estate and photoplay. Editors of each of these are glad to get news or features designed to interest their readers.

"Just how is the exhibitor to recognize or create these distinctions?

"Triangle is preparing its stories in the Exhibitors' Sheet with this problem in view. A couple of lines above each indicates the department of the paper for which it is designed; and these stories are prepared by trained newspaper men, so that the exhibitor may know just the proper persons to whom to take them. If editors of outside departments do not find them available, the items and articles still remain acceptable to the photoplay editor."

EXCELLENT CRITICISM BLANK FROM WEST VIRGINIA THEATRE

Paramount Progress, which, by the way, is printing a lot of excellent live wire stuff these days, calls attention to a criticism blank issued by the Camden theatre, Parkersburg, W. Va., for the use of its patrons. Exhibitors who have not yet seen the wisdom of finding out in writing just what pictures their patrons prefer, may find a valuable hint as to how to frame a criticism blank by looking at the Camden's scheme.

The blank is printed on good card stock and distributed to the patrons of the theatre in the pages of "The Screen," the Camden's weekly house organ. We reproduce it from Paramount Progress:

Everyone who receives this card is earnestly requested to turn it over to an attache of this theatre, or mail it, so that it will be a matter of record with the management.

What feature play of those you saw last week did you like best? _____

What style of play did you like best —farce, comedy, comedy-drama, melo-drama, drama or tragedy? _____

What actor, actress, or both, do you like the best? _____

Do you like the Paramount-Bray Cartoons, the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures, the Vitagraph Weekly and the Paramount Pictographs? and which of these the best? _____

BRIEF HINTS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

Your advertising is an index to the kind of theatre you run. People judge you not alone by your pictures. They judge you also by what you say about your pictures, and how you say it.

The day is past when you can attract the largest possible patronage by "circus" methods, or by misstatements and exaggerations about a picture. We have said this before, many times, but it is just as true now as it ever was.

There is one thing in connection with this question of high-grade advertising which we have not emphasized hitherto because so many other bigger points had to be made first.

It is this—and it is a very simple matter, but one which many exhibitors are careless about: don't send out a house organ, or any other piece of advertising, with words incorrectly spelled. Make your printer give you typographically perfect jobs. Make him get the names of pictures and players correct in every case. Be sure you give him no opportunity to do otherwise.

Why? Because the picture fans of today know how those names should be spelled. If they find them incorrectly printed, they will blame you—not your printer. And they will come to think that they know more about some details of your business than you do.

They will think of you as a careless showman, of your house as second or third rate. Perhaps this will be unfair to you. But why give them the opportunity?

INTELLIGENT ADVERTISING BRINGS RESULTS TO ILLINOIS EXHIBITOR

Manager Grampp, of the Orpheum, Rockford, Ill., put over "The Ne'er Do Well" in his town at prices ranging up to 50 cents, the highest ever charged there save the "The Birth of a Nation." He booked the V-L-S-E ten-reeler for a solid week. The first three days realized 4,896 paid admissions, and the sale for the rest of the engagement was heavy. His theatre seats nine hundred. Intelligent advertising brought Mr. Grampp his great success. It was like this:

An advertising campaign embracing two counties was inaugurated two weeks in advance of the opening date. Space in the three Rockford, one Belvidere and four Winnebago county papers was gradually increased daily and reading notices obtained daily. Ad copy was changed daily with something new each time and the readers touched upon every angle of the picture and of Rex Beach's book.

Just before the opening three smashing full page advertisements with long readers were run and the sale was opened one week in advance of the first run. At the opening matinee the military band paraded the streets and gave a concert in front of the theatre. Book stores were induced to order heavily of the books and some ran advertisements telling where the books could be obtained. A thorough poster and billboard campaign was conducted in all of Winnebago and part of Boone county. Personal visits were made to all editors within the interurban radius covered and arrangements made for satisfactory editorial notice.

MICHIGAN THEATRE FINDS MAILING CARD GOOD MEDIUM

From the Square Town Electric theatre, Brooklyn, Mich., comes a mailing card, which, unfolded, makes a fair sized sheet. It contains the special feature program for May, features being shown Tuesdays exclusively. Descriptions of pictures are brief, and quite well written. The set up is good.

If the idea is to be continued, we suggest perforating the card at the top, and inserting a cord. This would make it more serviceable to patrons, who could then hang it up for reference.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"MR. GOODE, THE SAMARITAN" IS ANYTHING BUT A BAD VEHICLE FOR DE WOLF HOPPER

DE WOLF HOPPER'S third Triangle picture, "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan," soon to be released, is like a family reunion. Fay Tincher, previously the huge comedian's petite foil in "Don Quixote" and "Sunshine Dad," again has the principal feminine role; Chester Withey completes his trio of scenarios and the heavy roles as well; Edward Dillon is again the director and for the second time plays a part. This combination will be broken up when the Hopper film version of the base ball classic "Casey at the Bat," is completed. Margaret Marsh, Lillian Langdon and Max Davidson have the other important roles in "Mr. Goode, the Samaritan."

Hopper is Alphonse Irving Goode, a philanthropic character whose wife and daughter are snobbish. Having discharged the chauffeur for some petty reason the Goodes start on a motor trip with the daughter, Evelina, at the wheel. She is soon replaced by her father and trouble begins. He stalls the engine and later throws in the reverse, the car bumps a tree and catches on fire. Father, mother and daughter escape and start to walk the two miles to their destination. On the way they are picked up by a crook who has stolen a machine. He sells it to Goode, who is arrested for the theft and thrown into jail. Conditions here are so vile that he is moved to reform all jails. He invites a pair of crooks to a party, at which the man who sold him the automobile is also present. On this foundation Hopper and his associates erect an elaborate structure of fun. The last week in May is the date set for general release.

To meet the demand for Keystone comedies four new Sennett farces were shipped from the Edendale studios last week and will go out on the Triangle service at once. One of them, "The Lion and the Girl," is expected to duplicate the thrills of "The Snow Cure," which preceded it out of the west and is S. L. Rothapfel's comedy feature at the Rialto Theatre this week. "The Snow Cure" gave Ford Sterling a chance to pit his speed against a bear; in "The Lion and the Girl" Claire Anderson is a foil for a husky specimen of the king of beasts. Joe Jackson is the star of this feature.

Mack Swain and Louella Maxam are the principal players in "His Bitter Pill," the second of the week's shipments. Miss Maxam has entirely recovered from her experience in the filming of "An Oily Scoundrel," in which she was bound to a railroad track to pray that Earl Rodney would reach the switch in time. Harry Gribbon and Mary Thurman, Sennett's new discovery, are the important members of the company which made "A Dash of Courage." The title of the fourth is unknown but will be decided while the film is in transit.

These four Keystones will not remain idle a minute. Proof of the demand for this brand is shown by the policy of the Broadway Theatre. This house, always the home of competing features, ran the Triangle's "An Oily Scoundrel" last week.

FOUR FEATURES FROM LASKY ON PARAMOUNT IN MAY

During the month of May the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will release four feature productions on the Paramount Program instead of three, as is customary. The fourth, it is announced, will be the Lasky-Belasco production of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," in which Mae Murray will make her second appearance as a Lasky star. Her first production was "To Have and To Hold," with Wallace Reid. "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" marks the entry of James Young, as one of the Lasky producers.

Mae Murray will have the benefit of prominent support in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," including Tom Forman, James Neil, Horace B. Carpenter, Lucille Young, Lucille LaVarney and Belle Bennett.

"NED" AND "ESTELLE" ARE GOING TO CHANGE DATES ON MAY 10

Cartoonist Harry Palmer has announced that "Nosey Ned" and an "Escapade of Estelle" will change dates on the Gaumont split-reel with "See America First." As now arranged, May 10 will see Estelle engaged in wrestling with the week's wash over a tub in the back yard when a chicken appears. What happens may be imagined from the subject Mr. Palmer has affixed to this Kartoon Komic—"Temptation." Nosey Ned will be seen on the screen May 17, under the title of "As an Umpire Nosey Ned is an Onion."

"SMALL TIME STUFF" FOR BIG TIME RUNS FROM E. & R. JUNGLE

The E. & R. studio force has completed scenes for the one-rel subject "Small Time Stuff" in which Napoleon and Sally war with the stars, ingenues, stage managers, and theatre owners for the star dressing room, while they are playing in Hickville.

The scenario for this is by Clem Pope, and the direction is in charge of Joseph J. Franz. Lillian Brown Leighton appears as the star of the theatrical organization surrounded by capable people.

DE WOLF HOPPER IN HIS NEXT FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE PHOTOPLAY

THREE TYPICAL SCENES FROM "MR. GOODE, THE SAMARITAN"

GOLD ROOSTER WILL ESCORT "GIRL WITH GREEN EYES" TO EXHIBITORS, MAY 15

In the week beginning May 15 Pathé will release on its Gold Rooster Program the screen version of Clyde Fitch's "Girl With the Green Eyes." This feature was made for Pathé by the Popular Plays and Players Company, and features Katharine Kaelred and Julian L'Estrange, two players better known on the "legit" than on the screen. Katharine Kaelred's name first came into prominence with her appearance in "The Devil." Then she created the part of the "vampire lady" in "A Fool There Was." She next appeared with John Mason in "A Son of the People," and is now playing a leading role in Arnold Daly's revival of Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel."

Julian L'Estrange has always been a popular leading man. He played leading roles with Sir Herbert Tree in London, also with Arthur Bourchier, Billie Burke, Maxine Elliott and Mme. Simon.

The story deals with a woman whose unfounded jealousy causes her to lose the love of her husband. Overcome with the realization of her own doubt she takes poison, but is saved for a love that surmounts all doubt.

HIGH WORDS FOR LOW CHARACTER IN A PARAMOUNT, RELEASED MIDDLE OF THE MONTH

"I'd rather die than marry a low-down, sneaking Bassett," declared Hazel Dawn, flinging back her rebellious curls and stamping her bare foot defiantly as she gathered her coarse home-spun dress about her and stalked majestically out of the scene.

"Great stuff," declared Director Fred Thomson approvingly, and the shaggy mountaineers who were grouped about her grinned their satisfaction. They were real mountaineers, these spectators, for the Famous Players star had gone to the hill country of northern Georgia to stage "The Feud Girl," her forthcoming Paramount Picture, which will be released May 15.

There are many points of interest about this Famous Players photoplay, as it is the first feud story ever to be filmed in a real feud country. The mountains which form the background for "The Feud Girl" have been the actual setting of many a grim scene in days gone by, for it was in these very hills that some of the most bitter struggles have been fought out.

In support of Miss Dawn there appear Irving Cummings, Hardee Kirkland, Arthur Morrison, Russell Bassett and several others who are equally well known.

EIGHT EPISODES OF "SECRET OF SUBMARINE" COMPLETED

Eight of the fifteen chapters of "The Secret of the Submarine," the new American-Mutual photo-novel, starring Thomas Chatterton and Juanita Hansen, have been completed. The scenes in which the submarine is used are being filmed, from a technical standpoint, under the supervision of several underwater boat officers now stationed at the San Pedro naval base in California.

"OUR PEOPLE" FOR YOUR PEOPLE (THE PLEASED PUBLIC) FROM ESSANAY IN JUNE—MANY "SHORTS" FOR THE MONTH

ESSANAY is issuing an unusual number of short releases for the month of June. It also has two multiple-reel feature subjects for that month. The announcement of the releases has just been made by George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay company.

Among the three-reel releases are "Our People," featuring Bryant Washburn and Gertrude Glover; "Fool's Gold," featuring Darwin Karr and Nell Craig; "The Promise Land," and "The Little Volunteer," featuring Joyce Fair, the eleven-year-old star, who made such a hit in "The Little Samaritan."

Among the two-reel releases are, "Orphan Joyce," featuring Joyce Fair; "Putting It Over," featuring Marguerite Clayton and Harry Beaumont; a reissue of "The Girl at the Curtain," and "The Voice in the Wilderness," both featuring Francis X. Bushman.

The one-reel releases include Canimated Nooz, No. 11, Wallace A. Carlson's cartoon drawings on news events of the day; a sketch book of Berlin, by Vernon Howe Bailey, showing all the points of interest in the German capital, including the Kaiser's Palace, the Kaiser himself and his special bodyguard; and one of George Ade's fables, that of "The Undecided Brunette."

The multiple-reel features include "That Sort" and "According to the Code." In "That Sort" scores of scenes show action at Monte Carlo, in the Riviera, on the spa, and mid-ocean scenes taken on the liner Imperator. These scenes are actual motion picture photographs, taken not, of course, at the present time for this picture, but by Charles J. Brabin a few months prior to the outbreak of the European war. Mr. Brabin, who directed "That Sort," made a tour of the continent shortly before the war broke out, making motion pictures of all these scenes. He only left Europe at the beginning of the war.

This photoplay features Warda Howard, with Ernest Maupain, Duncan McRae, John Lorenz and Betty Brown.

The other multiple-reel feature is "According to the Code," a drama which takes place in both the Civil War period and the present time. This features Lewis S. Stone, the masculine lead in "The Havoc," and a well-known speaking stage star, and Marguerite Clayton, one of Essanay's leading women. The part covering the Civil War period was taken in the exact locations in which the action took place. E. H. Calvert, the director of the play, took a company of players to Chattanooga, Tenn., and from there they went back into the Tennessee mountains, taking scenes on Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Chickamauga Park, Signal Mountain, and many other famous battlegrounds of the South.

The Northern scenes were made in New York City and in Chicago.

SAME SERVICE FOR SHORT RELEASES AS LONG PICTURES IS GAUMONT PLAN FOR EXHIBITORS

BELIEVING that it is the best policy to give purchasers of shorter features the same service they get when buying a Gaumont five-reel feature, the Gaumont company has provided a picked cast for its first three-reel release. The story is "Armadale," from the novel of the same name by Wilkie Collins. To inaugurate these photoplays Gaumont presents in "Armadale," Iva Shepard and Alexander Gaden, stars of such productions as "The Haunted Manor" and "The Drifter." Playing with them are Lucille Taft, Kathleen Butler, Henry W. Pemberton, Robert Clugston, John Reinhard, Charles A. Travis, James Levering, John Mackin and Harry Chira.

These three-reel Gaumont productions are to be released as Mutual Pictures, one every other week. The first will be seen on the screen May 25. The features are being made by the Gaumont company to supply the needs of vaudeville houses and summer theatres which do not charge enough to warrant running a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, since the spectators can only be given five reels at the most.

In "Armadale" these Gaumont players are said to have done some of their best work. The Wilkie Collins story gives prominence to so many characters that unusual opportunities have been given to a great many Gaumont favorites in addition to the stars. Mr. Gaden is seen in the role of Ozias Midwinter, son of the adopted Alan Armadale. Miss Stepard returns in this photodrama to an adventuress role, being cast as the malevolent Miss Gwilt. Robert Clugston appears as the cast-off son of the house of Armadale, losing his life at last in the looked stateroom aboard ship.

CLARY, LEADING MAN ON SPEAKING STAGE, JOINS FOX UNDER WALSH

Charles Clary, a well-known leading man in the theatre, has joined the William Fox organization and has reported for work in a picture now being made in California, Arizona and other sections of the southwest under the direction of Raoul A. Walsh. Clary has played heavy leads with some of the best known dramatic stars. He played in New York with Mary Mannering and in "The Road to Yesterday." He portrayed the leading male role on tour with Mrs. Leslie Carter.

This is by no means his first venture into pictures. He worked for four years with the Selig companies on the Pacific Coast, played eight months with the Griffith companies and appeared in the first multiple reel picture ever made in the United States. He also played in the first of the serial stories, "The Adventures of Kathlyn" with Kathlyn Williams. He was also seen in "Tennessee's Pardner" and in "The Black List."

"FLIRTING BRIDE," WITH JACKIE SAUNDERS, FROM KNICKERBOCKER, MAY 26

"The Flirting Bride," featuring Jackie Saunders, is the Kickerbocker Star release for May 26. It is a comedy drama concerning the bride's adventures after she started several flirtations with a soldier, a mysterious stranger and other inhabitants of a garrison town. The experience transforms her into a meek little matron who vows never to look at another man as long as she lives.

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS INCLUDE SAFETY FIRST ON RAILROADS AND TRAFFIC SQUAD AT DRILL

PARAMOUNT'S table of contents for its "magazine on the screen," the Pictograph, issued the week of May 21, includes physical training for "Better Babies," 'The Making of a Cop," "The Aerial Pocket Camera," a continuation of the "Preparedness' Series, "Arm or Surrender," and "The House That Jack Built," showing how a railroad instills the principles of Safety First in its employes.

Nursery adages may be as changeable as the seasons, this release of the Pictograph shows. Small tots no longer hear the admonition to "toe out" or walk the old-fashioned way with toes turned toward ten minutes to two. "Better Babies" walk Indian-foot to avoid broken arches and flat feet. Correct methods of breathing, sitting, standing and walking are also demonstrated in these films. Heads, hips, shoulders and heels touch the wall in the correct standing posture assumed by perfect children.

Traffic cops of a big city are most carefully drilled in their duties. How the well-trained blue-coated officers are fitted to become guardians of the law, is shown in another Pictograph feature. "The House That Jack Built," the Grand Central car equipped with a motion picture machine, which is sent all over the country to instruct railway employes in the fundamentals of the Safety First campaign, is seen, too, in interesting views to be presented in this release.

Colonel Heeza Liar becomes dissatisfied over the attitude shown toward "Preparedness" throughout the United States in the twenty-first release of the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons, "Colonel Heeza Liar Captures Villa." Starting out to clear up the situation, he interviews first Colonel Roosevelt, and later, William Jennings Bryan. Roosevelt gives him a fiery argument for preparedness and Bryan weeps on his shoulder over the country's plight. Unconvinced in either direction. Heeza Liar starts for the border to see the United States troops in action. Discovering that the nation spends $500 a minute to maintain its army in Mexico, he invents a gasoline mule and a preparation from which he makes gasoline at two cents a gallon. Carrying a bottle of the precious fluid in his pocket, he starts for the border on his mule, and finally, after many adventures, captures Villa.

"THE GUIDE," A PROSPECTIVE LEADER ON MUTUAL PROGRAM, NEARS COMPLETION

TWO five-reel subjects to be released as Mutual Masterpictures De Luxe, a three-reel feature and five two-reel releases are nearing completion in the American studios at Santa Barbara.

"The Guide," a drama of the North woods, featuring William Russell, the director, and Charlotte Burton, is the first of the longer length features, while the second is "A Man's Soul," directed by Edward Sloman, with Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie in the leading roles. The latter concerns a young physician, whose love for a girl stricken with leprosy leads him to join her at a leper colony.

"Madonna of the Night," with Nita Davis in the title role—a convent girl—is the three-reeler nearing completion under the direction of William Bertram.

Included in the two-reel subjects are "Circumstantial Evidence," a story of love, politics and newspaper life, with Edward Coxen, Lizette Thorne and George Field; "The Flickering Light," a story of a convict's troubles, featuring Harry Von Meter and Miss Davis; "Jealousy's First Wife," an apartment house drama, with Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat; "Jack," a Western, with Anna Little and Dick La Reno, and "The Blindness," with Rhea Mitchell, William Stowell and Roy Stewart.

JOCOSE "JENKINS' JINX," A JOLLY JUGGERNAUT OF JOY, JOINS JUBILEE OF JOVIAL JESTERS

"SKIRTS AND CINDERS," written by Rex Taylor and directed by Edwin McKim, is set for release by the Lubin Company on May 8 through the General Film Company. In this picture Davy Don falls heir to a greater swarm of tribulations than ordinarily may be compressed into one act. His assistants include Patsy De Forest, Florence Williams, Francis Joyner and George Egan.

"The Wheat and the Chaff," written by Joseph McLoughlin and directed by Melvin Mayo, under the personal supervision of Captain Wilbert Melville, is released by the Lubin Company on May 11 through the General Film Company. The cast includes Adelaide Bronti, Ruth Sayville, Evelyn Page, Cecil Van Auker, Allan Forrest, George Routh and Walter Spencer.

"Jenkins' Jinx," by Dave Reed, and made into a one-act comedy by Clay M. Greene for the Lubin Company, is released May 13, through the General Film Company. A particularly malevolent hoodoo causes baleful complications in a story revealed by June Daye, Adelaide Hayes, Margaret Moore, Francis Joyner, John Shermer and Kempton Greene.

TURPIN COMEDIES FOR VOGUE SET FOR EARLY RELEASE

First of the Vogue-Mutual comedies featuring Ben Turpin, late of Essanay, will be released shortly. This popular comedian has worked a lot of funny stuff into the reel, according to an announcement from the manufacturer.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE advent of two weeks of trade shows, calling for the presence of some of the most important stars at booths, balls and parades, has not been allowed to affect the routine at the big studios in the East. While production is still considerably lighter than it was three months ago, all the studios are working, and the visits of the stars to Grand Central Palace and Madison Square Garden have been so arranged as to prevent interference with any of the work in hand.

The Fort Lee studios of Fox, Paragon and Peerless, the Universal Heights studios, Famous Players and Metro are all reported working at usual speed, and a number of attractive new releases are announced as ready. Most of the Gaumont and Thanhouser people who have been working through the winter and spring at Jacksonville, are now back, and will immediately commence work at the New Rochelle and Flushing studios. The last of the Gaumont contingent is due home on May 25.

After a visit of almost three months, David Horsley has left New York for the studios at Los Angeles. Besides supervising a number of productions to be released in forthcoming months through Mutual, Mr. Horsley will assume complete charge of the transporting of the collection of Bostock animals to the East. These animals, with their trainers, headed by Captain Jack Bonavita, will be a featured attraction of Luna Park during the coming season.

A specially equipped train, comprised of twelve cars, will be used in the transportation of the collections, one of the largest in this country.

First appearance of Gertrude McCoy, the Gaumont-Mutual star, on Broadway, after an absence of six weeks in Jacksonville, Fla., was marked by a series of adventures, which unfortunately no cameraman was on hand to photograph.

Adventures of Gertrude in Two Reels

Adventure No. 1 happened at Fiftieth street and Broadway, when a driver of a heavily-laden truck drove his team into the rear of Miss McCoy's automobile, smashing the fender and otherwise mussing up the machine. Miss McCoy, thoroughly angered, gave chase and soon a corps of sympathetic motorists joined her. Miss McCoy caught up with the driver at Ninth avenue and Fiftieth street, and, jumping from her machine, held the driver until the arrival of a minion of the law.

Adventure No. 2 occurred a few minutes later, when Miss McCoy, still at the wheel, drove her machine into a jam of traffic, colliding with the rear of a trolley. Further damage, that will compel the car to remain in "dead storage" for a time, resulted.

"Come North at the first approach of the hot weather," was the text of a telegram sent Director Edwin Middleton, in charge of the Gaumont-Mutual players at Jacksonville, by General Manager F. G. Bradford, a few days ago. "It can't come too soon for me," replied Middleton.

Sidney J. Vaughn, who has acted all winter as office manager for the Gaumont company at Jacksonville, Fla., will come North with the Gaumont stock companies at the end of May. To Mr. Vaughn will probably be assigned many of the technical details of production.

Dorothy Bernard, the William Fox star, is the honor guest at the Cleveland Leader's motion picture ball. The Cleveland newspaper is making much of the popular player, and during her stay in Cleveland has arranged many receptions in her honor.

Director Will S. Davis, Fuller Mellish and an entire company of William Fox stars and players have departed for Savannah, Ga., where they will spend the next two weeks completing Virginia Pearson's third picture since she joined the Fox organization.

Two beautiful and clever children, William and Ethel Stewart, are appearing with Theda Bara in a new William Fox photoplay. This is their first appearance in a Fox film.

"The Light of Dusk" is the title of the feature photoplay undertaking announced by the Lubin company on which work was started this week in the Philadelphia studios.

This will represent another departure by the Lubin company from the field of novels and stage dramas as subjects for screen plays.

"The Light of Dusk" is from an original scenario by Anthony P. Kelly. The direction has been entrusted to Edgar Lewis, who has just completed Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman's photoplay, "The Toilers," for the Lubin company.

A real alligator fight, one of the rarest things seen by human eyes, was caught by the cameraman of the Mirror Films, Inc., during the recent trip of an organization from that company to Jacksonville, Fla., and will be seen on the screen in a coming Nat Goodwin comedy put out by the Mirror.

Charles Roe Keilty, a former newspaper advertising man, who has been acting as purchasing agent for Mirror, is going to be an actor. That is, he is if he cares to, He was dragged into a Nat Goodwin scene in an emergency at the Mirror studio, and played the "bit" so well that he has been offered a small part in the next picture which is begun at the studio.

Cunningham Made Studio Manager

Jack Cunningham, formerly telegraph editor of the New York Sun, who has been handing out the publicity matter printed about Mirror, has been made studio manager of the Mirror studio at Glendale, Long Island. He will continue to handle the publicity. Hector J. Streyckmans, the recent studio manager, has been made as-

Marie Dressler was a visitor with old friends at the Mirror studio, the other day. She was not thrown out; neither did she throw anyone else out. The affair passed off quietly and without broad comedy.

"Babe" Hardy, the famous "Plump" of Vim comedies, last week signed a two-year contract with Louis Burstein at the Jacksonville studios, stipulating for his appearance once a week in the ludicrous "fat fellow" roles which he has made his specialty.

The Vim organization thus lines up a large aggregation of comedy talent. Recently Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby joined the Vim ranks, and their first release will shortly be announced. Bob Burns and Walter Stull, of "Pokes and Jabbs" fame, have become a Vim institution. Last, but not least, there is pretty Elsie MacLeod, whose vivacious blondness has endeared her to the fans. There are now four comedy companies working at the Jacksonville studios, and the Eastern studios are being made ready for their occupation during the summer months.

At the Famous Players studio the other day no less than six bedroom sets were all complete on the big floor. And over in the far corner there stood a perfectly appointed dining room, apparently ready for the accommodation of the guests.

The erection of these six bedroom sets, which ranged from a typical slum dive to a palatial chamber, was merely a matter of coincidence arising from the fact that the various productions then under way required settings of this nature. It is the first time that such a large number have ever been built at the same time, as the studio routine generally calls for as many different backgrounds as there are pictures.

High Cost of Steak After Famous Melee

Players assembled at the Famous Players studio last week for a big dance hall scene in "The World's Great Snare," in which Pauline Frederick plays the stellar role, wondered just what was going to happen when they heard that a doctor had been engaged to remain in the studio in case of urgent necessity for his services arising.

But they were not long kept in suspense. They were informed that a gang of tough miners would break up the show in the dance hall and that they were to repel the invasion. There followed one of the most desperate fights that has ever taken place in a motion picture studio, a free-for-all, in which the chief idea of everybody concerned seemed to be to foster the activities of the Undertakers' Association.

After the melee had quieted down it was found that nobody had really been injured, though the doctor was called upon to examine several bruises and a few bumps. It is authoritatively reported that the price of steak in the butcher shops immediately adjacent to the Famous Players studio rose meteorically because of the sudden great demand from persons who seemed anxious to hide certain portions of their faces while making the purchase.

Many are the applications which reach the motion picture director, but one made to Fred Thomson, of the Famous Players Company, while he was in Georgia directing Hazel Dawn in "The Feud Girl," is unique.

A weather-beaten, grizzled old mountaineer had been engaged for one day in order that Hazel Dawn might be photographed riding in his picturesque ox-cart. For these services he received three dollars. The following morning he was on hand bright and early with the first stiff white collar that he had ever owned.

"Say, boss," he asked Thomson, "any chance of gettin' a reg'lar job at this-here pitcher actin'? I can make a heap-sight more money at it than freightin' an' I like the work, too."

He is still freightin'."

Five playing companies of the World Film Corporation, working under the Brady-made regime, are away, seeking the elusive local color and atmosphere.

Mollie King, Arthur Ashley and a supporting cast of fifteen players under the direction of Edwin August are at Asheville, N. C., where the first co-star picture these two have appeared in, "Contrary Mary," will be staged.

Gail Kane and House Peters are at Washington, D. C., where, midst the wondrous Federal buildings, under Maurice Tourneur's supervision, scenes are being staged for the forthcoming production of "The Velvet Paw," in which Peters and Miss Kane are co-starring.

June Elvidge, with a supporting cast and under the guidance of Frank Crane, are aboard a warship bound for Hampton Roads, Va., where, during the spring maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet, a number of scenes for use in "Reparation" will be made.

For the Holbrook-Blinn picture, "The Prima Donna's Husband," in which Clara Whipple and Julius Stegar are featured, members of the acting cast at the Casino theatre, at Broadway and Thirty-ninth street, were secured from Messrs. Shuberts, and for the past two weeks, at intervals when the theatre is not in use by the "Blue Paradise" company, scenes requisite to the original scenario are staged with an audience of over six hundred picked people.

Muriel Ostriche and Carlyle Blackwell, playing opposite each other in "Molly o' Pigtail Alley," are en route to a small city in the Middle West, where the foundation of the play was laid and where, according to the author, every feature, every character and every incident mentioned in the tale can be carried out, because they exist and are lasting features in the section of the town described by the authors.

Robert Warwick, playing in "Friday the 13th," the first film play from the pen of Thomas W. Lawson, the noted financier and fictionist, will work along for several more weeks at the Peerless studios, then visit the stock exchange at Boston and Chicago.

BERNSTEIN RESIGNS FROM WORLD FILM

Isidor Bernstein, director general of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation since the organization of that concern, and producing manager of World Film since the reorganization of the two companies, resigned from the latter company this week, to take effect immediately.

It was upon the advice of his physician that Mr. Bernstein gives up his place and retires, for the time being at least, to his farm at Saddle River, N. J.

Bernstein has been an exceptionally busy man at the various World and Equitable studios. Refusing assistance, insisting upon giving his own attention to every detail assigned him by the company, he will hie himself to the farm, there to consider a number of offers he has received since rumor stated he was leaving World Film.

Mr. Bernstein carries the best wishes of the entire organization with him.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, May 6.

THE Orient is to be invaded by the Signal Film Corporation's producing company, according to plans perfected by Director J. P. McGowan, who, with a company composed of Helen Holmes as star, and a supporting cast, will leave for Honolulu May 17.

An attempt is now being made to secure suitable stories for Philippine and Japanese atmosphere, and if this is successful the company will in all probability extend the trip that far. At the present time but one subject has been secured, a five-reel feature, entitled "Diamond Runners." This is being put into scenario form by Mr. McGowan, and calls for many boat scenes and a decided tropical atmosphere, possible to secure only in the Hawaiian Islands. Before the departure of the producing company, they will complete "Whispering Smith," and its sequel, "Medicine Bend," both in five reels.

The company will be gone more than a month, and will be made up of the following players: Chance E. Ward, Thomas G. Lingham, Lee D. Maloney, William Brunton, S. A. Sues, the cameraman, and a full staff of property men and assistants. A complete equipment of artificial lighting effects will be taken in order that interior scenes may be taken on boat and at the islands.

Last week the Signal company staged a big wreck scene for "Medicine Bend," when a number of freight cars were shot over an embankment by a derailing switch and then burned in order to clear the track for the fast mail. The fire scenes were taken about dusk, and some very pleasing effects were secured. For other scenes in this story, a half-mile of track is being built by the Salt Lake company in the foothills between Los Angeles and Pasadena.

Workmen have been engaged for one week on construction of the Mabel Normand Film Company plant, and production of the first story was taken up there last week. Richard Jones, who has been affiliated with the Sennett-Keystone producing organization since shortly after its inception, has been selected as director for Miss Normand, and the first scenario was written by J. G. Hawks, of the Thomas H. Ince producing organization. All subjects filmed here will be of the nature of a comedy drama.

Begin Production on Mabel Normand Story

The new studio is located just off Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood, and is nestled away in a little valley where producing conditions will be at the best. The stage is 60 by 100 feet, and it is understood this will later be enlarged. Already ten dressing rooms have been erected, and within a few days offices, scene docks, and property rooms will be built. It is anticipated that the first Mabel Normand Key-Bee subject, made under the supervision of Mr. Ince, will not be released until in June.

Horace Davey and a company of Nestor players are filming a one-reel Western comedy, entitled "Nearly a Hero," with Neil Burns and Dave Morris as rival cowboys for the hand of the sheriff's daughter, Betty Compson. Harry Rattenberry is the sheriff and Stella Adams his wife.

Upon advice from the New York office of the Universal company, production on the serial "Peg O' the Ring" was discontinued last week at the West Coast studios, after five episodes had been completed with Ruth Stonehouse appearing as star. Information received at Universal City is to the effect that the serial will be completed by Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, who recently left the Universal Company after completing five episodes. It is definitely stated, however, that the production will not be made at Universal City, but at this time it is not known what studio will be used. The company may work in the east, or may use a Hollywood studio.

Director Jaccard, who has been in charge of the filming of this, has been assigned to the making of Western dramas, with Harry Carey in the leading role. A story for this company is now being prepared by the Universal scenario staff, and production will be taken up within a few days.

Perhaps "Traveling Salesman" for Rawlinson

Herbert Rawlinson, who has played in the "Black Box" mystery, a leading part in "Damon and Pythias," and featured in many Universal two- and three-reel subjects, is soon to be cast as star of a Bluebird or Red Feather feature, which will be made under the direction of his present director, William Worthington. An effort is being made at this time to secure motion picture rights for "The Traveling Salesman," but nothing definite concerning this has been received at the West Coast studio.

In the meantime, Mr. Worthington is directing a two-reel drama, with Rawlinson in the leading part, and Agnes Vernon playing the opposite lead, supported by William Quinn as heavy and William Canfield in the character part.

Walter Woods, of the Universal scenario staff, has adapted for the screen another of the Lincoln J. Carter melodramas. This on the stage was known as "Just a Woman's Way," but for the screen has been named "The Lure of a Lurid Love." This play of twenty years ago was so well known in its day that introduction now is unnecessary. Roy Clements is directing the production, and the "melodrammers" are Hayward Mack, Roberta Wilson, Adele Farrington, Marcia Moore, and Malcolm Blevins.

The second of the baseball series to be known as "Baseball Bill," is now in production under the direction of Smiling Billy Mason. Many of the big punches of this comedy are occasioned by a new device for "Preparedness" in the form of a powerful magnet which snatches all metal from the hands of the enemy. In this Bill and Penpoints have some very notable experiences when they are overtaken by old man Hard Luck. The coming genius of the diamond, in order to satisfy his hunger, is forced to wear the garb of a woman, playing the role of a hash slinger, where he wooes the Swede who owns the beanery. Supporting Mason in this are O. C. Jackson, Al. Russell, and Victor Potel.

Director George Cochran is engaged in filming a one-reel Western drama, with a cast composed of E. J. Denecke, Marjorie Ellison, Zoe Beck, Buster Emmons and Bert Law. The story pertains to a Western gambler, who when knocked down by the storekeeper for insulting his wife, attempts to cause the wife suffering and humiliation. The photoplay, which is by Calder Johnstone, gets its name from the act performed by little Zoe Beck, who shoots the intruder in the eye with her pop-gun. The title is "Pinkey's Bull's-eye."

Only Three Roles in "Wolves"

A two-reel Universal film now being made is entitled "When the Wolves Howl." This is under the direction of Cleo Madison, and is from a scenario by W. V. Mong, who plays the leading part opposite Miss Madison, that of an unfortunate artist. There are but three principal parts in the story, that of the artist and his wife and their benefactor. The latter was played by Bertram Grassby.

The Allen Curtis Joker Comedy Company is filming "Love Quarantined," wherein father does not have his way in picking the husband for his only daughter. For the father does not like the young man who is loved by the daughter. He induces the health officer to quarantine the house to prevent the marriage. In the several weeks that follow, father learns of his mistake. The cast for this includes Lillian Peacock, William Franey, Gale Henry and Charles Conklin.

Dr. H. G. Stafford, scenario editor of Universal City, has been out getting recreation for the past week by playing the leading part in a race-track melodrama being filmed by Director Henry McRae.

The race scenes were made at Tia Juana, Mexico, where all of the horses were secured for the scenes by H. L. Massie, who accompanied the producing company. The cast for this picture includes Marie Walcamp, E. N. Wallock, L. C. Shumway, Lee Hill and Clara Horton.

"The Transformation" is the title given a two-reel Universal subject being filmed from a scenario by E. J. Clawson. The plot hinges upon an argument of two men as to whether inherent ways can be changed, one contending that ladies and gentlemen are born, not made. An experiment is tried wherein a girl of the slums is secured and tutored. It is found she has all the attributes of a lady, thus proving the contention of one. The other acknowledges defeat by wooing the reformed woman. The cast for this includes Douglas Girrard, Rupert Julian, Elsie Jane Wilson and Doc. Crane, and the direction is in charge of Julian.

M. G. Jonas, manager publicity department of Universal City, together with Mrs. Jonas, were called to San Francisco last week when their daughter Helen was taken dangerously ill with appendicitis. An operation was necessary immediately, and the daughter underwent this before the parents arrived. Advice from Mr. Jonas is to the effect that his daughter is improving.

Changes Costumes Eighteen Times

Myrtle Stedman, starred in the Morosco-Pallas subject, "The American Beauty," has been having unusual trials and tribulations. Miss Stedman appears in three parts —a girl in her teens, when she is grown up, and also in the part of the mother. The three parts caused a change of costume and make-up eighteen times in one day, and then it was learned that a broken camera made it necessary to retake all scenes the following day.

Walter Klintberg, who for the past eighteen months has been with the Keystone company and performed many of the hazardous automobile and motorcycle acts, is at a Los Angeles hospital hovering between life and death with two broken legs, fractured hip bone, and concussion of the brain. The injuries were sustained when he was riding a motorcycle to a beach town to spend Sunday. There is little hope for his recovery.

Co-Director and Scenario Writer Harry Williams, of the Mack Sennett Keystone staff, was operated on at a local hospital this week for appendicitus. He rallied from the operation, and physicians announce there is every indication for his speedy recovery.

Charles Stark, manager of the commercial department of the Essanay company, Chicago, accompanied by W. F. Kuehl, cameraman, is making a trip over the Western states securing material for the Essanay Weekly Pictorial, and looking after other business of the company.

Members of the Static Club were given a highly educational talk on the subject of colored photography at their club rooms recently by Messrs. Crandall, Miller and Payne, who are in Los Angeles making Little Billy Jacobs, five-year-old child actor who recently appeared with Marie Doro in the Lasky production, "The Heart of Nora Flynn," has been engaged to play in support of Victor Moore in "The Clown." This subject is under the direction of William C. deMille.

The last scenes for "The Thousand Dollar Husband," Lasky subject, starring Blanche Sweet, were made last week under the direction of James Young. On the afternon of the same day work on the next production, starring Miss Sweet, was taken up, the title of which has not been made known. The supporting cast includes Tom Meighan, Horace B. Carpenter, Ernest Joy, Lucien Littlefield, and others. The story for this was written by Hector Turnbull, and will be under the direction of Frank Reicher.

Fannie Ward and Jack Dean, of the Lasky company, are on a six-weeks' vacation which they will spend in New York.

The Imperial theatre of San Francisco has issued an invitation to Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese star actor of the Lasky company, to attend a celebration given in his honor, May 7 to 10, inclusive. A number of dinners and receptions are also being planned by influential Japanese residents of San Francisco. Kenneth McGaffey, of the Lasky publicity department, will accompany Mr. Hayakawa.

Director Wallace McDonald, of the American Film Company of Santa Barbara, will shortly leave on a six-months' vacation, which he will spend visiting his mother in Halifax. He will also spend some time in the East.

The Rube Miller Vogue Company is filming an apartment house comedy, with the usual cast.

David Horsley, according to telegraphic advices received at the studio here, has made an extended engagement with the management of Luna Park, on Long Island, N. Y., for the Bostock trained animals show there, and the studio staff in Los Angeles are now busy with the preparations necessary for the shipment. A special train will be used over the Salt Lake, Union Pacific and Pennsylvania railways, leaving Los Angeles within the next ten days. A very large portion of the animals will be retained at the Horsley jungle zoo studio in Los Angeles for work in two-reel animal dramas for the Mutual program.

This arrangement by Mr. Horsley will greatly reduce the staff at the studio, in that it takes many of the well-known trainers and players to the East. Included in this list are Vera Robson, who has played many parts and doubled for others in which animals were seen; M. Tietz, the elephant trainer; Mlle. Ottawa, South American Puma trainer; Mme. De Orci, character actress and lion trainer; S. Batty, character man and animal trainer; Thomas Hayes, animal trainer; Ernest Capon, and the boxing kankaroo, Orra Cecil, J. A. McField, Marie Gavette, ingenue and trainer of polar bears, and a number of others. Captain Jack Bonavita, perhaps the best-known animal trainer in America, will remain at the studios to supervise the making of all animal scenes. It is understood that following this engagement the animals will be returned.

Advice from the Kalem company, aboard ship for the filming of exterior and interior scenes for the thirteenth episode of the "Social Pirates," "In the Service of the State," is to the effect that they are encountering the most satisfactory weather for picture making, and securing scenes not anticipated. The company left Los Angeles by boat the latter part of last week, and will not land until they reach Seattle. Director James Horne is accompanied by the entire company, a full crew of property men, electricians and carpenters. The boat was especially equipped for the making of interior scenes while en route. The players with Director Horne are Marin Sais, Ollie Kirkby, Frank Jonasson, E. Forrest Taylor, R. E. Bradbury and R. L. Dell. During the absence of the company, a large salon set is being built at the Glendale studio, which will be used for interiors for this episode, upon the return of the company.

No More 5-Reel Horsley Subjects

Another change at the Horsley studios is the discontinuance of the filming of five-reel subjects released as Mutual Masterpictures de luxe. Director Robert Broadwell, who has been charge of the making of these, together with his star, Crane Wilbur, will for the immediate future make two-reel subjects.

The last five-reel picture entitled "Wasted Years" is finished, and a feature of this was a gorgeous cafe interior, in the scenes of which cabaret entertainers from local cafes took a prominent part. The set occupied the two-hundred-foot exterior stage, using practically all of the space.

The first two-reel subject to be made by Broadwell and Wilbur is known under the working title of "The King O' Hearts," which was originally intended for a five-reel picture. The punch of this story has been retained, and it is believed it will make an extraordinary short story.

The animal company directed by Charles Swickard, with Margaret Gibson, William Clifford, Fred Montague and Al. Garcia, is filming a British East Indian story by Theodosia Harris. "Monty," the large Bostock animal, plays a very important part in this picture. William Clifford can conveniently play the role of an injured army officer in this, as in the making of one of the final scenes for "Scales of Justice," in which he had an encounter with a grizzly bear, he was bitten on the right hand and left arm.

The Horsley Cub Comedy of the week is entitled "Jerry's Big Lark," with George Ovey, Claire Alexander, Jeanette Sully, George George and Louis Fitzroy.

Napoleon and Sally, the near-human chimpanzees, last week eloped from a museum, and, to escape the trainers, become second-story workers, entering the home of a wealthy man and frighten the children, who hid under the bed. The chimps take their place in the bed. There they are when crooks come who had planned to kidnap the millionaire's children. The chimps are taken to the rendezvous of the kidnappers, where they almost instantaneously prove that a ransom is not necessary. The chase that followed ended on top of a telephone building, and when the players and chimps fell through an opening in the roof, the service of the telephone plant was temporarily discontinued, the picture people having alighted on a net work of wires which they disconnected. Besides the chimps, Lillian Leighton, Ralph McComas, Charles Carter and the company's new ingenue, Annette De Foe, appear in this picture.

James L. McKee is expected in Los Angeles within the next few days to take up the management of the Selig Polyscope interests here, he having been at Chicago in the similar capacity at the studios there where "The Crisis" is being made by Colin Campbell.

Preparations have been under way for several weeks for the filming of "The Valiants of Virginia," which will be a screen adaptation of the Hallie Erminie Rives novel of the same name. Sets and costumes being ready, production was started last week under the direction of T. H. Heffron. The subject will be in five reels, and the cast will consist of practically every member of the Los Angeles studio stock company. Kathlyn Williams will be starred in this. Others to appear in this are Lillian Hayward, Vivian Reed, Frank Clark, James Bradbury, Al. W. Filson, and many others. The photoplay will have a number of very strong parts, taken by the above-named players.

Brothers Have Eye on Same Girl

The filming of "The Reprisal," a three-reel story featuring Fritzi Brunnette as the simple country girl, wooed by two brothers, still occupies the attention of Director Robert Daly and players, with Jack Pickford and Guy Oliver in the roles of the brothers.

The Kalem Ham Comedy Company is filming water stuff at Hollenbeck Park, Los Angeles, where Director Harry Edwards has Lloyd Hamilton walking on the water, following a Hindoo giving him the mystic power. By this means he is able to save the life of Norma Nichols. Bud Duncan figures in the story as the financier who corners gasoline, which then keeps going up. Others unite with him in this, and in the end they all go up.

Director Harry Millard is filming "Ethel's Strategy," a one-reel comedy, with Ethel Teare in the name part.

The Hazards company has just completed the making of "A Girl and Her Horse," to be released as one of the "Hazards of Helen." In this, Helen Gibson's horse, "Hazard," was badly injured when it leaped from a railroad platform to a flat car of a moving train.

The "mystery" photoplay of the Fine Arts studio, which stars Mae Marsh and Robert Harron, and contains but one or two interior scenes, has been completed, and is now being cut and assembled. These players are now securing costumes for an Irish story which is to be filmed by the same director, Paul Powell. The locale of this is Wexford County, and the story has the atmosphere of Lever's Irish rural novels. The scenario is by Granville Warwick. The supporting cast will include Walter Long, James O'Shea, Kate Bruce and Edwin Harley.

Another director was added to the producing staff at the Fine Arts studio last week when Chester Withey, who for the past two years has been a member in the capacity of actor and scenario writer, was promoted to the ranks of director. The first story he will be in charge of filming is that entitled "The Dope Fiend," of which Withey and Roy Summerville are co-authors. Norma Talmadge and Tully Marshall will be co-stars in this subject of five reels, Miss Talmadge appearing in the part of an artist's model. She is a woman of a self-sacrificing nature, who thinks she is deeply in love with the artist. This causes development of character, and she makes a heroic reformation, thus setting an example for the man she loves. Marshall is the artist who yields to temptation, Marguerite Marsh appears as his wife, a loyal and devoted one.

MARY McDONALD (Universal)

MAE MARSH AND ROBERT HARRON IN "A CHILD OF THE PARIS STREETS," FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE

Filming of five Fine Arts subjects has been completed within the last few days, and will shortly be ready for release. Of this number, three have been named. "Casey at the Bat," with DeWolf Hopper, Marguerite Marsh, Frank Bennett, Kate Toncray, William Brown, Carl Stockdale and Loyola O'Connor; "Going Straight," starring Norma Talmadge, with Ralph Lewis, Eugene Pallette, and Kate Toncray; and "The Assassin," with Douglas Fairbanks as star, and a supporting cast which includes A. D. Sears, Jewel Carmen, Wilbur Higby, Margie Wilson and W. E. Lawrence. One of the other subjects has Lillian Gish as star, and the other Mae Marsh, Robert Harron and Wilfred Lucas.

Five Fine Arts Nearly Ready

Frank E. Woods, manager of the Fine Arts production, and Bernard McConville are co-authors of the photoplay in which Dorothy Gish will next be starred. The California hills and valleys will serve as the locations for this, with some of a rural character. Elmer Clifton will play opposite Miss Gish, and others named for this are Josephine Crowl, Jack Brammall, Hal. Wilson, and G. W. Blue, as well as the Fine Arts juvenile players. The Franklyn brothers will direct the filming of this, which as yet is untitled.

Lankershim, Cal., became Mudville last week when the exciting ball game for "Casey at the Bat" was filmed by Director Lloyd Ingraham. Two scrub baseball teams were organized, and there mighty Casey went to bat in the ninth inning and struck out. The punch of this story for the screen, which was prepared by William E. Wing, reveals the cause of Casey missing the flying sphere, which is indeed a great sacrifice. DeWolf Hopper, now that he has actually played the game, feels that he is capable of reciting "Casey at the Bat" eight thousand times more.

ANITA STEWART A NIHILIST IN "THE SUSPECT"

Anita Stewart, Vitagraph's star, will make her latest appearance in "The Suspect," a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, which is listed for release the latter part of May.

The theme of the story was taken from H. J. Dam's book entitled "The Silver Shell." S. Rankin Drew is responsible for the picturization as well as its direction. He also plays the lead opposite Miss Stewart.

Many Vitagraphers of prominence, including Anders Randolf, Julia Swayne Gordon, Bobby Connelly and Edward Elkas, appear in the cast with Miss Stewart. It also introduces Frank Wupperman, a new face in the big "V" films.

STRAND PAYS $1,500 FOR WEEK'S RUN OF GOLDBERG CARTOON

Pathé announces that the Strand theatre, New York, has paid $1,500 for one week's first run of "The Boob Weekly," the first Goldberg Animated Cartoon to be released. As this cartoon is but five hundred feet in length, the rental amounts to three dollars a foot for the week or, in running time of the picture, two hundred dollars per minute. The Goldberg Cartoons will be shown regularly at the Strand.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

THE show's the thing. It was last week and it still is. Look in at the Garden and see for yourself. The out-of-town exhibitors are still flocking in by special train, automobile and Pennsylvania Limited.

From no less assuming and modest an authority than E. Richard Schayer, who sent a photograph of Clara Kimball Young to the Mutual Welfare League at Sing Sing Prison, we glean that the convicts expressed their appreciation of the portrait in a long letter, which ended as follows:

"Thanking you again in behalf of the League for the beautiful picture, and hoping to have the pleasure of seeing you here soon, we remain, etc."

We refrain from comment, but it is, nevertheless, a fact that this letter was written some time after Mr. Schayer's portrait appeared in these pages.

One of the "fan" magazines thus describes Ormi Hawley: "A kiss seen through a microscope; a salad made from a chrysanthemum; an orchid drenched in the blood of a rose. If peaches were people—" And, may we add?—the third ace when the "pot" is raised; a new tire on a lonely road; the dash of lime in a gin rickey, and a layer of creme de menthe across the Hudson River!

One F. H. Richardson, who conducts a projection department for a weekly publication, circulating to a certain extent in the film industry, went to Pittsburgh recently to discuss facts and theories with the operators there. From reading his own account of the trip, we gather that he was received with all the wild acclaim usually accorded to a boil on the neck. When he went to union headquarters, some of the "brethren" went so far as to look up from their newspapers. When he visited a factory where operating machines are made, the superintendent was so glad to see him that he stopped work long enough to shake hands. The great get-together meeting he had planned ran afoul of a poker game, and the game won. Nothing daunted, however, Mr. Richardson, who is the same man who was hailed as "King," "Czar" and "Sultan," in St. Louis, announces in the same department as his report of the Pittsburgh visit that he contemplates another swing through the South and way stations. We are offering nineteen to three that his reception in Pittsburgh this time will be—well, different.

By printing a piece of doggerel in reply to a little tripping lyric of our own, we sure let down the bars. Comes Harry Reichenbach with the following offering, which he deposes and says that on information and belief is the work of the office cat:

"If the papers are not with you and things are coming bad,
And the well-known General Manager is feeling rather sad;
If passion begins surging, and each hour grows more surger,
You can get a half a column if you'll just start a merger.
You have to pardon the English, and the use of surge and surger,
I couldn't find another word that I could rhyme with merger."

We didn't urge the cat to write—we're not that kind of urger, nor would we give a lot of space to news of any merger.

There are fads in the motion picture industry, just the same as in crochetting, gardening, or the manner of buttoning one's vest. Recently one of these fads has been to print pictures of the Talmadge girls. We aim to be up to date, and we present herewith a picture which we have just received from the West Coast. Unfortunately, although we recognize the familiar Talmadge features in at least one of the faces, there is no way of telling just which is which. Not that there is any striking resemblance in this picture. Heaven forfend! We are merely shy on the information, thassall.

We have mislaid a lot of our old schoolbooks. So we ask in all sincerity: when two new sides are added to a Triangle, what does it become? Gus, will you kindly page Mr. Euclid.

Who says that press-agentry is without its erudition? From two short yellow pages, evidently from the hand of H. H. Van Loan, suggesting in an offhand way that Matt Moore and Jane Gail are engaged, we cull the following gems of Beaumont-and-Fletcherization: "sub rosa," "en tapinois," "entre nous," "en couvert," "Cuban moon," "vinculum matrimonii," "on dit," "Hymen, sing us an epithalamium," "Darby and Joan."

Meticulous, as ever, Ben Atwell, in his Rialto Magazine Program, projects "virtuosi." And we offer fifteen to three that when he has occasion, from his "editorial eyrie at the top of the world," Ben will refer to scenaria. Ben learned all about plurals in the old Hippodrome days.

Governor Whitman on April 24 signed the bill prohibiting the employment of children under sixteen in the making of motion pictures. It isn't as important as it sounds, as Mary Miles Minter is going to California to work, anyway.

Al. E. Christie, producer of comedies for the Universal, who called at this office with David Horsley last week, tells us that our own red-headed Mr. Jessen is "the livest man on the coast." He says he has seen him in action, and he knows. We have seen him in action, and we know. The boss, we understand, has seen him in action, and he knows.

CANTO II.

Come, now, three names which even I
  With all my mental acquisitions,
Have been compelled to pause and try
  In both of two suppcsed renditions.
Full many books did I consult;
  I questioned cops most circumspectly,
And now, as one concrete result,
  I tell you how they're said correctly:

"When Fame first roused desires to have 'er,
I used to think his name was Raver;
But now she's here, she's brought one favor:
The knowledge that his name is Raver."

"And many men have hit the rocks
By reference to Lee S. Ochs;
But down in Fortieth street, the folks
With one consent all call him Ochs."

"And since there's nothing now to hinder
A tip to those who speak of Binder,
These lines may serve as a reminder—
To be correct, just call him Binder."

And now, because my writing fist
  Is under-paid, and poorly sinewed,
I'll end my pedagogic list;
  But weep not, 'tis

Marc Edmund Jones, pioneer free lance author of the picture field, has resigned from the World and Equitable Film Corporations, and will return to writing as a free lance. His work will be handled entirely through the Authors' Associated Agency in the Longacre Building, New York City.

Mr. Jones returns to his typewriter after nearly a year's absence, his work with the Equitable and World being entirely technical and executive in character. He was originally associated with the Equitable at its inception, as scenario editor.

ILLUSTRATING SOME OF THE STIRRING BATTLE SCENES IN THOMAS DIXON'S "THE FALL OF A NATION"

THE DIARY OF SAMUEL PEPYS

May 1. Up to find that the day is an unpleasant one, and that the scallions I did plant above a fortnight ago are still below ground. To the city by train, and having forgotten to purchase a commuting billet, am compelled to pay one shilling and six for my passage; yet do I find many upon the train, in especial Tommy Geraghty, the publicity writer, who says this is a lucky day by the horoscope. The great exposition in Grand Central Palace is open today, and I am compelled to pay two shillings for admittance, for that I have yielded to the beseechings of May and Lillian that I shall give them tickets, and I surrender my last two, which probably I would do again. Saw Milton Work, the editor of plays, who on seeing me, cried: "How now, Mr. Pepys; and if you will send me more of your scrivening, mayhap I will buy it," which, God wot, I shall do. Home early, that I may plant rose trees on the lawn.

May 2. A fair day, as befits the month. On the train with George Irving and Harry Reichenbach; they talking continually of their petroleum wagons; yet Harry's words the more sprightly, for that he says: "Mr. Pepys, will you ride to Lakewood with me; come Sunday," which I hold to be interesting conversation. Meeting on the street Marshal Farnum, the picture maker, who telleth me of having to retake five thousand feet because that his operator is unworthy; and this, I hold, should break the heart of many a strong man. Did visit the picture exposition again this day, where are come Mr. Rolfe, the art director, and J. Brandt, the master of men, and countless others. Received much gossip of the studios from Ben. Schulberg, all very interesting. Home by train with Clifford Bruce, the Bayside actor.

Says a "certain morning newspaper," more explicitly, the Morning Telegraph, speaking of the late Grand Central Palace Exposition: "The stars who appeared at the Vitagraph booth included ..... * * * .....Lawrence Semon ..... * * * ..... Twinkle, twinkle, little star.

ANITA STEWART WILL LEAD MARCH IN PHILADELPHIA

Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, will lead the grand march and be the guest of honor at the film ball to be held in Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, May 29, in aid of the Actors' Fund.

Dixon Picture Gives Survey of Human Freedom

Progress of the World's Struggle Between Liberty and Tyranny from 1550 A. D. Down to Our Own Time Is Picturized in "The Fall of a Nation"—Love Story Is in Main Plot

ALTHOUGH the synopsis of Thomas Dixon's historical epic, "The Fall of a Nation," has not been given out, advance descriptions indicate something of its character.

Dixon's previous "Clansman" scenario, out of which Griffith made "The Birth of a Nation," told the long history of slavery days very succinctly. But in the prologue of "The Fall of a Nation" Mr. Dixon undertook the task of tracing in a thousand feet of film the progress of the world's struggle twixt liberty and tyranny from 1550 A. D. down to the present, in the form of a prologue.

The successive flashes will show the human aspirations toward freedom culminating in the heritage of the American Republic. Church of England persecution of the Non-conformists; Catholic persecution of the Huguenots by revoking the Edict of Nantes; Russian Greek Church persecution of Jews and Catholics in Poland; the English Catholics' winning of freedom by founding the colony in Maryland; the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in Massachusetts; the exile of Roger Williams by the Congregationalists to Rhode Island and his friendly welcome by the Indians; the reading of President Monroe's historic message to Congress whereby he made both Americas nurseries of freedom; these are the links of a strongly welded chain of historic events working up to the big aim.

"The motion picture," observed Mr. Dixon who arrived not long ago in New York from Los Angeles, with "The Fall of a Nation" "is the finest vehicle of historic exposition ever devised. I can teach more history in fifteen minutes of motion pictures than in six months of the library or the class room. I have tried to show what America means to us, namely the polyglot nationalities of which we are composed. A rapid survey of nearly 400 years of history serves the purpose and leads up to the story of 'The Fall of a Nation' proper which tells what these polyglot peoples did when threatened by the extinction of the national life."

Mr. Dixon added that, mindful of the personal element so essential in popular entertainments, he had interwoven a love story with the main plot. This latter is said to turn at the end on the heroism of American women in coming to the rescue of their country when in the hands of a foreign Emperor leagued with traitors within our gates and in particular with a modern Benedict Arnold whose love of gold and power and whose foreign financial affiliations have caused him to espouse the Imperial side and have made him the Viceroy Governor-General of "the province of the United States."

The Dixon story was staged during the last eight months at and around the Dixon studios at Hollywood, Los Angeles, with Arthur Shirley and Lorraine Huling in the leading roles, the redoubtable Percy Standing as the Benedict Arnold, and C. E. Geldert as the Imperial commander. As announced last week, Victor Herbert was composing music which will be in active rehearsal in New York within the next ten days.

A production will be made at a first-class Broadway theatre in June, and simultaneously another production will be put on at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles. The executive offices are in the Longacre building under the style of the National Drama Corporation.

BRUCE TO GET ALASKA PICTURES FOR EDUCATIONAL FILMS COMPANY

Robert C. Bruce, director of scenic and adventure pictures for the Educational Films Corporation of America, will leave New York this week to prepare for his Summer work. Portland, Ore., will be headquarters of the expedition until the first of June, on which date departure will be taken for the Mt. McKinley region of Alaska, where the impressive volcanoes and glaciers of the section are to be photographed.

The party, in addition to Mr. Bruce, will consist of a cameraman, a packer, a cook, several horses and will carry complete equipment.

The Mt. McKinley region was selected by Mr. Bruce for the locale of his next work on account of the rare beauty of the surroundings and their general inaccessability to the average motion picture spectator. Some exceptional films are expected as the result of Mr. Bruce's efforts, when the party returns to this city in late September.

LOOKING IN ON US

LOOKING IN ON US

YOU, who have never visited the home of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, will find a real live interest, we believe, in these views of our offices.

We had them taken in order to make a visit to you, who cannot visit us.

If this publication has succeeded, as we believe it has, it must have established a feeling of kinship between its readers and itself. We hope it has. If so, you will have the same interest in our affairs which we feel in yours. You want to know and see the people who build this publication each week, and where and how they build it.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON, PRESIDENT MOTION PICTURE NEWS

FIRST, then, the editorial department: a staff of seven men,—editors, reviewers, interviewers, and last but not least in importance, a man who corrects release dates at the last moment—comprise this division of the staff.

Reviews of pictures we place first in importance. Our reviewing policy, followed constantly to the best of our ability, is to make these reviews honest and impartial. We realize fully this responsibility to our readers. If anyone believes otherwise, if any reader thinks that a trade paper must necessarily be swayed by its advertisers, we invite a single proof. We will publish the full details.

GODFREY BUILDING, THE HOME OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS, NEW YORK

WE have just this explanation to make. If we were reviewing pictures only for a string of similar theatres in similar towns, we could and would make our reviews more sharply critical. But we review, on the contrary, for ten thousand theatres of all sizes and kinds, scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in towns of the most varying tastes and requirements. We build our reviews necessarily to these broad specifications.

In news—facts, conciseness, comprehensiveness—MOTION PICTURE NEWS has, as you know, set a new standard in this newsy trade. That is due to two main factors. First, we have in every city, as a weekly newsgatherer, a picked newspaper man, one who knows news and its value. No trade publication in this country has a more sincere and capable staff. Secondly, our editors, the men who edit, arrange and display this volume of news each week, are also all newspaper men of desk experience.

So the news you get in the NEWS each week is pretty sure to be news.

The departments—projection, cameras, music, advertising—are written by contributing editors who are well known experts, the best we can find, regardless of any other consideration. In each issue appears the work of over fifty staff writers.

1—OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT. 2—OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY. 3—OFFICE OF THE TREASURER. 4—OFFICE OF THE MANAGING EDITOR. 5—OFFICE OF THE ADVERTISING MANAGER. 6—ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT. 7—EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT. 8—CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT. 9—ACCOUNTING DEPARTMENT. 10—EXHIBITORS' ROOM. 11—STOCK ROOM. 12—RECEPTION ROOM.

JUST one word more. MOTION PICTURE NEWS is a trade publication, altogether one, yet it is unlike any other trade journal. It is essentially a newspaper, because this trade is seething with weekly news. For your own edification compare MOTION PICTURE NEWS with any other trade publication and note its striking superiority in quantity and quality of editorial matter.

The advertising pages, too, are vastly different from those of any other trade paper. They change every week. They carry news every week—every week a fresh, new business announcement which concerns immediately your own weekly business. They are really news pages—as much so as any others.

THE LOS ANGELES MANAGER OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS, AND HIS TRAVELING "OFFICE"

SERVICE is the keynote of the advertising department—service to you, the reader, in gathering all the advertising of the current week, in helping you purchase reliable goods through our bureau of buyers' service.

Our circulation department means a lot to you. It has speeded up its wheels as is true of no other magazine we know of. It is more like a newspaper department.

ADVERTISING makes the mare go. It makes possible for you this publication of two hundred pages which costs us not twice, but many times over, as much as you pay for it. But in turn we give the advertiser a circulation only made possible by such an expensive, comprehensive, publication. Advertising makes circulation: but, equally, circulation makes advertising.

Comprehensiveness, too, in advertising means quite as much to you as comprehensiveness in editorial matter. You want all the business announcements each week; they are all essential to your business. MOTION PICTURE NEWS does not miss a single one. Every company that advertises at all advertises in its pages.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS goes to press Monday evening. Shortly after midnight the trucks are hurrying to catch the early morning mails out of New York. We get to you, wherever you are, before any other publication of the week.

Which ends our visit. We're glad to have seen you. Call again and call upon us for anything you want at any time.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

"BRADY-MADE" FEATURES FIND READY MADE FIELD IN KANSAS UNDER HANDS OF ROBINSON

BRADY-MADE features are starting out in the Kansas City territory with a rush that is keeping the people connected with the exchange working nights. Mr. Brady had invited the exhibitors of the territory to go to Kansas City on April 24 for the exhibition, and Richard Robertson, exchange manager, sent sixty-three night letters three days before the exhibition to Missouri and Kansas exhibitors. Twenty-two of them responded, one, H. R. Hamilton, manager of the Cozy theatre at Norton, Kan., coming from the extreme northwestern part of the state for the event. Of these visitors, twenty signed for the features while in Kansas City, one sent the contract later, and the last remaining one was only waiting to reach the conclusion of negotiations as to the sale of his theatre, before deciding. In Kansas City the feature of the booking is that the Regent theatre, has contracted for the Brady-made pictures.

The Kansas City office of the Universal Film Supply Company, reports that "The Adventures of Peg O' the Ring" is going in great shape. It is an acknowledged fact that serials in Kansas City are not taking as strong as heretofore, but on this over twenty houses have been booked. The Sapphire, a downtown theatre, has taken it for two days, securing the first city run. The release of the first episode was made on May 1.

Kansas Citians were interested in the news that J. C. Woolf, formerly with J. W. Morgan in Kansas City, and later with the Warner Feature Film Company, is now managing the Minneapolis office of the Unicorn Film Service.

Harry Rosenberg, who has for some time past been acting as a special representative for the Bluebird Photoplay Company, in this territory, has severed connections with the Kansas City office, and is now located with a Bluebird exchange in East. The Bluebird pictures here have taken hold in great style, and three salesmen are kept continually on the road making new contracts and handling old business.

The United Film Service at Kansas City, A. A. Chatkin, manager, is reaping the benefits now of much careful preliminary work with service, and is reaping results. One big feature will be released every week, together with the regular output, and the feature service will probably be increased to four a week. Among the items now being booked are "The Escape," "The Avenging Conscience," and May Ward in the Franklin feature, "Virtue."

H. J. Roberts, traveling representative of the Fox Film Corporation, visited Kansas City and some towns of the territory last week. Harry Leonhardt, district manager, went down from Chicago for a week, also E. H. Wachter, manager of the Kansas City Exchange, is making his first trip over the field since taking the office.

The Unicorn Film Service at Kansas City evidently got off on the right foot, for from the first day it has been almost overwhelmed with orders. Second week business was very large, and already there are bookings in Topeka, Springfield, St. Joseph, and other cities in the territory.

J. C. DeWalt, formerly salesman with the Universal Film and Supply Company, in the Oklahoma territory, has severed connections with that company and is now acting in the same capacity out of the Kansas City office of the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. DeWalt is an old and experienced man at the business and has a large acquaintance among many of the Missouri and Kansas exhibitors.

EDWARDS, ST. LOUIS, MAKES HIT AS A LIVE BOOKER; ROSENTHAL WINS CONTEST

GEORGE W. FULLER, manager of the World Film Exchange, at 3626 Olive street, St. Louis, has a new assistant in the person of E. E. Erickson, who has accepted the position of city representative for the corporation.

Fred A. Keller, head of the Mutual Film Corporation branch, at 1311 Pine street, St. Louis, was paid a visit recently by Edward Auger, special representative of the Mutual, on his periodical trip through the district.

The Searchlight, a trade paper published in St. Louis, recently conducted a popularity contest for people connected with the film industry in St. Louis territory. Barney Rosenthal, manager of the Universal exchange at 2116 Locust street, won the prize.

C. S. Edwards, head of the Pathé exchange at 3210 Locust street, St. Louis, made a hurried business trip to Kansas City during the week of May 1. Mr. Edwards is very proud of his showing as a serial booker. He has placed "The Iron Claw" in seventy-six theatres to date, and at the same time "The Red Circle" is running in something like sixty-four houses, a record-breaking boom in the serial business.

Roy Dickson, who has recently purchased the old Kriterion exchange and renamed it the Dickson Film Service, at 3217 Locust street, St. Louis, is away on a trip through the territory supplied through the St. Louis exchanges.

Nat E. Steinberg, an experienced film man, and well known to the trade in the Mississippi Valley, has become affiliated with the Unicorn Film Service, at 3628 Olive street, St. Louis, under the management of Sam Werner.

Herman Buechel, for the past five years connected with various exchanges in St. Louis, is now with the International Film Service, 3313 Olive street, of which E. W. Dustin is in charge.

Floyd Lewis, manager of the St. Louis branch of the Triangle Film Corporation, received a call from the district supervisor, Arthur Lucas, last week.

A. P. Lombard, of the Simplex company, spent two weeks in St. Louis recently, getting acquainted with the exchangemen and supply dealers of the city, as well as visiting a number of theatres in his rounds.

Sam Lears, of the Lears Theatre Supply Company, 509 Chestnut street, St. Louis, is gloating over a large deal for theatre equipment which he closed while down in Arkansas last week.

TELEGRAPH BLANKS USED BY SIGNAL TO S. O. S. EXHIBITORS TO "SUBMARINE" SHOWING

Sixty-two exhibitors of Los Angeles and contiguous territory, attended the pre-view of the first three chapters of the Mutual serial, "The Secret of the Submarine," now being made at the Santa Barbara studios. The invitations for the showing were printed on Federal Telegraph Co. receiving blanks, purporting to be S. O. S. The message printed thereon was in code, which carried the names of all the principals of the cast. Below was given a translation which read as follows: "Invention of submarine breathing with fish-gill-like apparatus complete success. Immediately after sending this, we will submerge and proceed without coming to the surface until arrival at our Base (Mutual Film Corporation, 825-27 So. Olive street, Los Angeles, Cal.). Will dock promptly at 12:30 noon, Tuesday, April 25, for inspection by you and the Motion Picture Exhibitors in your territory."

Among many of the out of town exhibitors present were Nick Dimas, who has a circuit of five houses near Tucson, Arizona. As the result of this showing, the local Mutual exchange was very successful in making bookings.

WATHNE HEADS INTERNATIONAL, WASHINGTON

The International Film Service, Inc., has established offices in Washington, D. C., under the management of Fritz B. Wathne. This exchange is exploiting the "Mysteries of Myra," which is being rapidly placed in the picture houses of that territory. Already twenty-one houses have signed for this series and nine houses in Washington, not to count nearly a hundred other theatres in that territory. The Leader, a popular down-town house, has secured the first showing of "The Mysteries of Myra," for two consecutive days. Extensive advertising is planned for this film, together with the running of the story in a newspaper.

Mr. Wathne has made a fine selection in his office location, having secured the entire second floor of 712 Eleventh street. Convenient office rooms have been fitted up, with large and commodious apartments for the filing and shipping of paper, photos and films. The work room is light and every convenience secured for the employees.

ALEXANDER IN PHILADELPHIA

William L. Alexander, who recently returned from a six months' trip in South America, where he established exchanges for Fox in Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres, was a visitor in Philadelphia last week.

John E. Day of Chicago is managing the Rio office, and H. Ryan of Pittsburgh the one in Buenos Ayres. Mr. Alexander found South America an interesting field for films, albeit conditions are quite different from North America. "The idea that any old thing will do down there is where producers formerly made mistakes," said Mr. Alexander. "When it comes to anything in film art, the best is demanded."

Fox expects to establish exchanges in Spain, Portugal, Siam, Borneo and the Canary Islands in the near future.

After the war branches will doubtless be established in all other European countries.

HARDENBROOK SOFTLY "PASSES THE BUCK" IN A "JANE DOE" REQUEST

The stunt of an exchange man in Omaha in having a film saleswoman is about to be duplicated in New Orleans by Manager Ross Hardenbrook of the World Film Corporation, if he replies favorably to a feminine letter he found in his mail the other morning.

"Dear Sir (the letter ran):—I am to enter the film business in New Orleans, and am willing to take a chance at it with your company."

Mr. Hardenbrook, hardened as he is after many years of trying experiences in the film field, was somewhat taken back at this request.

He reasoned that the lady's wishes should receive consideration and referred her to his friend, Sam Dembow, Jr., district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and he accordingly turned over the request to Mr. Dembow.

CONSOLIDATED OPENS BRANCH IN HOUSTON, TEXAS; CLEGG GETS READY FOR "SUBMARINE" CAMPAIGN

LEROY BICKEL has resigned as manager of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., at Dallas, Tex., to take the active management of the Rex Theatre, Waco, Texas, which he purchased from J. D. Wheelan. The house has been managed by Edgar Momand. Mr. Bickel was with the Mutual in Oklahoma City and the Paramount in Dallas, as manager, before taking the Bluebird office. Prior to that time, he had experience as an exhibitor in Oklahoma. He had one of the first picture houses in that state, the Majestic at Ardmore.

The Consolidated Film and Supply Company, has opened a branch at Houston, Texas, for taking care of the southeast Texas trade. Chas. D. Touchon, recently with the United Music Company of Dallas, and formerly with the Mutual exchange in Dallas, has left for Houston to take charge of the new exchange.

The baseball fever is on in exchange row. The Consodidated has a team, ably managed by James B. Kelly, under the name of Konsolidated Katz. E. T. Peter, of the United, has the Motion Picture Cubs in the same league, the Major City. There are four teams in the league, the other two being commercial teams, which of course, the trade is not interested in. There are about eighteen games scheduled for the season.

The Southern Cabiria Company, of which L. C. McHenry is manager, has moved from 1919½ Main to larger quarters at 1911½ Commerce. Along with Mr. McHenry goes the Quality Film Association, which is handling the comedy, "Charlie Looking for a Wife" and other comedies. The Southern Cabiria Company recently secured the California M. P. Corporation productions for the Southwest, of which their first, "The Unwritten Law," is going strong.

Manager C. A. Clegg of the Mutual exchange in Dallas has his forces lined up for the marketing of the new serial, "The Secret of the Submarine." There seems to be quite an interest in that section for this film.

F. M. Sanford, former World manager in Dallas, who has recently been exploiting "The Battle Cry of Peace" in New Mexico, is visiting in Dallas this week. Mr. Sanford says the western section looks more promising now than ever and business among the shows continues to improve.

Max Graf, manager of the World exchange in Dallas, has been appointed chairman of the local committee for the Campaign for the Actors' Fund of America and has been securing co-operation of the exchange men and exhibitors in that territory on this movement.

The trade in and around Dallas is enthused over the prospects for a big exposition for the motion picture people in New Orleans next year, and from present indications the Dallas section would be strongly represented at such an affair.

FLOOD OF SPRING PATRONAGE FOR J. L. WATERS IN "WET" CITY GONE "DRY"

J. L. WATERS, manager of the Lyric theatre in Sioux City, Ia., gave out a statement the other day that his house had enjoyed a greatly increased business since Sioux City went "dry" under state prohibition, and that he had noticed undoubted prosperity in all lines of industry since that time.

"This report seems general from all Iowa," said C. W. Taylor, manager of the General's exchange in Omaha, commenting upon the remark. A number of Nebraska towns went dry this spring. Exchange managers expect they will produce better business as a result.

It was in discussing MOTION PICTURE NEWS' May market report that C. W. Taylor, manager of the General exchange in Omaha, said: "The principal complaint of the exchange, aside from disagreeable competition, is the tendency of a decreasing class of exhibitors to book a program or a feature for one day and then call up at the last minute to say their electricity is out of order, or their machine is broken, or something. We always know they have been prevailed upon by some wandering peddler of films to use his feature for that day and merely develop an excuse for our benefit. This knocks our bookings to pieces and is an unfair hardship."

Mrs. Jake Mitchell, wife of the wide-awake Bluebird manager in Omaha, was on a recent visit to Kentucky. Going on an inspiration furnished by her husband's enthusiasm, she constantly talked Bluebirds, until one day what was Mitchell's surprise to get an order from a Kentucky exhibitor. Now Bluebirds are a constant feature in the little town where Mrs. Mitchell visited.

Jess Hartman, formerly a roadman for the Mutual out of Des Moines, Ia., has been transferred to the exchange in Omaha, Neb.

Manager Ph. Goldstone is pointing with pride to Omaha's place on the map, so far as World pictures are concerned. Harry Heyman, Goldstone's prize roadman, won third place in the corporation's contest among its salesmen. It was all right for Washington, D. C., to get first place, as they have a dozen houses where the big middle western territory has one. A roadman can go from one end of his territory to the other by interurban, according to Goldstone, but for Omaha to leap into third place not only speaks highly for Heyman, but for Omaha as an exchange center and for the middle west as a progressive section.

LAURENCE IN CHARGE OF V-L-S-E PUBLICITY IN CHICAGO

A publicity department, which will cooperate with exhibitors in mapping out advertising campaigns and otherwise securing greater returns from features, has been established by the Chicago office of the V-L-S-E, under the direction of Gordon Laurence.

OMAHA EXCHANGES FEEL WAVE OF PUBLIC DEMAND FOR PICTURES TO ENTERTAIN THE "KIDDIES"

SINCE Manager C. W. Taylor of the General exchange in Omaha has a new Hudson car for his personal use, he is entertaining a number of exhibitor friends with sightseeing trips about the city.

C. W. Jefferies of the Des Moines, Ia., office of the General was in Omaha the other day and talked over future plans for handling the territory with Manager Taylor of the Omaha office.

J. E. Flynn, head bookkeeper in the General exchange in Omaha, recently spent a week in Chicago, getting on more intimate terms with the finer points of his work.

F. W. Aiken of Chicago, district manager for the General, said while in Omaha on a visit last week that he never saw the middle western territory show better promise for a record season than this spring.

Manager Max Weisfeldt of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, co-operating with the exhibitors, is having pictures taken of the groups as they sign up for Chaplin features. These photographs are put on slides and thrown on the screens of the various theatres for advertising.

"We are introducing, along with the Chaplin pictures, a new serial that is taking like wild-fire in the middle west," said Weisfeldt. 'The Secret of the Submarine' is setting a pace for serials in this territory."

The national "Show Me" day of the World Corporation was observed in Omaha by Manager Ph. Goldstone of the Omaha exchange. The Hipp and Farnam theatres showed the new Brady-made releases and quite a few exhibitors, including a number from outside the city, attended.

Goldstone, asked how business looked for this season, did not reply with flowery statements, but reached into his desk, hauled out a file and displayed contracts enough to choke a fair-sized elephant. "I'm thinking of calling my roadmen in," he declared, laughing. "For a fact, we are breaking records every day and the end is not in sight. And every exhibitor is paying promptly."

The newspapers, women's clubs and other organizations, school superintendents and exchange men have joined in a rapidly growing chorus in the middle west to urge children's matinees and programs.

Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha has notified his patrons among the exhibitors that he will furnish films for children at less than cost to put on matinees free of charge—just to get the children started, and to convince the skeptical of the educational value of the films shown for such programs.

The three Omaha newspapers, one in Lincoln, Neb., and two in Des Moines, Ia., on their motion picture pages have advised editorially that the matter be pushed in that territory. Every week exchange figures show the demand increases.

One situation has arisen. Should exchanges furnish films to churches and schools, free of charge, when the exhibitors have to pay for the use of the same films?

The exchangemen declare such practices show those in authority how truly valuable, from an educational standpoint, the pictures are, and that such free shows will build up the regular attendance at the theatres.

While the exhibitors have not united in a protest, scattering complaints have been heard and have led to this explanation: Manager Thomas, of the Strand, Omaha's biggest motion picture theatre, declares the special children's matinees did not pay. "They are better for suburban houses," he said.

Manager "Bob" Shirley, of the Muse, a newly opened house counted to be about the best in Omaha, differs with him. Shirley is making his children's programs regular features every Saturday afternon, with an occasional special at night. When he showed "Silas Marner," he mailed literature to every school teacher in the city. He has a regular mailing list of school teachers, and keeps them informed when a picture particularly interesting to them is coming. In the instance of "Silas Marner," he found a high school class studying the book. The class attended in a body.

"MARTY" WILLIAMS HANDLES "PEG O' THE RING"

M. A. "Marty" Williams announces that he is now with the Universal Film & Supply Company, Kansas City, Mo., and will handle the new serial, "Adventures of Peg o' the Ring" in the Kansas City territory for that company. Mr. Williams has a wide acquaintance among exhibitors, formerly having been manager of the Mutual and Metro exchanges there, and recently assistant district manager of the Universal.

Mr. Williams has secured a number of excellent contracts for his company.

DAVIS IN CHARGE OF INTERNATIONAL AT DETROIT

L. E. Davis has been appointed Detroit, Mich., representative for the Hearst International Film Service, Inc. He was formerly with the Pathe Exchange.

John F. Bowman, manager of this district, who makes his headquarters in Chicago, states that a Detroit branch will be opened in the near future to handle local business.

MELIES AND OTHER FILM EXECUTIVES VISIT GENERAL IN QUAKER CITY

LAST week was visitors' week at the General Film Exchange, Philadelphia. Manager Buxbaum played host to the several magnates and managers during their Quaker City sojourn.

Paul G. Mélies, treasurer of the V-L-S-E and the General Film Company, was the first guest. He was accompanied by Mrs. Mélies and stayed several days at the Ritz-Carlton.

V. Hodupp, special representative of the General Film, and G. Hoffman, general manager of the Mélies company, were next to appear. Mr. Hoffman went from Pittsburgh and is taking a trip through the Eastern territory.

G. Mohme, special representative of Biograph, was another visitor. Mr. Mohme was on his way to Washington, after taking a trip through the whole Northwest, in the interest of his company. About eighty exhibitors went to the General projection room to see a special Biograph program, after which several became customers. The exchange had to order an increased number of prints. "Spellbound," starring Lois Meredith, a Knickerbocker feature on the General's regular program, was given a private exhibition and received approbation from those viewing it.

J. E. Hennessey, for several years Philadelphia manager for the General, and later manager of the Fox company, for the same city, is now special representative of the Stanley company.

Sol Lesser, joint owner of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, paid a visit to Leon D. Netter, of the Philadelphia branch, on Thursday. The offices of the company are fast getting in ship-shape for the handling of "The Spoilers" and "Neptune's Daughter."

Simon and Oscar Libros, formerly with the Picture Playhouse Company, have established the National Poster Exchange at 1231 Vine street. Posters, photos and slides of all producing companies are being handled by the new firm, who, in their six weeks' existence, already report an ever-increasing business in their territory—New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and the District of Columbia.

Manager Harry Scott sent out invitations from the Kleine office to exhibitors, newspaper men, and the trade generally, for an advanced showing of the first three episodes of Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance." Stanley Mastbaum loaned the Palace theatre for this occasion, and notwithstanding the late hour, 11:15 p. m., a large audience took advantage of the opportunity for a first glimpse of Billie.

The new Film Company has moved to 1339 Vine street, the old home of the Greater New York Film Rental Company. The International Film Service, Inc., at once took possession of the vacated premises of 1335, where it will occupy the whole building of three stories. On May eighth the International began the release in Philadelphia of the Hearst International News Pictorial.

William Alexander, special foreign representative for the Fox Film Company, is being detained in Philadelphia by the severe illness of his father.

HENRY IN DENVER FOR GENERAL FILM; CREE TO LOS ANGELES

The General Film Company announces several transfers and promotions of its employes as follows:

T. Y. Henry, of the Salt Lake City office, assigned to the management of Denver branch; W. H. Cree, formerly manager at Denver, has been transferred to Los Angeles in the same capacity; W. H. Hepburn, formerly an assistant in the Los Angeles office, will take charge of the Salt Lake City office.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

DETROIT MANAGERS ASK REFUND OF $75 ON LICENSE FEE

Leading Detroit moving picture owners are asking the common council for a refund of seventy-five dollars on their license fee. They paid one hundred dollars —the former fee—but under a new ordinance passed some months ago, the fee was reduced to twenty-five dollars. It so happens that the reduction of the license fee to twenty-five dollars was really intended only for the theatres seating six hundred, but this was not specified in the wording of the ordinance and hence applies to all theatres.

The council committee has refused to make the refund to the larger houses, and instead has referred the matter to the corporation counsel for an opinion. It is contended that it can be proven that the wording of the ordinance was wrong, and if the theatres insist on the refund then an amendment will likely be passed interpreting the ordinance as it was originally intended.

SEATTLE EXCHANGEMEN SETTLE AMICABLY WITH CENSORS

The Seattle film exchangemen have come to an amicable settlement with the board of censors there, following the adverse censorship of two or three feature subjects. There are nine members of the Seattle municipal board of censors, and each member of the board is to censor the films of but one exchange. When the question of eliminating a large portion of a picture is brought up, it will be disposed of by all of the members, but it is expected that every censor will take care of the subjects rented through the exchange he is assigned to. The discussion which arose as the result of the board of censors stopping the showing of a subject recently, has given to the censors a better idea of their work, and they now more fully appreciate the duties that confront them.

WOMAN'S CLUBS TO ADVOCATE CHILDREN'S PROGRAMS AT FEDERATION MEET

Women's clubs of Massachusetts are preparing to take part in the discussion at the biennial conference of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which will hold its sessions in New York in May and June.

There has been set apart a day to be devoted to the promotion of means for putting programs of children's pictures on the market under conditions which will insure a financial return to the exhibitor.

LIBERAL LEADER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA SAYS AMENDMENT TO ACT IS NOT FAIR TO OPERATORS

BILL No. 36, an Act to amend the Moving Pictures Act, and just introduced in the British Columbia Legislature by Premier W. J. Bowser, is as follows:

His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of British Columbia, enacts as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as the Moving Pictures Act Amendment Act, 1916.

2. Section 5 of the Moving Pictures Act, being chapter 75 of the Statutes of 1914, is hereby repealed, and the following is substituted therefor:

5. (1.) The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint an officer, to be called the Censor, together with one or more assistants, who shall hold office during pleasure, and each of whom shall have power to permit or absolutely to prohibit the exhibition of all films or slides which it is proposed to exhibit in the Province.

(2.) The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may also appoint a Board of Examiners, whose duty it shall be to examine and certify to the competency of persons who apply for a license to act as operators or apprentice operators under this Act, and may prescribe the fees to be paid by applicants for licences and the form of certificate to be granted.

(3.) The members of the Board of Examiners, the Censor and his assistants shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund such salary or allowance as may be determined by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

3. Section 10 of said chapter 75 is hereby repealed, and the following is substituted therefor:

10 (1.) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, no municipality, whether incorporated under the Municipalities Incorporation Act or any special Act of the Legislature, shall issue a license in respect of any moving picture theatre or film exchange unless the applicant for such license shall have first obtained a license therefor under this Act, and no such municipality shall issue a license to any operator or apprentice operator.

(2.) Every member of the Council or other official of an incorporated city or municipality who issues or causes to be issued any license in violation of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of an offence against this Act.

4. This Act shall come into effect on the first day of October, 1916.

H. C. Brewster, Liberal leader in the House, is opposing the passage of this act because it centralizes too much power in the provincial government, and in committee he announced that he would propose amendments to the Moving Pictures Act which would make the bill fairer both to the municipal authorities and to the operators.

KANSAS CITY APPOINTS TOPEKA MAN TO REPRESENT EXCHANGES BEFORE CENSOR BOARD

The Kansas city exchanges probably will appoint one man in Topeka to represent all of them before the censorship board, under the new arrangement of showing the films for censorship in the statehouse at Topeka. Heretofore each exchange has had separate representation for its films during censorship, while the films were shown in various moving picture houses at Topeka.

The general representative will handle all the films sent in Topeka hereafter, paying the bills, and looking after the interests of the exchanges. Tentative plans for appointing such a representative were made at a meeting of Kansas City exchange managers on May 1, but the formal appointment has not been made.

FIRE LAW PREVENTS CENSORS FROM REVIEWING FILMS IN ROOM PICKED BY BOARD

After purchasing two new moving picture machines and fitting out an office with all necessary paraphernalia needed in the censor's work of reviewing films, the Kansas state board of censorship finds itself unable to use any of its equipment, owing to the fact that it had chosen a room which has since been declared unsafe for motion picture exhibitions by the state labor commissioner, who, by a special relation with the fire marshal, deals with moving picture houses.

The exchange men now pay a fee of two dollars per reel, fixed by law, for inspection, in addition to fifty cents a reel to a Topeka exhibitor for showing the films for them. It was planned by the state board to eliminate this fifty-cent fee, making the charge but two-dollars per reel.

SEAT TAX BILL IS INTRODUCED IN ALBERTA LEGISLATURE

As expected, an act to provide for the taxation of buyers of theatre tickets has been introduced in the Alberta legislature by Hon. C. R. Mitchell, provincial treasurer. Instead of the one-cent tax contemplated, the bill is so framed as to give the lieutenant-governor power to fix the levy at any amount between one and twenty-five cents.

Also, says the bill, "The provincial secretary shall in his discretion have power to exampt from taxation hereunder all persons attending at any theatre, entertainment or exhibition the proceeds of which are to be devoted wholly or in part to religious, charitable or patriotic objects."

It is planned to pay to exhibitors a commission (probably 10 per cent.) on the sale of tax stamps, which will be made up in books for convenience; and a higher rate of taxation for cities than for villages and towns is also being considered. A full explanation of the bill will be given by Mr. Mitchell when it comes up for second reading.

SMALL CHILDREN BARRED FROM THEATRES UNLESS WITH ADULTS

Children in Pontiac, Mich., under thirteen years of age, will not be permitted to go to moving pictures unless an older person escorts them, according to an ordinance just passed by the city commission. The ordinance also provides that the commission may appoint a police officer to censor all film shown in the city and to make complaints against the managers and owners of theatres, the penalty for conviction being one hundred dollars' fine or imprisonment.

BANKERS IN KANSAS URGE GREATER ACTIVITY FROM THE STATE'S FILM MUTILATORS

Kansas bankers have taken a hand in the censorship question, now receiving much comment in that state, and at their annual gathering in Topeka recently adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, that we are dissatisfied with the censorship law, because it does not provide strict enough censorship, and recommend to the members of the legislature who are members of this organization, that they work in the coming legislative session in order that objectional pictures may not be shown in Kansas."

This body asked for more censorship and a large part of a period supposed to be devoted to financial interests was taken up by a discussion of censorship and why Kansas should have more of it. W. D. Ross, whose name gets on the films in Kansas, representing the state censorship board, narrowly escaped coming in for some of the blame, but before the meeting was over he was getting sympathy and praise for his good work. The Kansas State Bankers Association is a large influential organization.

NOW IT'S NORFOLK, VA., THAT'S TRYING TO PUT THUMBSCREWS ON THE EXHIBITOR

THE exhibitors of Norfolk, Va., are included in the provisions of the new ordinance which has just gone into effect and which announces the taxes to be paid by them for licenses during the ensuing year. The ordinance was passed by the council and was signed by the mayor on April 25

Under the terms of this ordinance, exhibitors operating motion picture theatres where the seating capacity is 350 or less will be compelled to pay a tax of $100 for each such theatre, and where the seating capacity exceeds 350 the tax assessable is $150 for each such theatre.

Exhibitors who publicly advertise their business by means of a phonograph, or other musical or noice-producing instrument, device, or method, whether the same be inside or outside of the building, will have to pay for each such place of entertainment the sum of $300 per annum.

Every proprietor or occupier of a public theatre or other public rooms, fitted for public exhibitions, where no admission fee is charged, shall pay $500 per annum, according to paragraph 121, while paragraph 125 provides that "on other theatrical performances similar thereto, panorama, or any public performance or exhibition of any kind where an admission fee is charged, $10 for each performance or $20 for each week of said performance, but any theatre which desires so to do may take an annual license, in which event the same shall be taxed as follows: All theatres charging not more than 30 cents per seat shall pay $200 per annum; any theatre charging not more than 75 cents per seat shall pay $300, and any theatre charging over 75 cents per seat shall pay $350 per annum; the above prices to include price of box seats, payable in advance. Not pro rated."

No license fee is to be exacted from any type of exhibition or performance where the entire net proceeds are to be devoted to religious or charitable purposes.

Penny arcades or automatic theatres in which pictures are shown or music played, or both, by means of slot machines, will have to pay a license tax of $100.

The penalties for failure to comply with the provisions of the new law are quite heavy. Paragraph 153 provides that any person who shall fail to pay a license tax on the day that the same becomes due shall be liable to a fine not to exceed $20 a day for each day of failure to pay such license. It is also provided that if the person subject to license tax fails to pay the same during the month of May, when he comes to pay during the month of June he will find that he has to pay an additional three per cent of the amount of his tax, and if he still fails to pay there will be added an additional one per cent of the amount of the tax until the penalty reaches five per cent, when the aggregate amount becomes subject additionally to interest at the rate of six per cent a year.

Exhibitors must make application for licenses to the commissioner of revenue, and payment therefor must be made on or before May 31, according to the provisions of the ordinance.

SPECIAL HEARING FOR FILM TRANSPORTATION CASE IN SAN FRANCISCO

THE case of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco against the railroads of northern California in the matter of carrying film on passenger trains and boats is to be considered next week by the railroad commission at a special hearing. A number of conferences have been held of late between members of the board of trade and representatives of the express and railroad companies, but no plan has been put forward that meets with the approval of the film interests. The railroads issued orders some time ago to the effect that in the future the carrying of moving picture film by passengers on trains and boats out of San Francisco would be prohibited. The Film Exchange Board of Trade secured a hearing on the question before the railroad commission, but this was postponed until a date early in May. Film interests object to the change on the grounds that there has never been an accident of any kind in the transportation of films in California; that conditions are unusual in San Francisco since Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and other nearby towns are a part of San Francisco in all but name with the systems of transportation virtually street car lines; that the change would mean an added expense that many exhibitors could not afford; that it would reduce the revenue of film exchanges, and that the express service in the district around San Francisco bay is entirely inadequate to care for this business as it should be cared for.

The express company plans to establish depots in the several communities around the bay, where films are to be taken at night following the close of the shows, and where the new shows will be delivered the next day, or whenever desired. Exhibitors declare that this will mean added travel for them, as they have to go to San Francisco anyway, and that the added expense will be a serious matter.

WELL, HERE'S A LITTLE UPLIFT WORK FOR PICTURES

A moving picture board of censors to cover Muskogee County, Okla., to be appointed by the county commissioners, is a near possibility.

The matter has been put up to the board of commissioners by citizens who are interested in elevating the moral tone of the picture shows.

Film News From Foreign Parts

CENSORSHIP QUESTION LOOMS UP IN AUSTRALIA; RUMORS OF AMALGAMATION

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. W., April 10.

AN ARTICLE by Barrington Miller, general manager of Australasian Films, Ltd., in the Sydney Morning Herald, on censorship of motion pictures, has once more brought this subject uppermost in the minds of the public. Australian Feature Films, Limited, have taken the matter in hand, forwarding a circular to the leading exhibitors and exchangemen with the idea of interesting them in the movement. The local papers also have been approached and the Mirror is preparing to publish impartial articles on the censorship question, and also are inviting letters from their readers on the subject.

At the present time the only form of censorship existing in this State is conducted by the police department, who have several times ordered special screenings of doubtful pictures, eliminating such scenes as were necessary, but recently some features have been shown here that call for a stricter censorship. However, it appears that the same trouble is about to be experienced in this state as has been the case in most States of America.

With the opening of the Town Hall last Saturday for a brief season of pictures, the city of Sydney can now boast of having twenty-one photoplay houses, fifteen of which are continuous. Five theatres at present showing films exclusively were at the end of last year either devoted to "legit.," or in course of erection. Two more theatres are almost finished, and plans have been completed for the construction of two more. Who dares to say that the war is effecting the motion picture industry in Australia?

J. C. Williamson's, Ltd., have secured, by an arrangement with Fraser Films, Ltd., two thousand feet of authoritative war pictures taken at Gallipoli by a British cameraman, and are screening them at the Royal shortly. Interesting views are shown of Lone Pine, Dead Man's Gully, Sulva Bay and Anzac.

"The Pioneer," recently made by Franklyn Barrett for an Australian company, occupies eight reels, and it is the longest feature yet made in Australia. It was given a private exhibition in Melbourne recently and secured favorable criticisms.

Australian Feature Films, who control Paramount productions, announce that they will shortly release the Bray-Gilbert silhouette pictures, and the Kleine serial "Mishaps of Musty Suffer." Bray's cartoons, the "Col. Heeza Liar" series, have already become identified as a permanent feature on the high-class picture programs of this city, and his work with Paramount should also prove popular.

Stevenson's Wild Animal pictures are being released by Cricks and Jones, who also control the Fox production of "The Nigger."

While producing the five-part photoplay, "Emilienne Moreau," the Willoughby Photoplay Company encountered the usual number of difficulties. Jane King, who plays the lead, collapsed after a particularly trying scene, and had to have several days' rest. Clive Farnham, who plays juvenile lead, in the role of a young French dispatch rider, endeavoring to tear through the enemy's pickets guarding a bridge, struck a stone in the middle of the road, and both rider and machine crashed through the railings of the bridge, falling to the ground below. With the usual actors' luck Farnham escaped with several severe bruises, but the machine was totally wrecked. In the completed picture this should add a touch of realism as the cameraman secured the whole scene. On completion of the above picture the Willoughby Company will begin their second subject, a version of the popular stage success, "The Woman in the Case."

It is rumored in Sydney that J. C. Williamson, Ltd., who besides being interested in the photoplay business both as producers and exhibitors, also controlling many "legit." theatres throughout Australia, and Waddingtons, Ltd., who direct four city photoplay houses and as many suburban shows, have amalgamated.

Omaha Territory Eager for Good Juveniles

Special Children's Matinees and Even Theatres Conducted Especially for Youngsters Expected to Become Permanent in Life of That Section Soon

Special to Motion Picture News.

Omaha, Neb., May 6.

SPECIAL matinees for children, and even special theatres for children, will come to the Middle West soon. A brief survey of the situation in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, northern Missouri and the Dakotas shows a greater progress along this line than even the exchange managers had noticed.

Asked about the demand for children's pictures, Manager Max J. Weisfeldt, of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, suddenly glanced down at his desk. There lay a letter from J. R. Inman, school superintendent of Red Oak, Ia., containing a request for special children's pictures in that city. Acting on the spur of the moment, Weisfeldt collected at least a dozen such letters, all demanding children's pictures.

In fact, Weisfeldt's roadmen had been calling on school heads in the various towns, and the orders for "Silas Marner," "Rumpelstiltskin," "Enoch Arden," "The Spirit of Audubon" and similar reels were piled up heavy. "The school superintendents and principals are crazy for them," said Weisfeldt. "And we are lucky to have the films to supply the demand."

Films made particularly for children are badly needed in the Middle West. Carl Schreiber, public welfare superintendent in Omaha, recently declared he intended to urge children's matinees and shows in the Omaha motion picture houses, but he was met with the instant reply from the exchange men that they did not have the kind of films required for this purpose.

Because of the demand, and because of their desire to co-operate with the superintendent of the welfare board, which also has the powers of censorship in Omaha, the exhibitors and exchange managers are making every effort so secure the needed kind of pictures.

"Little Mary Sunshine," the only children's picture at the Pathé exchange in Omaha, for a short time, recently, was worked to death. "We never had an ordinary film in such demand," said Manager J. E. Kirk. "Everywhere they ask for repeats. George Atkins, of the Besse, South Omaha, advertised it throughout the schools, crowded his house and asked for it again. A. K. Pay, manager of the Colonial theatre, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, a children's matinee fan, made a big success with it."

Manager Shirley, of the Muse theatre, a new $25,000 house opened in Omaha on April 15, has planned regular days each week for children's shows.

PLAISETTY WILL DIRECT PICTURES IN ITALY FOR AMERICAN MARKET

Rene Plaisetty, who has directed a number of successful features for Lubin and Metro, has been engaged by a newly formed Italian concern, which will make multiple reel productions in Italy for the American market.

Mr. Plaisetty sailed from New York Saturday on the Espagne for Italy. He will have supervision of all productions.

Number Four

The Test That Tells

TO recapitulate—circulation figures, as figures only, mean nothing to you.

If you have 5,000 buying prospects or 10,000, then 15,000, or 22,000 circulation figures do not interest you.

What you do want to know is: are you reaching those 5,000 or 10,000 prospects?

And again, if figures (copies printed, mailed, etc.,) meant everything, why you'd use your own house-organ and dispense with trade journals.

Secondly, newsstand circulation means nothing to you, because neither you nor the publisher know where newsstand circulation goes.

Subscribers tell you—and only subscribers—who gets the magazine.

But the final test, the only true, conclusive test is: who reads it? Even subscribers may not read a publication.

Subscribers do read the publication they prefer. And the way to find this out is to ask them yourself.

In other words, make a postcard test. Take a list of exhibitors and ask them what magazines they subscribe for and which one they prefer. It's the only sure way to know.

And it will pay you to know.

How much does your trade journal advertising amount to?

Is it $50,000 a year? It's quite apt to be, if you go in for strong display.

Then, if you go at it blindly, you stand easily to misspend half of it—to practically throw away $25,000. And it is thrown away, isn't it, if your announcements don't get to and get the serious attention of your prospects?

A postcard test of all the exhibitors in the country will only cost you several hundred dollars.

And surely this small preliminary expense is worth saving $25,000.

You certainly will save it—you will save easily half of whatever your appropriation is—once you make a postcard test.

Is your appropriation only $1,000 or even less? Then make your postcard test just the same.

You need not cover the whole country. Pick out four states, one each in the north, west, south and east, and you'll get a fair test.

The expense is small, comparatively. You can easily save ten times what it costs you.

I cannot make too positive the necessity, the business value, of the postcard test.

If you have never made one, if you are selecting your medium on any other basis than this, then the results will, in all probability, almost stagger you.

And it will pay you to make this test at least once a year.

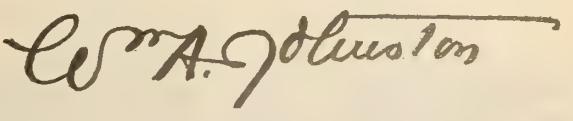
Publications are like pictures. Their value to the exhibitors may vary from year to year.

You know how quickly a brand of pictures will become very popular, and how quickly another will go down hill once the pictures lose the elements that made them desirable.

You, as a producer, would scarcely admit to yourself that a competitor's product were better because it had been made longer.

There is no prestige except one with a publication, and that is: is it read and reliable?

Make your postcard test and find out.



The next and last consideration is one which distinctly concerns every press representative and advertising manager.

The UNIVERSAL GREATEST PROGRAM ON EARTH

READ THE HAND WRITING ON THE WALL. Prepare yourself for the future. If you can read between the lines—if you are in the picture business to stay—if you want to assure and insure the profits to which you are entitled—BOOK THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM NOW—Next week in this Trade Paper we are going to publish in a full page advertisement the expressions (taken from a letter) from one of the oldest, shrewdest and one of the largest Exhibitors in America, on "The Program vs. the Feature." Look for this coming ad. Study every word of it. Be guided by one of the smartest, most successful Exhibitors in the Trade. Our advice to you now, as always, is—If you can book the Universal Program DO IT NOW—if you can't get it now, watch your opportunity and get it at your first chance. To wide awake Exhibitors who expect to stay in this game, this is valuable advice. Shrewd men will profit by what we say here. On this week's Universal Program are another succession of Box Office Attractions that will pack your House.

Hobart Bosworth in "The Iron Hand." With Jane Novak. Eighteenth Red Feather Production. Directed by Hobart Bosworth. Released May 29. A tremendous story—red-blooded and vigorous with Hobart Bosworth in some remarkable characterizations. In the opening he is a ward boss who refuses to bow to the will of a big politician. The politician frames him and sends him up the river. Later he gets in line and becomes a powerful and wealthy political leader. He has raised as his own the son of a former crook associate, and is broken-hearted when the boy refuses his assistance—with the remark that his money is "tainted." The boy's love for the daughter of his foster father's enemy, a so-called reformer, furnishes a complication and a striking climax. The whole production is filled with human interest, and is one of the strongest releases of the season.

Robert Leonard and Ella Hall in "The Silent Man of Timber Gulch." Two Reel Gold Seal Heart Interest Drama. Directed by Robert Leonard. Released May 30. One of popular Bob Leonard's strongest characterizations is this silent man, who under the mistaken belief that he has killed a man, lives a lonely life of self exile. Ella plays the part of his wife, who waits his return, only to pass on from sheer loneliness. Later she appears as the daughter, who unexpectedly finds the father and brings him the glad news that he is innocent of crime. A particularly strong play of most absorbing interest.

"Tough Luck on a Rough Sea." Two Reel L-KO with funny Dan Russell. Released May 31. A side-splitting farce comedy that is unusual in location, situations, characters and plot. The action takes place for the most part on board an ocean liner. It is so crammed, jammed full of pep and action that it will set your audiences wild with laughter. No funnier comedy was ever filmed. It's a wonder. If you are not showing the Universal Program book this special.

"Two Mothers." With Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson. Two Reel Laemmle Emotional Drama. Directed by Lloyd Carleton. Released June 1. From the strong Saturday Evening Post Story by I. A. R. Wylie. Millions have read this unusual tale of maternal love, and every one of them will want to see this great screen adaptation. Two rival opera singers are striving for the same place with a big theatrical production. One is the step-mother of the other's young son, and the action develops a story of sacrifice prompted by mother-love that will hold any audience spell-bound. A splendid release.

King Baggot in "Jim Slocum No. 46393." With Edna Hunter and a strong cast. Two Reel Imp. Drama. Directed by Robert Cummings. Released June 2. An unusual characterization even for King Baggot, one of the most versatile actors in the world. As the unfortunate chauffeur who loses his job while his wife and baby lie at home sick unto death, there is a human appeal in this clean drama that will make it go big wherever shown. A fine, human story with the true heart punch and some remarkably fine acting.

"Tammany's Tiger." With Marie Walcamp and Lee Hill. Two Reel 101-Bison Wild Animal Drama. Directed by Henry MacRae. Released June 3. This unusual play starts mildly enough with a doped tiger displayed at a political meeting; but soon the the dope loses its effect and things begin to happen. When the extreme limit of excitement seems to have been reached, an entire managerie is let loose, and the thrills follow in quick succession. A wonderful picture, and one that you cannot afford to overlook.

"As in a Dream." With Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn. Three Reel Rex Labor Drama. Released June 4. A strong story of the eternal battle between capital and labor. Sydney is a social settlement worker and Doris the daughter of a capitalist who pays starvation wages. She falls from her horse and is taken to the settlement house suffering from loss of memory. Her presence is used to advantage in getting fairer treatment of his employees from her father and wedding bells are promised at the end of a thrilling third reel.

F. J. REMBUSH
President of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League, and Exhibitors Vice President of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America
DISCARDS FEATURES
In all of his Houses and Books The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Mr. F. J. Rembush, Pres. Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League and Vice-President Exhibitors Motion Picture Board of Trade of America.

The accompanying half tone cut is that of Mr. F. J. Rembush of Indianapolis, President of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League—Exhibitors Vice-President of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America and one of the largest and best known exhibitors in the United States.

It is safe to say that Mr. Rembush has had as much experience in the picture business as any man in the trade today. Hundreds of exhibitors in the Central Western States have been guided by Mr. Rembush's policies. They know how thorough is his knowledge of every angle of exhibiting.

In a letter written to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company from Mr. Schnitzer, manager of the Central Film Service of Indianapolis and reproduced herewith, is revealed the handwriting on the wall. Read the letter.

"Mr. F. J. Rembush, known all over the United States as the maker and manufacturer of the mirror screen and one of the oldest exhibitors in the United States, called at our office today and admitted that Features were not getting him any money, and made arrangements to go back to the regular Universal Program.

"Mr. Rembush has been away from the service for over a year but has found to his sorrow that while the receipts were increased somewhat by putting on Features, they were not increased in proportion to the amount he had to pay for the Features, and the result has been that he has not made any money.

"Mr. Rembush controls several houses, and we are glad to say we have completed arrangements with him to place the Universal Program in all houses now using Features."

We could write you a thousand advertisements and give you sales talks from now until doomsday and not begin to equal in weight this fact.—Mr. Rembush has discarded all features and has booked the entire Universal Program in all of his houses.

Mr. Rembush is in the picture business for money, not glory, or health. He has tried everything worth while in moving pictures and his latest is "THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM FOR MINE". Heed the handwriting on the wall, Mr. Exhibitor. Book the Universal Program now if you can get it; if not, watch your opportunity and get it as soon as you can. Write or wire your nearest Universal Exchange for more facts and figures that mean money to you. The Reverend Doctor Parkhurst Said:

"Where Are My Children" is a very powerful and gripping picture drama. I am glad to have witnessed it and am prompt to commend it. It deals with a most difficult matter in a manner of the utmost dignity. If the special type of iniquity which it suggests is anywhere near as prevalent as is claimed—the public should have an opportunity to witness the presentation."

Superior Paulist Father John T. Hughes Said:

"Eminently proper—a powerful indictment against a fearful and increasing crime."

The Rev. Thos. A. Daly Said:

"A powerful indictment of a vice that threatens society."

The New York American Said:

"A smashing, daring subject done in a smashing, daring way."

Thousands of citizens have given written opinions pronouncing this picture "Humanity's greatest weapon against insidious Crime."

Where are my Children?

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

IN last week's Motion Picture News appeared the first announcements of the sale of State Rights for the marvelous New York success, "Where Are My Children?" Since then we have been literally besieged and bombarded with telegrams, telephone and special delivery communications, showing that the whirlwind success which greeted this picture at the Globe Theatre has made the right impression on wise State Rights buyers. One of the most remarkable of all pictures this great drama of birth control is lavishly produced, played by an exceptional cast headed by one of America's most eminent actors—

TYRONE POWER

The Press, Pulpit and Professional men have united in pronouncing the play, the subject, and the entire production the most notable that has ever appeared on Broadway. A great big, smashing, daring subject produced in a big, smashing, daring way.

Produced by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley

The following States Rights have already been sold: California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Montana, Michigan, Idaho, Greater New York Territory. A complete series of newspaper ads have been prepared for Exhibitors on this huge production. Everything ready to insure a successful clean up for buyers and Exhibitors as well. Earliest possible communication advised. Wires, phone calls, letters or personal calls given consideration in the order of their receipt. Address all communications to STATES RIGHTS DEPARTMENT.

Brenon Proves Himself a Screen Generalissimo

Fox Producer Ends Twelve Months of Grilling Labor in the Tropics, Where with a Host of People Under His Command He Put on the Kellermann Marine Spectacle—And Not So Long Ago He Was Just Earning Enough to Pay Carfare and Buy a Sandwich Once-in-a-While

JUST one year ago Herbert Brenon, a director of achievement already known through his work, sat and talked with William Fox in New York. He said to Mr. Fox:

"Here is a story I have conceived for the screen. There has never before been a story of this type or character. And I might say to you that I do not believe there ever will be another story of its kind."

William Fox listened while the story was unfolded. Months before a camera crank had turned, before a foot of scenery had taken form, he saw in his mind's eye the story as Herbert Brenon had imagined it.

When this conference had ended William Fox said:

"There are just two or three things I wish to say to you about this story and the picture we will make from it. To make this picture as you have presented it will require an enormous expenditure. But that does not matter. We will make it. The money is ready for you. Pick out your locations, go employ your stars and their supporting players. Cast your eyes about the world and decide upon the spot where you can get from nature the things this picture demands.

"When all these details are settled call on me and I will send you and all of your people away. I will provide as much advance money as may be necessary. I will send you the pay-roll every week by cable. Forget about New York, forget about the home office of my company and the business end of this industry."

Two months later Herbert Brenon took four shipments of people and equipment away with him to Jamaica. He had leased the famous Rose Gardens at Kingston. He had, meanwhile, obtained consent of the British government and the Jamaican Colonial authorities to make use of the old fort at Augusta. He had sent his carpenters, his excavators, his builders and his architects on ahead.

Engages Annette Kellermann

He had engaged Annette Kellermann. After talking with hundreds of persons he had engaged the cast of supporting principals who were to make notable the portrayal of characters he had in mind.

All through the West Indies his agents had gone hiring the fleetest and best conditioned horses, till he was certain he would have not less than 5,000 of these animals for the riding armies of his picture. One woman, Mrs. Irene Lee, the mother of the two little film children, Jane and Katherine Lee, had personally directed the making of more than 10,000 costumes in three weeks. Miss Kellermann had trained her mermaids.

Sanitarians worked over old Ft. Augusta. Engineers and electricians labored unceasingly. A city sprang up above what had been a swamp. The motion picture hordes—almost 20,000 persons—moved in, cameras began to click and the picture was under way.

The making of this picture went on in Jamaica for ten months. Sitting at the end of a cable in New York William Fox sent down to Jamaica the necessary money each month to defray expenses.

Herbert Brenon has just returned to New York from Jamaica. The photographing of the picture is at an end. The man who conceived the spectacle is now working sixteen hours or more each day to cut and assemble his work. He took 220,000 feet of film in and around Kingston. Seven camera men working at once from different angles made it certain that nothing would be overlooked; or that no error of one man could impair the production. When the picture is finally ready for the public, it will have been condensed to about twelve thousand feet. That much, it is believed, will tell the story without flaw, without danger of lengthening the story or dulling the interest.

Maker of Big Programs Starts on a Small One

In 1896 or thereabouts R. A. Roberts was staging the English melodrama, "Sporting Life," at the Academy of Music, where William Fox now reigns supreme. Much vexed because a minor actor did not suit the part, he called out, "Is there anybody here that can shout 'Program of the races'?"

"Program, program, buy your program of the races!" bawled a small boy in the last row of supers. Mr. Roberts ordered the under-sized youth to the front and immediately engaged him as the stage program boy at a salary of a dollar a day. The boy was young Herbert Brenon, not very long before that landed here from the Old World to seek his fortune in the New World.

"I started in America," reminisced Mr. Brenon the other day, "as a Pittsburgh office boy at three dollars a week. After the family moved to New York, Joseph F. Vion, the vaudeville agent, offered me four dollars a week as his office boy and promised to get me four dollars a week more for ushering at night at Weber and Fields theatre. Somehow Mr. Vion could not deliver on the Weber-Fields usher proposition, so I was driven to look around and thus made my entry on the professional stage in the manner described."

Next George White, the super king, picked Brenon for one of the cadets of Gascony in a "Cyrano de Bergerac" production Augustin Daly was making with Sydney Herbert and Ada Rehan. Kyrle Bellew kindly introduced the lad to Daly, and Augustin Daly made Herbert Brenon his call boy. Thus the future director worked for the prince of American managers through the seasons of 1897-1898, the observation of his chief inspiring him with ambition to boss the stage job himself. But all he got was the small sum of ten dollars a week.

After the death of Augustin Daly, Mr. Brenon developed into a good road actor and assistant stage manager, playing with Walker Whiteside, Harry Lacey and other stars and enacting the chief juvenile in "Sporting Life" only two short years after he had been the program boy. Then followed several valuable years in stock as actor and assistant stage director, leading up to his active direction of the Lyceum theatre, Minneapolis. To round out the experience Mr. Brenon and his wife, Helen Downing, whom he married in 1904, put in four years in vaudeville, including the entire big time circuits and using a sketch, "One Christmas Eve," which was especially written for him by Frances Brenon, his talented mother.

Stern Engages Brenon

In February, 1913, Julius Stern, of the Imp Studio, engaged Mr. Brenon as a scenario writer at seventy-five dollars a week. Within six months Mr. Stern gave him the first opportunity to direct a picture, and three months later he had made the Imp's first three-reeler, "Leah the Forsaken," followed by the first four-reeler "Absinthe," and later by the Universal's first seven-reeler "Neptune's Daughter." On the making of this last picture Herbert Brenon's fame as a producer was secure. For months past he has been working for William Fox, culminating in the commission he has now finished. But his activity and success are also shown by such Fox films of his as "The Kreutzer Sonata," "The Clemenceau Case," "The Two Orphans," "The Soul of Broadway" and "Sin."

SIMONSON IS TRAVELING AUDITOR FOR V-L-S-E

In line with its unvarying policy of promotion from the ranks, the V-L-S-E has appointed R. B. Simonson assistant to A. C. Wyckoff, the auditor of that organization, to the position of traveling auditor.

The addition to the traveling audit staff was imperative by reason of the steadily increasing volume of business at the various exchanges of the company throughout the country. To keep pace with the heavy demands upon their services was proving such a strain on the present member of the auditing staff that some measure of relief had to be devised, and the selection of Mr. Simonson followed. He has been acting as assistant to A. C. Wyckoff, the chief auditor at the home office of the company, for the past year—or since the formation of the Big Four.

GRACE CUNARD LEADS POPULARITY CONTEST IN TORONTO

Special to Motion Picture News.

Toronto, Ont., May 6.

Grace Cunard, Universal star, has once more resumed the lead in the Toronto World popularity contest being conducted in this city. Miss Cunard has held the lead for many weeks over Mary Pickford, but a short time ago Miss Pickford showed a great burst of speed and passed her opponent; however, by all indications at present, Miss Cunard will repeat her performance in Ottawa, and be returned winner of the Toronto contest; it is also likely that Ella Hall, another Universal star, will be in third place at the end of the race.

Selznick Forms Two Big Exchange Companies

He Organizes in Philadelphia a $400,000 Concern with Mastbaum and W. D. Smith, and Capitalizes a $200,000 Syndicate in Detroit with Garson

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN THREE STRIKING POSES

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, has formed two partnerships in connection with the establishment of his own system of exchanges. In Philadelphia a $400,000 company was incorporated, with Stanley V. Mastbaum, head of the Stanley Booking Company, and W. D. Smith, of Paramount, as partners of Mr. Selznick; and in Detroit, a $200,000 company was organized, with a syndicate headed by Harry Garson, of the Broadway Strand theatre, and Mr. Selznick holding equal interests.

Both companies were incorporated under the general trade name Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., which will be used by all the exchanges throughout the country. Mr. Mastbaum and Mr. Smith will control the distribution of Clara Kimball Young Features for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey on a fifty per cent basis, with Mr. Selznick under a franchise for five years. Mr. Garson will represent Mr. Selznick on similar terms for Michigan.

Mr. Selznick is now negotiating with the most important local film men all over the country and as fast as each deal is concluded announcement will be made.

In explanation of his plan for the formation of distributing companies for the Clara Kimball Young Features, Mr. Selznick said:

"Many people have been wondering just how I was going about the establishment of my own exchanges. Through the closing of my deal with Messrs. Mastbaum and Smith in Philadelphia, and Mr. Garson in Detroit, I am now in a position to make this important phase of our plans clear to the exhibitors and others interested.

"The Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, which is the producing corporation, grants to the distributing or exchange company a franchise for five years, which is controlled fifty per cent. by myself and fifty per cent. by the local interests, who become my partners on an equal footing with me in the distribution of Miss Young's pictures in their allotted territory. Each exchange or distributing company is incorporated under our trade name, Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., with the addition of the state in which it is organized by way of identifying the various companies.

"The advantages of the system I am inaugurating are apparent. Aside from the immediate benefit of being associated with such partners as I am now acquiring the future possibilities are enormous. With the most influential local men in the industry linked with me, it will be a simple matter to swing any big proposition we may plan. Then, too, under this system the cost of distribution will become a mere fraction of what it would be under any other arrangement."

The Rays, Comedy Lights, to Emanate Fun in Films

Johnny and Emma (You Certainly Recollect Them from the Old Theatrical Days) Form Company in Ohio and Engage Whirlwind Cobb to Get Exhibitor Contracts

JOHNNY and Emma Ray, known to theatre audiences the country over as funmakers, have entered the comedy film field. A company has been incorporated in Ohio, known as the Reserve Photoplays Co., which will produce the Ray comedies, and a studio has been built in Cleveland, the home town of the Rays.

JOHNNY AND EMMA RAY

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., sales manager of the concern, reports that a number of contracts have been secured with exhibitors for the new comedies.

The Cleveland studio is said to be equipped in the most modern fashion. The overhead trolley system has been adopted and so arranged that three different sets can be operated at the same time. There are comfortable lounging and dressing rooms, a large carpenter shop, assembling and cutting rooms, and a separate studio for the scenic artist and director.

The first releases of the company will be a comedy serial, showing various vicissitudes in the life of Casey, the character created by Ray.

The officers of the Reserve company are: Robert H. McLaughlin, president; Mr. Ray, vice-president, and Samuel Doerfler, treasurer. The New York offices are in the Columbia Theatre building.

ALL AGES VOTE AGAINST CENSOR BILL IN NEW YORK

Men, women and children—aged, young—and, in fact, all nationalities and color, have stormed the International Film Service booth at the Grand Central Palace last week daily in order to cast their ballots against the Cristman-Wheeler Censorship Bill.

Probably the oldest voter was Mother Maurice of the Vitagraph Company; whereas Charles Giegrich of Brooklyn, aged 4, was probably the youngest voter. Another young voter was Bobbie Connoly, known as the youngest motion picture star.

Vitagraph Re-organizes with $25,000,000 Capital

The Move Does Not Mean a Merger—Blackton Denies That Hampton Is a Stockholder—"We Have Increased Our Capital Stock for the Express Purpose of Making Bigger and Better Pictures," Declares Blackton—Men Prominent in Finance in the New Company

THE following announcement was issued last week by J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith, heads of the Vitagraph Company of America, anent the reorganizaiton of the firm:

"We take pleasure in announcing the completion of plans for the formation of a new Vitagraph company, with an authorized capital stock of $10,000,000 preferred and $15,000,000 common. Associated with us in the new company are a number of men of prominence in the financial and business world.

"We plan to make the new Vitagraph company larger and more powerful than any other element in the theatrical world. This organization enables us to carry to success productions more artistic and more ambitious than have yet been known to the picture world. We assure exhibitors and patrons an absolutely consistent program of better pictures than have ever been produced."

ALBERT E. SMITH.
J. STUART BLACKTON.

The daily press of New York, almost without exception, eagerly seized upon reorganization facts as merger rumors. When the story of the increased capitalization became known, the name of Benjamin Hampton, of the American Tobacco company, was immediately mentioned as one of the prominent stockholders.

Commodore Blackton when interviewed by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS following his opening speech at the Board of Trade Exposition, emphatically denied that the reorganization meant merging with other producing companies, and stated that Mr. Hampton held no stock whatsoever in the new Vitagraph.

Plans Only to Make Better Pictures

"We have increased to a $25,000,000 corporation," said he, "for the express purpose of making better and bigger pictures."

"Does this mean the merging of the producing companies of the V-L-S-E?" he was asked.

"For the present it concerns only the Vitagraph company," he replied. "Vitagraph needs not the assistance of other companies in the producing end to make pictures. Vitagraph has always been recognized as a reliable company. Our pictures have always been in great demand in the past, in such demand, in fact, that we will increase both our feature and short length output."

"Is Mr. Hampton at all interested in the new Vitagraph?" the Commodore was asked.

"Mr. Hampton is a tobacco man and not a picture man. He has absolutely no interest in the recapitalized company," was the reply. "Our new stockholders are men backed by sufficient money to insure adequate preparation of each picture we produce. Mr. Smith will still continue to control the business organization of the company while I, as heretofore, will devote my self to the production end."

Commodore Blackton would say nothing as to the probable acquisition by Vitagraph of a well known picture actress, on whose services it is believed Mr. Hampton has an option. His only remark in reference to this matter was, "If she comes to us, she will come without Mr. Hampton."

The large enrollment of stars under the Vitagraph banner, and the company's remarkably large facilities for picture production insure almost immediate celluloid proof of Commodore Blackton's statements. Aside from its formidable array of picture stars, such as Anita Stewart, Dorothy Kelly, Earle Williams, Edith Storey, Frank Daniels, Charles Richman, Lillian Walker, Joseph Kilgour and Harry Morey; E. H. Sothern and Edna May have only recently joined the Vitagraph company. Mr. Sothern and Miss May have been cast in pictures of the special feature class.

The plans for the company's future productions are still in preparation but it is a certain fact that the trade may look forward to some unususally large and pretentious features from the Vitagraph plant. Commodore Blackton will continue along the Preparedness line so successfully launched by his company in "The Battle Cry of Peace" by shortly beginning the filming of the "Battle Cry of War," its sequel.

The immense production plants of the Vitagraph, including the three in the United States, the one in Paris and the one in London, insure a likely increase in the company's production of corresponding magnitude to the increase in capitalization.

National Committee in New York for Exhibition

Men in Charge of Plans for the Sixth Exposition of the League, in the East Studying the Entertainments for Suggestions—Special Railroad Rates to Chicago

THE special convention committee in charge of plans for Sixth National Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, consisting of W. A. Sweeney, Lewis H. Frank, Fred Schaefer and Fred Hartman, have been attending the two trade shows being held in New York. Their object in making the trip to New York is to get first-hand impressions of the problems being met by the management of these entertainments, and to interest Eastern concerns in the convention to be held in Chicago July 10 to 18.

This Chicago convention, which promises to eclipse anything ever attempted along these lines, will be held in the Coliseum, where the convention of the Republican National Committee will take place a few weeks before. The Republican committee has promised to leave their decorations, costing over $20,000, for the use of the Exhibitors' convention. This will insure the finest and costliest lot of decorative material ever used in a moving picture trade show. There are 31,000 square feet of space in the Coliseum, not including the balconies.

The executive committee has made arrangements for special railroad rates for those attending the convention. A large number of screen stars have already promised to attend.

SEATTLE "TIMES" WILL PUBLISH DAILY BIOGRAPHIES FROM "NEWS" DIRECTORY NUMBER

Permission for the right to republish the page, half-page, and quarter page biographies of photoplayers, directors and writers, appearing in Studio Directory Number of Motion Picture News, dated January 29, has been asked by George Bellman, photoplay editor of the Seattle "Times." Inasmuch as this number was prepared for the sole purpose of distributing this information, the request was immediately granted.

Mr. Bellman will use one of these biographies in his department every day. This follows the republishing of the smaller biographies which appeared in this number, under an alphabetical classification. These for a time seemed sufficient, then came requests from readers of the department for additional information concerning this or that player, and the result was that Mr. Bellman decided to carry the most complete biographies that have ever been published.

COURSE TICKETS FOR NEW GEORGE KLEINE SERIAL

Exhibitors in many of the big cities where "Gloria's Romance," the new twenty-chapter George Kleine motion picture novel is booked, are arranging to offer their patrons special course tickets for the entire twenty chapters of the big Rupert Hughes story. For instance, houses that customarily charge 15 cents admission and for which the patron would ordinarily have to pay $3 for the full twenty admissions to the theatre during the run of "Gloria's Romance," can secure a "season ticket," good for the entire twenty feature chapters of the tale at $2.50. Ten-cent houses are making a corresponding reduction and offering their patrons "season tickets" at $1.50 apiece, thus cutting the total admission for the full twenty performances from $2. The plan is meeting with great favor, and already thousands of the "season tickets" are being sold.

KALEM OFFERS "THE IRISH REBEL" ON MAY 16

Kalem has for some time been considering the reissue of the most popular of the well-remembered "made in Ireland" subjects, due to the requests for these subjects constantly received from exhibitors.

But the speed with which exhibitors thought of Kalem's Irish dramas caused the inquiries concerning these subjects to double, and Kalem lost no time in making arrangements to meet the demand by reissuing "The Irish Rebel," remembered as among the strongest of the Irish productions.

"The Irish Rebel" is a one-reel production and it may be secured by all exhibitors at General Film offices. Both because of its theme, Ireland in rebellion, and the fact that every scene of the picture was taken in the vicinity of Dublin and on the spots that have figured so prominently in the news columns, it is given unusual interest at the present moment.

Tuesday, May 16, is the date on which "The Irish Rebel" will be released.

YOSEMITE SUBJECT SPLIT IN TWO RELEASES BY GAUMONT

So important does the Gaumont company consider Yosemite National Park in its "See America First" series that the release has been divided into two parts. The first was shown May 3. The second part will be given to the screen in the release of May 17.

These views were taken as a matter of record by a government cameraman, and are released by Gaumont through Mutual by special arrangement with the Department of the Interior. These are shown on a split reel with Harry Palmer's Kartoon Komics. The release of May 24 will show scenes of Savannah, Ga.

TURNER AND DAHNKEN CIRCUIT BOOKS "GLORIA'S ROMANCE"

The Turner and Dahnken Circuit, which conducts almost a dozen large houses in California, Nevada and Oregon, and which is preparing to take on other theatres at an early date, has booked "Gloria's Romance" for its entire circuit. This concern has been showing serials at several of its houses with gratifying results, and this has led to the booking of the Billie Burke attraction.

"Scenario Is Basis of All Good Pictures"—Fox

"Creative Brain That First Conceives a Story Knows More About That Story Than Anyone Else," He Declares—Has No Patience with Squabbles Between Authors and Directors

"THE scenario is the basis of all good pictures." This declaration of opinion with regard to the important question of what is most essential in picture production was made by William Fox, head of the Fox Film Corporation, in the course of a recent interview. Mr. Fox went on to say:

"The creative brain that first conceives a story knows more about that story than anyone else can possibly know. The director who is to take the creative idea of another person and make it into a picture is, for a moment, secondary except where the director is also the author of the script and is going to place his own creation in the film.

"The man or woman who both originates and then produces novel ideas in a picture is a capable and big figure in our industry, if the original ideas themselves have sufficient worth to commend them to the attention of people.

"I have almost no patience with the squabbles that arise between author and director. I have seen scores, almost hundreds, of great works ruined or badly mutilated by poor direction, or by direction that seemed incapable of understanding what broad minds had conceived and written.

"In my own case I employ and pay directors liberally and I expect them to possess sufficient imagination to go even beyond what an author has written down for their guidance. If they lacked this capacity and were incapable of projecting their vision and imagination on ahead of the scenario writer I would wonder, as any producer would, whether the directors were even necessary. If they lacked these capacities they would have no place in our industry and authors would be engaged as directors of their own scenarios.

"I have a word or so that I would like to say to the directors of pictures; I have said this many times to my own directors, viz.:

"'Brain is going to rule in motion picture authorship and motion picture production. The brains that have made the literature of the past in all languages and the brains that are making the literature of this day in all lands are not to be flouted or treated with contempt by those of us who have engaged in the task of translating the world's best thought into the pictures that the rest of the world will see for years to come.

"'Certainly I shall never be the one to say, or think, that those of us who are now making pictures, and the men we hire to produce them, are superior in insight or vision to the authors who place the thought and imagination of the world between the covers of books.'"

Red Feather Social Club Formed in New York

Membership Is Drawn from Universal Exchanges and the Promotion of Friendly Feeling Among Its Members Is the Aim—Hoffman Honorary President

WITH the mysterious name, Red Feather Social Club, an organization was affected on March 25 by the staff of the Universal Film exchanges of New York which promises to be a pleasant diversion from business. Its objects and aims are kept secret, and all of its meetings are exclusive, and closely guarded. The objects of the organization are social, and are intended to bring together the employees of various branches of the exchange industry in this city socially, and it is expected that in this way friction which might be engendered through the keen rivalry and efforts to get business will be eliminated through personal touch in a social way.

M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the Bluebird Photoplay, Inc., and of the Universal Film exchanges, was unanimously elected honorary president, and Samuel Zierler, manager of the Universal Film exchange of Twenty-third street, active president.

The other officers are: H. Gainsborg, vice-president; S. Rubentein, treasurer, and M. Isen, secretary.

The entertainment committee consists of H. Stern, chairman; S. Samson, G. Hallett, and C. Moses.

At the first regular meeting an organization was affected, and a number of men in the exchange business and its allied interests were admitted to membership. There are a number of men who are eligible to membership on its waiting list, however, and at the second meeting their names will be formally acted upon.

Any information in regard to the Red Feather Social Club may be obtained through its secretary, M. Isen, who may be addressed at 115 East Twenty-third street.

The first official Red Letter Day of the Club took place on Friday, April 28. It was designated as a "Red Paint Night."

Kleine Issues Volume on His Literary Screen Plays

"Cycle of Film Classics" Contains Descriptions of "Spartacus," "Julius Caesar," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Quo Vadis?" and Four Others

"GEORGE KLEINE'S CYCLE OF FILM CLASSICS" is the title of an attractive volume of sixty-four pages issued by the well-known producer as an advertisement of his series of historical and literary screen dramas, "Spartacus," "Julius Caesar," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Quo Vadis"? "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Othello," "The Lion of Venice" and "Vanity Fair." The book is neatly bound in limp leather with gilt lettering, and is an unusual piece of advertising.

Besides extensive descriptions and illustrations of the eight photoplays, it contains a number of testimonials from prominent personages, and three plans by which societies, organizations and institutions of various kinds can view the cycle without cost to themselves by inducing exhibitors to show the pictures under their auspices.

A blank to be filled out by interested committees, and a course ticket which would admit the bearer to the entire cycle, is also included.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS (INC)

THEATRES almost everywhere are crowded with multiple part features of monotonous similarity. The sum total of many an Exhibitor's daily grind is "trying to make ends meet."

¶ At intervals in cheerful, yet sharp, contrast the dull monotony is relieved by the timely appearance of a BLUEBIRD production.

¶ And those Theatres that are gradually and surely turning to BLUEBIRD productions are not alone lifting themselves out of the run of the mediocre and commonplace, but are insuring the financial growth and expansion that comes as a sure reward from a constantly growing appreciative clientele, which demands the finer things in life.

Previous BLUEBIRD Releases include:

Louise Lovely, in "TANGLED HEARTS"

J. Warren Kerrigan, in "THE GAY LORD WARING"

Robert Leonard and Ella Hall, in
"THE CRIPPLED HAND"

Florence Lawrence, in "ELUSIVE ISABEL"

Kitty Gordon Signs with World for Three Years

Star of "As in a Looking Glass," "Her Maternal Right" and "The Crucial Test," World, Was Popular Idol on Speaking Stage in Continental Cities

KITTY GORDON has abandoned the stage entirely and will, for the next three years at least, appear exclusively in motion pictures under the guidance of the World Film Corporation. The arrangement was completed this week by Miss Gordon, acting for herself, and William A. Brady, head of the World Film Corporation.

Miss Gordon, wife of H. H. Beresford,

of the titled house of the same name, made her biggest particular triumph when first she came to these shores in "Alma, Where Do You Live?"

Miss Gordon had already established herself on the English stage, and had about decided to abandon stage work for philanthropy and settlement work, when Joseph Weber, producer of "Alma," came and pleaded that she assume the principal role. Miss Gordon succumbed, with the result that the show stayed at Weber's theatre nearly two years, and later toured the country for two seasons, with Miss Gordon playing the leading role. She played three hundred cities during the two years abroad and in that time became almost as famous here as abroad.

Early this year Miss Gordon was secured by World Film for appearance in one picture. She played the star part in "As In a Looking Glass," and was immediately engaged for a second picture, "Her Maternal Right." Miss Gordon was engaged again, this time for one picture, with the World company having an option for a longer period, and "The Crucial Test" was completed last week.

In all probability the Gordon pictures will be released under a title, such as Kitty Gordon Features, on the regular World Film Program, and will, of course, be produced under the personal guidance of Mr. Brady himself.

Miss Gordon began her stage career in a small, obscure part with George Edwardes at his London Music Hall. She became a popular idol in the English metropolis and toured all of Europe, duplicating her success at Vienna, Petrograd, Budapest, Berlin, Paris and the South American countries. Following her conquest abroad, she came here with perhaps the most rapid success of any recent foreign player.

Miss Gordon will next be seen in "The Crucial Test," after which one of De Maupassant's greatest fictional documents will be picturized, with the actress playing the interesting role.

MOSS MOVES TO GODFREY BUILDING

The general booking departments of the B. S. Moss Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation, and the Amalgamated Vaudeville Agency, are now located on the eleventh floor of the Godfrey Building, Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue, New York City.

SELIG'S ATHLETIC FEATURE FILMS OUGHT TO GO STRONG WITH PUBLIC

Famous athletic stars are signing contracts to appear in the Athletic Feature Films series to be released through the V-L-S-E by Selig, under the direction of J. H. Herman, promoter of important athletic events. Among those to be included are Jess Willard, Frank Gotch, Joe Stecher, Packey McFarland, Mike Gibbons, Freddie Welsh, Zbyszko, Hussana, Cutler, Dr. Roller and others.

There will be twelve one-reel subjects in the series. The first release will present Cutler, the Yankee billiard champion, in a match game with Koji Yamada, the Jap marvel; Dr. Roller and Frank Dalkus in a wrestling match, and a boxing exhibition by Mike Gibbons.

MELLISH BACK WITH FOX

Fuller Mellish, the distinguished English actor, who has been playing with James K. Hackett in his Broadway production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and other Shakespearean plays, has rejoined the photoplay forces of William Fox. He will appear in a photodrama which is being directed by Will S. Davis.

Ivy Close, English Beauty, Will Be a Kalem Star

A CATCHY SNAP-SHOT OF IVY CLOSE, WHO WILL APPEAR ON THE SCREEN UNDER KALEM'S BANNER

IVY CLOSE, the international beauty and star, whose capture for the motion picture screen was recently announced, is to be a Kalem star. This week the Kalem Company made public a letter received from Miss Close telling of her safe arrival in London after being caught in the midst of the Irish rebellion.

The letter also carried the information that Miss Close would sail for this country on May 13. An unusual feature of the Kalem contract with the English star is that according to its terms Miss Close must sail on a boat flying the American flag. She will therefore leave Liverpool on a steamship of the American Line.

Pressed for details regarding the company's further plans for presenting Miss Close on the screen Kalem officials were not very voluble.

"Our practice of putting our best efforts into short subjects is well known, so it may also be expected that Miss Close will be seen in the short lengths," said Mr. Wright. "We receive added confirmation each week strengthening us in our loyalty to the short picture, so it is not likely that when other manufacturers are coming around to our ideas we would change our policy."

"BUCKSHOT FEUD" GIVES DON CHANCE TO SHOOT MR. GLOOM FULL OF HOLES

"The Buckshot Feud" is a one-act comedy written and directed for the Lubin Company by Edwin McKim, and released May 1 through the General Film Company. Davy Don is given the perilous distinction of the feature role.

"The Candle," a two-act drama by Maude Thomas and Julian Lamothe, and directed by Leon D. Kent, is released by the Lubin Company, May 2, through the General Film Company. The cast includes L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo, George Routh, Robert Gray, J. J. Colby, Jay Morely, Julian Lamothe, Helen Eddy and Grace Eddy.

"None So Blind," as written by C. A. Framberg and directed by Melvin Mayo, under the personal supervision of Captain Wilbert Melville, is a condensation of thrills into three acts. It is released by the Lubin Company, May 4, through the General Film Company. It is the story of a submarine with photoplayers, including Princess Nona Darkfeather, Evelyn Page, Adelaide Bronti, Ruth Saville, Walter Spencer and Cecil Van Auker.

"Father's Night Off," written by A. R. Lloyd and directed by Clay M. Greene, is released through the General Film Company by the Lubin Company, May 6. The cast includes June Daye, Eleanor Blanchard, James Cassady, Francis Joyner, Hollins Antrim and Kempton Greene.

LEWIS IS PRODUCING SPECIAL FEATURES FOR LUBIN

Edgar Lewis, one of the best known of photoplay directors, now under long time contract with the Lubin Company, is producing special features for the V-L-S-E program.

Before entering photoplay work Mr. Lewis was associated for many years with the theatrical business as playwright and stage director. He started his career with the Solax Company.

He was with Reliance for a year and a half, since which time he has made nothing but multiple reel features.

Within the past twelve months he has produced "The Littlest Rebel," "Northern Lights," "Captain Swift," "The Thief," "Samson," "A Gilded Fool," "The Plunderer," "The Nigger," "The Bondsman," "The Great Divide" and "Souls in Bondage."

LOUELLA MAXIM JOINS KEYSTONE

Louella Maxim, who has had a very wide experience before the camera, following her work in the support of Chester Conklin in "Bucking Society," was made a member of the Keystone stock company. Another recent addition to the Keystone company is Peggy Pierce, for many months with the L-Ko.

Mack Sennett has decided that Hank Mann is too good a comedian to be lost from the screen by directing, and so has selected Edward Klein to direct him. One of the most recent subjects in which Mann plays the star part is "His Bread and Butter." In this Peggy Pierce appears in the opposite lead.

HEYMAN, STAR ROADMAN, ADVISES READING OF "NEWS" BY COLLEAGUES

Harry Heyman, star roadman for Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha, has made a wide mark for himself. He was third in a recent comparative report of business bringers for the World.

"It looked good to see Omaha separated only by New York and Washington, D. C., from the top," declared Heyman. "But," he added, "wouldn't it look a lot better to see Omaha at the top?" And he is trying to do it.

When other roadmen ask him how he does it, Heyman says he never neglects to advise reading MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "If you want to keep in front you have to progress," he said. "If you would progress, keep in touch with what the exhibitors want and what they are doing. That is the way I do it, and that is the way the foremost trade paper for the exhibitors helps me."

"NAKED HEARTS," BLUEBIRD'S RELEASE ON MAY 29

Bluebird photoplays promise a moving picture novelty in "Naked Hearts," the release founded on Tennyson's Maud. The five-reeler will present a story practically in two parts, with an entirely different set of actors delineating the play. In the early section three clever juveniles will carry the burden of the acting.

Zoe Bech in the early section will play the child that later grows to Maud, as played by Francelia Billington. Gordon Griffith is the boy who later appears in manhood as Rupert Julian, and George Hupp plays the role of Maude's little brother, later assumed by Jack Holt.

Rupert Julian becomes a Bluebird star in "Naked Hearts." He has provided the story from which Olga Printzlau wrote the scenario; he directed the production and will play the leading male character with Miss Billington as his leading lady. In his supporting company, besides those mentioned, will be Ben Horning, Douglas Gerrard, Paul Weigle and Nannie Wright. "Naked Hearts" is set for release May 29.

Murphy Out to Blow His Horn in Many Big Cities for Unicorn; Chaplin "Carmen" Hit in Boston

MANAGER FRED MURPHY of the Unicorn in Boston is on a trip to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and New Orleans, in his capacity as eastern district manager of the Unicorn. This company has just closed a deal to take over negatives. The response of the exhibitors in regard to the one and two-reel program of the Unicorn is announced as remarkable.

The Park theatre, Boston, has signed to run all the V-L-S-E special features, starting May 22.

The Chaplin "Carmen" film last week turned many people away from the Boston theatre, one of the largest houses in the world, and the film was rebooked for this week.

The Bluebird company announces signing first run service for the new Strand in Providence, R. I., and for many smaller houses.

Frank Vine, of Hearst's International News Service, has given the contract for its new building at 48-50 Piedmont street to the S. J. Gerron Company. The old building has been torn down and foundation has been started for the new one.

Dan Kiley, formerly assistant director of the Eastern Film Company, is now with the E. W. Lynch Enterprises, and is traveling for them in Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Edwin H. McCloskey, formerly New England correspondent of the Moving Picture World, who resigned to become secretary for Edward P. Farrell, has returned to Boston, and is associated with Frank H. Vine of the International Film Company.

George Hickey, formerly in charge of the Mutual Film Exchange, Boston, previously manager of the Warner Feature Film at Portland, Me., has been appointed manager of the Unicorn at Syracuse, N. Y.

EUTEMARKS BUYS RIGHTS TO "END OF THE WORLD"

H. A. Eutemarks of the Penn Feature Film Company of Philadelphia has purchased "The End of the World" for Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Southern New Jersey.

MISS DAGMAR SUPPORTS VICTOR MOORE IN "THE CLOWN," LASKY

Under the direction of William C. De Mille there is nearing completion at the Lasky studios a photoplay by Marion Fairfax, entitled "The Clown," which has been set down for release on the Paramount program for the summer months. In addition to Thomas Meighan, who is featured in this production in support of Victor Moore, the star, the leading feminine role will be played by Florence Dagmar, the young Lasky actress who has come rapidly to the front in popularity throughout the

FLORENCE DAGMAR

United States. This is the second time that Miss Dagmar has appeared with Mr. Moore as she played a role in "Chimmie Fadden Out West." Also it is her second important appearance with Thomas Meighan as they both played leading roles with Theodore Roberts in "Pudd'nhead Wilson," from the novel by the late Mark Twain, which was recently released by Lasky through Paramount.

Many New Faces in Acting Force at Horsley's

Jessie Burnett Is Picked to Play Opposite Crane Wilbur—Thelma Salter, Child Actress, Grace Wilson and Clair Alexander, Still in Her Teens, Also at the Studio

MANY new faces have been added to the acting force at the David Horsley studios during the past few weeks. They will be seen in forthcoming releases of the Cub Comedies; two-reel centaur dramas and the five-reel Horsley-Mutual Masterpictures, de luxe edition.

One engagement of importance is that of Jessie Burnett, who was selected from a dozen or more possibilities for the portrayal of an important role in support of Crane Wilbur, the star, in his latest drama "The Wasted Years."

For several seasons Miss Burnett has been seen in ingenue parts and her undertaking with the Horsley company places her in a new character which should add greatly to her popularity with her many admirers. It is the character of the "worldly woman" and reports of her efforts thus far are excellent.

Miss Burnett is twenty-two years of age. She is medium in size, with great dark blue eyes and a mass of rich brown hair. She is very fond of outdoor life and is an accomplished swimmer and an expert horsewoman.

Thelma Salter, one of the best known child actresses, is now engaged with the Horsley companies. She is supporting Crane Wilbur in the same cast with Miss Burnett.

Grace Wilson, late of the Fine Arts studios, has been added to the company in which Margaret Gibson and William Clifford are co-stars. Her first appearance will be in one of Theodosia Harris' two part dramas in a character role.

Clair Alexander, a young woman still in her teens, is another new arrival at the Horsley studios. She has already been seen in two of the Cub comedies in support of George Ovey and is now playing her third part.

Little Miss Alexander is a New York girl and has been identified with the motion picture field of Southern California for several years. She is of dark complexion, has big brown eyes and chestnut hair which shades off into a dark brown.

Ten Episodes of "Social Pirates" by End of May

By the First Week of July Kalem Will Have Completed the Fifteen-Week Series—Company Is Already Ahead Many Weeks of Release Dates

WITH the end of May Kalem will have released ten episodes of "The Social Pirates" series, by George Bronson-Howard, leaving June and the first week of July to complete the fifteen-week series. The work of production is going ahead at full speed, and already Kalem is many weeks ahead of release dates on the different episodes.

"Unmasking a Rascal" is the title of the release issued on May 29. The tenth of the George Bronson-Howard stories finds the two heroines, Mona and Mary, matching their keen wits against those of a banker, who has succeeding in defrauding his ward and is apparently beyond the reach of the law. But a clever story shows that he is not beyond the reach of the girls, who succeed in recovering the ward's inheritance after an exciting two reels.

Monday, May 22, brings a timely episode of the series, since it has for its theme the disappearance of a wealthy munitions manufacturer. The millionaire had become interested in the girls' plans for social reforms, so they take on themselves the task of solving the mystery. Their opponents are two rival stock brokers and the crooked head of a sanitarium who have engineered the plot to keep the munitions manufacturer captive while his stock is being juggled.

"Sauce for the Gander," the eighth episode in the George Bronson-Howard series presents a story with an element of satirical comedy relieving the dramatic moments. The story provided by George Bronson-Howard for this episode finds the girls dealing justice to a loan shark and his worthless son. Father and son are played against each other in a clever manner.

FIDELITY MOVES FROM GALVESTON TO HOUSTON

The Fidelity Film Company, Inc., which handles exclusive state rights on features, has moved its headquarters from Galveston to Houston, Texas, with offices in the Prince Theatre Building.

JANET PRIEST IS A MEMBER OF METRO PUBLICITY STAFF

Janet Priest, a magazine writer and dramatic critic of national reputation, and formerly identified with the speaking stage in several notable productions, has accepted a position with the Pictures Magazine, and will write special articles on Metro stars and productions for that publication. In addition to her special stories Miss Priest will write each week a fiction story adapted from a five-reel screen feature. Miss Priest was born in Maine, but removed to Minnesota with her parents when she was four years old. She was graduated from the University of Minnesota with the degree of bachelor of Literature.

Miss Priest had a highly successful career upon the stage, and only forsook it because literature appealed more strongly to her. In musical comedy she had the role of Muggsy, in Richard Carle's, "The Maid and the Mummy"; the country girl in "His Honor the Mayor"; the child kleptomaniac in the three-act production of "School Days"; Gretchen, the goose girl, in "The Holland Heinies," and Tillie Day in "A Knight for a Day."

DRA-KO SUCCEEDS WITH ITS ANIMATED CARTOON

The steady growth of the business of the Dra-Ko Film Co., Inc., seems to prove there is a field for the Animated Cartoon as an advertising method.

Dra-Ko has placed the creation of all cartoons in the hands of Frank A. Nankivell, whose work is known from coast to coast. Back of every cartoon that he and his corps of assistants turn out is the experience of a man who has been studying audiences for years.

Wherever these Commercial Advertising Cartoons have been shown, they have had the approval of the audience. The firm calls this new plan "The Step Ahead in Advertising."

These Animated Commercial Advertising Cartoons can be handled by theatres, advertising agencies, theatre salesmen, supply houses and all advertisers, declares the Dra-Ko Company.

PAY-IN-ADVANCE PLAN CAUSES NO AFTER TROUBLE

Though the pay-in-advance rental plan for films has been in operation for some time in Milwaukee, the exchanges report little or no trouble and say that all of the exhibitors are paying promptly in advance. Throughout Wisconsin, where the most trouble was expected over the plan, none has been reported.

All of the exchange managers report everything working smoothly in this respect.

MABEL TALIAFERRO AS BOY IN "SNOW BIRD"

Mabel Taliaferro, the dainty and winsome Metro star, plays the role of a boy in "The Snowbird," a forthcoming five-part Wonderplay on the Metro program. Edwin Carewe, who is directing Miss Taliaferro, also has a prominent role in "The Snowbird."

V-L-S-E Exchange in Los Angeles Complete in Appointments

GLIMPSES OF THE V-L-S-E OFFICE IN LOS ANGELES

PERHAPS the most handsomely furnished exchange on the coast is that of the V-L-S-E in Los Angeles, which was opened under the direction of the present manager, Harry Naugle.

The bookkeeper's desk is in the lobby of the office, and about the lobby the attractive papers of the program's different subjects is shown.

The desks of the bookkeeper, cashier and manager are separated from the lobby by brass rails.

WORTHINGTON REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS

C. L. Worthington, district manager for the Fox Film Corporation, Philadelphia, has just returned from a trip of two weeks in Washington, D. C., and two weeks in Pittsburgh, and reports a large increase of business for Fox pictures in that territory. The Philadelphia office, under George Dembow, has obtained new Fox contracts every week for the past seven weeks. Great interest amongst exhibitors is being manifested in the next Theda Bara picture, "The Eternal Sapho." I. J. Madison, a new Fox roadman for the Pennsylvania territory, is very well known all through that region, having been one of the pioneer Quaker City exchangemen before the day of big features.

GERTRUDE ROBINSON (Gaumont)

"THE NIGHT RIDER" IN WORK UNDER BALSHOFER

Harold Lockwood and May Allison, who made their debut on the Metro program recently in "The Come Back," have gone to the mountains of North Carolina, where they are now at work on "The Night Rider," a five-part screen production. The company is located in the picturesque locality near Bat Cave, Hickory Nut Gap, where the world famous Vanderbilt estate, "Biltmore," is located.

Fred J. Balshofer is directing "The Night Rider," and is assisted by Howard Truesdell. Mr. Truesdell is also playing an important role in the production. Lester Cuneo, the noted heavy leading man, is another prominent member of the strong supporting cast.

MAY ALLISON AND LOCKWOOD ARE NOT MARRIED

As the result of a false rumor started some months ago, stating that Harold Lockwood and May Allison had been married, the two Metro stars have been subjected to considerable annoyance from admirers asking for details of their wedding. Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison request that the report be denied as emphatically as possible. They are not married, and both declare that they have no intention of marrying each other.

PROVINCIAL AMUSEMENT TAX EFFECTIVE ON MAY 15

The provincial treasurers' amusement tax for Ontario will go into effect on the fifteenth of May and the tariff will be fixed by May 10. Although no official information is available, it is regarded as likely that Mr. McGarry's tax will be graded right from the commencement, which will mean more revenue than a flax tax.

MADAME PETROVA, THE METRO STAR, IN POSES FROM "PLAYING WITH FIRE"

"Ordeal of Elizabeth" "V" Leader for May 15th

On the Program for the Week Are "Kernel Nutt Wins a Wife," "A Lucky Tumble," "More Money Than Manners" and "Miss Adventure"

DURING the week of May 15 Vitagraph offers a program in which "The Ordeal of Elizabeth," the five-part Blue Ribbon Feature of the week, produced from the book of the same name is the leader of the collection.

"The Ordeal of Elizabeth" tells of a country girl who, in a thrill of infatuation, marries a wandering musician. She later realizes she has made a mistake. The man is murdered and she is accused of the crime, but is saved by evidence furnished by the one she really loves. Lillian Walker as the country girl is supported by Evart Overton, who is seen as a millionaire clubman. Denton Vane, L. Rogers Lytton, Ollie Walker, Karin Norman and Walter MacGrail make up the balance of a very capable cast. The story was produced under the direction of Wilfrid North.

In "Kernel Nutt Wins a Wife," Frank Daniels, the Vitagrapher, conducts a matrimonial agency. He tires of the occupation when he is forced to substitute for one of his customers and marry a "cold storage chicken." It is from the pen of Reginald Wright Kaufman, and was filmed under the supervision of C. J. Williams. Alice Washburn and Adele de Garde assist Mr. Daniels in its enactment.

William Dangman in "A Lucky Tumble" takes a fall from grace by falling behind in his board bill, but falls in soft when he falls down a chimney and captures a burglar and a reward. Frank Currier directed the action of the play. Lucille Crane, Florence Natel, George O'Donnel and William Lytell, Jr., also appear. On this same reel are shown some scenes of Iceland.

"More Money Than Manners" is a comedy by C. Graham Baker and Lawrence Semon. We are shown the experiences of the Codles family and their attempt to break through society's upper crust. John T. Kelly, Jewell Hunt, Kate Price and Hugh Mack are the chief funmakers. Semon also directed the production.

In "Miss Adventure," the Broadway Star Feature of the week, Mary Anderson plays the part of a capricious young miss, who gets her beau into many embarrassing situations. Despite her deviltry he marries her with the hope that after their marriage she will become a dignified young lady. This pleasing comedy was filmed by William Wolbert at Vitagraph's Western studio. Webster Campbell is seen in the role of the beau.

ORTH FORMS MILO IN BALTIMORE

George Orth, formerly associated with the Gaumont, Eclair, Republic and Biograph companies, has formed a producing company in Baltimore, where he will make one one-reel comedy weekly, featuring Tommy Mullens, late of Horsley, and Edith Sargeant, formerly with Universal.

The concern is known as the Milo Pictures Corporation, and has the following officers: Dr. Harry E. Buckner, president; George Orth, vice-president; A. Kurnick, secretary and treasurer.

Prison Parson Patters Plain Prayers in "Police"

But That's Only a Small Part of It, for After the Exhortation the Released Burglar, Charlie Chaplin in Latest Essanay, Holds the Limelight

"POLICE," Charles Chaplin's latest Essanay release, presents the famous comedian as a released convict. He is chiefly occupied in dodging policemen.

A prison parson exhorts him to go straight and takes the five dollars which was given him on his discharge. Chaplin's efforts to recover his money are mirth provoking. He falls in with a burglar whom he knew in prison. They try to break into a house. The "jimmy" will not open the window, so Chaplin walks in the door which was open all the time.

He breaks open the mail box, the piano and the kitchen stove—being a rather inexperienced burglar—and then contents himself with stealing the flowers off the table, much to the disgust of his accomplice, who takes the rings to the lady of the house. She saves Chaplin from arrest when the police come and gives him some change. He goes to a ten-cent lodging house and demoralizes the place, showing the others how to quiet noisy guests. He accomplished this in a simple manner, merely striking them over the head with bottles.

His burglar friend comes in and with a free-for-all-fight Chaplin recovers the lady's jewels and returns them to her next day. Then a policeman whom Chaplin had never done anything to, except hit on the head with a mallet, chases him off the steps just when he hoped to win the widow.

Gladys Hulette Signs for Thanhouser Classics

Star with Large Following Among Exhibitors and Fans Will Appear in Eight Five-Reel Subjects a Year—Vaughn a "Male Vamp" in "The Fugitive"

IT is now definitely announced that Gladys Hulette has signed a contract with the Thanhouser Company by which she will appear in Thanhouser Classics exclusively. These are to be productions of not less than five reels, and Miss Hulette will star in eight productions a year.

Since Miss Hulette first went to the Thanhouser studio her success has been due to a personality which registers in films unmistakably. Mr. Thanhouser offered her the contract on the strength of the following among fans and exhibitors which she has succeeded in building for herself. Miss Hulette is an ingenue with dramatic power, and the classics in which she appears will be specially written for her. The Mutual Film Corporation will soon announce her releases.

"The Fugitive," written by Philip Lonergan and directed by Frederick Sullivan, is the title of the first Thanhouser Classic, featuring Florence La Badie. Ethyle Cooke appears in this production, which also includes Robert Vaughn and George Marlo. Hector Dion comes to the fore as "the male vampire." He is blacker that he could be painted in "The Fugitive." Miss La Badie is said to have done the best work of her career, and the Thanhouser Company plans an elaborate trade showing to prove it.

SCENES FROM THREE UNIVERSAL FEATURES FOR MAY RELEASE: "CLAUDIA," "HUNTRESS OF MEN," AND "YELLOW AND WHITE"

CONWAY WITH PATHE IN DENVER

A. J. Conway, former assistant manager of the V-L-S-E exchange in Denver, has resigned to accept the position of road man for the Pathe Exchange of Denver. He will cover the Colorado territory. Conway has had many years' experience in the film business in that territory, and should prove a valuable business getter for Pathe.

H. I. Kraus, the former road man for Pathe, resigned to join H. L. Knappen, recently appointed manager of the International Film Service of Frisco. Knappen was former manager of the Denver Pathe Exchange, and upon his assuming charge of the Frisco Exchange wired a handsome offer to Kraus, who will do the road work out of Frisco.

Beauty Draws 'Em Like Flies Around a Molasses Pot

The Appearance in Person of Mignon Anderson at Matinee Showing of "City of Illusion" Brings Out Night Crowds, Possible to Accommodate Only by Midnight Performance

THE appearance of Mignon Anderson in person, star of the Ivan feature, "The City of Illusion," at a matinee performance of the picture in the Park View theatre, Brooklyn, had an unexpected effect on the theatre's schedule for that day. Miss Anderson was greeted by a capacity house, and the afternoon patrons evidently did a large amount of missionary work, for the night crowds were so great that Messrs. Thiele and Eichhorn were forced to give a midnight showing.

Even then, all those who wished to see "The City of Illusion" could not be accommodated, so the management held the feature over for the next day.

Impressed with the success of this

MIGNON ANDERSON

Ivan picture, the Park View has booked the next production of the company, "Her Husband's Wife," in which Miss Anderson shares honors with Sally Crute and Augustus Phillips.

L-KO Comedy Proves Itself an Aid to Medicine

Corporal Beck, Severely Wounded at the Front with the British Forces, Recovers Speech and Hearing After Witnessing the Antics of Billie Ritchie

CORPORAL ROBERT BECK, late of the British army, who gained fame as discoverer of a new use for L-Ko comedies featuring Billie Ritchie, is back in America after a strenuous career at the front. Corporal Beck's use of the comedies is to restore speech and hearing to those deprived of the same, and his story bears relation for its startling disclosures.

Corporal Beck, who previous to the outbreak of the war was a motorcycle policeman of Chicago, returned to his native colors when conflict became imminent. He enlisted in the Motor Transport Section of the Army Service Corps, and besides fighting used to carry messages from one division of the Allied army to another.

In May, 1915, near Dixmude, when the corporal was speeding along with a dispatch he was hit by a sharpshooter. Severely wounded, he fell headlong from his machine, and when he came to two weeks later he was in a hospital near Liverpool, England, convalescing but unable to speak a word or hear a word as a result of falling on his head.

Manager Pearson, of the Aintree Palace Picture theatre in Liverpool, has made it a practice ever since the outbreak of the war to invite paroled soldiers to his theatre to enjoy the show. Corporal Beck, in company with others, attended one of these performances, and a Billie Ritchie picture entitled "A Fatal Note" was shown.

Ritchie's chief stunt in this picture is to suspend several policemen on a forceful stream of water, and the corporal, laughing so heartily at this, caused blood to rush to his head, which gushed from his ears, evidently restoring his hearing and his power of speech.

Now Corporal Beck is back in Chicago. Perhaps he will rejoin the police force or there is a chance he may repair to Los Angeles and act as Billie Ritchie's chauffeur.

Incidentally the corporal has been through many, many battles. In the African wars he was decorated by Queen Victoria and King Edward, while on account of his bravery in the present conflict he was highly honored by King George.

INSURE BILLIE BURKE'S GOWNS FOR $40,000

The Henri Bendel, Lucile and Balcom frocks that have been specially designed for Miss Billie Burke and which she will wear during the course of "Gloria's Romance," the new motion picture novel from the pen of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, made at the George Kleine studios in New York, have been insured for $40,000 by Mr. Kleine. The idea is not so much to cover the cost of the gowns themselves as it is to prevent the manufacturer from loss in case anything happens to the gowns that have been worn once and which will not appear on the screen again until a far later chapter of the story.

BEECROFT RECOVERS FROM OPERATION

Chester Beecroft, who has held prominent positions in many film concerns, underwent a successful operation for appendicitis in New York City last week. Mr. Beecroft's last position was with David Horsley's Centaur feature company, where he held the post of general manager. It is stated that Mr. Beecroft is rapidly regaining his strength and will shortly be active again in the business.

ATLANTA SCREEN CLUB IN WALTON BUILDING

Special to Motion Picture News.

Atlanta, May 6.

The Atlanta Screen Club, the first trade organization of its kind in the South, recently formed in this city, now occupies its new quarters in the Walton building and is planning a series of dances and entertainments in the near future. William Oldknow, of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, who has been elected president of the Screen Club, will tender the film men of the city a dinner at a local hotel within the next two weeks.

The purpose of the new organization is to increase the interest in motion pictures in Atlanta and make more pleasant the work of the exchange men located here. It is expected that other cities in Dixie will follow Atlanta's example and organize clubs of their own. The newspaper men of the city have expressed themselves as being highly in favor of the film organization and are doing much to properly support it.

The quarters occupied by the Screen Club are spacious and roomy and compare with those of the most fashionable clubs in Atlanta.

MISS MINTER COMPLETES PLANS FOR SANTA BARBARA TRIP

Extensive preparations are under way at the American Mutual studios in Santa Barbara for the reception of Mary Miles Minter and Richard Bennett, recently signed by President S. Hutchinson, to star in features to be released exclusively by Mutual.

Mr. Bennett will leave New York for the coast just as soon as his engagement with the "Rio Grande" company at the Empire theatre is brought to an end. Just when this will be is still indefinite. It was stated, however, that Mr. Bennett will be able to leave for Santa Barbara some time during the last two weeks in May.

Miss Minter has completed all arrangements for her departure for Santa Barbara. She will be accompaiied by her mother, Charlotte Shelby. As yet the feature productions in which Miss Minter is to star have not been titled. Several are now in the course of preparation at the American-Mutual studios. Like Mr. Bennett, Miss Minter will be supported by an especially selected company of players chosen personally by President Hutchinson.

Marionettes in Pictures for Children by Mission

Redley F. Taylor and Wilkens W. Wheatly Incorporate Company in California to Produce a New Sort of Film for the Young Folks, for Release on Universal REDLEY F. TAYLOR and Wilkens W. Wheatley are the chief incorporators of the Mission Film Company, of Hollywood, Cal. The company produced a new sort of picture that bids fair to meet with great success, chiefly among the younger folk patronizing the picture theatres.

Mr. Taylor, who is in New York at present, spoke of the enterprise to Motion Picture News: "We employ no actors in our pictures," he said. "Our stages are no larger than a table top, our lighting is miniature.

"Our pictures show electrically worked marionettes in action.

"At present we are releasing on the Universal program under the Power's brand, and our first few subjects have met with great success from all reports. These pictures have a large appeal to children. The figures are doll-like in form and we have arranged that their movements have a mechanical doll-like effect.

"In several theatres where these pictures have been shown, I have noticed murmurs of surprise going around the audience at their appearance. The children sat right up and took notice and at the close the film got a hand. It is my belief that the exhibitor who is instituting a children's matinee or who caters largely to children in the afternoon, will find in these pictures just the article he is looking for."

Messrs. Taylor and Wheatly are working in a field which has long since needed working badly, and such pictures will perhaps come into national vogue before long. Their process is patented.

"VENTURES IN VANITY" SHOW FASHIONS FOR WOMEN

The Fashion Films, Inc., Brokaw building, New York City, expects to reach through its "Ventures of Vanity" 125,000 people every month and figures on the picture bringing from thirty to forty thousand women to the department stores where Miss Vanity will do her shopping.

Fashion Films will be shown in first-class motion picture theatres in the New York shopping zone on fashion each week.

Miss Vanity is a debutante, who has just graduated from college and is completing her wardrobe. Her shopping tours are an epoch of history for women.

Heretofore, the fashion periodicals have been the only means of displaying the latest models to the women.

Fashion Films have solved the question and have produced a series that will not only interest all the women, but will benefit them as well.

EMMETT WILLIAMS, FAMOUS, DIES FROM SEPTIC POISONING

It was with profound sorrow, and with a sense of keen personal loss that the members of the Famous Players Film Company received the news of the death of Emmett Williams at New Rochelle hospital on Friday afternoon, April 28. Williams, who was one of the most popular men in the organization, contracted septic poisoning several weeks ago, and had been fighting a splendid battle against the inevitable. Despite his desperate plight, hope for his recovery was held out until the very end, as it was felt that his youth and exemplary habits of life gave him every chance for life.

Though but twenty-three years of age, Williams was one of the best known camera men in the motion picture business, and had achieved an enviable record. It is significant of the character of the man that Director James Kirkwood, with whom he had been most closely associated until the time of his illness, was deeply moved by the news of his death.

Williams is survived by his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Williams, four brothers and one sister.

MANAGER OF PRODUCTION HAMPTON DEL RUTH AND KEYSTONE MERMAIDS

HARRIS AND STEETLE WITH NAVAJO IN KANSAS CITY

The Navajo Film Company, Kansas City, Mo., is featuring the seven-reel production, with Helen Gardner, of "A Princess of Bagdad," and reports success. The company has added the Chaplin films to its service and will endeavor to place more of them in the territory. Two new travelers with the Navajo company are George Harris and C. S. Steetle. Harris is an old show man, well acquainted with exhibitors, and travels in Oklahoma.

B. S. KLEIN TO ASSIST FOX ACADEMY MANAGER

Ben S. Klein has been appointed assistant manager of William Fox's Academy of Music, Fourteenth street and Irving Place, New York, and has entered upon his duties.

WALTHALL BACK IN CHICAGO

Henry B. Walthall has just returned to the Essanay studios in Chicago from the coast, where he has been taking a month's vacation after completing his work in the fifteen episode series, "The Strange Case of Mary Page." Essanay's leading man soon will begin another feature play, the title of which soon will be announced. It will be a theme which gives him ideal opportunities.

HENRY B. WALTHALL

Mr. Walthall came East completely rested and ready to take up his new work after a short vacation, although he had gone through the gruelling task of nearly forty reels of film since the first of the year. "The Misleading Lady," "The Raven" and other plays offer an indication of the popularity of Mr. Walthall in five-reel productions. Further, in pursuit of President George K. Spoor's plan to cast his greatest stars in short subjects, picture patrons can expect to see Henry B. Walthall in some forthcoming three-act dramas.

PARAMOUNT DAY CELEBATED IN KANSAS CITY BY LIBERAL NEWSPAPER SPACE

Paramount Day in Kansas City was celebrated by over half a page of advertising in the newspapers in which the advantages of Paramount releases were exploited. The Kansas City Feature Film Company had copy in the papers, with a list of the theatres in Kansas City using their service, in addition to an article telling of Paramount productions. In a two-column, one-inch spread, sixteen houses in the territory using Paramount service ran advertisements telling the days on which such pictures could be seen.

In addition to the Kansas City houses doing this, the following out-of-town theatres also inserted similar copy: The Electric, Kansas City, Kan.; the Iris, Topeka, Kan.; the Bowersock theatre, Lawrence, Kan.; the Orpheum theatre, Atchison, Kan.; Orpheum theatre, Leavenworth, Kan., and the Holland theatre, Wichita, Kan.

Pathé Books $14,000 for "Guilty" in Two Days

This Amount, Backed up with Advance Cash Payments Against Collections, Is Record for the Arrow Serial, Made at the Exhibitors' Exposition

PATHÉ EXCHANGE, INC., and the Arrow Film Corporation have found, in their display at the Exhibitors' Exposition in the Grand Central Palace, success in the way that, more nearly than any other, concerns the distributor and the producer of motion pictures. This is actual film bookings backed up with advance cash payments against collections.

Under the supervision of Arthur S. Abeles, manager of Pathé's Twenty third Street branch in New York City, "Puppets of Fate," the first of the fourteen photo-novels comprising the "Who's Guilty?" series, was screened publicly for the first time in the projection room at the Palace show for the benefit of the exhibitors attending the exposition.

Mr. Abeles put "Puppets of Fate" on the screen twice on Wednesday and twice on Thursday, giving one afternoon and one evening showing each day. The projecting room was filled, on every occasion, with visiting exhibitors and New York theatre owners and managers who had been invited specially by Mr. Abeles and his staff, among them A. W. Smith, C. Stennerman, H. Kronacker, J. Haspel, H. Weisfield, H. Morgan, S. Rubenstein, A. N. Barney and H. Fuld.

When Mr. Abeles checked up on the evening of May 4, he found that in the Palace Show itself more than $14,000 worth of "Who's Guilty?" bookings had been written. To be exact, $14,126 worth of business had been contracted for in four showings of one photo-novel alone out of the eight "Who's Guilty?" pictures which the Arrow Film Corporation, producer of the series, had already turned over to Pathé.

"The Exhibitors' League surely made good to and for us," said Mr. Abeles, speaking of the results of the Palace Show. The New York Pathé Exchange believes that Lee Ochs and his associates deserve our heartiest congratulations for the excellent manner in which they organized and conducted the Palace Show.

C. R. Seelye, head of the Pathé sales forces, and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, are enthusiastic over the showing made by the New York Pathé Exchange force at the Palace Show. Writing to Mr. Abeles about the record he and his men had established, Mr. Seelye said:

"It may have been that 'Who's Guilty?' put it over. It may have been that your efforts put it over. It may have been that the spirit of the Palace Show put it over. It may have been any one of these three—but I am sure it was the combination of all three. You surely made it some combination."

At the close of business on Saturday, April 29, the various Pathé exchanges had reported to the home office gross booking totaling $275,014 on "Who's Guilty?" series.

May 11 Set for Hearing on "Submarine" Suit

"Any Big Work Is Sure to Attract People Who Want to Help Fly the Kite Somebody Else Has Made," Declares President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Company

THE suit of Richard Barry, war correspondent, seeking injunction to prevent the showing of "The Secret of the Submarine," a serial motion picture, directed against the Mutual Film Corporation, its president, John R. Freuler, and others, has been set for a hearing May 11, by Mr. Justice Hotchkiss in the Supreme Court of New York. The Mutual was represented by Samuel M. Field, general counsel, who moved for continuance.

"The American Film Company, Inc., also a defendant," said Mr. Freuler in a statement made after the court session, "purchased and paid for the story involved in 'The Secret of the Submarine.' We place no particular importance on the allegations made in this suit. It is a typical eleventh hour action.

"This merely reminds me that we have dozens of letters from persons who claim the authorship of any number of our more important productions. People see a picture and then decide they had the idea first. That sort of thing happens right along. This is merely an instance that has broken out in court. It is just a temporary annoyance. Any big work is sure to attract people who want to help fly the kite somebody else made."

Richard Barry said in reply to Mr. Freuler's statement:

"This is not a case of so-called plagiarism, or of literary coincidence. The title, the plot, the names of the characters and all important details of the action in 'The Secret of the Submarine,' as produced by the American Film Company, and released by the Mutual, are identical with those in my scenario, 'The Secret of the Submarine.'"

"MYRA" REHEARSALS MEANT REAL PSYCHIC EXPERIENCE FOR MISS SOTHERN

A unique incident occurred during the production of "The Mysteries of Myra," the International Film Service serial, according to reports from the Wharton studio, at Ithaca, N. Y.

In one of the scenes, Jean Sothern, the star, visits the laboratory of Dr. Alden, a psychic investigator portrayed by Howard Estabrook. She seated herself before a large hypnotizing machine, which was set in motion. After a proper length of time, Estabrook was directed to bring Miss Sothern back to earth again. But she failed to return. She had actually been hypnotized. It was several moments before Miss Sothern was restored to consciousness.

SHERRILL ON WAY TO CALIFORNIA

Jack Sherrill, whose most recent screen appearance was opposite Alice Brady in the World Film production, "Then I'll Come Back to You," has left New York for California, where he will investigate several attractive offers from producers on the Coast.

Beginning with small parts, Sherrill has progressed through a succession of well handled roles in "The Builder of Bridges," with C. Aubrey Smith; "Just Out of College," "John Gladye's Honor" and "The Woman in 47," to his recent role as the lead opposite Miss Brady.

ST. JOHN, N. B., "U" BRANCH IN LARGER QUARTERS

The St. John (N. B.) branch of the Universal Film Company has made an important change in the location of its offices. Mr. Margetts, the manager, reports that it is now occupying the entire ground floor of the building in which it is situated, which allows greater room, better light and an opportunity for display in the large show windows, which have considerable frontage on the street.

"Whispering Smith" Issued in Two Parts Is Plan

Second Section of Signal Subject, in Ten Reels, Will Be Released as "Medicine Bend"—A Scene Requires an Old Time Western Barbecue

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, May 6.

IT HAS been decided to issue the Signal production of "Whispering Smith," now being produced by Director J. P. McGowan, who with Helen Holmes plays the principal roles, in two parts. The subject will consist of ten reels, the first five will be known as "Whispering Smith," and the latter five, released a week later, as "Medicine Bend." Filming of this production during the past week required an old-time Western barbecue scene, and five small pigs with all the necessary "trimmings" were served. Scenes of this were made by artificial light. The company is at Pine Crest, where they will remain for several days. A camp is established and all are living the primitive life. A truck makes daily trips to and from civilization, supplying the picture people with the necessaries. Those in the party besides McGowan and Miss Holmes are Paul C. Hurst, Chance E. Ward, Leo D. Maloney, Thomas G. Lingham, William Brunton, and S. A. Sues, cameramen. Upon the return of the producing company, they will use the dozen box cars recently purchased for a big wreck scene in which the rolling stock will be burned.

Signal officers are now negotiating for the purchase of five hundred feet of wooden trestle work between Los Angeles and Pasadena. This is to be replaced by steel and concrete, and the film company proposes to destroy it with a big fire. If the purchase is made as planned now, these scenes will be made as soon as a temporary track is built, and will be used to add another spectacle to the production of "Whispering Smith" or "Medicine Bend."

J. P. McGowan, director general of Signal Film Corporation, and leading man opposite Helen Holmes, this week received congratulations from L. E. Davis, manager of the Mutual Minneapolis exchange for victory in a popularity contest conducted by the Minneapolis Journal. This was not a circulation scheme on the part of the paper, and the Los Angeles players did not know of the contest until they were advised that they had won. Many of the leading film players were entered.

Motion picture rights have been purchased by the Signal Film Corporation for the Vaughn Kester novel, "The Manager of the B. & A." This has a Western atmosphere, and will be produced following the filming of the Alice MacGowan novel of the South, "Judith of The Cumberlands."

Winchester, Publicity Expert, Joins Pathé

Well Known Reviewer and Special Article Writer Will Bring Out a Weekly Publication for the Employees of the Company, in Addition to His Duties in Advertising Department

FOLLOWING closely on the announcement that J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathé, had engaged C. R. Seelye, comes word that Tarleton Winchester, for the last year and a half advertising and publicity director of Paramount, has also joined Pathé. The first work Mr. Winchester will take up will be the publication of a weekly house organ for Pathé employees along lines already approved and from which the entire organization expects to derive most beneficial results.

Last week it was reported that Mr. Winchester had returned to town after an enforced rest fully recovered from the illness which had been worrying his friends for some time before he left New York for Oyster Bay. Mr. Seelye immediately got in touch with him and he accepted the offer made by the Pathé company.

The part that Mr. Winchester played in the advertising and publicity campaigns of the Famous Players, Lasky and Morosco in addition to that of Paramount, is generally known. Coming to New York some three years ago, he first attracted attention by his reviews and articles in the Morning Telegraph.

It was he who originated the Paramount plate system which has been universally commended. In everything he wrote there was sound policy that secured continually constructive effect.

Pathé already had four well known advertising and newspaper men—George A. Smith, P. A. Parsons, Irving Weil and C. R Seelye. The addition of Mr. Winchester means that Mr. Berst is planning an active campaign of publicity and advertising service for Pathé exhibitors.

Miss McCoy a Mutual Star in "Isle of Love"

She Is Seen as a Successful Prima Donna Forced to Marry a Man She Has Never Seen—"The Courtesan" with Eugenie Forde from Gaumont

"THE ISLE OF LOVE," a Gaumont, and "The Courtesan," an American production, will be the Mutual Masterpictures De Luxe for the week of May 15. The first will introduce Gertrude McCoy as a Mutual star, while the stellar role in the second is enacted by Eugenie Forde.

Miss McCoy is seen as a successful prima donna, who is forced into marriage with a man she had never seen. After a series of adventures, she returns to America where, despite her footlight triumphs, she is prevailed upon to go back to "The Isle of Love" and the man she loves. In the supporting cast are Earl O. Schenk, Iva Shepard, and Robert Clugston.

In "The Courtesan," which was screened under the direction of Arthur Maude, Miss Forde appears as a wealthy woman of the underworld who makes a great sacrifice that her son may become a big political factor. Later, the son, not knowing her identity, prosecutes her and brings about her conviction. Al Fordyce, Hal Cooley, Charles Wheelock, William Carroll and Nell Franzen are prominent in Miss Forde's support.

Mutual releases for the week of May 15 also include "Four Months," a three-part drama, with Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh; four two-reel subjects, and ten single-reelers, including seven comedies.

KENTUCKY TOWN, HOT ON MONEY TRAIL, MULCTS EXHIBITORS

A revenue ordinance passed by the council of Central City, Ky., provides among other things for motion picture theatres to pay a license of fifty dollars a year.

BEBAN TO MANAGE "CIVILIZATION" HERE

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 6.

George Beban, the actor, has been appointed manager for the New York presentation of Thomas H. Ince's cinema spectacle "Civilization," and has departed for the East to take up such work for the first time in his life.

Beban and Ince have been intimate friends for a number of years, and last year worked under the direction of Ince for two pictures, "The Italian" and "An Alien," the latter from "The Sign of the Rose." When the "Alien" was given its premier in Los Angeles, Beban practically managed the opening, and while at this, proved to Mr. Ince that he was well qualified for such duties.

Preliminary plans for the opening have been completed for "Civilization," which continues to enjoy a very prosperous run at the Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles. Ince's first duty will be the leasing of a theatre. This accomplished, it is very probable Victor Schertzinger will be sent East to direct the music. The same character of stage settings will be used in New York as were designed for the Los Angeles opening.

MME. CALVE SEES STUDIO WORK

Madame Emma Calvé, the famous operatic soprano, is an admirer of the screen work of Beatriz Michelena. She was in attendance at the Alcazar theatre, San Francisco, when "The Unwritten Law" opened there. This the celebrated soprano declared the greatest Michelena production.

Madame Calvé asked for the privilege of seeing Miss Michelena actually playing before the camera, and a visit was consequently arranged for her and her party to the California studios at San Rafael, where "The Woman Who Dared" is being produced, with Miss Michelena in the stellar role.

It was the first time Madame Calvé had ever seen a motion picture in the making, and she was enthusiast over the characterization given by Miss Michelena, as well as the correctness of detail in the sets representing Europena scenes.

FEDERAL CENSORSHIP BILL INTRODUCED

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., May 8.

Congressman Hughes of Georgia, chairman of the House Committee on Education, will introduce the Federal Censorship Bill which his committee has agreed upon, at today's session.

The bill provides for a Federal Motion Picture Commission, of five members, to be appointed by the President, and to have power to license all films to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce. It is sweeping in its provisions, as the greatest discretion is left to the five commissioners under the provisions of the measure.

Of course, the expenses of the commission and the salaries of the five new jobholders are to be paid by the picture industry. A tax of $2 on each thousand feet, and fifty cents each for additional copies, is provided. The powers of the commission, according to the bill, in brief are:

"The commission shall promptly license for interstate and foreign commerce every motion picture film presented to it as required herein, unless such film or a part thereof is obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, or is a reproduction of an actual bull fight or prize fight, or is of such character that its exhibition would tend to corrupt morals or incite to crime."

GOLDSMITH SOUNDS EXCHANGES ON PROGRAM POPULARITY

The Popular Pictures program will not be ready for release until about September 1, but the arrangements for the formation of the chain of exchanges that will handle the service are already well under way. On returning from a tour of the country in the interests of this work, Milton M. Goldsmith has issued the following statement:

"I directed my inquiries principally to discover the attitude of the exchange man and the exhibitor in the matter of open bookings. I find them pretty solidly lined up against this movement, as likely to bring back the chaotic conditions that prevailed in the early days of the industry. If good exchange men, good directors, good scenario writers and good actors will insure a good program, the Popular Program should justify its name."

SELZNICK GETS BIG OFFICE SUITE IN NEW YORK

Lewis J. Selznick, president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, has leased the entire fourteenth floor of the new film building at Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue for general offices. Work has begun on the division of the 10,000 square feet of floor space into various suites.

The new offices will be the home of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation and the headquarters of its distributing company, Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc.

Mr. Selznick and his forces, who have been operating temporarily at No. 130 West 46th street, will move immediately into the new Forty-ninth street building, occupying temporary quarters until their own floor is ready.

SUNDAY OPENING IN BOISE GOES TO IDAHO SUPREME COURT

The Sunday opening of the motion picture theatres in Boise, Idaho, is now in the Supreme Court. The case in the district court was decided against the picture theatre owners, permitting the city officials to call a special election to vote on the question after they had complied with the law and secured 3,800 signatures to a petition to open the theatres. An appeal from the decision of the lower court was immediately taken.

Planet, in World Tower Building, Moving On Fast

Raver's Million and a Half Dollar Company Plans Early Production of Popularized Plays and Books—But There Will Be One Month's Space Between Releases

THE Planet Film Corporation, a new million and a half dollar enterprise organized by A. G. Wheeler, member of the New York Stock Exchange; Harry R. Raver, prominent film producer; and John L. Dudley, late of the Citizens' Savings Bank, is gradually assuming proportions.

Departmental heads are being selected and plans for early production are being quietly whipped into shape.

The officers of the company are John L. Dudley, president; Harry R. Raver, vice president and general manager; and A. G. Wheeler, treasurer. The directors are: George S. Brown, Francis R. Masters, Paul E. Razor, William D. Judson, John L. Dudley, A. G. Wheeler, Harry R. Raver.

The company's productions will be staged at the Raver Studios at Rockville Centre, Long Island, thirty-six minutes by fast express from the Pennsylvania station in New York. The studio grounds cover several acres and contain seven buildings including the studio, the latter measuring thirty by one hundred and twenty feet.

The Planet will produce popularized plays and books at the rate of one each month. These will be distributed on a yearly contract basis subject to screen examination. Four special productions will also be made each year. The monthly releases will approximate five reels in length while the larger productions will comprise eight reels each.

The contracts of the new company with respect to state rights buyers are to be exceptionally liberal in that no production made by the Planet need be accepted by the buyer if its quality is not up to the standard. It is the intention of the Planet company to produce a class of production embracing popular stars and plays or popularized books which can be sold at a popular price, the plan of the company being to make its profits on its four important films each year and at the same time utilizing the facilities and working organization for the regular monthly releases practically without cost.

Harry R. Raver, who will have charge of the production and exploitation of the Planet output, was one of the pioneer producers of the big star and play type of motion picture. His company introduced to the screen such stars as Ethel Barrymore, Dustin Farnum, Digby Bell, Gail Kane, George Nash, Tully Marshall, Thomas W. Ross, Lew Dockstader, Lois Meredith, Jane Cowl, Burr McIntosh, Edgar Selwyn, James J. Corbett and others equally prominent.

The business departments will be in charge of John L. Dudley and A. G. Wheeler. Mr. Dudley is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and has been identified with many large and important corporations. Mr. Wheeler is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and was the organizer of the Automatic Telephone Company, a rival of the Bell system for many years.

The executive offices of the company are in the World's Tower Building, New York. This suite includes all of the offices formerly occupied by the Raver Film Corporation.

Through Mr. Raver the Planet company will have the rights of picturizing the many Augustus Thomas plays in addition to the other material which is rapidly being gathered.

"THE INNOCENT LIE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A STORY of genuine human interest, with a vein of adventure offset pleasingly by comedy of Irish character, this is one of those pictures which can safely be characterized as sure-fire. Directed by Sidney Olcott, it is also exceedingly fortunate in its star—Valentine Grant. Her portrayal of Nora O'Brian is charming, and "gets over" in great style.

The atmosphere of rural Ireland was gained just about perfectly by Olcott's selection of locations in Bermuda. Scenes of the countryside, of hills, and the sea, fitting the action at every point, lend distinction and realism. Later, the locale shifts to New York, and Olcott also showed his skill at gaining atmosphere here. Besides these merits, a military touch is given the picture by introducing a scene in an Irish village the Sunday after Great Britain's declaration of war, followed by scenes in a military camp. This is entirely subsidiary to the main plot, but it adds timeliness, bringing the subject right home to the spectator.

The story tells how Nora O'Brian, after her older brother had enlisted, came to America to take up a new life with her younger brother, a ne'er-do-well. It happened that a wealthy New York family was expecting Nora Owen, a relative of theirs, to come to them at the same time. But Nora Owen decided to stay in Ireland and marry Capt. Stuart instead. She asked Nora O'Brian to convey the news to her relatives in New York. But Nora, meeting with an accident after her arrival in America, was mistaken for Nora Owen and welcomed into the home of the latter's relatives. She protested that she did not belong there, but her protestations were attributed to the effect of the accident, and so Nora became the victim of an innocent lie.

Eventually everything is cleared up. The family discovers the truth, but, having learned to love Nora anyway, they insist that she must remain with them always.

Of course, some things about this story are impossible, but that does not matter in the least, simply because of the way in which the thing is handled. We are quite certain that picturegoers will not bother their heads with refinements of plot construction, when they have genuine pathos, humor, and even thrills spread before them on the screen.

Besides Miss Grant's rendition of a resourceful, plucky Nora, we have good impersonations by Jack J. Clark, Morris Foster, Hunter Arden, Robert Cain, Frank Losee, Helen Lindrith, Master Charles Ferguson, and William Courtleigh, Jr. There are some excellent types among the extras also.

"THE FLOORWALKER"

(Chaplin-Mutual—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

CHARLIE, in a new environment, is still Charlie. He has lost none of his famous quality of drollery, as the British Edition might express it, and has picked up, instead, a lot of new ideas, with new business and new "props" which make these two reels worth what the Mutual organization has paid for them—and we are given to understand that this is considerable.

The first Mutual-Chaplin offering makes small pretense to psychology, or anything except a comedy full of "business." Little of the business is new, but it is handled by Charlie as only he can handle it, and even the most blase and sophisticated reviewer will be compelled to concede about two laughs to the foot, making, as we figure it, about four thousand laughs for the "Floorwalker."

Charlie himself is credited with originating the idea and most of the business. He is said to have conceived the subject while in a department store during his recent profitable visit to New York. The department store in the picture is remarkably well set, its principal feature being an escalator, or moving stairway, which is in constant action. Some of Charlie's funniest moments are when he races down this stairway, pursued by the irate manager, both running at top speed without getting anywhere, until they gradually weary, and slow up, only to be carried back to the floor above.

Charlie's troubles commence when he is induced to change places with the regular floorwalker, who is conspiring with the manager to abscond with the store's treasury. The detectives, who are on the trail of the guilty pair, are followed, and so is the manager, who thinks his confederate is trying to "double-cross" him. Charlie thus finds himself between two fires, and his endeavors to escape are ludicrous in the extreme.

The substitute floorwalker becomes involved with customers, detectives and the manager, and finally finds himself in possession of the bag containing the stolen money. In his astonishment at discovering the contents, he sets the bag on the floor, where the stairway catches it and carries it back to the manager's office. The guilty official finds it, and is inclined to forgive Charlie for keeping it away from him so long, but the detectives close in, and the affair is straightened out when the real floorwalker comes back to claim the bag, when all suddenly discover that Charlie is only an innocent interloper.

The Chaplin feet are featured, even to a greater extent than they have been in the most recent Chaplin subjects, and Charlie brings his pathetic smile, and his little touches of wistful longing to the front as effectively as he has done in his best offerings of the past.

Unusual care seems to have been expended on the production. The sets, while not elaborate, are faithful to the atmosphere they are designed to create, and the supporting company is capable without distracting the attention from the star.

All in all, the first Chaplin-Mutual release bids fair to fulfill all that was expected of it.

"NOT MY SISTER"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

BESSIE BARRISCALE has a congenial emotional role in this story by James Montgomery and C. Gardner Sullivan. The subject is sex, and much of the material is old, but it is presented with the usual excellent Ince staging and direction, with a mystery twist at the denouement.

Miss Barriscale is seen as Grace, elder daughter of a family, who poses for a sculptor in an effort to rebuild the family finances. The sculptor takes advantage of the girl, but she conceals what happens, and later marries happily. Years afterward the sculptor appears again, and asks the younger sister to pose for him. Grace foresees what will happen, and goes to the studio with her sister to forestall evil. This arouses the suspicions of Grace's husband. When he learns what occurred years before, he determines to kill the sculptor.

He is placed on trial for the murder, and is about to be convicted, when the younger sister reveals the fact that it was she who killed the sculptor. The husband is acquitted, and all ends happily, a sub-title telling us that the younger sister "will have to stand trial, but it will be a mere formality."

Although it is not difficult for the spectator to guess who killed the villain, the actual method used is held back until the right moment so as to create suspense. The court room scene is well managed, and is devoid of the absurdities sometimes seen in motion picture trials. The last day, only, of the trial is shown, and this exemplifies the dramatic compression present through the entire subject.

In other respects also, Charles Giblyn's direction is entirely acceptable, and gives full scope for the emotional scenes in which Miss Barriscale is the central figure. There are some unusual lighting effects, the most striking being the use of a spotlight employed in close ups. This brings out one of the players in strong relief, while the others in the scene appear in semi-darkness. Giblyn also employs a clever combination of the fade and the double exposure.

William Desmond gives a good impersonation of the sculptor, but Alice Taafe, as the younger sister, easily stands next to Miss Barriscale in excellence of acting. Franklin Ritchie is fair as the husband. Louise Brownell is also in the cast, and appears to excellent advantage in the "mother" role.

"ALIEN SOULS"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

HERE we have the triangle presented with unusual contrasts. Into it is woven the hopeless tangle of conflicting races, with their conflicting traditions, methods and ideas. Besides an absorbing love story, the subject presents an interesting study in ethnology.

Were we allowed to range into the higher criticism, we might report that the dramatic elements are a trifle stale, and inclined to weaken in spots; but if the mission of the motion picture is first of all to entertain its public, this picture stands pure before the law, as it is without doubt entertaining.

YURI CHAN IS SNUBBED

Events of the last two months incline us to accept the statement of the Lasky advertising department, that the Lasky trademark means a good picture. Some are better than others, but our recent experience is that the poorest Lasky pictures are still good pictures. From this the reader is at liberty to infer anything he pleases.

Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese actor, who has appeared before in Lasky offerings, shows himself not only an acceptable actor, but a strong and pleasing figure on the screen—something unusual in people of his race. He seizes and holds the sympathy with ease, and his methods are finished. Tsuru Aoki makes an excellent opposite, but her type of mongolian beauty contrasts with the Caucasian style with which she is surrounded, greatly to the benefit of the latter. We are more than ever in favor of the American girl.

Hector Turnbull's story gives ample opportunity for the efforts of the cast. It is the simple tale of two Japanese in this country, one, Sakata, a wealthy importer, having been made guardian of a Japanese girl, in her youth. He loves her, and educates her, never once allowing her to know that she is not wealthy, and that it is his money she is spending.

The girl, Yuri Chan, becomes infatuated with a worthless young American, who deserts the woman from whom he has been getting money for years, to marry the Japanese because of her fortune. He gets a marriage license, and on the strength of it, entices the little Japanese to his rooms, aiming at a mock marriage. But her guardian, knowing his character follows, and unable to cure the girl of her infatuation, tells her that she has no money. Her American lover immediately changes front, and returns to the woman who has been providing so generously for him in the past.

Yuri Chan locks herself in a room, and attempts to shoot herself, but the hammer of the pistol catches in a coat hanging on the wall, and the cartridge does not explode.

She faints, but is revived, and later is reunited to the sweetheart of her own race.

Earle Foxe, Grace Benham, J. Parks Jones, Violet Malone and Dorothy Abril, all contribute excellent and sympathetic characterizations.

"HALF A ROGUE"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"HALF a Rogue" is taken from the novel by Harold McGrath, and in picture form it introduces King Baggot as a Red Feather star. Henry Otto made the adaptation and also directed. Many of the exteriors were made in the South in the State of Georgia, and these scenes abound in natural beauty.

Considering the box office value of the picture, we should say that if King Baggot is favorite enough to draw the patronage in, "Half a Rogue" will send them away mildly satisfied. The plot presents nothing very extraordinary in the way of situations, and it is somewhat slow moving, coming to a climax of fair strength.

Richard Warrington is a dramatist. It is he who is responsible for the stardom on the stage of Katherine Challoner. At the close of the season she comes to his apartments to thank him for all he has done for her. Later John Bennington, boyhood friend of Warrington's, calls on him. Katherine hides, feeling that it will appear peculiar if she is discovered in Warrington's house at such a late hour.

Bennington announces that he is to be married to Katherine. After asking Warrington to be his best man he departs. Katherine, having heard Bennington's voice, is overcome and faints and is obliged to accept Warrington's hospitality until the next morning.

THE BEGINNING OF A ROMANCE

The scene then shifts to Herculaneum, a fair-sized town, where the Benningtons live. Warrington arrives for his vacation and enters upon a romantic friendship with Patty Bennington, sister of John.

Time goes on and Warrington runs for Mayor of Herculaneum. The opposition seeks for a blotch on his past and from the janitor in New York learns of Katherine's presence in the house on the night before mentioned. They print this startling piece of intelligence, but Bennington refuses to believe it. Warrington, who has been defeated in his campaign, goes to the office of the opposition and beats up the boss. Patty gives her consent to marriage with the ex-dramatist.

Mr. Baggot is a fitting hero, while others who appear are Clara Beyers, Edna Hunter, Joseph Castellanos, Howard Crampton, Mathilde Bundage, Lettie Ford and Henry Otto.

"HER FATHER'S GOLD"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A STOLEN and hidden treasure, a daring reporter, four desperate crooks and a beautiful young girl who has been despoiled of a fortune—these are the melodramatic elements which have been combined to make a conventional but interesting story. The picture has been well produced, and a number of striking scenes have been called in to aid the general ensemble.

The fortune, in gold bullion, is stolen by the crooks from the mine owned by the girl's father and taken to Florida. Later the crooks fall out, one of them gets the treasure, buries it on a small island, and draws a plan of the spot on heavy paper, painting a water-color picture over it. The other crooks besiege him in his home, and he is mortally wounded. Before he dies he tells his wife of the picture, but she is unable to solve its mystery. The sole surviving crook, and his wife, get the picture, but neither can read it.

Then the reporter, who has been sent down to Florida to investigate the reports of a "water devil," comes on the scene. The girl, whose father owned the mine, is his sweetheart, and he recovers part of the mysterious picture, which he photographs. To his dismay, the photograph shows nothing, but the film, stolen by the crook's wife, is found to contain faint lines, which under the microscope prove to be a map of the island.

The girl and the reporter recover the film, and then the defeated crook offers to escort them to the island. There the gold is located and uncovered, but the desperate bandit declares the treasure is his, and that all three are to die there, and leave their bodies with the gold.

He rises in his boat and aims his rifle at the reporter and his sweetheart, but before he can fire there is a commotion in the water, and the "water devil," a nondescript sea monster, appears. The boat is overturned and the thief perishes.

Barbara Gilroy, Harris Gordon, William Burt and Louise Emerald Bates head the cast.

"THE OATH OF HATE"

(Knickerbocker Star Feature-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

RAPID action and a fair amount of interest characterize this Knickerbocker Star Feature. There is nothing novel about the plot—in fact, it relies upon the ancient device of restoration of the hero's normal mind and eyesight by a shock—but at that it will please the average audience.

Henry King has the leading role, and offers a convincing portrayal of Capt. Mark Stone, who swears vengeance against the girl when she decides to marry another. This he does by marrying a slavey, in the hope that a son, who will carry out the oath of hate, will be born to them. He is disappointed, however, as the child is a girl. Then Stone goes to sea, and gets back his normal senses and eyesight when he is tossed overboard by two of his enemies. He goes back home to his wife and child, while his first sweetheart becomes an outcast as the result of a loveless marriage.

Marguerite Nichols, Ethel Fleming and Lewis J. Cody are the other principals. Settings and locations are quite pleasing. Lighting and photography are acceptable. The production is from the Horkheimer studios.

"THE END OF THE WORLD"

(Great Northern—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

"SPECTACULAR stuff" of exceptional interest and exceptionally well produced. The end of the world is to be accomplished by collision with a comet, a perfectly logical premise, for every generation has had its "comet scare" and scientists agree that a collision between the earth and a comet is by no means an impossibility.

SAVED FROM THE TIDAL WAVE

Such a catastrophe would be spectacular to the nth power. In this film the possibilities for unusual photographs have been seized upon and well utilized. The producers appear to have spared no time, expense or labor in creating vastness of atmosphere and view, and not only do they show us the comet in the sky, growing brighter, larger and closer with each day, but on the night of the catastrophe we see a rain of fiery fragments, meteors, aerolites, and what not, with lightning, a great tidal wave and a storm at sea, wherein full-sized freighters wallow helplessly in their yeasty beds.

The story of the piece is of secondary importance; it is the dressing which makes the film important. An astronomer who has predicted that the comet will strike the earth, is used by his cousin, a financier, to precipitate a crash in the stock market, in which the financier profits handsomely.

This same financier, Harper, while visiting his mines, meets a village girl, who deserts her fiance and elopes with him. The miners are inflamed against the millionaire by the deserted sweetheart, and plan his death.

The girl's sister, Edith, is loved by a sailor, who is obliged to leave on a voyage just as the comet is approaching the earth. On the night of the catastrophe Harper gives a great banquet, during which the miners attack and force their way into his home. With the girl he makes his way into a mine tunnel, where he is followed by the former sweetheart, bent on revenge, but poisonous gases kill the three.

Edith is rescued from the tidal wave which follows the contact of the comet, and is reunited to her sweetheart, who is likewise miraculously saved from the fury of the ocean.

The cast has been well selected and the entire atmosphere of the picture is of the convincing sort.

"THE QUALITY OF FAITH"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is an unusual story, well handled so as to bring out its strong features in the best light, and give it an interest which grips all the way through.

While the atmosphere and surroundings are those which have been used in many a picture, they aid in this case in building up a story of wide appeal. The impulses of the leading characters are human, and will be readily understood by any audience. From a box-office standpoint the offering is well worthy the consideration of any exhibitor.

Richards, a young minister, is in love with Louise Alvord, daughter of a wealthy mill owner. She breaks the engagement when she finds that her attachment to the minister is only a passing fancy, and turns toward Carlton, a society leader.

Trouble develops between Alvord and his employees. Through a girl whom he assists in her distress, the young minister learns of the deplorable conditions in the factory. He goes to Alvord and protests, but is rudely treated. Then the story breaks, and Richards is found aligned with the oppressed employees. On this account he loses his pastorate, and then he casts his lot with the workers.

He meets Marna, a woman of ill-repute, once a factory worker, who was driven from her position by ill-health. He assists her to better things, and her confidence and faith in him help him through a period of depression during which he almost touches the gutter.

Finally his literary work wins recognition. Better days dawn, and Richards is again on his feet. Then Louise, who has married Carlton, tires of her insipid husband, and again sets a net for Richards. But the faith and affection of Marna have worked wonders in the strengthening of his character; he casts Louise aside and marries Marna.

There are many striking scenes about the factory; riots, the attempted murder of Alvord, which is only frustrated when the millionaire succumbs to heart disease, and scenes illustrating the conditions which impelled the workers to revolt, all are dramatic, and in many cases thrilling.

Alexander Gaden is convincing and pleasing as the young minister, and Gertrude Robinson does some finished work in the part of Marna. Others in the cast are Henry W. Pemberton, Lucille Taft, Charles W. Travis, John Reinhard, Alan Robinson and John Mackin.

"THE PRIMAL LURE"

(Kay Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LAID in the Canadian Northwest, with its background of the wild, this gives William S. Hart another opportunity to play one of his "strong men" parts. As usual Mr. Hart is made the victim of Fate—this time he arrests the girl unjustly because he thinks she is a thief, and is engineered out of his job as manager of the Hudson's Bay Company by a cowardly inspector who is in love with the girl. Mr. Hart gives his usual excellent and appealing impersonation.

READY FOR THE SACRIFICE

The story was picturized by J. G. Hawks from the tale by Vingie E. Roe, and while it has by no means so dramatic a theme as recent Hart pictures have had, it is a serviceable vehicle. The exhibitor will find the picture, as a whole, entirely salable.

Those who are fond of seeing Mr. Hart take command of a desperate situation, involving the lives of a number of people, will not be disappointed in "The Primal Lure." After he has been removed from his position as manager, he returns to the trading post, just in time to organize a defense against an attack by Indians. The latter are about to take the post, when Hart offers himself as a sacrifice. He is bound to a tree and a fire built at his feet. A priest happens along, and persuades the Indians that a storm, which comes up, is a sign that the Great Spirit is frowning upon the sacrifice by extinguishing the flames. Hart is released, and finally wins the girl, who forgives him after showing him that she was not a thief.

The battle and sacrifice scenes are realistically done, and gain in effect by their employment of genuine redskins. The set representing the trading post is extensive, and gives correct atmosphere.

Margery Wilson, seen as the girl, renders her part in a pleasing manner, while Robert McKim makes a good villain. Jerome Storm is another of the principals.

"HER MATERNAL RIGHT"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture, described as the "third Brady-made feature," brings Kitty Gordon back again, garbed in the very latest creations of the all powerful modiste. We tremble at the thought of a picture in which Miss Gordon would be obliged to wear rags. Her statuesque figure and aristocratic mien were never made for anything but the best in clothes. Incidentally it is the gowns which will cause comment on "Her Maternal Right." The story will get little attention.

The scenario was done by Willard Mack, who adds to his revenue gained from acting, by writing a photoplay now and then. Mr. Mack's story runs somewhat sluggishly until it reaches its climax and at that point the impossible takes a turn. In this final situation three characters partake. Nina Seabury, a mercenary musical comedy actress; Emory Townsend, a bank cashier, Nina's old lover, but now married; and Mary, his wife. After Emory's entreaties have fallen on unlistening ears, Mary forces Nina at the point of a gun to repay her husband the twelve thousand which he embezzled from his bank in order to meet the comedienne's demands. And Nina, who wants to go on living, makes out the check.

Now the check is drawn from Emory's bank but one is left to surmise that the cashier replaces the money and so evades a term in jail. In all probability Emory would be called up before the president and asked to explain the presence of the check. And then, Nina, as she didn't love Emory at all might have called up the bank the next morning and told the entire story. Briefly the climax does not ring true.

Aside from the story, "Her Maternal Right" can be commended and indeed the presence of the radiantly gowned star will be apt to put some of the shortcomings of the story to rout in the minds of the major portion of a picture audience—which, of course is the feminine portion. Miss Gordon greatly favors the latest style of dresses. She displays the recurrent hoop effect with great eclat. Her back also comes in for exposition.

Robert Thornby, who directed, has achieved some excellent light effects and his settings are very good as far as they go. He has, however, "shot" from the same angle in all scenes and it is obviously a bit mechanical when Mr. Thornby brings his characters to the foreground.

George Ralph as Emory plays consistently well in a difficult part. Zena Keefe makes a sympathetic Mary and Frank Evans plays Nina's husband well enough.

"SOUL MATES"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2nd

THE distinguishing feature of this photoplay is its humanness. While the characters belong to the wealthy society class so often utilized (and misrepresented) by scenario writers, they do not affect the absurd pomp and hauteur that screen actors seem to think the invariable traits of those born to high estate. The director emphasizes this human quality by devoting a good deal of footage to the friendship between a millionaire and a little boy. This relationship is treated so that it becomes what is inelegantly but expressively termed "sure-fire hokum."

The plot is simple and compact, so much so that considerable reiteration was required to total the allotted five reels. While the story is a well-known version of the eternal triangle, it is the kind of play that theatregoers never seem to tire of.

William Russell's acting is restrained and thoroughly pleasing. Even if his support were wholly unworthy, he would be able to capture the interest single-handed. Leona Hutton is a good type for the vain, mental lightweight. Although better suited physically for the role of a heavy, Robert Klein acquits himself well in a heroic part. Harry Keenan plays the heavy well. The remainder of the cast is adequate.

Every foot of film was photographed with crystal clearness. Alice, the frivolous wife of Lowell Sherman, a successful young capitalist, is carrying on a secret love affair with Carr, a friend of her husband. Sherman is very fond of Tommy, Carr's son. Sherman's private secretary knows Alice's disreputable past, but does not tell his employer of it until he finds Carr in her room. When Sherman is assured of Alice's infidelity, he ruins Carr financially and divorces his wife. When Carr commits suicide, Tommy brings his mother and Sherman together, and they are later married.

"BUCKING SOCIETY"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

CHESTER CONKLIN, ably assisted by "Shorty" Hamilton, Louella Maxim, and other Keystoners, burlesque the old school Western melodrama, and incidentally stage a few wild stunts. The chief of these finds Conklin hurled out of a freight car only to be impaled on a mail crane, whence he is gathered in by the next train. This trick is worked in such fashion that it looks absolutely genuine, demonstrating, among other things, that the Keystone supply of tricks is by no means exhausted.

Conklin finally reaches Denver, whither he is bound as an invited guest at "Shorty's" wedding. There is no wedding, partly because Conklin shoots up the house, and partly because it is discovered that "Shorty" is about to be married out of his money by a designing young woman, aided by a confederate.

This is a typical Keystone, with the percentage of thrilling stunts ranking quite high. It was directed by William Campbell.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN THE AEROPLANE"

(Mutt and Jeff Film Co.—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

BUD FISHER continues to demonstrate in this release that his two eccentric characters are even more amusing on the screen than they are on the newspaper page, which is saying a good deal.

The scene of their antics is a battle field in France. Jeff gets Mutt an assignment as an aviator, expecting that he will be killed. Mutt takes a supply of bombs, and hearing Jeff tell the Captain that he (Mutt) could not hit the earth with a handful of shot, proceeds to drop a bomb on Jeff's head. Then he descends to receive the congratulations of his superior officer, while Jeff is reduced to a human scrap heap.

MACK SENNETT

Vice President of the Keystone Film Company, and Managing Director of the newly completed producing plant at Los Angeles, California.

The size and equipment of the group of reconstructed studio buildings render this the most complete and efficient motion picture studio in the world.

Mack Sennett's (Fun)ambulists, Who "Fussed" Funeral Faces Without Fumbling on the Furthermost Furcation of Fun for the Fussiest of "Fans," Find the Future Has Not Failed to Fructify for Friends Fresh For a Fruitful Frolic

OCCUPYING less than a city block a year ago the Keystone Film Company has grown in the past twelve months until at the present time the various buildings cover more than five city blocks, with the construction work still enlarging the largest comedy producing plant in the world.

While the buildings have increased in size and number, the many companies of actors have more than kept pace with them. Last year at this time seven companies were making the famous Keystone comedies under the direction of Mack Sennett, and today fifteen are producing the two reelers which are being released upon the Triangle program.

As the construction work of the studio and its many buildings is progressing, so are the companies of actors being enlarged, Mr.

At the present time the Keystone studio ranks as one of the largest in the world, and without doubt is the most complete and efficient. Because of the demands of the exhibitor the open air stages and the electric studio were completed first. These were followed by many score of model dressing rooms, the offices and administration building being left to the last. Like the other improvements the executive buildings will be the finest money can produce and will add to the beautiful lines of the entire plant when they are completed by early fall.

Staff Able to Carry Out His Ideas

Although Mr. Sennett is a man who is constantly in touch with the smallest details of the business he founded less than four years ago, he has surrounded himself with a staff of executives who can carry out his ideas. The past year has proven the wisdom of the director's thoughts for while men like George W. Stout, the business manager, have looked after the details, Mr. Sennett has been able to devote a large part of his time to the production of comedies.

After the plans for the enlarging of the Keystone plant were approved by Mr. Sennett, the details of carrying out the improvements which have cost in the past year over $500,000 were left entirely to the business manager.

The first great improvement in the past year was the electric studio. This is of concrete and has a capacity of twenty of the largest sets at one time. This building is located a few hundred feet towards the foothills which surround the plant proper and was really built into the side of one of the hills.

When Mr. Sennett decides to do anything he usually does it, and this was the case when he selected the location for the electric studio. A half dozen of the largest steam shovels soon made the hill an ideal building site and the rest was easy.

The electric studio is equipped with every possible device for the filming of pictures. There is not a new invention which it does not include, while the property room beneath it houses every possible prop any scenario can call for.

Much of the credit for this building should be divided between Mr. Stout and Hampton Del Ruth, managing editor and assistant manager of production.

Electric Studio Cost $50,000

The electric studio was constructed second. This is today the largest single piece stage in the world. It measures a few feet over 400 in length and is six feet less than 300 wide. It cost over $50,000 and already has had forty-two fairly large sets placed on it at one time.

Although the growth of the company has been astonishing in the past year, few realize how rapid the comedy plan has been enlarged. Part of the plans called for many large dressing rooms. The building which was to be devoted to this purpose was only about half completed when Mr. Sennett received so many requests for more Keystones from the exhibitors that new plans were made and the building housing the dressing rooms enlarged before it was completed.

A cafe has been added the past year. It is as complete as any eating place in any city with 500,000 inhabitants. A garage with accommodations for eighty cars is taxed daily with the machines of the players. Shower baths are a part of the equipment and each star has been cared for with every possible thing one could want.

While the new buildings have been going up at the plant proper, other additions have been made on the hills which surround the studio. Two entire villages have been built; the exterior of an eight story apartment house is another set, while the street sets, beautiful exteriors of homes, make the hilltops look like villages in themselves.

Across the street, for Mr. Sennett owns the property on each side of Allesandro avenue, another stage has been constructed with accommodations for thirty sets, while at the present time the sound of hammers can be heard on all sides of the great fun making plant.

Hampton Del Ruth has moved his scenario staff to a bungalow while the executive building is being built. Here he guides the policy of the writers he has gathered around him, while at the same time he keeps a weather eye on the production end. He has a score of men to assist him among whom perhaps the best known is Dell Henderson, who was Mr. Sennett's assistant years ago at the Biograph.

"Home-Made" Iron for Keystone Studios

In the construction of these studios, Mr. Sennett secured necessary structural steel from the Llewellyn Iron Works of Los Angeles. Every piece was especially made and serves as the frame work for the artificially lighted studio, technical shops, and cafe building. The spans across the open air stage measure almost three hundred feet in length, and serve to keep the diffusing system in perfect condition at all times. The Llewellyn Company has added to its staff, engineers specially trained to have charge of the preparation of all plans for studio work.

Of the thousands of dollars spent for building material for the new Sennett studio, the greater portion of this went to the Hammond Lumber Company, who supplied all kinds. Sales Manager Edwards has spent much time in learning the needs of the motion picture studios, and the fact that the company carries just what the motion picture industry needs, takes them a great volume of business.

Numerous experiments by the technical men has caused the investment in a number of Bell and Howell cameras. The equipment by this firm is also used in the laboratories and factory.

Credit for the excellent titles used in Sennett Keystone comedies must be given to the Motion Picture Title Company. This establishment has a special process of printing white on black which gives excellent results.

In securing costumes the wardrobe department has found the great collection of the Western Costume Company of Los Angeles, a satisfaction giving firm. They have every style of costumes needed, and of the best quality. In a like manner it has been found the storage rooms of Lee L. Powers have a collection of antique furniture that give tone and atmosphere to the finest setting.

Of particular significance is the protection provided at the studio against fire. Every building contains chemical fire extinguishers, there is a fire station with hose and trucks and every automobile of the company is equipped with similar devices. This equipment was furnished by the Gorham Fire Apparatus Company of Los Angeles who handle the Pyrene line.

The gymnasiums are thoroughly equipped with all kinds of devices, so that the players may keep in excellent physical condition. Besides the gymnasium for the players, Mr. Sennett has a private one where he spends considerable time each day. The equipment for these was largely furnished by Tufts-Lyon Arms Company, agents for the Pathe camera in southern California.

"LOVE'S TOLL"

(Lubin-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

HERE is a heart interest offering made of the familiar theme of the country girl who goes to New York to study, meets a conscienceless young millionaire, becomes the father of his child out of wedlock, is deserted by him, and then, concealing her sin, marries the friend of the man who ruined her.

Eventually her conscience forces her to tell her husband the truth. The two men engage in a fight, and the villain is killed. The police are persuaded that he shot himself, and husband and wife are left to each other.

"I WILL GIVE A TOAST"

Director Jack Pratt produced the picture in excellent style, so far as sets, lighting and other externals are concerned. Relief of a necessary sort is provided by the introduction of a number of theatre scenes, in one of which a spectacular Salome dance is rendered by Garda Polotskova, who interprets the role of an actress in the story. Miss Polotskova screens well, and is a striking figure. Some spectacular trick skating by performers on the Biltmore roof is also introduced.

The cast does its work in good style, steering carefully away from melodramatic exaggeration. Rosetta Brice is seen as the unfortunate girl, Crauford Kent as the villain, and Richard Buhler as the hero. William Turner and Mrs. Carr have character parts. Inez Buck is also in the cast.

While this picture will hardly take its place with the strong dramatic offerings recently given us by Lubin, it will go very well with audiences which are fond of straight heart interest subjects.

Some of the action drags, but this is offset nearly always by variety of scene. The climax is quite good. Daniel Carson Goodman is the author of the story.

"THE GREAT SMASH"

(L-Ko-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

SPONTANEITY as applied to comedy, of whatever species, is almost a guarantee in itself of that comedy's success. The various tricks, business and thrills, if there are any, must be voluntary in order to put to rout the thought that they are acted. Such is the excellent accomplishment of those who produced and appeared in "The Great Smash." Without stretching the point this three-reeler is candidly the best L-KO we have seen, and we have seen them all. And that statement is made considering and in the face of the wonderful improvement visible in the recent output of this company.

Its most startling point is its chase. Chases have become things to shy at owing to the maner in which they have been overworked, but this one is unusual. A steam engine, an automobile, and the land and harbor police partake therein, and every scene of it offers a laugh and a thrill. Houses are knocked over or torn open, an entire village is put to confusion, vehicles and pedestrians are menaced by the chasers, until at last the engine runs upon the draw of a bridge and there blows itself to atoms. This last is done in miniature, but it is so cleverly welded in with the real scenes that the thrill is carried out to the very end. The mechanical side of this miniature is practically perfect.

Ray Griffith, Alice Howell and Dick Smith are the principals. Griffith, with only a moustache as makeup, creates a laugh with every move. He is a real comedian, finished and with a keen sense for that which is humorous. Miss Howell plays another of her eccentric parts, Romantic Rosie, the light house keeper's daughter, while Dick Smith is the villain.

The first part of the picture transpires in a train yard, where Ray has been sent by his irate parent to learn the business from the bottom up. His meeting with Rosie, who is loved ardently by the villain, results in the chase.

The business in the train yard is done chiefly through the medium of mallets, but, strangely enough, the fun is fast and furious even with such conventional means of producing it.

The photography of the picture is as good as that seen in the best photographed dramatic subjects.

"THE ROGUE'S NEMESIS"

(Kalem—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THESE two reels comprise the seventh episode of "The Social Pirates" series. In them Mona and Mary, summoning into their employ an old holdup game that has been more or less successful since Broadway was a trail, proceed to extract a substantial check from one Clay, a rounder who has divorced his wife on false evidence. Mona masks as a man and Mary takes upon herself the aspect of a bored wife. Clay falls into the trap, starts to court Mary but then enter the temperamental husband who demands the check. Subsequently Clay is acquainted with the fact that he has been neatly swindled and Mona and Mary laugh at his troubles.

"The Rogue's Nemesis" is embellished with the same subtle humor and the same highly interesting action that the former numbers have carried. There is not a moment that is dull throughout the two reels although their conclusion is easily obvious. For that matter none of the instalments of this series have held anything back from the spectator but the original character of the action more than counterbalances this fact, which may or may not be termed a fault under the circumstances.

Marin Sais as Mona does different work in this chapter. As the husband she disguises herself admirably well—and appears to much better advantage than most actresses who attempt to deceive their beholders into believing they are men. Ollie Kirkby as Mary and Thomas Lingham as Clay have the other principal parts.

The settings and photography are good while the direction of James W. Horne leaves little to be desired.

"ELUSIVE ISABEL"

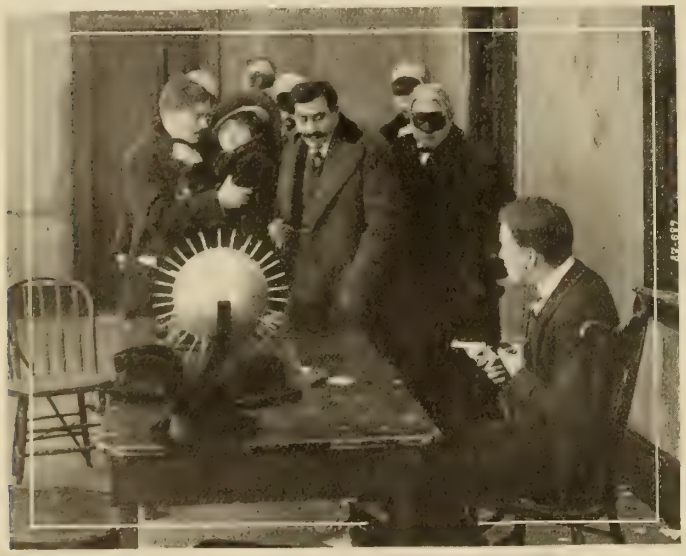
(Bluebird—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FLORENCE LAWRENCE'S return to the ranks of motion picture stars is through the medium of a dramatic offering and not through light comedy, which it will be remembered was her forte back in the days of the earlier Victor subjects. Miss Lawrence does well in a part that gives her only slight and few opportunities to assume the center of the screen and she will doubtless make new friends as well as please old ones by her reappearance.

"Elusive Isabel" is a detective story written by the late Jacques Futrelle. Contrary to many of this author's writings it is poorly suited for photoplay adaptation. The plot, as presented by the producers, unwinds slowly and requires a generous selection of unnecessary scenes to complete its six reels. The work of Hamilton Grimm, supposedly star man of the Secret Service, is not convincing. Mr. Grimm's methods of solving international problems of great import seem amateurish. Mr. Grimm also enters upon a love affair with Elusive Isabel, his chief opponent in the specific case presented, and the love affair is entered upon out of a clear sky with no preamble to convince the spectator of its sincerity. Whether these faults should be laid to the unsuitability of the work for pictorial use, or the scenario prepared by Raymond L. Schrock is a question we are not able to decide as it has not been our privilege to read the original novel.

The direction was attended to by Stuart Paton and like all this man's work it is very good. The settings are excellent and the photography as good as might be expected.



"IN FIVE MINUTES THE BOMB WILL EXPLODE"

Isabel Thorne is in the employ of the Latin nations who desire to bring about a compact whereby all the countries involved will secure complete control of the world. Hamilton Grimm is set to work to prevent the signing of the contract on American soil and suffice it to say that after six reels he accomplishes his purpose with the assistance of Isabel, who for love of the detective, turns against her cause.

Harry Millarde as the detective, Sydney Bracey as the half-witted inventor and William Welsh as the Chief of the Secret Service are Miss Lawrence's main supports. Others are Wallace Clarke, Paul Panzer and Jack Newton.

The Bluebird company might do well to replace the inserts now in the picture with others, printed in larger type. Those in the print shown for review were hardly readable in the close range of the projecting room and when a balcony enthusiast attempts to absorb their contents his job will be difficult.

"THE DOUBLE CROSS"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2nd

THERE is something about a pretty girl detective and her sleuthing exploits that seems to hit the public squarely between the eyes. Judging from the past success of similar material, this release ought to get over handily. As in most tales of crime ferreting, luck and coincidence contribute largely to the triumph of the detective.

But since the theme is treated from a romantic rather than a criminological angle, nobody cares if the heroine favors Cupid more than Bertillon in her investigation. Instead of a precise unfolding of a crime and a subsequent mechanical unraveling of it, the whole matter is handled in a human, semi-humorous manner. The slangy subtitles add considerably to this informal effect, and while some of them lack spontaneity, a greater number give the desired impression.

Elizabeth Burbridge is the man-huntress, and much of her performance is piquant and entertaining. Patrick Calhoun is a heavy dyed as deeply as one could well wish. Thurlow Brewer and Alice McChesney, juveniles, prance about very spiritedly.

Molly Burke, a plain-clothes woman, is assigned to hunt down a counterfeiter who is flooding the district with spurious currency. Leona, a girl friend of hers, asks her to watch Dowd, Leona's fiancee, who is associating with an undesirable crowd. Molly shadows Dowd, and finds that he is friendly with Peters, a suspicious character. Molly contrives to meet Peters, and tells him that she is a "dip." He reciprocates and boasts that he is the counterfeiter who is baffling the police. Molly has Peters arrested and brings Leona and Dowd together again.

"THE SNOW CURE"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE first reel of this is just about average Keystone comedy, but the second offers an unusual line of action, serving to make the whole quite distinctive. We have a thousand feet of Ford Sterling, Marie Manley, Fritz Schade, and Alice Davenport in the familiar flirt-wife-husband-landlady situation, Sterling being the flirt, Miss Manley the wife, Schade the husband, and Miss Davenport the landlady. This is amusing, but not startlingly funny.

In reel two the first three go up to the land of snows, somewhere in California, and then the real fun starts. Sterling decides he needs sanitarium treatment, so the Snow Cure Doctor straps him down on a table, and then turns a bear loose in the place. Sterling and a lot of other patients clad in bathing suits are chased all over the surrounding country by this bear, a remarkably well trained animal, wading through icy rivers and tobogganing about in great style. The chase ends when Sterling is projected through the window of the cabin in which the husband and wife are dwelling. As Sterling is in a bathing suit and the wife in night attire, the husband has occasion to sentence Sterling to death at the point of a shotgun, but the Snow Cure Doctor arrives and explains all.

A. E. Gillstrom directed. James Donnelly is also in the cast.

"PEG O' THE RING"

(Universal Special Serial—Second Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE second episode of "Peg o' the Ring" again features Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, as originally planned. Lest there be any confusion resulting from the various announcements that Ruth Stonehouse was to appear in the leading part, after a certain number of installments had been completed, it may be said here that the stars are to be the same throughout the serial.

"A Strange Inheritance," as this episode is separately entitled, follows Peg back to the circus from the entertainment given by Dr. Lund, owner of the show. Lund, Jr. (Francis Ford), follows and manages to get on the same train, but he is thrown off by the crew. At the circus Peg is kidnapped by a hindu in the employ of Mrs. Lund and whisked away to a gangsters' den. Here Lund follows her and is finally successful in rescuing her from the gang after a terrific fight.

As in the first number, there are given at intervals snatches of circus life both within and without the sawdust ring. Such scenes are an exceedingly entertaining relief from the developments of the main story.

The production, in charge of Mr. Ford, maintains the realistic pace set in the first number, while the support continues to do the same sincere work.

"AMERICAN GAME TRAILS"

(Educational Films Corp.—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THIS picture is one of the best of its kind to appear on the market. "American Game Trails" shows what a hunter's paradise is the wilderness of New Brunswick, Canada. It is a revelation to those who imagined that all the game in the eastern part of the continent had been killed off.

The makers of the picture have realized the necessity of picking out picturesque features of the woods to maintain the interest of the spectator. Among the incidents appealing to city-bred persons unaccustomed to the primitive ways of those who live in the woods is the building of a pretentious cabin.

Riding a moose across a wide stream is an exciting episode. The chief of the expedition, deftly drops over the side of a canoe, gets on the back of a four-year-old moose and clings to the frightened animal while the beast tries to escape to the nearest shore.

An incident fraught with as much comedy as if the animals had been trained for the stunt, shows two black cubs, as playful as kittens. They were discovered at the top of a tree, and the hunters were obliged to chop it down before being able to dislodge the bears. A close up shows each fuzzy youngster squirming in the hands of two men and pawing and cuffing away in their best bear style.

For outdoor scenes taken under more or less difficulty, the picture is wonderfully clear. The film created considerable enthusiasm at the Strand, the audience applauding vigorously on several occasions.

"American Game Trails" should make a hit wherever put on, and possesses the pleasing qualities which will probably mean rebooking in many instances.

"LIFE OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE"

(Educational Films Corporation—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A SINCERE effort has been made in this picture to present what few facts are known about Shakespeare's life through the medium of an interesting and dramatic story, and in general the effort has been fairly successful. The scenes at Stratford-on-Avon, where about 2,500 feet of the action occurs, appear to be authentic; the costuming is correct; and what looks like an exact replica of the old Globe theatre in London was built for use in the later scenes.

The subject was made in England, and the roles are carried throughout by English actors. Albert Ward, who essays the almost impossible task of impersonating the Bard, depicts quite well an adventurous and romantic Shakespeare, keeping his characterization free from any suggestion of intellectual greatness. The other players, who are assigned to such characters as Anne Hathaway, Sir Thomas Lucy, Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, Edmund Spencer, and other notables of the period, are fair types, and give pleasing renditions.

The subtitles are cleverly wrought of quotations from the poet's works. The interest created by the picture as a whole would have been greater if the photography and lighting had been more carefully attended to. As it stands, however, it is educational, in a sense, without being a screen essay. The action moves rapidly in most of the scenes.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN THE HOSPITAL"

(Mutt and Jeff Film Co.—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN this Bud Fisher cartoon the two eccentrics continue their exploits somewhere in the war zone. Jeff leads Mutt to believe that the wounded invariably receive caresses from nurses in the war hospitals, so Mutt persuades Jeff to shoot him in the foot. He dashes away to the hospital, and is promptly put to bed. A few minutes later he is amazed to find that the only nurse in the hospital is a large negro. Enraged, he chases Jeff over the surrounding country at the point of the bayonet.

It is in Fisher's best style, and is a sure laugh maker.

OVERTON OF VITAGRAPH PRAISES JACKSONVILLE AS A PICTURE-MAKING CENTER

WHEN Evart Overton of the Vitagraph Players returned from Jacksonville, Florida, where many of the scenes of "The Ordeal of Elizabeth," in which he supported Lillian Walker, were filmed, he was full of praise for the beautiful Southern city as a motion picture centre.

In speaking of the matter, Mr. Overton remarked: "It is a wonder to me that more of the film producers have not realized the advantages of this wonderful city for picture purposes."

Riding a moose across a wide stream is an exciting episode. The chief of the expedition, deftly drops over the side of a canoe, gets on the back of a four-year-old moose and clings to the frightened animal while the beast tries to escape to the nearest shore.

An incident fraught with as much comedy as if the animals had been trained for the stunt, shows two black cubs, as playful as kittens. They were discovered at the top of a tree, and the hunters were obliged to chop it down before being able to dislodge the bears. A close up shows each fuzzy youngster squirming in the hands of two men and pawing and cuffing away in their best bear style.

For outdoor scenes taken under more or less difficulty, the picture is wonderfully clear. The film created considerable enthusiasm at the Strand, the audience applauding vigorously on several occasions.

"American Game Trails" should make a hit wherever put on, and possesses the pleasing qualities which will probably mean rebooking in many instances.

"LIFE OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE"

(Educational Films Corporation—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A SINCERE effort has been made in this picture to present what few facts are known about Shakespeare's life through the medium of an interesting and dramatic story, and in general the effort has been fairly successful. The scenes at Stratford-on-Avon, where about 2,500 feet of the action occurs, appear to be authentic; the costuming is correct; and what looks like an exact replica of the old Globe theatre in London was built for use in the later scenes.

The subject was made in England, and the roles are carried throughout by English actors. Albert Ward, who essays the almost impossible task of impersonating the Bard, depicts quite well an adventurous and romantic Shakespeare, keeping his characterization free from any suggestion of intellectual greatness. The other players, who are assigned to such characters as Anne Hathaway, Sir Thomas Lucy, Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, Edmund Spencer, and other notables of the period, are fair types, and give pleasing renditions.

The subtitles are cleverly wrought of quotations from the poet's works. The interest created by the picture as a whole would have been greater if the photography and lighting had been more carefully attended to. As it stands, however, it is educational, in a sense, without being a screen essay. The action moves rapidly in most of the scenes.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN THE HOSPITAL"

(Mutt and Jeff Film Co.—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN this Bud Fisher cartoon the two eccentrics continue their exploits somewhere in the war zone. Jeff leads Mutt to believe that the wounded invariably receive caresses from nurses in the war hospitals, so Mutt persuades Jeff to shoot him in the foot. He dashes away to the hospital, and is promptly put to bed. A few minutes later he is amazed to find that the only nurse in the hospital is a large negro. Enraged, he chases Jeff over the surrounding country at the point of the bayonet.

It is in Fisher's best style, and is a sure laugh maker.

OVERTON OF VITAGRAPH PRAISES JACKSONVILLE AS A PICTURE-MAKING CENTER

WHEN Evart Overton of the Vitagraph Players returned from Jacksonville, Florida, where many of the scenes of "The Ordeal of Elizabeth," in which he supported Lillian Walker, were filmed, he was full of praise for the beautiful Southern city as a motion picture centre.

In speaking of the matter, Mr. Overton remarked: "It is a wonder to me that more of the film producers have not realized the advantages of this wonderful city for picture purposes."

"A SON OF THE IMMORTALS"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ONCE more we are introduced to a romantic mythical kingdom. This time it's Kosnovia; cousin to the legion of other imaginary European empires, concluding in "ia." A picture laid in such a locale is always a stable standby. The romance and the intrigue that authors have chosen to introduce in such tales remain as fascinating today, despite Europe's eruption, as they did when Harold McGraw's first book was scenarioized.

"A Son of the Immortals" was written by Louis Tracy and put into working shape by Bertram Grassby. Its central character is Prince Alexis, ruler of Kosnovia, because of his father's voluntary abdication. The prince is in love with an American artist. Kosnovia was previously lorded over by the army, but Alexis institutes a new, a gentler regime. At the height of his success his father, Michael, seeing all his troubles are over, comes to claim the throne. But it develops after all, that Alexis is the son of an American and not a Kosnovian, so he marries the artist and leaves Michael to undo all the good that he has done.

J. Warren Kerrigan, it need hardly be said, is an excellent choice for Alexis. Mr. Kerrigan makes the most of his benevolent part and appears in the garments of royalty to good advantage. Lois Wilson as the artist is an attractive opposite. Bertram Grassby as the self-centered king, contributes a comical craracter study to the picture, as does George Hernandez as the Prime Minister. Others are Laura Oakley, Mrs. Bertram Grassby, Harry Carter, Jane Bernoudy and Maude George.

The production of the picture is exceedingly good. It was Otis Turner who directed. Included in his all-around efficient work are some huge mob scenes that are handled realistically. The settings, in particular those showing entire streets are excellent. The photography warrants no adverse criticism.

"A Son of the Immortals" is conclusively a picture for all classes and those of all ages. Its plot has a wide appeal and there is no scene in it which is at all likely to offend one's finer sensibilities.

"THE COME BACK"

(Quality-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

FOR the initial appearance of Harold Lockwood and May Allison on the Metro program, a pleasing vehicle has been selected, one which fits their respective personalities well. The story cannot be called new, but it has been handled in good style by Director Fred J. Balshofer, and the result is a picture which the exhibitor can safely book as interesting, though it is by no means unusual.

Lockwood has the role of a worthless young man, whose sole occupation is "busting bubles" in Broadway cafes. His father, of course, eventually tells him he is no good, and the son starts out to prove he is. He proves it by going to a lumber camp in the North woods, and regaining his moral and physical manhood by becoming one with the rough life of the camp. Incidentally, he wins the girl, and also unearths the origin of some crooked work in the management of the camp, reporting his discovery to his father—the owner.

Much of the action is slow. It is a close-up picture, and in this case close-ups are quite the thing, for they enable the spectator to view at close range some pretty love-making between Lockwood and Miss Allison, which is done so well that it virtually puts the whole subject over by itself.

The scenes in the snow-buried woods are excellent examples of wisdom in the selections of locations, and add a great deal to the value of the picture. There are also two or three well staged fights, with Lockwood as the chief adversary, and these enliven the action just when it is in danger of dragging.

Lester Cuneo, as the heavy, does his usual good work. Others in the cast are George Henry, Howard Truesdell, Burt Starkey, Michell Lewis and Clarissa Selwynne.

"GABY'S GASOLINE GLIDE"

(L-Ko-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MAGICAL camera manipulation, a wet street and a Ford car are the main implements of comedy in this startling feature. The L-Ko company have equaled the mark set for themselves in their prize three-reeler, "The Great Smash." The formulae for such comedies ought to be easy to follow. Leave out coarseness and the suggestive, speed up the action until it puts a quick moving drama in the snail class, inject just an inkling of a plot and then employ a bunch of players who have no loved ones at home to mourn them. If that general line of action could be followed frequently, we would have more pictures like "Gaby's Gasoline Glide," and we need more of them.

The wet street is not altogether an unusual medium of rough and tumble comedy. But it is employed here to its fullest advantage. Skidding cars that come within an ace of upsetting at every turn and which travel with alarming speed, furnish a deal of laughter. On the other hand, there are bits of original business that are uproarious, such as the dropping of a coin in the water cooler of an automobile and the quick response of said automobile to this impetus.

The picture opens with rabid rivalry. One suitor has a motorcycle and the other a cycle car. A chase follows soon. In its course a hospital is set in confusion. Then the owner of the motorcycle proceeds to get a Ford and the rivalry still continues, romantically enhanced by violent skidding.

Billy Armstrong, Gertrude Selby and Phil Dunham are the principals. To Armstrong falls the bulk of the work, and his performance safely establishes him as an excellent comedian. Pretty girls are essential to comedies and Miss Selby fulfills this requirement with much to spare. Dunham as the other rival receives every chance offered with fine appreciation.

"HIS BREAD AND BUTTER"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE laughs in this are numerous, and they are produced by a clever combination of spectacular slapstick with an amusing comedy situation. The fun originates in a cafe, where Hank Mann, a waiter, brings his wife, Peggy Pierce, incognito, to act as cashier. The proprietor, "Slim" Summerville, and his head waiter, Bobbie Dunn, immediately pay her an unusual amount of attention, to the confusion of Mr. Mann.

Eventually the usual Keystone chase starts. This time it comprises some thrilling manipulation of two automobiles, involving several hair-raising stunts.

GREGORY MAEHLER FILM COMPANY, ORGANIZED IN MILWAUKEE, WILL PRODUCE JUVENILES, CLIFTON DIRECTING

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Milwaukee, May 5.

RAY D. CLIFTON, for the last year director of the Shubert theater stock players in this city, will become general director of the new Gregory Maehler Film Company, organized in this city recently with a capital of $25,000 to make juvenile plays and do commercial work. Under Mr. Clifton's direction a completely equipped studio building, three stories high, 50 x 150, has been erected. The studio is one of the best and most completely equipped buildings of its kind in the middle west.

Mr. Clifton was formerly with H. C. Mathews on the coast, Kriterion at Santa Barbara, Universal at Santa Barbara, Mutual at Hollywood, and with the Crystal in New York as director.

The officers of the Gregory-Mahler Film Company are E. F. Gregory, president; A. M. Coon, vice-president; E. H. Mahler, secretary and treasurer. The company expects to start active work within the next few weeks.

STARK JOINS METRO AS ASSISTANT TO HOYT

L. R. STARK, who has had four years experience in various lines of the motion picture industry, has accepted a position with the Rolfe Photoplays Inc., as assistant to Harry O. Hoyt, head of the scenario staff in the Rolfe studio. Mr. Stark will devote his time to reading scenarios submitted through Arthur James, Metro's scenario editor, and also reading books that give promise of being suitable for picturization.

Mr. Stark began his career playing comedy parts with the Kalem company and afterward with the Vitagraph.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"A Return to Youth—and Trouble." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., May 9.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Inoffensive Mr. Myron in all his eleven years of married existence has never had a fling. On his forty-fifth birthday he decides to paint the town red. He absorbs a few cocktails, flirts with a lively matron, and winds up by being arrested in a disreputable resort. When he confesses his escapade to his wife the next morning, she knows all about it, having followed him the night before, but having decided to let him have his fling. In the cast are Harry Dunkinson, Lillian Drew, Edward Arnold, and Frances Raymond.

"The Fable of the Good Fairy with the Lorgnette." (Essanay. Wed., May 10.)—This George Ade fable not shown for review; the story follows. Once Upon a Time there was a Broad Girl—235 pounds of Sunshine—who had the Red Corpuscles scared out of her Midget hubby, and therefore Figured that she could Bulldoze culture and refinement into the Slums. She Lamped the Unwashed through her Lorgnette and advised them to buy Sanitary Underwear at ten Seeds a Spill for their Brats. One day the ungrateful Proletariat mobbed her with Irish Confetti; she Pulled a Sob to hubby that the Liquor interests were trying to Croak her for reforming so many Drunks. Moral: To Uplift, begin Underneath.

"The Jester." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., May 13.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Bob Blair is the ne'er-do-well son of John Blair, a steel magnate. The Steel Trust is trying to acquire the elder Blair's plant, and the newspapers controlled by the trust attack his son mercilessly. Jane Whitman, star "sob sister" of a metropolitan daily, writes a series of stinging satires at his expense, calling him a worthless jester at sacred things. These articles sting Bob into a realization of his uselessness, and he starts to learn his father's business. Jane is assigned to get an interview with Bob to make further fun of him, but she is so impressed with his new earnestness that she writes a glowing tribute to him. She is fired from the newspaper for this, but Bob hires her as his secretary. Together they foil many of the Trust's plots, and when the elder Blair is successful in his fight with the monopoly, Bob marries her. The principals are John Junior, Gertrude Glover, and William Burk.

"The Double Cross." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., May 16.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of San Francisco." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., May 17.)—Half of this reel is devoted to sketches of interesting places around the Golden Gate, the remainder being a Western scenic.

"A Rose of Italy." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., May 20.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Lucia, an Italian immigrant girl, is immediately sought after by artists, after arriving in America, because she is such a good type. She is called to the attention of Bolano, an Italian theatrical manager, and she makes a hit as a dancer in one of his musical comedies. Intoxicated by success, she refuses to marry her former sweetheart, Luigi. One night she goes to Bolano's apartments, and he tries to violate her. She makes her escape, and a moment later Bolano is killed by a Black Hand time-bomb. Lucia runs to her fiance and begs his forgiveness.

The cast is composed of Ann Kirk, Edmund Cobb, Patrick Calhoun, Richardson Cotton, and Hugh Thompson.

"Broken Fetters." (Knickerbocker Star Feature. Three reels. Fri., May 12.)—This is an averagely interesting melodrama, wherein the villain tells the girl that his rival is already married, thus winning her for himself. When the trick is discovered, husband and wife quarrel, and the husband is stabbed. His mistress, arriving soon after, finishes the job. She then flees, and stumbling, fatally wounds herself with the same dagger. The girl is then free to marry the hero. Margaret Landis, Madeline Pardee, Richard Johnson, Charles Dudley and Mollie McConnell give fair renditions of the principal parts. The continuity is not what it might be, but in general the main points of the story are clearly told.

"Ham and the Masked Marvel." (Kalem. Tues., May 2.)—Ham's flirting leads to the staging of a burlesque boxing bout where he encounters the husband of the lady of his heart. The bout is fraught with good comedy and the picture as a whole ranks with the best of the series. Harry Edwards directed the usual cast.

"The Rogue's Nemesis." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., May 8.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Not What the Doctor Ordered." (Kalem. Wed., May 10.)—An excellent comedy that relies on its story for the laughs. It merely may be said that the story bears its burden very well indeed. Ethel Teare, Victor Rottman, Jack MacDermott and Gus Leonard are the principals.

"A Lunch Room Legacy." (Kalem. Fri., May 12.)—A Sis Hopkins subject that is hardly worthy the expended efforts of the comedienne and her company. Even in a comedy, one wants a slight glimmering of plausibility and there is none in this—the subtitles contradict the action without cause. There are some bright spots in it however. Henry Murdock, Frank Mizney and the usual supporting cast appears.

"Skirts and Cinders." (Lubin. Mon., May 8.)—Davy Don dresses up in feminine attire, thus gaining entrance to a young ladies' seminary. He is unmasked, when the mother of the girl he is impersonating arrives. Then he escapes, meets his pursuers in a hotel, breaks into a room occupied by a bride and groom, and makes himself a general nuisance until the police arrive. Some of the comedy is rather suggestive, and all of it is only moderately funny. The cast includes Florence Williams, Patsy De Forest, Francis Joyner and George Egan.

"Father's Night Off." (Lubin. Sat., May 6.)—This is an amusing comedy, centering about an escapade of a gay husband. He indulges in a fight with his own butler at the Bellhops' Ball, and is forced to buy the silence of the butler and maid. June Daye, James Cassady, Francis Joyner, Eleanor Blanchard, Hollins Antrim and Kempton Greene were directed by Clay M. Greene.

"The Wheat and the Chaff." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., May 11.)—The story is unconvincing in spots, but a good deal of human interest is drawn from it, nevertheless. This centers about the affection of a half-witted youth for his half-brother. The latter agrees to marry the daughter of a political boss for the governorship, though he really loves a cabaret dancer. The dancer, grief-stricken, accidentally kills herself, and the stupid youth is charged with her murder. He keeps secret the fact that he saw his half-brother running away from the house just after the shooting. Eventually, the older man dies of heart failure in a fit of remorse, and the youth is acquitted. Cecil Van Auker, Allan Forrest, Adelaide Bronti, Ruth Saville, George Routh, Evelyn Page and Walter Spencer give good renditions of their parts. Melvin Mayo directed.

"Jenkins' Jinx." (Lubin. Sat., May 13.)—Francis Joyner gives a fairly funny impersonation pursued by a jinx, the same being peacock feathers. The fun is helped along by June Daye, Margaret Moore, John Shermer, Adelaide Hayes and Kempton Greene. It will entertain the average audience.

"The Man Within." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., May 1.)—Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

"A Stranger in New York." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., May 8.)—Stripped of its humorous lines, Charles Hoyt's comedy when transferred to the screen loses some, but not all, of its mirth. Three reels are more than enough to contain the material utilized in this release. The majority of those in the cast aim at a slapstick interpretation of their parts when a more subdued portrayal would have been infinitely more effective. This is not true of Otis Harlan, the featured principal, who gives a finished performance throughout. Grace Darmond makes a sprightly ingenue.

An impecunious book-agent persuades a millionaire to lend him his name and clothes for one week, and promises to make a million dollars in a week. The agent goes to New York and buys a controlling interest in the Prune Juice Trust at one cent a share. By an ingenious series of publicity stunts the imposter makes Prune Juice drinking a popular fad, and sells his holdings in the company for a million and a half dollars. He then is the petted darling of society, until the real millionaire appears on the scene and shows him up.

"The Sheriff's Duty." (Selig. Sat., May 13.)—A conventional Western, conventionally acted and conventionally directed, is here given some interest by a good revolver fight. The horsemanship of the players is very good. The cast includes Joe Ryan, Pat Chrisman, Betty Keller, and Sid Jordan.

When Jones discovers that the sheriff has won Betty Nelson's daughter, he steals Nelson's bag of gold and rides away. The sheriff and a posse chase him and recover the gold. Nelson puts Betty's hand in that of the sheriff.

"The Hard Way." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., May 15.)—There is a good moral embodied in this picture, and it makes fairly lively entertainment as well. A few thrills and an unexpected happy ending give zest to the familiar story. Jack Pickford is good as a profligate son, and the supporting cast, consisting of Harry Lonsdale, Lillian Hayward, Vivian Reed, Sidney Smith, and James Bradbury, is entirely adequate.

Jack Ransom, a high school boy, is the despair of his parents because he associates with vicious friends. One night Jack visits his father's cellarette and, half intoxicated, falls asleep. He is awakened by one of his dissolute companions who urges him to accompany two girls to a disreputable road-house. The automobile they are in turns turtle, and the girls are killed. Jack steals his mother's jewels and pawns them to get money to escape. He is finally arrested for homicide and theft. He wakes up to find that this is all a dream. He resolves to give up his dissolute life.

"A Boarding House Ham." (Selig. Sat., May 20.)—This is an unusually good comedy, not because of the excellence of the human actors, who are of average ability, but because of the sense of humor possessed by a troup of leopards. These jungle beasts wander through the scenes, doing exactly what the director wants them to do, and causing unlimited laughs as well as real thrills. The animals are not named on the screen; the balance of the cast includes Sidney Smith, Olga Celeste, Charles Le Moyne, Miss McKeen, and Mrs. Prusche.

Maggie and her daughter Maybelle run a theatrical boarding house. Maybelle is in love with a property man, but her mother wants her to marry a former medicine vendor. Celeste, a lady leopard tamer, decides to help Maybelle. She releases her leopards, and the animals wander through the house, causing tremendous excitement among the inhabitants. The medicine vendor cravenly flees, but the property man bravely protects Maggie.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Avenged by Lions." (Centaur. Two reels. Sat., May 6.)—This is a stirring melodrama, in which the Bostock animals are used effectively. Richard, a young engineer, goes into the Boer jungle to survey the route for the new railroad. The Boer farmers oppose him, particularly Jan Kruger, one of the leaders, with whose daughter Hilda, Richard has fallen in love. Hilda is threatened by a half-breed negro, who covets her and takes advantage of her father's absence to organize a crowd of blacks and carry her away. Richard, who is on the way to the nearby settlement, is compelled to turn back by meeting lions. He happens by the Kruger house in time to rescue Hilda, and puts the blacks to flight. Their leader, fleeing into the jungle, is attacked and devoured by the lions. Margaret Gibson, Francis McDonald, Harry C. DeMore and David Allen head the cast.

"The Touch on the Key." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 8.)—This is a good film of newspaper life, with some of the faults always found in this kind of story, yet convincing to the average fan. A few novel touches in the scenario freshen up the familiar story, and the acting is very good. The cast consists of Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh, George Periolat, King Clark, and Joseph Beaudry.

Jane Randall, a newspaper reporter, learns telegraphy from Jimmy Larmon, her fiance. She is assigned to get the story of a big financial coup that is being engineered by a group of capitalists. Jane and a rival reporter both get the story at the country residence of one of the financiers, and both hurry to the telegraph office. It is closed, but Jane's rival breaks in and telegraphs his paper that he has been unable to get the story. He then wires his brokers an order based on his advance knowledge of the ring's intentions. Jane then starts to send in her story, but the other gags her, and telegraphs that she has failed to get any news. Jane's fiance recognizes from the touch on the key that she is not sending the message, so he persuades the editor to hold up the final edition. Jane later releases herself, and by sending in the story, scoops all the other papers.

"Germatic Love." (Vogue. Tues., May 9.)—The plot of this slapstick has been used any number of times, and since its manner of treatment is substantially the same as in previous versions, it cannot get laughs on its mere originality. The cast display tremendous energy in enacting it, however, and the gymnastic excesses are sometimes amusing. Prominent in the comedy are Arthur Tavares, Henry Kernan, Madge Kirby, and Alice Neice.

Two scientists invent a pill that causes its swallower to be loved by any members of the frail sex who chance to see him. They feed these pills to two tramps, and a ladies' seminary is disrupted as a result.

"Skelly's Skeleton." (Beauty. Wed., May 10.)—The redoubtable trio of farceurs, John Sheehan, Carol Halloway, and John Steppling, here do their best with another specimen of the romantic light comedy usually assigned them. This sort of comedy is popular in many houses, and this is fully up to standard.

Skelly is in love with Betty, the daughter of a millionaire, but her father does not approve. One night at a ghost party Skelly gets one of his friends to impersonate a terrifying skeleton, and when all the guests flee, Skelly bravely rescues Betty's father, winning his admiration and his daughter.

"The Profligate." (American. Three reels. Thurs., May 11.)—Although there is too much circumlocution in working up to it, the climax of this picture has a good deal of strength. Parts of the story are fairly unhackneyed, and the acting is conventional but good. The principal parts are taken by Edward Coxen, Winnifred Greenwood, George Field, and Charles Newton.

Richard Potter, a brilliant lawyer, is engaged to Irene Roberts, but Mrs. Roberts forces her daughter to break the engagement to be affianced to Winters, a worthless, though eligible, young profligate. Winters is found guilty of murder, and although Potter believes him to be innocent, he cannot reprieve the sentenced man. Half an hour before the time set for electrocution another man confesses to the murder,, but Potter cannot get in touch with the governor to get the execution stayed. Potter rushes to the power-house and switches off the current, and before it is turned on again, Winters has been pardoned. Mrs. Roberts revises her opinion of Potter, and allows him to marry Irene.

"The Gulf Between." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., May 12.)—This is a most improbable yet exciting story staged in locations of remarkable beauty. The intricate complications of plot are hard to follow at times, but usually are quite intelligible. The players are well cast.

An old trapper is seated in his cabin when a woman comes rushing toward him. She tells him her story. She was the daughter of a counterfeiter, and was loved by her father's accomplice. A secret service man came to capture the counterfeiter, and she fell in love with him. He married her and took her to the city. Her mountain lover followed her, and contrived to make her husband think her unfaithful. Her lover took her back to her home, but she escaped him. As she finishes this story, her pursuer arrives on the scene, but before the trapper can interpose, a stranger appears and shoots the assailant. The woman sees that it is her husband, and happiness reigns.

"Jerry's Perfect Day." (Cub, Fri., May 12.)—Another comedy full of policemen and tramps. Jerry, beset by minions of the law, takes refuge in a shanty, in which explosives are stored. Later he walks away with the building, and is struck by a truck, taking a load of cops and their families on a picnic. Following the explosion, Jerry is captured, chained to the truck and taken along to the picnic. While the cops are in swimming, one of the women releases Jerry, who meets four wayfaring friends. They take the policemen's uniforms, board the truck and drive off. The cops, emerging from the water, put on the tramps' clothes and give chase, only to be arrested, Jerry and his friends posing as policemen to aid the sheriff. Jerry and his party then drive on into the woods and open the well-filled lunch baskets. George Ovey, George George, Joseph von Meter, Claire Alexander, Rosebud Hill, Janet Sully, Louise Horner and Jefferson Osborne compose the cast.

"No Title." (Beauty. Sun., May 14.)—Not shown for review.

"A Mix-Up at Rudolph's." (Vogue. Sun., May 14.)—Not shown for review.

"The Pretender." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 15.)—This is an improbable but interesting tale of Wall Street intrigue, capably acted by Robert Klein, Lizette Thorne, Edward Coxen, and George Field. The suspense element is well developed, and while some of the situations strain the credulity, the quick succession of tense episodes diverts the attention.

Robert Arnold, a successful speculator, is entirely governed in his operations by the advice of his daughter Phyllis. Lane, an unscrupulous adventurer, plans to ruin Arnold by influencing Phyllis' judgment. He hires a bogus yogi, and Phyllis is astonished at the mystic's knowledge of her past. The girl's fiancee, Kendall, realizes that something is wrong, and shadows Phyllis to the medium's office. One day the medium advises Phyllis to persuade her father to put all his money in a scheme that Lane is promoting. She telephones her father to do this, but Kendall tells her of the plot, and together they reach Arnold before he puts his money in the venture. Kendall and Phyllis then look for a minister.

"The Man with the Hod." (Vogue. Tues., May 16.)—Not shown for review.

"Billy Van Deusen's Fiancee." (Beauty. Wed., May 17.)—Not shown for review.

"Four Months." (American. Three reels. Thurs., May 18.)—Here is a pleasant little romance, very improbable, but well acted and fairly fresh in theme. The trio of leads, Alfred Vosburgh, Vivian Rich, and George Periolat, are particularly good, and the support is fair.

Billy Carrington, a young millionaire, is told by his physician that he has only four months to live. He decides to give his fortune to the most worthy person he can find. He goes to a cheap boarding house and obtains a position in the Woman's Redemption Society. This society, he discovers, is nothing but a white slaving scheme. Bess, a girl in his boarding house, is chosen as a victim, but Carrington rescues her and has the ringleaders arrested. Carrington decides to give his money to Bess, but wishing to try her, tells her that he was formerly Carrington's valet, and that he knows the combination of the Carrington safe. Later he goes to his house and finds the safe opened. It turns out, however, that Bess did not rob it. Meantime Carrington's doctor has been telling all his patients that they have only four months to live, and he is adjudged insane. Carrington is thus enabled to Marry Bess.

"The Blindness." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., May 19.)—Several new plot developments make this a good, though not remarkable, Western. The cast is strong, being made up of such capable players as William Stowell, Dodo Newton, Roy Stewart, Rhea Mitchell, and Warren Ellsworth.

Joe and Jim are partners in a mining claim and rivals for the hand of the new school teacher. Joe is accepted, but one day goes blind in the desert. Jim realizes that his partner cannot find his way back to camp alone, and so leaves him to die. Jim goes to the school house and threatens to shoot the teacher unless she elopes with him. She consents, but writing a call for help on a little girl's apron, sends her to a nearby farm house. Joe is found by some Mexicans, and since his loss of sight is only due to sand blindness, his eyes are soon fixed up. He goes to the school, and seeing Jim embracing the teacher, fights with him. He overpowers his false friend, but believes that his fiancee has been untrue. The message on the little girl's apron convinces him that he is wrong.

"Twenty Minutes in Magic." (Beauty. Sun., May 21.)—By means of trick photography feats of

The patriotic spectacle of astounding magnitude. It will be offered on a territory basis.

STANDARD NEWSFILM, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City

magic are produced in this comedy that would make a prestidigitateur mad with jealousy. These extraordinary stunts, plus the clever story that introduces them, make this an unusually bookable comedy. Orral Humphrey, John Gough, Rea Berger, and Lucille Ward appear in the cast.

Presto, a bartender, gets a job as an assistant to an East Indian mystic. He discovers that the yogi's wonderful powers are given him by swallowing a magic pill every twenty minutes. Presto swallows one of the pills and finds that he can also perform weird feats. He has a delightful time for twenty minutes until the effect of the pill wears off and he is once more a humble bartender.

"Chinatown Villains." (Vogue. Sun., May 21.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Iron Claw," No. 10. (Pathé. Two reels.)—The story takes an unexpected turn in this episode, which is entitled "The Living Dead." Manley, who has been wounded by the supposedly poisoned arrows fired by one of Legar's lieutenants, pretends to have died, and is taken to the big Golden mausoleum. There Legar follows the body, to investigate the mystery, and Manley and the police trap him. He escapes by blowing up the mausoleum, seriously injuring both Manley and himself. Both get away, however, and later Legar comes upon Margery in her stalled auto. She is rescued by the mysterious Laughing Mask, who in turn is pursued by Legar to the top of a steel structure. They grapple, and the Laughing Mask falls. Creighton Hale, Pearl White and Sheldon Lewis are featured in the cast.

"Dross and Diamonds." (Pathé. Two reels.)—This two-reeler is a strong story of modern life, minus the conventional ending. John, the son of a narrow-minded police captain, is infatuated with Mazie, companion to a wealthy woman. The girl, whose head has been turned by her mistress' jewels, demands that he give her a ring. It so happens that he receives a check for $100 for a story he has written, and on the same day is sent to collect $100 due his father. He buys the ring with his hundred, then finds that his pocket has been picked of the other money. His father refuses to listen to explanations, brands him as a thief, and sets him adrift. In his efforts to regain his former standing he only sinks lower, and finally kills a man. The feature of the picture is the excellent work of the two leads, Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook, appearing by special arrangement with the Rolfe Photoplays Co.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Claudia." (Imp. Sun., May 2.)—This was produced by Robert Hill and concerns a jealous yonng lady in love with an artist. The plot is not clear and the most illuminating character is that one played by Edith Roberts who, however, is not the lead. Paul Kelley takes the juvenile lead and as a reporter he looks more like a high school boy. Others are Stanley Walpole and Sydell Dowling.

"The Bankruptcy of Boggs and Schultz." (L-Ko. Wed., May 3.)—This concerns the squabble of jealous partners over the contents of the safe and the favor of the stenographer. It is fairly humorous, Ray Griffith creating most of the laughs. Dick Smith and Alice Howell are others.

"The Marriage of Arthur." (Laemmle. Two reels. Sun., May 7.)—Contrary to most of Rupert Julian's pictures this one is poor save for his highly colored character portrayal of a fop. The action is by all odds too slow and some of the close-ups can bear extensive trimming. Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson are the leads.

"A Youth of Fortune." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., May 15.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of May 13.

"He's a Devil." (Nestor. Mon., May 15.)—Tom Gibson, writer of this comedy, hit upon an extraordinarily clever idea and as picturized by Al Christie it makes a very fine comedy offering. There is no eccentric character business, but straight performances from all the leading players. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Ethel Lynn, Betty Compson and Ed Burns are the principals.

"Darcy of the North West Mounted." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., May 16.)—A story in which Darcy proves a very good detective and manages to capture a pair of murderers and robbers, after he has first blundered and arrested his sweetheart's father for the crime. It is a well evolved story with plenty of pretty and appropriate scenes and photography of a high order. A cast of favorites appear, including Herbert Rawlinson, Agnes Vernon, Barney Furey and O. H. Burbridge. William Worthington directed from a scenario by Walter Woods.

"When Slim Picked a Peach." (Imp. Tues., May 16.)—Not yet shown for review.

"Gaby's Gasoline Glide." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., May 17.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Three Wishes." (Victor. Wed., May 17.)—This picture is weak all through. There are gaps in its development which strain credulity and the final stages in which a mother, who has lost her first baby, swears not to kiss her second for a year, is foolish. Mary Fuller and Augustus Phillips have been compelled to waste good acting material on an entirely negligible picture. Samuel Greiner wrote the scenario and Lucius Henderson produced it.

"A Wife at Bay." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., May 18.)—The story of the extravagant wife and the hard-working husband; how the former plunged herself into all sorts of difficulties to be pulled out of them by the latter is the basis of this society drama. The situations at the end when the husband rounds up the villains are the most powerful, although J. Grubb Alexander has managed to make the entire picture unusually strong for one of its age. Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips are the leads.

"Grouches and Smiles." (Laemmle. Thurs., May 18.)—The touch of a little child cures an old grouch and incidentally makes a number of other people happy by working this transformation. This is one of Lynn Reynolds' productions and seldom do we have the opportunity to see such a wholesome and pleasing one-reeler. It is worked out excellently from every standpoint. Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul and Alfred Allen are the leads.

"Nome Alaska." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., May 18.)—This makes an excellent scenic with numerous expansive views of ice fields caught by the camera. The photography is good and there are many touches of interesting local color furnished by the presence of the natives. On the same reel with "A Toyland Robbery."

"Heart Aches." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Fri., May 19.)—Don't let just "nothing" interfere with love is what this picture aims to prove. But conclusively it is a tiresome release. There is little that is dramatic about it, and little that is humorous, while it is generously padded. The scenes and photography, which are unusually good, are the best things about the picture. Alfred Allen, Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson are the principals.

"Nadine of Nowhere." (Big U. Fri., May 19.)—A wild-animal subject written by William Farmer and produced by Paul Bourgeois. The story is a good one and the wild animals are introduced at a time when their presence creates good excitement. Trockwood Crittendon is hardly fitted, either physically or histrionically, for the hero's role. Rosita Marstini, Clara Horton and Edith Hoskins are others.

"The Wooing of Aunt Jemima." (Nestor. Fri., May 19.)—Neal Burns as the anxious lover impersonates his aunt, and in this disguise promises to marry the uncle of his sweetheart. He then abuses his aunt's other rival so the real aunt is snubbed by him and is obliged to accept the uncle. This comedy by Clifford Howard depends wholly on its clever situations for humor, and the humor is abundant. Al Christie wrote the scenario and Horace Davey produced it with a cast including besides Burns, Betty Compson, Harry Rattenberry, Ed Burns and Stella Adams.

"Hulda, the Silent." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 20.)—The story of a conniving Swedish girl and how she ruined the happy romance of two from the old country. Slightly depressive, but excellently done. The light effects and settings specially are far out of the ordinary in their excellence and appropriateness. The acting of Harry Carter, Maude George, Lois Wilson and Bertram Grassby is efficient, Miss George in particular having a part which she plays perfectly. The story traveled from Otis Turner to F. McGrew Willis and back to Turner again before completion.

"Their Social Smash." (Powers, Sat., May 20.)—A very good comedy produced by Harry Wulze with Marcia Moore, Bob Vernon and Lou Dunbar in the important parts. Father doesn't like daughter's choice, but he speedily consents when he sees a picture of himself accompanied by a young and pretty girl taken on the beach. Some of the situations are most amusing, besides being of original flavor.

"A Raffle for a Husband." (Joker. Sat., May 20.)—Allen Curtis' Joker company here appear in a scenario by Gale Henry. The plot is exceedingly humorous and there is a little laughable business done within the confines of a boarding house which is the locale of the picture. Milburn Moranti, Charles Conklin, William Franey, Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock do their accustomed effective work.

"The Love Triumphant." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., May 21.)—Not yet shown for review.

$100.00 per REEL

That is what the E. & R. Jungle Film Company will pay for one reel comedy scenarios. The stories must be funny; must contain an original idea; must have perfect continuity; and must be written for and around "Napoleon" and "Sally," the chimpanzees with the human brain, and the only two in motion pictures. Submit your stories. They will receive careful consideration.

WANTED

Representatives to handle our new 101 Ranch Feature. Bond and references. Address K. L. Williams, Bliss, Okla.

FOR SALE OR LEASE

Motion Picture Theatre in one of the best towns in the South. First floor seats 1,000; balcony for colored, 400. The owners have other large interests and haven't the time to give it their personal attention. It is making money and will bear the closest investigation. Will lease to responsible party for $200.00 a week or will sell part stock to a competent manager; or will sell as a whole. If sold as a whole, will take at least $10,000 to swing the deal, balance out of the profits. If interested, "see us." The James H. Button Co., 304 Inter-Southern Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

THE CERTIFIED LIST TO PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS OF THEATRES.

We have on file a list of investigated theatres which are recommended as paying propositions. We accept theatre registrations only after investigation and procuring of signed statements from owners as to income and expenses, etc. Real bargains, but bona fide propositions. Write for our list. National Cinema Syndicate, Inc., Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, New York.

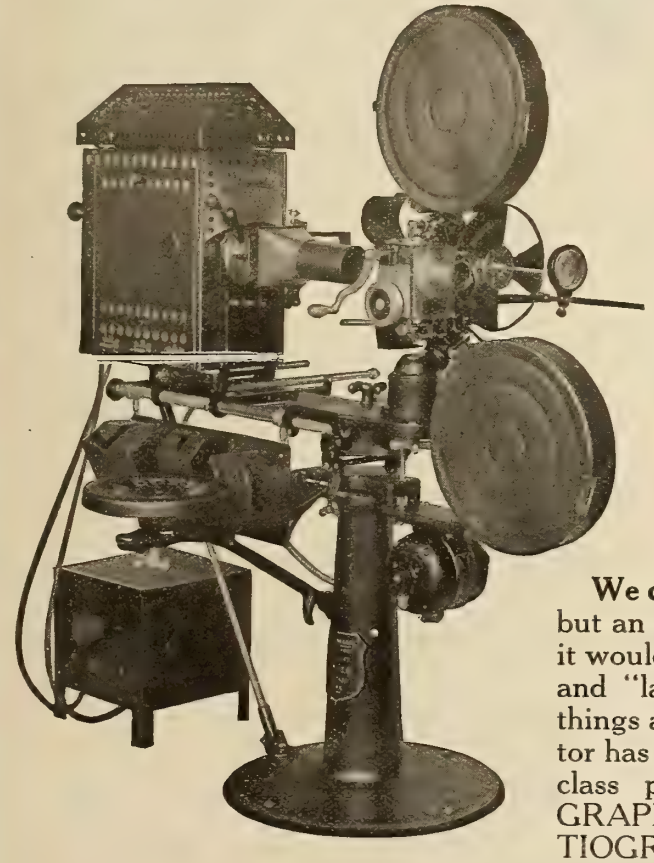
SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS DEVOTED TO THE CONSTRUCTION, EQUIPMENT AND OPERATION OF THEATRE, EXCHANGE AND STUDIO

AFTER YOU HAVE LISTENED TO ALL THE BIG TALK



OF OTHER MANUFACTURERS —after all is said and done—what interests you most when you select a machine is what you get.

We claim—and can prove it—that in the

Motiograph

yet get more real value than you can obtain in any other projecting machine on earth at any price.

We could cut down our cost $50.00 and no one but an expert would know it—that doesn't mean it wouldn't be found out later on, for it would be, and "later on" is not a good time to find out things about a machine you buy—the live exhibitor has "found out" the real QUALITY and high class projection obtained from the MOTIOGRAPH—that is why the large number of MOTIOGRAPHS are being sold.

By J. H. Hallberg

92—How may the current flow at the arc be regulated when using a choke-coil as illustrated in Fig. 45, without moving the solenoid or magnetizing coil as referred to in question 91?

Ans.—It is possible to design a "U" core and magnetizing coil by making the distance between the legs of the "U" core greater so as to increase the air-gap to so that when the magnetizing coil B is all the way down on the coil as illustrated in Fig. 45, the choke-coil will then produce the correct effect on the circuit to maintain the arc at the highest desired amperage.

On the other hand, if the core is already at hand and the air-gap at the top of the "U" is such that with a given number of turns on the magnetizing coil B the choking effect is so great that the desired number of amperes will not flow over the arc, you may unwind some of the turns on the coil B until the desired ampere flow at the arc is obtained, keeping in mind that as you unwind turns and remove them from the coil, the choking effect of the device decreases and the amperes will increase at the arc.

While the foregoing suggestion to unwind turns of a choke-coil in order to increase the amperes, effects the desired result, you must not forget that as the ampere flow in the wire increases, it will heat to a greater extent and you must not remove so many turns of the wire that the ampere flow will be greater than the capacity of the wire. You realize that if you should remove too many turns the increased current flow might burn out the coil.

In reconsidering the above from another point of view, you will readily see that if you have a given choke-coil of the design as illustrated in Fig. 45 and you have unwound a sufficient number of turns to get the correct ampere flow and you should experience overheating of the coil, you may then remove the coil altogether and substitute one made up with the correct number of turns and of the correct size wire to carry the increased current flow.

It is usually, however, very easy to regulate the position of the coil relative to the core as illustrated and described in answer to question 91.

However, where it should not be practical to move the coil, then you may reduce the number of turns in the coil, as originally suggested in the beginning of the answer to this question and apply to the "U" core, a magnetic circuit closer illustrated by G in Fig. 46, shown herewith, which is made up of laminated iron sheets, properly riveted or screwed together.

93—In what way does the magnetic circuit closer when used with a "U" core, increase the reactance or choking effect of a choke-coil?

Ans.—It has been explained that with a given number of turns and a given ampere flow and a given air-gap, the magnetizing coil will produce a certain quantity of magnetic lines of force in the iron circuit which fixes the current flow.

Now, it is evident that if we shorten the magnetic circuit and decrease its resistance to the flow of magnetic lines, by introducing the magnetic circuit closer G, in close proximity to the ends of the "U" core, as illustrated in Fig. 46, then the original air-gap, as illustrated in Fig. 45, by F, wil be considerably reduced, as represented in Fig. 46, by two much shorter air-gaps FF.

Copyright, 1916, by J. H. Hallberg.

The effect of the introduction of the magnetic circuit closer G, upon the circuit in series with which the choke-coil may be connected is to increase the reactive effect of the coil and in consequence thereof, to lower the ampere flow at the arc.

With the foregoing description and explanation, you are now in a position to understand that by employing suitable clamping devices for holding the "U" core and the magnetic circuit closer G, in fixed position relative to each other, the air-gaps FF, may be decreased by moving G, towards the "U" core, which will decrease the current flow and on the other hand when G is moved away from the "U" core the air-gaps FF will be increased in consequence of which the ampere flow through the arc will be increased, forming a most convenient regulator where a permanent setting or adjustment is acceptable.

It is not practical to make the magnetic circuit closer G, movable by means of a lever unless clamping means are introduced to lock the core in a fixed position after the adjustment has been obtained, due to the tremendous vibration which exists between the "U" core and the magnetic circuit closer "G" when the device is in operation and which is especially noticeable when the air-gap is very short and with frequencies below 60 cycles.

Due to error in reproducing my sketch for Fig. 45, the arrow running from B to the magnetizing coil was omitted. Therefore, please understand that the letter B should have been connected in some way so as to indicate the magnetizing coil in Fig. 45, as is shown herewith in Fig. 46.

THANHOUSER, WORLD, METRO AND PARAMOUNT STARS EXPECTED AT FIRST BALL IN BUFFALO, N. Y.

PLANS for the first annual ball of the Buffalo, N. Y., Screen Club, recently organized, are nearing completion. To date, Florence La Badie and Frederick Warde will represent the Thanhouser company, while William A. Brady has promised to send Gail Kane, Ethel Clayton, Alice Brady and Mollie King as guests of the club at the ball. Jessie Bonstelle and her entire stock company now playing at the Star theatre will attend, as will Mayor Louis P. Fuhrmann and Commissioners Hill, Kreinheder, Malone, and Heald.

The ball, which will be held at Elmwood Music hall on Monday evening, May 15, will be one of the most novel ever held in Buffalo, and a gigantic crowd is expected. The press is giving much space to the event, which is greatly appreciated by the club. President Daniel J. Savage is in New York, and word is expected momentarily from him as to whether the Paramount company will send any of its stars to the ball. Negotiations have been opened with Francis X. Bushman, who it is hoped will lead the grand march. Fifteen per cent. of the receipts will go to the Actors' Fund of America. The 74th Infantry band of 50 pieces, under the direction of John W. Bolton, and an orchestra with the same number of men in its personnel under the direction of Herman E. Schultz, will furnish the music.

The hall will be turned into a veritable fairy garden with the club colors, blue and gold, predominating. In the afternoon an automobile parade will be held with the visiting stars participating. An elaborate program, street car advertising billboards and electric signs, are now telling Buffalo about the great event. The club had its formal opening last week, when the clubrooms in Court street was the scene of much jollity, with music, dancing and a banquet.

Among the new members recently added to the Buffalo Screen Club are: Michael Shea, I. M. Mosher, J. A. Schuchert, G. A. Rudolph, I. Moses, John F. Miller, John Pferd, J. S. Savage, C. R. Higgins, C. N. Johnson, G. C. Hall, George Hanny, Jr., M. Whitman, G. A. Keating. William Leyser, Edward Hyman and E. S. Davis. W. R. Wood, of Rochester, has been elected to non-resident membership. The club is being "swamped" with applications, and a large number of new members are expected to be taken into the fold at the next meeting on May 1.

IS THE STUDIO DIRECTORY WORTH AS MUCH TO YOU?

THE Directory Number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS is being used principally in the organization of a new department being created at the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play studio, Hollywood, Cal., under the direction of General Manager Milton E. Hoffman, and Captain R. Ford, of the employment department. The data regarding motion picture players, directors, and technical men printed in MOTION PICTURE NEWS Directory Number is being filed on cards in connection with photographs which have not been retouched.

This, when completed, will contain biographical records of all leading players of the West Coast producing colony, and will enable the employment department, at a minute's notice, to be able to locate the right party to play any part. As soon as all leading players who are at liberty are listed in this manner, the department will take up the listing of all extra people who have had motion picture experience. This will be a great task, but in the end will greatly facilitate the production, and be a most valuable asset to the studio.

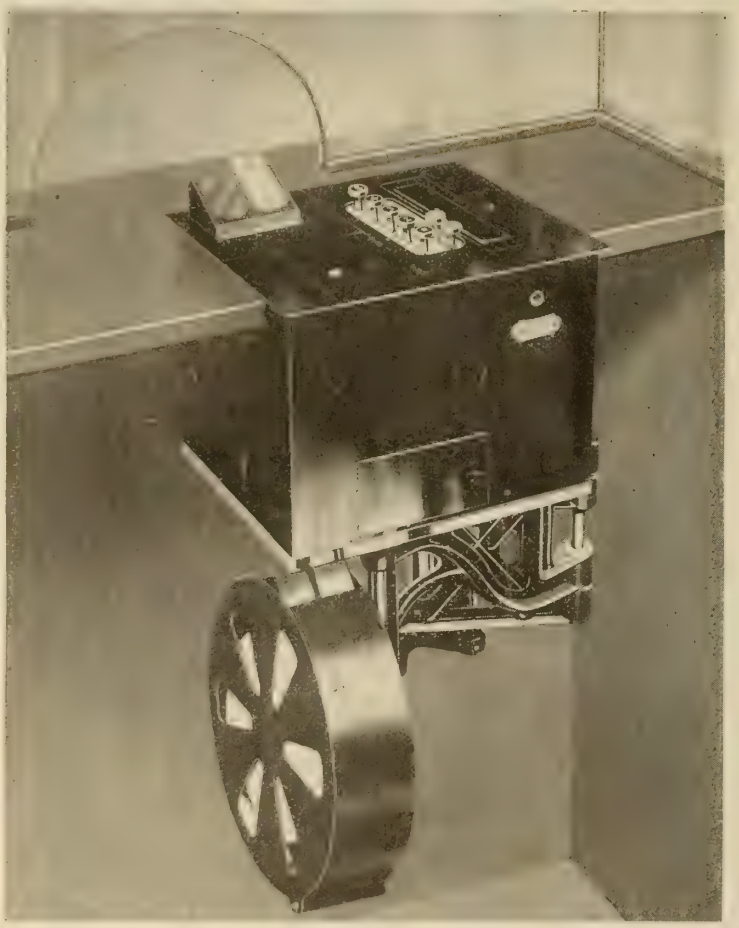
The Two-Color Ticket-Print

The new system for Moti registers the money, sav



Shows register completely installed.

Advantages of Register:

Prints tickets of two prices, each price ticket of a different color.

Prints from one to five tickets of either price at one time.

Keeps a record of the total number of tickets sold.

Some registers also add the total amount of money taken in.

It is not necessary for ticket-taker to handle tickets to distinguish prices.

The price of admission is printed in large type. This prevents overcharge and further distinguishes the tickets.

It is impossible for others to learn the number of tickets sold, as the tickets are not numbered.

It is quicker—serves more people, prevents crowding at ticket window, and pleases the patrons.

It is cheaper than buying printed tickets.

Tickets have no value until they are printed and issued by the register.

It is safer—the machine issues the tickets direct to the patrons. Ticket-seller does not handle tickets.

It gives more exact information—business is balanced when last ticket is sold. You know at any time how many tickets have been sold and how much cash there should be in the drawer.

on-Picture Theaters that es time and prevents loss

Description of Register:

This new 1916 Model register has two rolls of ticket paper. Each roll is different in color from the other.

By this method the price of the ticket can be recognized from the color, without close examination of the amount.

Either roll of paper may be changed without interfering with the other roll.

The register has four number keys, one release key, and two amount price keys.

It is built so that as many as fourteen different price tickets can be issued. Any two of these fourteen prices may be used at one time.

The register counts the number of tickets issued of each admission price. These adding counters are reset whenever the prices of admission are changed.

The standard register has a 5c. and a 10c. key. However, any two amounts desired can be substituted for the 5c. and 10c. keys.

Registers of this type may be had to print either a single or stub ticket.

They are usually operated by electricity. They may be operated by hand if desired.

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

POSSIBLE TO RAISE VOLTAGE OF ANY ARC BY SEPARATING CARBONS FURTHER

H. M. J., Athens, Ga.—We, Local 548, are trying to get the city council to pass an ordinance requiring the M. P. M. O. to issue licenses to operate moving picture machines as our greatest trouble here is with the managers who employ boys to work for a very small salary and cut out good men. I want to ask if you are in favor of city licenses. Do you think it a good thing? The M. P. M. O. boys of Local 548 have never had a chance to try for licenses, so therefore, we have no idea what we would have to stand; what I mean, is on the electrical line. I realize that different cities ask different questions. Could you give us an idea of the questions?

We get all the information we can out of your book, "Motion Picture Electricity" and Motion Picture News; also the I. A. official trade journal and other papers, but still if you could give us some idea of what we would be questioned on in the electrical end of the examination, it would be of great help to us.

Enclosed I am sending sketch. You will understand just what I mean—how one of the boys here burns his arc on D. C.; with this setting you are able to get a good steady arc, easy to handle, but wouldn't there be a good deal of lost light? The foregone is speaking of sketch No. 1. My lamp is set as sketch No. 2, but I find that my arc is much harder to handle.

I notice in April 15 issue that you speak of raising and lowering arc voltage, but isn't the Generator built to deliver so many volts under certain conditions? How can you lower and raise your voltage if you should want to?

Ans.—Concerning the examination of operators who desire to secure a license in the various cities and towns of the U. S., I beg to advise you that there is no fixed set of questions, used by any inspection department. Every inspector asks different questions, but if you can master the profession as set forth in the book and papers you mention, then you need have no fear trying for a license anywhere.

It is true, that in some of the larger cities, the tests of the operators are severe, but if they fail once they have to study more and then try again. The most intricate questions concern the electric part of your equipment and especially the balancing and unbalancing of three wire systems, and what happens if you get a ground on a three wire system.

The sketches which you sent are interesting. Sketch No. 1 is certainly not correct. I admit the arc may be steadier than with sketch No. 2 as you illustrate it, but your friend must lose almost 25 per cent to 50 per cent of the useful illumination with the setting in Fig. 1. Your setting No. 2 is not exactly correct for D. C., which I understand you are using, and you should not tilt your lamp back as far as illustrated and I believe you would secure much steadier light by moving the upper carbon forward slightly.

Another point which I may mention is that if you are now using a solid carbon in the lower holder for negative; if you will use a corded carbon in its place you will secure much better and steadier light. Don't tilt your lamp as much as in Fig. 2 as it will have a tendency to allow the arc to creep out of the position crater.

It is possible to raise the voltage of any arc by merely separating the carbons further. With 30 to 40 amperes D. C. flowing, a carbon separation of about ¼ inch with good carbons will give you approximately a drop of 50 volts. If you separate the carbons another 1/16 inch, your arc voltage may climb to 55 or 60 and so on. The difference is made up for by the rheostat which passes slightly less amperes when you lengthen your arc, but you may secure better results, one way or another and that is up to you to determine with your particular installation.

In closing this answer I want to suggest that the members of your local insist upon examination by the local authorities in order to protect yourselves against cheap and inferior labor, such as given by boys and others not skilled in the art of operating. I do not believe you need to fear and if there is any question which, as you might say "sticks you," write to Motion Picture News and I will be pleased to answer it for you to the best of my ability.

TROUBLE WITH THE PICTURE WHEN USING THE SAME MACHINE IN DIFFERENT PLACES

G. & K., Coudersport, Pa.—We have been moving our machine to the opera house for a two-night show, using a white Alabastine curtain, getting a most satisfactory picture at a throw of 63½ feet with a lens which we use at our regular place with a throw of 83½ feet; only a little smaller picture, but when we tried this same curtain, machine and all in our regular place we could not get but a very dark, bad picture on either 63½ or 83½-foot throw. We have been using for two years a Gold Bronze curtain made by our painter (imported German gold bronze), but we had always more or less flicker. Now as we had such a smooth, flickerless picture in the opera house we would like to get the curtain working in our regular place.

Our place is 15 by 90 feet, raised at the entrance. The ceilings 9 feet from the floor and inclines down 54 feet, where the ceiling is 12 feet high to the curtain. The opera house is 50 by 60 feet to the stage, 20 feet high, throw 63½ feet. We have A. C. and the volt meter showed 110 volts, 60 cycles. We have no chance just now to test the current at the opera house for two weeks when we move again for three days. We have a transformer of 10 K. W. and the opera house one of 9 K. W. Should that cause the trouble? Our electrician says not. Our place is painted a dark green while the opera house has lighter colors.

LUCAS THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY
ATLANTA GEORGIA

Ans.—Please pardon the delay in answering your question, but I have been very busy. Your case is a sticker and from outside appearances there should be no particular reason why you should not get absolutely as good a picture in your theatre as you do in the opera house, especially when you move the screen so the distance is the same in both cases. You say that the voltage in your theatre is 110 volts, but you are not sure what the voltage is at the opera house and that maybe the difference.

If I were you, I would secure or borrow a volt meter and use it not only for one reading but for an afternoon and evening and read the voltage in the booth right at the switch where the wires come in at the wall. Take a reading when there is no load on the line and then switch on your arc and take another reading to see when the voltage drops when you switch on the arc or with the arc burning in your theatre.

If the voltage drops more than one or two volts at the most, then there is something wrong between the transformer in the street and the switch in your booth. There maybe a loose connection. The meter may be too small, or the wire may be smaller than it ought to be.

Repeat the above readings about once every half hour during the evening and the afternoon, both with the arc burning and when the arc is not burning and tabulate the readings on a piece of paper opposite the time the readings are taken. Do exactly the same thing in the opera house next time you get an opportunity and use the same volt meter, the same rheostat or transformer or whatever other device you have for regulating the arc, and also make sure that you are using the same kind and quality carbons.

As the machine is the same and you have tried the same screen at the same distance, you should get identical results, if you are using the same current controller or rheostat and carbons and if the voltage is the same.

I suspect, however, that your voltage is lower in your theatre than it is at the opera house and this is for you to determine.

You should also state what make rheostat—its size and about how many amperes you are using. If you have and if you use a current saver such as a transformer or economizer, you should state the make and the size of it and on which notch you are operating. We shall be glad to hear from you again on this subject, as your case is very interesting.

EQUIPMENT FOR FURNISHING POWER FROM A MOTORBOAT TO TEMPORARY SHOW ON AN ISLAND

A. M., Friday Harbor, Wash.—In the first place I had better tell you where this place is located and then the conditions.

Friday Harbor is in San Juan County and the latter consists of a number of small islands, so you will readily see that any travel between these will have to be done with boat. There are several towns throughout these islands of which Friday Harbor is the largest, with 500 people. My wife and I run the picture show here four nights a week and the idea struck me that if we could show the other three nights in three of the other towns we could do pretty well. To reach these places we need a small launch and as the halls where we would be showing are not such a great way from the water I thought I would run wires down to the launch where I would generate the current with the boat's engine. I would of course, need a small generator.

Would I want a 60 or a 110 volt machine? How far can you run current with 60 volts? The next question that I would like to ask is, what kind of a projection machine would I want for such work? I see advertised in the "News" the Portoscope and also the Atlas, both portable machines. Would this style of projector do for what I want? Will they project just as good a picture and of the same size as any of the standard machines? If they do, it seems to me that one of these would be just the thing. How does the 1,000 C. P. Incandescent Lamp work for the source of light? I would like you to tell me about the gas or calcium light, how it works and the cost of the outfit and also the cost of operation. Perhaps this would be the cheaper way to get my light rather than with the engine and generator. What kind of outfits do traveling shows usually use? I would be pleased to hear from you concerning the above.

I break a lot of slides while showing them. I do not use over 30 amperes at the arc. I got information on how to prevent this—cutting in more resistance when I show slides but this would not be very handy as I show slides between each reel. Could you tell me of any other way? I use a 30-ampere mercury arc rectifier.

ANS.—Your letter describes a most unusual situation and I take it that you are quite an enterprising chap. The problem you have before you is not so difficult to overcome and personally I would prefer to generate the power with a small dynamo connected to your boat engine by means of a belt on the fly wheel.

A generator to produce 30 amperes to the moving picture arc weighs about 250 lbs. and must be operated at a speed of about 2,000 R. P. M. and is usually equipped with a 4-inch diameter pulley.

If you know the diameter of your engine pulley and the normal speed at which you desire to operate the engine, then you may multiply the speed of the engine by the diameter of the engine pulley and divide this amount with four, the diameter of the generator pulley, and you will then find at what speed your generator pulley with run. To do this backwards, you know the generator has to operate at 2,000 R. P. M. You know that the generator pulley is 4 inches in diameter, which gives you a product of 8,000. Divide this amount with the diameter of your engine fly wheel or pulley; then you will get the speed at which you should run your engine. With the generator in mind it does not make much difference if you speed it up 200 or 300 revolutions more.

You can transmit 60 volts just as far as 110 or any other voltage but comparing it with 110 voltage your wires have to be double the size for the 60-volt current, providing the distance is the same in both cases.

With a No. 6 cable you could transmit 30 amperes 1,000 feet at a reasonable loss considering the small cost of generating the power with your boat engine. For a distance of 500 feet you could use a smaller wire but No. 6 is about as small as you ought to use anyway for moving picture work.

I believe the 60-volt outfit would really give you the best satisfaction, although the generator I have in mind would be one for slightly higher voltage. It would range around 75 volts without the arc burning and around 50 volts when the arc is burning and a first-class generator of that type will cost you about $120 with the regulator and such a generator would be adjustable in case of an emergency up to 35 or 40 amperes as a maximum.

It does not come within the province of this department to recommend any particular make of moving picture machine. It is for you to determine which machine will suit your purposes, but we should imagine that you would require a professional machine such as Power's No. 5 or an Edison Exhibition machine or a Motiograph No. 2, all of which are light projectors for traveling purposes.

Calcium gas outfit costs about $35 for the machine to make the gas, and from five dollars to ten dollars for the burner and it costs between one dollar and $1.25 per hour to cover the charges for the chemicals and we do not recommend this form of lighting for your purpose unless absolutely necessary.

The later type incandescent lamps made by the General Electric and Westinghouse companies for projection are very efficient and I should believe quite satisfactory for your purpose, but these lamps are extremely delicate to voltage fluctuations and I would under no consideration recommend their use with a gasoline engine driven outfit, as you could provide in connection with your boat engine. The cost of the lamp is about five dollars and it lasts 500 hours under normal operating conditions. If the voltage goes up even a small amount, maybe 5 per cent the life of the lamp will be shortened considerably. Taking your proposition as a whole, I recommend the regular carbon arc for your purpose as it is more flexible and stands more abuse such as a road equipment of your kind is subjected to.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not provide yourself with a small rheostat or resistance coil, made up from about two of the regular 10-inch long spiral coils as used for instance in an old Power's rheostat, connecting the two coils in series with your Mercury Arc Rectifier, and then put a switch across the coils so that when you close the switch, the current goes from the rectifier to the arc as it now does; but when you open the switch, which can be of the single pole type, the current will go through the resistance coil. This arrangement can be put into operation instantly and can be cut out instantly, giving you perfect control. If you want further reduction, add another coil in series. The coils which I refer to are the ones used in the old style Power's No. 5 rheostat.

The new motion picture theatre at the corner of Ninth and A streets, Chattanooga, is fast nearing completion. It is hoped to have the theatre completed in a short time.

STERN INCORPORATES UNDER LAWS OF PENNSYLVANIA—WILL BRING OUT NEW PROJECTION MACHINE

THE Stern Manufacturing Company has just been incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, becoming the Stern Mfg. Co., Inc. The company, of which Samuel Stern is president, has recently moved from 109 North Tenth street, Philadelphia, to much larger quarters at 1038 Race street, on the edge of Film Row. The company is capitalized at $50,000, the incorporators being Samuel Stern, Bertha Stern and Martha L. Fredericks, all of Philadelphia. The new building has four times the floor space of the old, occupying two stories, with a floor space of 18,000 feet.

Mr. Stern has put in new machinery, which will be used principally in the manufacture of a new projection machine, the Stern projector, which will be shortly placed on the market. The salient points in this projector have been worked out by Samuel Stern himself, who has had the projector patented. May 15 will see the machine ready. Already there have been inquiries from the International Film Traders of London, England, desiring the British agency for the projector. A New Zealand representative has also been considering the machine.

The advantage of the Stern projector over those already on the market is said to be its extreme simplicity. It is a covered machine, all gears being encased. All shafts run on ball bearings. The parts have been diminished to simplify repairs. The projector will cost in the neighborhood of $200, and there will be an unrestricted sale to all dealers. There will be a demonstration of the new Stern projector to the trade in New York in about a week, due notice being given of time and place. Besides the manufacturing end, the company handles a general line of supplies and makes a specialty of repairing all kinds of projectors, additional facilities having just been put in for this very purpose.

OPERATORS IN SYMPATHY WITH MEN WOUNDED AT THE FRONT, CONSIDER THEIR USE AS STRIKE-BREAKERS UNFAIR

THE installation of returned soldiers as operators of motion picture machines, to replace the striking operators in Calgary theatres, is causing considerable agitation in union circles throughout western Canada, and ways and means are being devised to guard against a general tendency to instruct the veterans in vocational pursuits which will interfere with the unionized trades.

At a recent meeting of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, following the receipt of a report on the matter from the union organization in Calgary, the situation was discussed at some length, and it was finally decided that the matter should be brought to the attention of the executive of the Dominion Labor Congress, with the request that they "at once take up with the Dominion Hospital Commission the necessity of providing against the use of returned soldiers by unscrupulous employers, as strike-breakers."

In Winnipeg, H. Hayes, representing the White Rats Actors' Union, appeared before the city council and stated that subscriptions had been taken up in that city for the purpose of teaching returned soldiers to operate projection machines, and said that these men, when they become competent in this work, will be a menace to organized labor.

It is stated that returned soldiers at the Ogden Convalescent Home in Calgary, conducted by a provincial committee in conjunction with the Military Hospitals Commission, are being taught operating.

Gentlemen:

We have used for the past three years a Wagner Converter at the Arc Theatre and this is the first letter we have written you about our equipment.

It has been used steadily every day, six days a week, and we have never had one minute's trouble with it. We get a brilliant, steady, white light, easy to control and have good success with American made carbons.

The reason for this letter is this: My father Mr. James P. Grimes, owner of the American Steam Laundry, wishes to purchase a direct current generator, to be driven from his steam engine. I have advised him that if he could get a Wagner outfit, he would make no mistake and would reduce trouble and bother to a minimum; so he has asked me to write you. If you can fit him out I would advise that you write him, addressing your letter to the laundry, and he will give you the number of irons, etc., that they use so you can advise them the size generator they should buy.

You have the right to use this letter at any time you may desire to print or show to other exhibitors who may be in the market for a direct current outfit.

I remain

Very truly yours

have been closed or discontinued since January 1, 1915, being unable to comply with the provisions of the law, and many new theatres have been opened in Michigan. We find that the theatre owners are anxious and willing to co-operate with the Bureau in the enforcement of the provisions of the law in most instances.

"They, themselves, realize that a fire or panic in the theatre occurring when all the requirements of the law have not been observed would mean great loss of business and undoubtedly expensive damage suits in the courts. Our records show that but few fires have occurred in the moving picture theatres in the past year. Some of these have caused considerable damage to property but in only one instance has a fire caused loss of life. This was at Hancock, Michigan, where Bernard Ohman, a seventeen-year-old boy, operating the picture machine in violation of the law, was burned to death when the film caught fire. This case was carefully investigated by the Bureau and the owner of the theatre arrested, convicted and fined for employing an operator under eighteen years of age.

"We understand that the mother of young Ohman also obtained a settlement of $1,000 for her boy's death. In nearly every instance where a fire has occured in a theatre its origin can be traced directly to carelessness of the operator, and in most cases such fires have originated in the booths. Too much cannot be said in favor of the enforcement of the Michigan Moving Picture law. It was enacted by the Legislature as a safety measure and time and again have fires in the fire-proof booths demonstrated that the law is just what the Legislature intended it should be, a law for the protection and safety of the public."

MILWAUKEE IS CONFRONTED WITH LAW RESTRICTING THEATRE BUILDING; PROBABLY WILL BE DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Milwaukee, May 5.

AN ordinance which is meeting considerable opposition from certain of the progressive members of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Association and one which they claim will in the long run prove a decided hindrance to the business and put the theater owners, especially those downtown, totally at the mercy of their landlords, has been introduced in the common council. This ordinance, which was said to have been introduced at the request of Charles Phillipps of the local association, restricts the number of the theaters in Milwaukee to seventy-five and prohibits the erection of any more in the downtown district or any place else in the city with the exception of certain very undesirable spots.

This ordinance, however, allows a person now owning a theater to construct one at any time within two hundred feet of his present building, provided he relinquishes his present place of business.

Though it is said that the city attorney's office will hold the ordinance unconstitutional as it now stands, it is expected that a hard fight will be made against any ordinance to restrict theatre building. All of the downtown theatres are leased from the big realty owners in this city and quite a number of leases will have to be renewed within the next few years.

Chemicals Used in Developing Plates and Films

Question Has Become an Absorbing One in the Last Two Years—Constituency of the Better Known Reagents Used in Developing Will Be Explained in These Columns, Together with the Prominent Characteristics of Those Better Known in the Motion Picture Industry

THE question of photographic developing agents has become such an absorbing one, during the past two years, that some information on the subject may not be amiss in this article, which will of necessity be continued in our next issue. The chemical constituency of the better known reagents used in developing plates and films will be given, together with the prominent characteristics of those better known in the motion picture industry.

This material is essentially technical in nature and we believe could be the means of inducing experiments to be made (by those with experience in organic chemistry) tending towards the duplication in this country of some of the compounds described. Up to the present very few substitutes for the now scarce imported developers have been offered which have any marked degree of efficiency or chemical stability as compared with the imported photographic chemicals formerly universally used.

It is a certainty that the colleges of the United States are yearly turning out many graduates well versed in organic chemistry. Many of these will find their way into the dye or aniline works and there lies the great chance for research and experimentation in producing compounds similar in nature to those of which this article will be descriptive.

The writer, not being an organic chemist, cannot claim to be the originator of much which is herein revealed, but in addition to much actual work in photographic developing which has tended toward verification of the characteristics of the developers described, he gives credit for the working out of the chemical formulæ involved to Dr. M. Andresen of the "Agfa" Co. of Berlin, whose book "The Latent Image" and whose treatise on "Photographic Developers" are documents of absorbing interest, and also to another celebrated German photographic worker, Eder. A study of "Eder's Yearbook," covering many issues, has also yielded much valuable information on the subject in hand. We can commend the above mentioned books to all serious workers in the field of motion photography, and to our friends the amateurs in cinematographic work, we would say that we consider that the open publication of these formulæ gives them equal chance with professionals to embrace the details of a timely and important subject.

Photographic Reagents Are Organic Compounds

As all photographic developing reagents in present day use are substantially organic compounds, our first steps will be to determine the constituents which impart the development property to these compounds. These may be roughly divided into two groups —the Amido (NH_2) and the Hydroxyl (OH) groups. It should be here noted that not all of the organic compounds containing these groups are possessed of developing power. As an example we will state that Aniline, the chemical constituency of which is $C_6H_5NH_2$ is not possessed of developing power, nor is the well-known compound Carbolic Acid, which may be expressed by the symbol C_6H_5OH. To be possessed of developing properties our compound must contain two of the NH_2 or OH groups. As an instance, we will take the developer Hydrokinone, familiar to all, of which the chemical composition is expressed by:

$$C_6H_4 \begin{matrix} OH \\ OH \end{matrix}$$

It has been definitely ascertained that the combination of the NH_2 and OH groups are productive of compounds exhibiting developing power and it will no doubt be a matter of surprise to many laboratory chemists to learn that, by reason of this fact, Hydrogen Peroxide expressed by the formula

$$\begin{matrix} O & H \\ O & H \end{matrix}$$

or as more familiarly known H_2O_2 has been shown to act as a developer and likewise the compounds expressed by $$\begin{matrix} O & H \end{matrix} \qquad \begin{matrix} N & H_2 \end{matrix}$$ and $$\begin{matrix} N & H_2 \end{matrix} \qquad \begin{matrix} N & H_2 \end{matrix}$$ are also possessed of the ability to develop. These compounds although representing the active principle of alkaline developers in a free state have no significance in the work of practical development. In order that workable developers of useful and practical nature may be procured it is necessary to supply in addition to what we will call the "active pairs of groups" which are expressed by:

$$\begin{matrix} O & H \\ O & H \end{matrix} \qquad \begin{matrix} N & H_2 \\ N & H_2 \end{matrix} \qquad \begin{matrix} N & H_2 \\ O & H \end{matrix}$$

a base, which will consist of a hydrocarbon of the aromatic series. As instances of aromatic hydrocarbons we will cite two, Napthalene, expressed by the symbol $C_{10}H_8$, and Benzole, the formula of which is C_6H_6.

Having replaced at least two atoms of Hydrogen in these hydrocarbons with two active groups such as O H or $N H_2$, we will have secured developing compounds such as are known in present day photographic practice. The fundamentals of the chemical construction of developing reagents having now been set forth, we will pass to the individual consideration of the chemical composition and individual characteristics of the best known developers, taking them up in the order in which they were introduced into photographic practice.

Developing Compounds Put Up to Keep

Developing compounds are put out by the various chemical concerns manufacturing the same in such form that they will keep without alteration or deterioration for as great a length of time as possible. Such of these developers as contain one or more of the NH_2 groups are sold in the form of salts which are formed by the combination of the organic bases with inorganic acids, the acids in most instances being either hydrochloric acid HCL or sulphuric acid H_2SO_4. It will be well to state here that a plain solution of an organic developer in water is not productive of developing powers, but the addition of sodium sulphite brings out the developing property to some extent. For most developers, however, sodium or potassium carbonate or a caustic alkali must also be added to secure rapidity of action or, in other words, the utmost power of the developer.

With all of the foregoing well in mind we will pass to the consideration of the specific developers.

developer and did much to make permanent the popularity of the dry-plate. In the best of modern practice Pyro is generally used in connection with an alkaline carbonate either of sodium or potassium.

Relative to the characteristics of Pyro it is a clean working developer, producing no chemical fog and it yields very satisfactory gradations. For the high class rendering of shadow detail, however, Pyro will be found inferior to reagents containing the NH_2 group, such as Metol, Amidol, or Rodinol.

Bromide of Potassium has a ready and energetic effect in controlling or restraining the action of a Pyro developing solution and a 10 per cent solution of Bromide is about the correct strength to use.

While Pyro is very soluble in water, making it easy to prepare normal solutions or strong stock solutions, its keeping properties when mixed are very poor, the sodium quickly oxidizing when exposed to the air and changing to a deep brown in color. This discoloration of Pyro solutions results in a yellowish color being imparted to the gelatine of films and plates developed in same, and this disadvantage, combined with its rapid deterioration, are the principle causes of Pyro being abandoned for some of the more modern organic compounds shortly to be described.

For underexposed negatives Pyro mixed with Sodium Sulphite, and Alkaline carbonate and diluted with water will be found most effective, while for overexposes adequate results are had by the addition of Bromide and reduction of the amount of alkali.

A very popular developer, even at the present day, with many discriminating photographers is a Pyro Metol developer. This is generally prepared with the addition to the two mentioned reagents of Potassium Metabisulphite, Bromide, and Sodium Carbonate and greatly excels a straight Pyro developer for softness of the images and good rendition of shadow detail.

EASTMAN ISSUES BOOK ON TINTING, TONING AND COMBINED TONING AND TINTING OF MOTION PICTURES

THE Eastman Kodak Company of Rochester, N. Y., has issued a book embracing the subject of tinting, toning and the combined toning and tinting of motion picture positive film, which should be a valuable acquisition to all laboratory superintendents and those who have to deal with the coloring and treatment of positives after development.

This book has been prepared by the Eastman Research Laboratory in conjunction with the Cine Film Division of the Kodak company and is an exhaustive treatise on the toning, tinting and duo-coloring of cinematographic positives. The first part of the book gives formulae for the preparation, use and re-enforcement of the various solutions used in this kind of work.

The second part of the book, which is a feature of tremendous importance, consists of blank pages with rectangular holes cut through the leaves. In these open spaces are inserted specimens of positive film tinted and toned to every hue and color for which a demand may arise from picture producers. The particular value of these pages of film specimens is in the fact that next to each colored section of film displayed is a piece of the same positive in black and white, showing the correct density to which the film should be printed or developed for treatment with the various individual toning or tinting baths.

These black and white film specimens showing correct density are of distinct value to the laboratory or color man as it is well known that some of the toning baths also intensify the print to some extent by their action, and in tinting film, positives of varying density are also required, due to the fact that some tinting dyes are of greater saturation than others.

This new book, which is handsomely bound in cloth with gilt lettering can be obtained from the Eastman company for $2.50, which, considering the authenticity of the formulae it contains and the care required in preparing the film specimens included, seems to be a very moderate price and the book should find its way into all laboratories in a short time.

Southern Musical Director Makes Plea for Orchestra

His Experience Shows the Possibility of Synchronizing Picture and the Music Without a Conductor—No Trouble in Making Changes—Many Times He Used Eight or Sixteen Bars of a Number, and Probably That an Allegro, with the Changes Coming Very Fast

THE following letter has been received from Bert Hollowell, musical director of the Southern Amusement Company, Greensboro, N. C.:

"I read with much interest the article in the NEWS of May 6, and am taking the liberty of giving my views on the argument Miss Gegitz puts forward. First, allow me to say that I have been in the picture business for the past five years in the capacity of musical director for various companies, and I have my first one-man orchestra to hear that even resembled music. I may be prejudiced against the one-man orchestra, but if I am I want to assure you I have good cause.

"The statement that it was not possible to play a picture with an orchestra unless there was a conductor, I think is saying a great deal. I have made the synchronizing of picture and music a study ever since I have been in this branch of the business, and I think I can say, without it sounding boastful, that I have been very successful; and allow me to say that I see that every situation is taken care of, and that the atmosphere of the picture is upheld throughout.

"I have experienced no trouble in making changes, and a great many times I use only eight or sixteen bars of a number, and probably that an allegro, and the changes come very fast.

"I use a flash system—a system by which I put out the orchestra lights for a second, first flash as a warning that a change is close, and second flash, segue. I might add here that I have seven men in the orchestra of this house, and five in the rest of the houses.

"A leader who is forced to play and direct must be familiar with the picture, look at it before he attempts to play it, then lay out a program to fit the notes he has made. He must have a very large library of music, and know the style and tempo of every number. Of course this will not come in a day, but with a little indulgence and a great deal of thought it will in time come as a matter of course.

"When a number is in the program that does not fit, it will jar terribly, and after a little, these things will be seen, even while one is putting out a program.

"I want to add that I read, with much pleasure, the articles you write—let the good work continue.

"Very truly yours,

"BERT HOLLOWELL."

The above letter should be of great interest to our readers as it comes from an orchestra leader who has "delivered the goods" in picture playing. Mr. Hollowell is general musical director of the Southern Amusement Company, which controls a chain of picture theatres in the South. Had I not incidentally heard of Mr. Hollowell and his work before, the tone of his letter would convince me that he has made a thorough study of picture playing with a view of getting personal results rather than to accumulate knowledge wherewith to criticise others.

Mr. Hollowell speaks the truth when he says it is no difficult matter to play pictures properly with an orchestra when some prior preparation has been made for doing this. My personal experiences have taught me that in ninety per cent. of all instances where orchestral music has proven a dismal failure in picture playing, the difficulty was the lack of interest in the work shown by the leader or conductor and not the lack of musical knowledge or the synchronizing of music to pictures.

I want to call my readers' special attention to what Mr. Hollowell says regarding a library of music for the proper playing of pictures. There are two things which are very important in picture playing. The first: That one be endowed with a good bit of "stick-a-tiveness" which, together with some little indulgence, will give birth to a picture intelligence which is very necessary before one can successfully set up a musical program so that it can be played with proper synchronization to picture screen action.

To accomplish this you must not only be familiar with musical theory, such as harmony and counterpoint, but you must be familiar with a very extensive repertoire of music. When you are looking at the picture there must immediately flash on your mind some musical composition with which you are thoroughly familiar as appropriate to playing at such a certain point. These different numbers become a basis from which you should accumulate a large library of music, classing many numbers under the same heading, always using that number with which you are most familiar as a basis and using other similar numbers for creating musical variety.

In all instances the competent and successful orchestral picture theatre leader is one who has a very large and extensive library of music. Therefore, when a musician enters the field of picture music he should know beforehand that unless he is willing to accumulate a library of music and make a thorough study of temperamental music and a never-ceasing musical research he cannot hope to ever be successful. This is proven by the fact that many exhibitors throughout the country make it a habit to spend a certain amount weekly for music. I have consequently often wondered why certain musical publishers should let their musical publications be "hodge-podged" together by a lithographical process which has been far from profitable to them, has cheapened their publications, which tends to rob the composers of royalties, blasphemes the musician who tries to play them, and makes nervous wrecks of the audiences who have to listen to them, when in reality they should have opened a campaign to see that each and every one of their appropriate musical publications for picture playing should have been sold at one hundred cents on the dollar to every picture theatre, which makes music a feature, sending with each number some explanation as to the number's picture value.

There is one truth in music and the picture that the producer, musician and exhibitor should never forget, namely, that the patrons of motion picture theatres demand that they be entertained, not musically mystified, and that the future success of the motion picture theatre depends entirely upon the relaxing qualities of its entertainment. This does not mean that we cannot look forward to great musical results in picture theatres, but we can only hope that such attainments be financially successful when they amuse and entertain.

CINEMA CONCERTS, COMBINATION OF MUSIC AND PICTURES, ARE THE ATTRACTIONS AT ORCHESTRA HALL, CHICAGO

ORCHESTRA HALL, Chicago, opened on Saturday, May 6. Cinema Concerts is the title of the entertainments to be given, which will be a combination of pictures and music. The feature picture selected for the opening week is the Vitagraph drama "The Law Decides." Jenny Dufau of the Chicago Grand Opera Company will be the first week's soloist. Photo-plays, comedy and novelty pictures will form the cinema part of the performance and a full orchestra of Chicago Symphony players under the direction of Arthur Dunham will supply the music.

Soloists of prominence in the musical world are to be heard during the season. The open booking plan will be maintained, as will also a weekly change of program. The admission will be twenty-five cents, fifty cents and seventy-five cents. H. W. Hill is managing directors of the performances, which are given under the general management of Wessels and Voegeli.

MOELLER ORGAN IN LOEW'S COLUMBIA, WASHINGTON, D. C., PLEASED PATRONS

LOEW'S Columbia theatre, Washington, D. C., has installed an organ which has found immediate favor with its patrons. It is a Moeller and Company instrument, of Hagerstown, Md., with two manuals of the duplex system. It is controlled by electric power with the console extended into the orchestra, the pipes being neatly hidden behind the screen. The organ possesses many attachments for making beautiful individual and combined effects, such as the chimes, harp and vox humanus. The strings and reeds are especially artistic in their sub and super effects. The great variety of combinations possible on this instrument makes it especially well adapted to the accompanying of the pictures.

Lawrence Beatus, manager of Loew's Columbia, is to be congratulated on being able to secure the services of Arthur Mayo as organist, for Mr. Mayo is an artist on this instrument and is known from coast to coast as a musician of the highest standard. He is accompanist for the Rubinstein Club of Washington, D. C., the largest women's choral organization south of Philadelphia, and he is associated with other musical societies as well as having a good class of piano and organ pupils.

VIOLIN TRIO CONTEST SCHEDULED FOR RIALTO TO DETERMINE ABILITY OF ORCHESTRA PERSONNEL

THE big symphony orchestra at the Rialto theatre, New York City, has brought about so much discussion along the "Great White Way" that in order to settle a bet as to the ability of the personnel as soloists Managing Director S. L. Rothapfel has arranged to present a novelty in his program by way of a demonstration. It consists of a trio for the violin composed by A. Bachman, a violist of the organization. It will be played by the latter, S. Fiddelman, first concert master, and H. Leavy, second concert master.

Another novelty promised for the near future is a musical description of the European conflict in the form of an international pot pouri arranged by Mr. Rothapfel and Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rialto orchestra.

CARR AND SCHAD ADD PALACE, READING, PA., TO THEIR THEATRE CHAIN

CARR AND SCHAD, INC., have purchased the Palace theatre, Reading, Pa., and have added it to their chain of picture houses, which includes the Princess, the Empire, the Victor and a new house now under construction.

The Palace will be thoroughly remodeled, redecorated and enlarged to 1,200 capacity. The theatre has an ideal location, in the heart of the Reading business district, and will be one of the most beautiful in Pennsylvania, it is announced, when the alterations are completed.

24. Desc. (Hy.-Path.) XXX	"Romance of a Rose" (W. Jacobs)
25. Desc. (Plaintive) XXX	"Longing" (M. Witmark)	"There is no danger," etc.
26. Waltz Lento (Leg.) X	"Druid's Prayer" (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	To end.

Note:—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "———" it means that the Cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes. When the time of each 1,000-foot of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Notes:—During Nos. 3 and 21 telephone bell imitations can be appropriately used. All other effects are superfluous and cannot assist the picture.

Music Notes:—This picture affords excellent opportunities for a program of musical contrast, which makes possible the better musical illustration of pathos. No. 1 should be a concert waltz with a short andante introduction. Nos. 2, 4, 5, 7, 11, 14, 22 and 24 are all slow numbers and indicate the points where pathetic appeals should be obtained. Nos. 3, 10 and 21 are all light 4/4 movements, commonly known as intermezzos. No. 6 must be a waltz played legato. No. 9 must be a concert waltz with a slow introduction having a pathetic appeal. No. 12 must be a very lively 2/4 Russian dance. Many of these are published by E. Ascher, 1155 Broadway, New York City. Nos. 13 and 16 are 2/4 Trots as are used for dancing. Do not use popular song numbers. No. 17 should be a very light waltz, commonly used for ballet dancing. No. 25 should be a very slow number in minor key, having a positive plaintive appeal. No. 26 a slow waltz lento movement, played legato and in major key.

Building and Furnishings

SYMBOLIC GRECIAN FIGURES REPRESENTING MUSIC AND DRAMA EXTERIOR DECORATIVE FEATURES OF CIRCLE THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS

THE construction work on the Circle theatre, in Monument place, Indianapolis, which is being built at a cost of more than $200,000, and will have a seating capacity of more than 3,000 persons, has advanced to the point where the magnitude of this photoplay house can be seen, and it will soon develop to the point where an idea of its rich decorative effects will be revealed.

Very rapid work has been made in the erection of this building, in which a million bricks have been placed and more than 600,000 pounds of structural steel have been set up.

The front of the building is approaching completion, the white glazed tile now being set, and in a few days the front will be ready for one of the most artistic decorative effects to be seen on a building in Indianapolis. It will be made up of a pediment and two friezes of symbolic Grecian figures, representing music, the drama and festivity. The pediment, which will span the space above the entrance to the theatre, contains fourteen figures of Grecian musicians and dancing girls, and there are eighteen similar figures in the frieze. These figures are in glazed terra cotta. The decorative effect was designed by Rubush and Hunter, architects, who planned the theatre.

A feature of the construction work is a steel girder that is said to be the largest of its kind in an Indianapolis building. It weighs 40,000 pounds, is twelve feet high and ninety-five feet long, and it, as was all the steel work, was made in Indianapolis. The big girder carries the entire front of the balcony and so supports the structure that there will be no pillars on the first floor to obstruct the view from any seat.

DOMINION THEATRE COMPANY, OPERATING HOUSES IN VANCOUVER, VICTORIA, AND NANAIMO, B. C., GETS CONTROL OF VICTORIA

J. R. MUIR, general manager of the Dominion Theatre Company, controlling the Dominion theatres in Vancouver, Victoria and Nanaimo, B. C., has just completed arrangements with the Victoria Opera House Company, by which the former company assumes control of the Royal Victoria theatre in Victoria, the largest house in the city, having a seating capacity of about 1,600. This theatre is one of the finest in western Canada presenting motion picture programs, having been completed only two years ago, and represents an investment of about $450,000.

The Dominion Company, as lessee, takes charge of the house on May 1, and although up to the present time no arrangements have been made for the programs to be shown, Paramount subjects will probably be used from time to time, as the company controls the Paramount first run rights in the three cities in which they operate, and whenever one of the present houses uses a picture for an entire week, as sometimes happens, a Paramount would be available for the Royal Victoria. Clifford Denham will continue as manager.

W. P. Nichols, managing director of the National Amusement Company, will transfer the Triangle program to the Columbia theatre when his company's lease on the Royal Victoria expires.

COLONIAL, SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., IS SMALL THEATRE WITH LARGE PATRONAGE

AMONG the small but successful houses showing pictures in the upper part of New York State is the Colonial in Saranac Lake. J. H. Farrington, owner and manager, has succeeded in making it an attractive theatre, known in that section for its select patronage.

The Colonial seats five hundred; 350 chairs are in the orchestra. The music is furnished by a four-piece orchestra—piano, violin, cello and drum.

DETAIL OF THE FRIEZE ON THE CIRCLE THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS

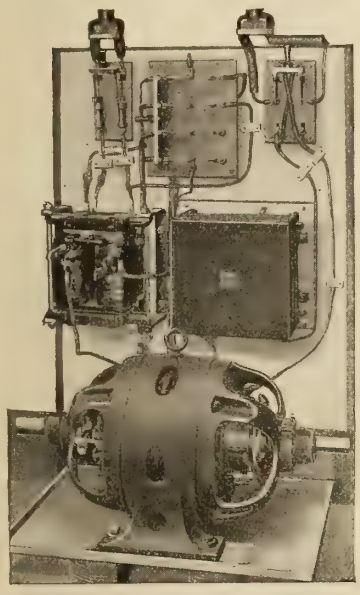
A Power's 6-A machine and a Ft. Wayne generator are part of the operating equipment. The prices for the matinees are five and ten cents. At the evening performances Mr. Farrington charges ten and fifteen cents and manages to pack his house regardless of the weather.

Semi-direct lighting has been installed. The chairs are "roomy" and comfortable, with sufficient space between them to prevent crowding of the patrons. Adequate heating arrangements make the Colonial a cosy place in the severe winter weather prevalent in that part of the country.

THE WAGNER SINGLE-PHASE CONVERTER IS ECONOMICAL AND EFFICIENT

THE use of direct current in connection with moving picture projection, and its advantages over alternating current, are too well known to require discussion here. Some time ago, the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Company of St. Louis set about designing an equipment that would be not only economical, efficient and, like all other Wagner apparatus, of the highest quality, but likewise compact, simple and easy to manipulate.

As a result of their experience and study, coupled with months of experimenting, they placed on the market, the Wagner Single-Phase Converter.



The Wagner Converter, on account of the quality and pure color of the light that can be obtained from this current source, has been popularly named "The White Light Converter." It includes: first, the converter itself; second, a transformer for changing the current from the line voltage to the proper voltage for the converter; third, a double throw starting switch; fourth, a ballast resistance introduced between the converter and the arc. The White Light Converter is now made for polyphase as well as single-phase circuits.

In order to get the proper conception of the White Light Converter, one can imagine a motor-generator set, so simplified that it is reduced to one machine having only one armature, one set of windings, fields, one shaft and only two bearings. The efficiency of an ordinary motor-generator set is equal to the product of the efficiency of the motor times the efficiency of the generator, while a converter with only one set of losses is in itself much more efficient.

The use of a transformer with converter equipment has a number of advantages, among them being that should the line supply of voltage be changed, or should the equipment be moved into a district where the voltage is different, it would not be required to change the entire equipment. It would only be necessary to secure a transformer for the required voltage. Again, regardless of how high or seemingly dangerous the line voltage might be, when it enters the theatre this transformer reduces it to a current of approximately fifty volts before it enters the converter, and it is therefore perfectly safe to clean, oil or work around the converter even when it is in operation.

The Wagner Company is one of the largest electrical manufacturing companies in the United States. It is so well known that it is hardly necessary here to introduce the company or its products.

attractions. The theatre, which is to have a seating capacity of about 3,000, is to be ready for occupancy by the end of the present year.

CANADA

Reg Chalick, for some time the manager of the Empire theatre, Cochrane, Ont., has resigned to go with the Canadian Overseas forces. Mr. Chalick is a well-known theatre man, and extremely popular.

McGregor, Man., has been the centre of very serious floods during the last few weeks. This condition has greatly upset business and resulted in some very serious losses in both property and material. The Allies theatre, of the town, has been almost cut off from communication.

A new theatre has been opened in Lanark, Ont., by the Ball brothers, two well-known young men, who have been for some time conducting the Royal theatre, in Perth, Ont. The new house is called the Lanark Royal, and if Messrs. Ball repeat their performance in Perth, the venture will undoubtedly be a splendid success.

It is rumored that there will be a moving picture circuit formed to include the towns of Valleyfield, Ormstown and Saint Martin, which allow the playing of the pictures about two nights in each place. At present there are no amusement facilities in any of these towns, and such an arrangement would be a great improvement. Martineau Brothers, of Valleyfield, may possibly interest themselves in the project.

It is learned on good authority that the Dufferin theatre, in Orangeville, Ont., operated by Mr. Tyrell, will be closed during the summer months.

GEORGIA

The Grand theatre, Atlanta, until recently owned by the Jake Wells Company, is now being operated under the management of O. P. Hall, formerly connected with William Fox's Atlanta exchange. The Grand is a beautiful theatre, well equipped and well-located, but has been a steady loser during the last few months. Mr. Hall announces that he will change the policy of the theatre completely and that only film productions of the highest order will be presented.

The Piedmont theatre, Atlanta's newest, largest and most elaborate house, is doing splendid business under the management of Ralph de Bruler. The V-L-S-E features are being well received.

Atlanta film folk regret that Alpha Fowler, head of the Fowler Amusement Company, has given up the management of the Alpha theatre, a motion picture theatre of much magnetism. Mr. Fowler sold his house outright to Sig Samuels, well known in Southern theatrical circles. It is rumored that the retiring manager will become connected with another Atlanta film house in the near future.

A fireproof theatre is under construction at Douglas, to be opened in the near future. John J. Moyland is building a picture house to be known as the New Strand, at Savannah. The house will have a five hundred seating capacity. Manager Murray of the Alamo No. 2, at Atlanta, will soon open the new 1,000 seat Criterion theatre at Atlanta. The Strand will soon be opened by J. H. Askew at Savannah.

O. C. Lamb has taken over the management of the Amuzu and Bonita theatres at Rome. Edgar Baxter, of Orangeburg, manager of the Dreamland, has bought out the opposition and taken charge. Harry Goldberg, who has been in charge of the World Film Corporation exchange at Atlanta, has resigned to accept a prominent position with the new Criterion theatre, now being constructed on Peachtree street in that city.

ILLINOIS

D. M. Primm and B. E. Doak have just purchased the Grand motion picture theatre at Springfield, from Kunz Brothers. Primm is also owner of the Bon Film Company, and he proposes to show a weekly news picture of local events with the General Film releases.

Business men of Medora have started showing free motion pictures on Saturday nights. They plan to keep up this attraction during the coming summer months. Work of improving the Grand motion picture theatre at Sterling has commenced. The improvements include the addition of a second floor.

The Grand theatre at Rock Falls was recently damaged by fire. The blaze was discovered at night after the show closed but was quickly extinguished. Manager Marooney had workmen on the job early next morning and was ready for business at the usual hour.

INDIANA

Edward G. Sourbier, Indianapolis, treasurer of Marion county, and owner of a chain of motion picture houses in Indianapolis, has bought the Bijou theatre, 130 East Washington street, one of the oldest picture houses in Indianapolis. Mr. Sourbier took over the theatre on May 1. It is to be improved and considerable new equipment will be installed. The place was bought from Charles Cook and Walter G. Bowlby, who have operated it under a partnership arrangement for several years. The theatre was opened eleven years ago when nickelodeons first attracted public attention.

The management of the Alhambra theatre, Shelbyville, has made a change in the house decorations of the theatre, which adds greatly to its beauty. The entire lighting system has been altered and soft silk shades installed.

KANSAS

The New Gem theatre, Topeka, just completed and equipped with all the latest conveniences, has opened, under the proprietorship and management of C. A. McGuigan. The Strand theatre, built for Herbert Thatcher, in Salina, opened the week of May 8. Frank Garrety, proprietor of the Novelty theatre, Winfield, has changed his house policy, and instead of program is now running features.

LOUISIANA

B. L. Overston, who is operating picture shows at Lenzburg, Crichton and Couchatta, has also taken over the Grand theatre at Minden. Z. T. Studstilli, manager of the Pickford theatre at Andalusia, has taken over the management of the Palace theatre, at Opp. The Elton is the name of a new moving picture theatre at Talladega. T. E. Ware is the new manager.

MASSACHUSETTS

The Princess theatre at Marlboro, Henry Burke, manager, has been opened after being dark two weeks for repairs. Azro Mason, of the Grand theatre, Chicopee Falls, has plans for his new theatre.

MICHIGAN

The Vaudette theatre, Three Rivers, owned by Starr Wilson, of Constantine, and formerly of Three Rivers, has been bought by George Pierce, of Grand Rapids. Mr. Pierce has been in moving picture business for ten years and now operates theatres in Grand Rapids and Flint. Mr. Pierce will manage the theatre himself and expects to make some much needed improvements within a short time.

The contract for the fireproof block to be erected for John L. A. Galster, on Howard Street, Petosky, has been awarded to Feather and Wingate, the contract price being $21,648. The new block will be fifty feet wide, one hundred feet long and two full stories high. The north half will be a motion picture theatre and the south half a store.

The Centerville Theatre Company, of Centerville, has been capitalized for $5,000, and will erect a motion picture theatre there.

Earl Hennessy is now assistant manager of the Majestic theatre, Detroit. He was formerly manager of the Duplex theatre, and succeeds R. Von der Goltz.

Joe Wood has taken the management of the Garden theatre, Detroit. He was formerly manager of the Empress, one of the first moving picture theatres in the city. L. H. Gardner succeeds him as manager at the Empress.

C. W. Deibel leased the Avenue theatre, Detroit, for eight days, starting April 30, and showed Charlie Chaplin in a burlesque on "Carmen." Prices were twenty-five cents and business was tremendous.

Architect Christian W. Brand is preparing plans for a theatre seating 1,000 to be erected on the corner of Mack and Holcomb avenue, Detroit, for the Delta Amusement Company.

MISSOURI

The Princess theatre, Ninth and Prospect streets, Kansas City, has been sold by Leo Spaulding to J. R. Dennison, who took over the management on May 3.

Changes in the interior of the Blake theatre, Webb City, have been commenced by Manager Irving L. Davis, at the direction of the owner, E. S. Brigham, of Kansas City, which will increase the seating capacity to 1,500 and make it possible to give only picture and vaudeville shows. The stage will be cut away so as to make room for additional boxes, while more seats will be installed in the gallery.

Forrest Kerrens, who sold his theatre at Butler last fall, has bought from C. A. Rohrer the Orpheum in Marshall. Mr. Kerrens is a successful exhibitor, and has fine prospects at Marshall.

A theatre is being erected at 214 North Broadway, St. Louis, by George Angelich, owner of the Rainbow, farther south on Broadway. The new house is on a site formerly occupied by a men's furnishing house, and is in a splendid location for business. The theatre will open about June 1 and will have a seating capacity of nine hundred.

The Woodland airdome, at Morganford road and Gravois avenue, St. Louis, opened for the hot weather season on May 4, with an all picture program.

OKLAHOMA

A $40,000 opera house is to be built at Okmulgee in the near future, if present plans are realized.

OHIO

A permit has been issued to the Liberty Theatre Company for the construction of fireproof brick and concrete moving picture theatre at 832-34 Liberty street, Cincinnati. The cost of the theatre will be approximately $20,000.

PENNSYLVANIA

George M. Krupa, proprietor of the Hippodrome theatre, of Lancaster, is building another theatre in that place. Ground for the new structure, to be known as the Hamilton, has just been broken. The house will be finished by autumn. It will occupy space of 134 by 65 feet, and will seat 1,200. An expensive organ will be one of the attractions.

T. Mazer has just been appointed manager of the Walton theatre. The house, accommodating five hundred, is owned by the Walton Amusement Company and is situated at 733 East Chelten avenue, Germantown.

TENNESSEE

J. M. Colvin and Walter Howard, of Rockwood, have leased the Cash Bazaar Building at that place for the purpose of operating therein a modern motion picture theatre. Extensive improvements will be made on the building at a cost of several thousand dollars. A large stage will be erected and a seating capacity of five hundred will be arranged for. The Lyric at Rockwood will be discontinued, and all the property of that theatre transferred to the new film house.

TEXAS

James A. Holton, manager of the Port Arthur Amusement company, operating the Pearce and Peoples theatres at Port Arthur, is now sole owner of the two picture houses, having recently acquired the forty per cent. of stock held by Dan A. Williams, former treasurer of the company. Mr. Holton is figuring on some extensive improvements within the next year. The consideration of the deal was not made public.

P. C. Crown, of Houston, has taken over the Queen theatre at Brownsville and the Opera House at Childress. Mayor G. C. Northcutt has secured the Star theatre at Mineola. M. C. Rouse is building a picture theatre at Spur. Gwynn and Byar are building a theatre at Terrell. G. N. Mattison is completing a picture house at Pittsburg, for negroes exclusively. E. G. Welch has purchased the Star theatre at Winnsboro from J. E. Patrick.

James A. Athas has sold his "Candy Jim's" theatre at Taylor and purchased the Crazy theatre at Mineral Wells. J. C. Stevens has purchased the Lyric theatre at Austin from Costley and Smith. Mr. Stevens will run an all feature program exclusively. J. Musselman, John Shively and Manager McKee are opening new picture houses at Paris, to replace the theatres burned in the recent big fire at that place. William Wilder and Joseph Hulshizer have purchased the Newport theatre at Dallas.

Dorbandt brothers are remodeling their Dixie theatre at Athens, adding another story and balcony. Charley St. Clair will open his airdome at Corsicana soon, and will show pictures in connection with road troupes. The Jefferson theatre at Celeste has been renamed the Lawrence. F. A. McConicho has purchased the Elk theatre at Marshall from the Powell Moore Amusement Company.

H. C. Kyle has leased the Queen theatre at Dallas from William Batsell. J. C. Chatmas has purchased the Orpheum theatre at Marlin from C. P. Lewis. G. K. Jorgenson is building a theatre at Galveston, to be known as the New Crystal Palace. It will cost about $6,000.

WISCONSIN

Construction on the Palace theatre building, Antigo, has commenced. This will contain stores besides the motion picture theatre.

C. L. Lesser has completed plans and is taking bids for a motion picture theatre to be erected on Greenfield avenue, above Fifty-fourth street, Milwaukee. The theatre will cost approximately $8,000.

Friedman's Palace theatre, Monument Square, Racine, has been opened. Among the equipment is a Hope-Jones Unit orchestra and a Minusa screen. Features are the piece de resistance of the program.

Architect John Menge will take figures soon for the erection of a moving picture theatre on Thirty-eighth and Vliet streets, Milwaukee. The theatre is to be of brick construction, with wooden trusses, one story and part basement, 43 by 120 feet, concrete foundation, having a seating capacity of 750, steam heating, tile and terrazzo flooring, composition tar and gravel roofing, art glass, ornamental stucco, five ventilators, one electric fan, windows. The theatre when completed will have cost about $15,000.

At Edgerton a theatre and lodge hall will be erected for H. E. Peters. F. H. Kemp, of Beloit, is the architect, and is taking figures. The building will be brick on hollow tile, two stories and basement, 44 by 110 feet, stone trimming, tile flooring, plumbing, steam heating, fan ventilating, composition roofing, metal ceiling, asbestos curtain. The theatre when finished will seat five hundred. The second floor will be leased by the Knights of Pythias.

"THE WOMAN WHO DARED"
A gripping story of European intrique by
C.N. & A.M. WILLIAMSON
ARRANGEMENT WITH ALICE KAUSER

¶ "THE WOMAN WHO DARED" is a story of a beautiful woman's Soul, torn between Love of Country, a Defense of Her Honor and the Love of a Man, and showing how fearless a woman can be when a big issue is at stake, and demonstrating fully that a pretty woman is perfectly capable of Changing Her Mind. ¶ No story thus far adapted for the screen is as full of Heart-Interest Thrilling Adventure and spine-curdling Fights, with a tremendous Element of Suspense throughout, as is "The Woman Who Dared"; and the story in every way bears out its thrilling title. ¶ It will appeal to, and hold spell-bound alike, men, women and the younger members of the family. It is a clean and uplifting story, and the stirring action is depicted in rich and beautiful settings; with marvelous costuming and lighting effects.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

IN practically every large centre, V. L. S. E. pictures are reviewed by the newspapers in the same manner that legitimate stage productions are treated.

The following excerpt from the "Cleveland Plain Dealer" will illustrate the tremendous publicity which editors are putting behind these pictures of their own initiative and solely on the merits of the productions.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer

By E. Arthur Roberts

> V. L. S. E. Producing Companies are hitting the high spots. Charlie Chaplin's "Carmen" and "The Ne'er Do Well" are two of the big certain money makers of the year, while exhibitors regard "Dollars and the Woman" as the best five-reel feature seen in many months.
> Now Vitagraph rings the bell again with "God's Country and the Woman". This is an eight-reel feature of which we shall have more to say later. The reader can look out for this picture. It is one of the big things of the season. Some of the New York critics hail it as the greatest production of the year. We have seen it and hasten to assure the fans that it is something to look forward to.

If you seek those productions which are accompanied by the power and the prestige of the press, you would do well to book V. L. S. E. offerings regularly.

A $100.00 PICK-UP EVERY MONTH

If you are exhibiting to an average of a thousand people a day, you can add $100 a month to your income—and do it easily.

Here is a money-maker that is as good—thousands of theatre patrons the country over think—as a "feature." It is a feature—with brisk, interesting action, live subjects, laughable cartoon effects, and a lot of entertaining tricks to please the crowd, tied to the most modern motion-picture advertising ideas to please your local business men.

You don't have to be an advertising solicitor to sell this service. It sells itself. Just show a scenario to one of your business friends—show him what the feature is like—have him try it one month—and you've made a friend and customer.

ANIMATED Camel Films ADVERTISING

The most important thing about these films is that the public likes them. They give you a source of increased revenue without drawing the criticism of the crowd. They are not to be classed with slides, because they are a part of the entertainment itself, and spectators seldom walk out when they are being shown.

Camel Films have revolutionized motion picture advertising. They are prepared with the good will of the public in mind—and they represent a kind of advertising that is so valuable that any live business man is a favorable prospect when you present the proposition to him.

Here is the Animated Advertising the people like—the kind that advertisers appreciate. We make the selling of this service easy. We send you complete, understandable scenarios for banks, drug stores, jewelers, etc., and you can soon interest one or more to the point of giving the service a trial.

Add this attraction to your program now: get it for your house before some other exhibitor has skimmed the cream.

Here is good money—easy to get; a service that will grow after you have shown your patrons what it is like.

Write for complete particulars—also ask for booklet "Putting Life In Your Advertising," which tells all about this service.

Essanay Offers You A Varied Program

If you were serving a banquet you would not offer your guests just one huge dish.

No matter how good, nor how much, your banquet would not be a success.

The appetite is surfeited with too much of one thing.

So is the mind surfeited, unless you have a varied program.

Book a high class short comedy and drama. It gives variety and relieves the tension.

You need spices and condiments on a program as well as at a banquet.

Essanay is making a specialty of serving you with short, classy subjects, with its stars in the lead. Look over these releases.

The Woman Paid!

The Hebraic commandment was plain. It was not based on sentiment, but on the immutable law that the wages of sin is death.

The woman was beautiful; she had wealth; the world was at her feet. But she forgot the ancient law; she sinned.

The woman paid; she paid in days of burning agony, in nights of feverish torture. Through suffering she atoned, but the scarlet scar remained to sear her soul as no branding iron ever burned.

Sprang into her life mother-love for a daughter forgotten, a girl pure and undefiled. In the blackness of the night she cried aloud for her own flesh. But there was no answering call, no soft cheek to nestle against her breast. The brand of shame had come between.

Mother-love had made the supreme sacrifice to save her loved one from her own shame. The woman paid; she paid in an agony of blood and tears, with a suffering it is given no man to know.

This is the terrible lesson in "That Sort," Essanay's five-act feature photoplay taken from the drama of Basil McDonald Hastings. It is a picture that will stir every woman to the depths of the heart; that will make men weep.

It features Essanay's great emotional actress, Warda Howard, supported by Duncan McRae, Ernest Maupain and John Lorenz. Directed by Charles J. Brabin and released through the V. L. S. E.

Trademark Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907.

Next Year's Trade Exposition

IT is not too early to speak of next year's show.

In fact, if we are to hold a trade exposition next year—if we are ever to hold a trade exposition in the true sense of the term—it is time to begin right now.

Otherwise, we will have to wait at least another year for the fifth industry to give an exposition of itself.

THE two shows just held have not been successes—as shows; and we interpret the word in its simple sense—of showing something.

They may have been financially successful (even if they had made ten times as much profit, the point remains the same). The booths may have been most artistic. The public may have jammed the aisles.

AND, let me add, no criticism whatever is intended here for those who labored so hard and thanklessly in the management of both affairs.

But the point is that neither was a trade exposition, nor have we as yet had an exposition of this trade.

And if we are wrong, fundamentally wrong in this whole matter, certainly it is about time to right ourselves.

The two shows just held have been bazaars, or fairs, or—call them what you will. They are not trade expositions.

IT is, of course, feasible and proper to hold bazaars and fairs, and balls and Mardi Gras celebrations, the more so if they have the worthy object of raising money for trade organizations. Though, there is this to be said: it would probably be cheaper for those who now take space and more money would be turned over to the Exhibitor and Board of Trade organizations if, instead, a per capita or some other tax were levied outright.

But, at any rate, if we are to hold bazaars and balls, let's call them by these names and stop submitting them to the trade as trade expositions.

And if we are to hold a trade exposition, let's get together and hold one.

THERE have been two previous so-called expositions held in New York. Each had the added advantage, in attracting here the very important exhibiting branch, of having national exhibitor conventions held simultaneously. Yet each attracted fewer exhibitors than are present at many state or sectional conventions and the shows were positively not successful as trade expositions.

Yet this year, at our New York shows, we didn't even have the name or fact of having also exhibitor conventions.

IT certainly is unfair—it is ridiculous—to ask an accessory manufacturer or dealer to take expensive space in order to exhibit and demonstrate his product to an utterly uninterested public.

And it certainly cannot begin to relieve his expense if only a bare two or three per cent of the exhibitors of the country are present.

It is exceedingly doubtful if the picture producer, who does not have an interest in the public, finds it economical in view of the exhibiting expense to appeal to less than one hundred thousand of the New York public.

THE situation is well exemplified in the experience of an exhibitor who came all the way from British Columbia to learn about pictures and the picture theatre.

Asked about his opinion of the exposition, he shook his head, and said: "It has not exposed anything as yet."

This man is building a big, new theatre with a brand new projection idea. It is a fact that in his blue prints he has an idea, more practical, more valuable and newer than all the ideas together advanced at the exposition.

IT is possible to hold a trade exposition. It is possible to fill up a vast hall with novel and valuable ideas in theatre-building, furnishing, lighting, music, projection, film cleaning and handling, color processes, developing and printing, picture making, studio systems, office appliances, theatre advertising, business-getting schemes—the list would fill this page.

A trade exposition should "expose" every new advance, great and small, made by the industry within the current year. Exhibits should be made of everything—everything anyone wants to know about—from a thumb tack or a vial of film cement up to a complete model theatre.

COUPLED with this complete and detailed display, there should be each day a continuous business Chautauqua, outlining through men who know every branch and phase of the business of picture making and exhibiting.

All to the end that the combined exposition by word and in fact of this industry in all its phases would be so up to the minute, so comprehensive, so valuable, that not a man, be he theatre owner or employee, exchangeman or traveling salesman, producer, director, or studio employee, could afford to remain away.

THIS would be a trade exposition and convention. Perhaps its greatest advantage has been as yet unnamed.

It would bring together once and for the first time all the elements and worth-while individuals in this wonderfully unorganized industry. We would at least be able to say to each other and effectively, the things we are now shouting into thin air. We would be able to prevent, instead of hurriedly seeking to remedy, dangers of the eleventh hour. But to do it—to accomplish our first trade exposition—we must get together, and start now. WM. A. JOHNSTON.

If Not Censorship, What?

A DESPERATE eleventh-hour fight took place at Albany, N. Y., last week against one of the worst state censorship bills ever conceived by professional law-makers. If Governor Whitman vetoes the bill, it will be the narrowest escape the motion picture business has yet had.

Federal censorship, scotched but not killed by the film men's opposition last January, threatens to break out of the Congressional committee room at Washington in a more malignant form than ever.

ON the horizon looms the disquieting prospect of upwards of thirty legislatures in session next Winter—and in these days, thirty legislatures in session means at least twenty-five separate and distinct censorship bills.

We have fought bravely. We have won more than one fight. Up to the present moment, we have succeeded in confining censorship to four states, when it might now be flourishing in twenty.

But with none of our victories have we gained one degree of security. Not one of the triumphs the film men have won has carried with it any guarantee of future immunity against the old danger.

WE may outgeneral the censor advocates. We may—and have—put them to confusion. We have frustrated campaign after campaign that they have launched. But the check we have administered to them has been, at best, only temporary. Nowhere have we crushed them. We have won our victory and retired—and the next day, or the next week, the armies of censorship are back again in full force working with undiminished strength, with unabated confidence to re-establish themselves

What are we going to do about it?

THE essential weakness of the motion picture's position may be illustrated in a very brief, but vivid way.

At every state or national legislative hearing on censorship measures, some member of the committees in charge has invariably asked this question:

"Gentlemen, you do not want censorship. What DO you want?"

And, unfortunately, the motion picture interests have never made a satisfactory reply to that question.

IN other words, our fight has been a negative one, and the negative is the defensive. In politics as in war, the affirmative has all the advantage of the attacking party; the negative all the disadvantages of the defenders. Both sides have obvious redeeming and compensating features.

But it is a fundamental rule of parliamentary tactics and of law as well, that, when you are opposing a measure recommended by an adversary, the surest way to beat him is to be ready with a substitute of equal or superior merit.

Just there the motion picture men have made their greatest mistake. They have been quite clear and definite as to what they do NOT want, but they have been utterly unable to say what they do want.

THEY have omitted to learn one lesson from the present war in Europe—that the most effective way of breaking up an attack is to launch a counter-attack. In this instance, a substitute course of action, designed to attain the same ends as censorship without using its utterly unpardonable means, is the counter-attack.

It was in the knowledge of this that MOTION PICTURE NEWS in January, prior to the hearings at Washington, advocated and had introduced into the House of Representatives a substitute measure in the form of an amendment to Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code.

That measure may never be passed. But the policy under which such a step was taken has been vindicated and will prove to be the only one offering any real relief to and solution of the situation as it now confronts us.

In the issue of January 15 we published these words, in a special editorial devoted to the censorship question:

"MOTION PICTURE NEWS does not believe that Congress is primarily, or secondarily, convinced that censorship and nothing else will meet the picture problem. But it does believe that some kind of regulation will be demanded and put through.

"And to select and demand the justest and least burdensome form of regulation is not only the privilege of the motion picture men but their duty.

"In other words, Congress will consider a substitute for censorship, but it will not altogether abandon the idea that the motion picture should and must submit to Federal regulation, as the other great businesses of the country have submitted."

There remains now the task of discovering the substitute. We hope to have the pleasure of announcing its discovery at an early date.

Censorship Bill in New York Will Probably Be Vetoed

Representatives of the Industry, in Conjunction with Prominent Members of Civic and Labor Organizations, Make a Formidable Attack on the Measure at the Hearing Before Governor Whitman in Albany, May 11— Six-Coach Train Takes Delegates Up State

A FORMIDABLE attack on the Christman-Wheeler Censorship Bill recently passed by the New York State Legislature, was made by representatives of the motion picture industry, in conjunction with prominent members of civic and labor organizations, at a hearing before Governor Whitman at Albany, Thursday, May 11. There is every indication that the Governor, after hearing the arguments of the industry, will veto the bill.

The film representatives had fortified themselves with an opinion from ex-Chief Judge Cullen, of the Court of Appeals, holding that the bill was plainly unconstitutional. This opinion was presented to the Governor.

A special train of six coaches, bearing the delegation which went up from New York to attend the hearing, left the Grand Central Terminal at 8:45 o'clock Thursday morning. One hundred and sixteen were in the party, which was thoroughly representative of the industry.

The hearing began at 2:30 o'clock in the presence of a crowd which jammed the executive chamber to the doors. Besides the Governor, and several proponents of censorship, Harold J. Hinman, the Republican floor leader, was present.

J. Robert Rubin opened the opposition to the bill, and introduced the various speakers on behalf of the industry. These were: Bainbridge Colby, a distinguished attorney; Walter W. Irwin of the V-L-S-E; Dr. Cranston Brenton, of the National Board of Review; Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst; Lester F. Scott, of the People's Institute; Ex-Mayor James G. Cutler, of Rochester; Mary E. Peck, representing the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs; James P. Holland, representing Samuel Gompers and the New York State Federation of Labor; Abraham C. Myers, representing District Attorney Swann, of New York; William M. Seabury, general counsel of the Motion Picture Board of Trade; Maurice Simmons, of the Society for the Protection of Immigrants; and Martin Littleton.

Rubin in Clash with Senator

Mr. Rubin, in closing the argument, had a sharp clash with Senator Christman, father of the bill, in which the Senator became considerably rattled, and made a very weak showing. Mr. Rubin then presented the important Cullen memorandum to the Governor, adding thereto a petition to which were signed 170,000 names against state censorship of motion pictures. These signatures were collected in the towns between New York and Albany by an automobile sent out from the Grand Central Palace Exposition under the auspices of the International Film Service.

Those who appeared in favor of censorship presented the same one sided arguments offered at hearings in Washington and elsewhere. They disclosed the same lack of knowledge of the practical requirements of the business, and made loose exaggerations of the preponderance of unfit pictures.

Canon Chase, of Brooklyn, opened the case for the proponents of censorship, and Senator Christman closed it. Other speakers were Mrs. Ella Boole, of the W. C. T. U.; Henry N. Niles, of the Central Presbyterian Church, of Brooklyn; Frank L. Brown, of the World's Sunday School Association; Rabbi Maurice H. Harris; W. J. Southerton, president of the Sunday School Union, of Brooklyn; Francis J. Sullivan, of the American Federation of Catholic Societies; and H. C. Barber, of the Society for the Prevention of Vice.

The first speaker introduced by Mr. Rubin was Walter W. Irwin, who made a scathing indictment of the principle of censorship, citing specific cases of its unjust workings in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states.

"In Ohio and Pennsylvania, where censorship is imposed upon the people, the conduct of the censors conclusively demonstrates that censorship consists of intolerance born of ignorance, prejudice, malice, spite and jealousy. For instance, in Ohio, the picture of 'The Life of Christ'—a picture which has been extensively exhibited in every Christian country—was utterly destroyed of its religious value by the elimination of the Crucifixion. One censor viewed the picture and directed this elimination, a woman. Her only reason for so doing was that it was too horrible. Thus the lesson of the man who died that he might save others was denied the people of Ohio."

Mr. Irwin also pointed out the financial loss which the picture producers would suffer if the bill became law. He said that it would result in a loss of $1,183,000, of which about $830,000 would be in film prints to be filed with the Regents in accordance with the law.

Bainbridge Colby declared that the bill "gives tremendous and arbitrary power to three little Dogberry moralists, who might strut about the State to say what is proper and what is not proper for the people to see."

Workings of Review Board Explained

The working of the National Board of Review were explained in detail by Dr. Brenton, its Chairman. He particularly emphasized the fact that the two hundred and fifty reviewers of the Board work without any compensation whatever, devoting their time and thought to the examination of films.

Attacking pre-publicity censorship as intolerable, Dr. Parkhurst said that it would constitute "an indictment on the business." He announced his faith in the value of motion pictures, in developing thought and furthering education. "This law would put a black cap on every producer," said he. "I wouldn't write a sermon, if I had to submit it to my congregation first."

Lester F. Scott, speaking for the laboring classes, said the motion picture was their chief entertainment, and he was opposed to censorship because it would seriously injure, if not destroy, that entertainment. He filed with the Governor, in opposition to the bill, fifty telegrams from the Y. M. C. A. and civic societies.

Ex-Mayor Cutler took the ground that the law would interfere with the police powers of the cities and home rule.

An excellent argument was made by Mary E. Peck, who appeared on behalf of the Federation of Women's Clubs. "We are opposed to censorship in any form," she said. "We uphold the work of the National Board of Review. Furthermore, censorship is not a solution of the child problem. The solution is to be found in the work of the Federation which strives to provide suitable entertainment for children, but not to censor pictures down to the level of the child's mind, as this bill would do." She also pointed out the impracticability of having forty-eight censoring bodies at work on films, as would happen if all the States should impose censorship.

James P. Holland read a letter from Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, characterizing the bill as a serious invasion of free institutions.

Abraham C. Myers, representing District Attorney Swann, argued that the criminal laws are ample to protect the community. He dealt the proponents of censorship a body blow by saying that the District Attorney's office in New York City had not received a complaint against a motion picture theatre for eighteen months.

After Maurice Simmons had spoken briefly on behalf of the Society for the Protection of Immigrants, William M. Seabury filed the brief which he presented at Washington on behalf of the Motion Picture Board of Trade in opposition to the Hughes Bill for Federal Censorship.

Littleton Speaks with Telling Effect

Then Martin Littleton took the floor, and delivered a brilliant speech of seven minutes in which he attacked the bill because of the arbitrary powers it conferred.

"The Regents, under the terms of this bill, may at any time revoke the censors' approval of a firm, but nobody is given the right to revoke the censors' disapproval. The Regents may recall any approval of a film on any or no grounds. They have unlimited powers of complete revocation. A film costing $100,000 may be approved by the censors, copies printed for distribution, the expense of distribution entered into, and the picture advertised by the theaters of the State. This decision may then be revoked, on none of the original grounds of approval or disapproval, but neither the Regents nor the producers nor anyone else can recall the disapproval of a picture," he said.

Mr. Littleton then cited the decision of Judge Cullen in the Saratoga Gas Case. The Public Service Commission had fixed the rate at which gas was to be sold for a period of three years, and under the law, the rate could not be repealed by any appeal from the gas companies, but only through the petition of at least one hundred citizens. Judge Cullen ruled that the law was unconstitutional because it gave no opportunity to the corporations to readjust the rate.

Pointing out that the Christman-Wheeler bill furnished a parallel case, Mr. Littleton declared that a statute to be valid must confer equal rights. "This bill is illiterate, miserably constructed and hopelessly unjust to the motion picture industry," he declared.

The memorandum written by Judge Cullen, referred to above, holds that the censorship bill is void for many reasons.

"It is plainly the intention of the statute to submit the right of exhibit to the uncontrolled will of the Board of Regents; uncontrolled either by a review in the courts or by any principle by which the power is to be exercised," Judge Cullen writes. "For this reason the statute is void.

"It is to be noted also, in the case that I have cited (the Ohio case), that the Supreme Court of the United States closes its opinion saying: 'In conclusion we may observe that the Ohio statute gives a review by the courts of the State of the decision of the board of censors.' No such review is granted in the proposed statute under examination.

"There is another ground on which, in my opinion, the unconstitutionality of the statute is fairly beyond dispute; that is, the arbitrary power vested in the Board of Regents to any time revoke the license given by it or by its subordinate, the Board of Censors.

"Until recently, it was the great boast of our people in every part of the country, that ours was a 'government of laws, not of men.' I fear there has been, of late, a remarkable abandonment of that principle. It seems to me shocking that any legitimate business should be subject to the whim of public officers, however high in character or pure in motive. The sums invested in moving picture exhibitions are very large. Granting that these exhibitions, if not supervised, may be of a character injurious to public morals and therefore properly subject to examination by a licensing board, the examination once made and the exhibition approved, the right of the citizen to exhibit them should be fixed and certain, and not subject to revocation because the judgment of a new board of regents may be different from that of their predecessors, or the members of the board may change their views. Yet, this is plainly what the statute authorizes: 'The Regents may, in their discretion,' revoke the approval of the picture 'at any time.' Though the exhibition has been once approved, the citizens' whole investment in an exhibition may be lost by a change of view of the Board of Regents, indeed, by the change of view of one member for, by that change, he may convert a minority of the Board into a majority. Surely this should not be the law in a civilized country. Even a liquor license cannot be revoked, save for cause, and then only by the courts, after a trial. . . . This censorship statute is plainly unconstitutional, for no man can be deprived of his property, without a hearing."

Everybody Near Omaha Getting Ready for Convention

Theatres Are Advertising the Event by Slides, and the Towns in Nebraska, the Dakotas, and Kansas Are Agog Over Coming Fete

Special to Motion Picture News.

Omaha, May 13.

YOU can't go into a Nebraska, Iowa, Dakota or Kansas theatre now-a-days without seeing a poster, sticker or slide thrown on the screen advertising the motion picture convention and ball, to be held in Omaha, May 25. The date was postponed from May 11.

Clinton L. Oliver, Omaha newspaper man, has been engaged to give all his time to boosting the event. Every motion picture theatre in the Omaha territory is selling tickets and advertising the event. Several hundred one-sheets and eight-sheets have been printed and put out. All motion picture correspondence has been on stationery advertising the event.

Beginning early in the morning of May 25 the big Omaha auditorium will be thrown open for the convention. Booths will be shown by the manufacturers. There will be talks, demonstrations of machines, exhibitions of special pictures and a general good time all day. A band of one hundred pieces will furnish the music.

In the evening, at 8:15, will begin the big event. Vaudeville actors and actresses will play, and then will begin the ball. Carl Laemmle, with film exchangemen from this part of the country, and with every exhibitor in the territory, will be present. Many Omahans and quite a few people from nearby towns are expected.

One Hundred Thousand at Board of Trade Exposition

First Annual Event of the Organization is Star Event of the Industry, With This Enormous Attendance for Nine Days—Madison Square Garden Makes Striking Appearance in Its Gala Decorations—Manufacturers Are Represented by Attractive Booths—Many Exhibitors in Attendance

THE first annual exposition of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America came to a close on Sunday, May 14, after a most successful nine days run. The attendance at the show was phenomenal, and has not as yet been estimated in detail, but it is safe to assert that the turnstiles registered above the hundred thousand mark.

Perhaps it was coincidence that set the opening day on the same Saturday as New York City's Police Parade, but nevertheless this event brought the crowd around the Garden, and a big opening day set a mark that each succeeding day surpassed. May 13, which was the day of the Preparedness Parade in the city, was also laid aside as such by the exposition officials. This naturally brought a large crowd out, as the whole city seemed to be in sympathy with the movement. Saturday's crowd, it is believed, was the largest that attended in all the nine days of the show, although the attendance on the preceding night pressed it hard for first honors.

While primarily entertaining the public, the show was also a great benefit to exhibitors and manufacturers. Reports from various of the producers show that considerable business was done with the exhibitors who had come from out of town to attend both shows. Exhibitors were also benefited by the elaborate display of several accessory companies.

"Pictures and Dancing All the Time" was the slogan of each day, and was pretty strictly adhered to throughout the exposition. The music furnished for the dancers and for the picture accompaniments was the best sort obtainable. One of the orchestras was playing all the time—in fact there was never a dull moment.

The majority of the producers turned to publicity stunts of unusual magnitude to amuse the exposition goers. Every night the stage was set for one company or another to contribute its best efforts to the show. Something out of the ordinary was going on all the time, something more than mere promenading about the Garden gazing at folk prominent on the screen.

Universal brought from under cover its Handsomest Man in America and introduced him before an admiring throng of fans. The lucky gentleman's name is Roy Fernandez and he hails from Fairfield, Conn. Mr. Fernandez is to henceforth play in a Universal picture after he has either satisfied or disposed of the proposal of Violet Mersereau.

Mutual, not to be outdone by a Handsome Man, sought out the Ugliest Boy in New York City, and in the Mutual booth he was the center of a big crowd, not exactly an admiring crowd, but a big one nevertheless. His name is Tommy McCarthy and the Gaumont company have it that Gertrude McCoy has discovered talent in the youngster. She put him through his paces before the camera and as a result Tommy is going to play in Vim comedies. They do say that there are a few curb warmers on Broadway that envy Tommy his compressed features.

Three Vim clowns were ever in prominence either on the floor or decorating a monster Typhoon fan stationed near the roof at one end of the Garden. Here it was also that Zulu, a burnt cork advertising stunt of Mutual's sometimes appeared leading an imaginary orchestra and dropping Mutual literature, if such it may be called, on the heads of the throng below.

Did the Paragon Court Fine You, Too?

The Paragon censor court held sway throughout the exposition. There was both a humorous and a serious side to this affair. The paragon girls were ever hither and yon collecting signatures to present to Governor Whitman for protest against the passage of the censorship bill in New York before the governor. Then when a signer looked easy he was hauled up before the court and tried for being alive. On one night, the entire court removed from the Paragon booth to the stage and attracted the attention of the whole Garden.

Pathe, not officially represented at the Garden, was given its share of talk by the appearance of R. L. Goldberg, cartoonist extraordinary. After he had drawn several typical cartoons on the stage his Pathe picture, The Boob Weekly, was exhibited. Mr. Goldberg was the guest of the Motion Picture Mail.

Each producer had a special night. Monday was given over to Bluebird, and Violet Mersereau created quite a sensation by appearing in the selfsame balloon in which Leo Stevens ascended from the Garden roof on the Saturday before. The balloon, this time, was safe inside the Garden and Violet in the basket looked down upon hundreds of admirers and scattered her photographs and Bluebird publicity.

Wednesday night Mutual celebrated by introducing a galaxy of stars headed by Mary Miles Minter and Florence LaBadie on the stage. Pictures were taken by a Gaumont cameraman and the following night they were shown. A few lucky ones of the spectators were also "shot" by the camera as they marched around the stage, and this practice proved such a big drawing card that it was continued on every night thereafter.

Clowns for Universal

On Wednesday also, the Universal company hired a number of clowns and acrobats, who did trapeze work over the dance floor to help along the good work of advertising "Peg o' the Ring."

Paramount celebrated in a quiet and becoming manner on Thursday evening when Fannie Ward, George Beban, Constance Collier, Jack Dean and other stars held the center of the elegant Paramount booth. Paramount pictures were also shown in the day, including the new Beban subject, "Pasquale," in which the noted character actor scored another triumph in an Italian role.

On Friday, Theda Bara's latest Fox picture, "The Eternal Sapho," was projected for public gaze and naturally the temporary theatre which was placed in the Garden was filled to overflowing. Other Fox stars were present, including the new Arlington, Mass., find, June Caprice.

In addition to the stars and the publicity stunts instituted by the various companies the accessory manufacturers ranged chiefly around the balcony had much to show of interest to the public and trade. A separate story of their activities will be found in the Accessory section.

On every afternoon, those prominent in the trade met to discuss topics of the day in the Concert Hall. The promoters of the show saw fit to arrange for these meetings in order to get the manufacturers and exhibitors together. Speeches were delivered on the business side of the trade, projection and other topics.

As was quite natural in a show as closely connected with California, as is a motion picture show, the spectators heard and saw a good deal of California beauties. At the booth of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the various eatable products of the states, such as oranges, grape-fruit, nuts, lemons and the like were given away. On Tuesday night, California Day, copies of the song, "I Love You, California," were given away and at intervals throughout the evening it was sung from the stage.

On Saturday night, which was officially set aside for the Vitagraph company, the attendance far surpassed that of any other night. The hall was jammed to the doors. Firemen arrived and an attempt was made to keep the aisles clear, but it was futile. When the small host of Vitagraph stars were introduced from the stage, there was danger of damage being done to the booths so great was the press.

Those in charge of the Vitagraph booth carried out excellently laid plans. Many of their stars appeared in the costumes worn in the picture in which they had made their greatest success. Earle Williams, for instance, appeared in his role of John Storm from "The Christian," Ned Finley appeared as O'Gary from the Broadway Star feature "O'Gary of the Royal Mounted," Mother Mary Maurice was introduced as Mother of Roses. Others introduced in costume and in evening dress were Anita Stewart, Dorothy Kelly, Edith Storey, Lillian Walker, Evart Overton, Harry Morey, Charles Kent, Kate Price, Bill Shea, Hughie Mack, Naomi Childers, Jewel Hunt, John Robertson, Huntley Gordon, Belle Bruce, Wally Van, Billy Billings, Bobby Connelly, Frank Daniels, Marc MacDermott, Nellie Anderson, Anders Randolph, Paul Scardon and Rose Tapley.

During the afternoon and evening of Saturday, the new Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Suspect," was shown. Two of Vitagraph's most popular stars held the featured roles in this, Anita Stewart and S. Rankin Drew. In fact, the Vitagraph company left nothing undone that might be done to make their evening most successful.

JEAN SOTHERN AND THE HYPNOTIZING MACHINE "IN THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA," INTERNATIONAL

National Guard Drills on Dance Floor

Saturday was also Preparedness Day and following their march in the Preparedness parade, a company of National Guardsman arrived at the Garden and drilled on the dance floor, after which literature was given out, urging the recipients to join the National Guard.

The last day of the show was set aside as International Film Service Day and members of the Hearst organization, headed by Mr. Hearst himself, occupied the center of the stage and screen. Several episodes of "The Mysteries of Myra" were shown in the afternoon and evening, as well as an issue of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

In the evening two of the Hearst cartoonists, McManus and Hershfield were introduced and amused the crowd by sketching cartoons on the stage.

The results of the International's popularity contest were given out on Sunday night. The winner, it must be confessed, is not one of the most popular screen stars but nevertheless the ballots showed that Irene Castle headed all the others. She was awarded an immense silver loving cup. Mary Miles Minter ran second, and next in order were Leah Baird, Anita Stewart, Grace Darling and Mary Pickford.

In attendance on Sunday night were several of the International stars. The two leads of "The Mysteries of Myra" series, Howard Estabrook and Jean Southern, were present and were introduced from the stage while Harry Fox and Grace Darling met their friends at the International booth.

While Sunday's crowd was by no means as large as that of the day previous, the attendance was far from small. All the seats before the screen were constantly occupied and the plans of the International furnished entertainment throughout the evening.

THE MAY INDEX OF REVIEWS APPEARS IN NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE

DIRECTORS LE SAINT AND DOWLAN RESIGN FROM "U"

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, May 13.

Edward J. Le Saint and William C. Dowlan, who have been directors at Universal City, have resigned, the same taking effect last Saturday. Dowlan has been with the Universal for more than a year, serving first as leading man, later being given a company, and in the direction of this he played many of his own leads. Perhaps his best known subject was "The College Orphan" in five reels. Mr. Le Saint has made the "Three Godfathers" with Harry Carey and Stella Rosetti, "The Long Chance" with Frank Keenan, and "The Voice of the Tempter," with Stella Rosetti, each of five reels, and many others. Miss Rosetti, who is Mrs. Le Saint in private life, has also resigned, and she and Mr. Le Saint will take a long vacation.

McMANUS AND GREY FOOL HOWARD ESTABROOK

At Madison Square Garden on Saturday night, Howard Estabrook went to the International Film booth, fresh from Ithaca, N. Y., where he is starring in the "Mysteries of Myra," and started signing photos at top speed. Along about ten o'clock a duet of falsetto voices requested, "Dear Mr. Estabrook, will you please hand me one personally?"

"With pleasure, Madam," said Estabrook, arising with a Chesterfieldian bow, to be greeted with deep bass laughter from General Manager MacManus and John Grey, of the International, who had put over a "Julian Eltinge" stunt on the "Myra" star.

"Girls, I'm sapprised!" said Estabrook, and got back to his desk in a hurry, while Mac and Jack finished their merriment.

ALICE BRADY WILL PLAY MIMI IN "LA BOHEME"

Alice Brady, the World Film star, is at work with Director Albert Capellani at the Peerless studio on a film version of Puccini's famous classic, "La Boheme," in which Miss Brady will play Mimi.

PITTSBURG WILL BANISH PICTURE FIRE RISKS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13.

The Pittsburg City Council is waging an active campaign in this city for the elimination of all fire risks from motion pictures, regardless of the fact that it seemed to be working a hardship on some of the companies.

In what was known as Film Row there were a number of tumble-down buildings used to house thousands of dollars worth of films. These buildings were only standing and nothing more. They were unsafe and had a fire started in any one of them would have destroyed that whole end of the city.

The police, seeing the menace to the employees of the plants and the danger to the city, decided that the place should be ordered vacated, and as a result the film exchanges have scattered to many parts of the city, but most of them have gone to the Liberty-Penn Avenue section.

It is said that a fine new home for motion pictures will shortly be erected in this district and all of the big film companies will be able to find space in the building, which will be of fireproof construction and will be plentifully supplied with vaults.

PICTURE JOURNAL BADLY NEEDED IN SYDNEY, N. S. W.

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. W., Apr. 15.

What is wanted in Sydney at the present time is a magazine to cover the whole ground of the picture trade and also be of interest to the ordinary picturegoer. Some such journal was published by Pathé Freres some time ago, but the demand for it did not justify its publication—then. But now, one only has to glance over the daily and weekly newspapers and note which subject is more noticable—war or pictures. The latter "amusement" wins every time.

As there is so much competition between the abnormal number of exchanges, they must necessarily advertise, and finding no suitable publication for the trade alone, they turn to the newspapers, and the result is that a great opportunity for an enterprising man with the necessary capital, is running wild.

Berst Shows Weaknesses of Hughes Censorship Bill

Vive-President and General Manager of Pathe Points Out Hardships and Injustices Resulting from Operation of the Federal Measure—Section 12 Would Place a Prohibitive Fee on the Whole Industry—Payment for Duplicate Copies Is an Imposition

IN connection with the federal censorship bill now before the House Committee on Education at Washington, J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has written the Hon. Dudley M. Hughes, chairman of the committee, a letter subjecting the bill to a keen analysis. Certain defects in the bill which have heretofore escaped notice are dealt with by him briefly and to the point. The letter follows:

May 4th.

Hon. D. M. Hughes,
Chairman, Committee of Education,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Sir:

"I have read with great interest the notice you sent me containing briefs and statements of the Federal Motion Picture Convention. There are several matters which I would like to point out, and with your permission I will do so as briefly as possible.

"I notice that the bill calls for the appointment of five commissioners to be located in different cities, and that these commissioners shall have the power to appoint deputy commissioners. I think this is wrong. For instance, if the appointed commissioner of New York be a clergyman, he might select for deputy commissioners all, or nearly all, clergymen, and that would be a very poor representation to censor motion picture films. I believe that the Board should be composed of a certain fixed number of censors, and that a picture should not be rejected by the vote of one person only. This is important, as today the majority of the pictures are five reel features which cost an average of $20,000 each.

"I believe also that the Board of Appeal should be composed of a fixed number of censors. All this is necessary in order that our industry obtain fair treatment. The salary of commissions and deputy commissions should not exceed $5,000 and $3,000 respectively. During the showing of the pictures to the censors, no one except the censors should be admitted in the room. Our experience has proven that in the past motion picture companies who sent a representative with forceful, persuasive ways, succeeded nearly all the time in having their films passed, while films of the same character of other companies were condemned. It is absolutely certain that a Board can be influenced by persuasive talk and therefore, in order that the Board can act more freely, it should have no relations with representatives of motion picture concerns.

Should Not Exclude Bull Fights

"Section 8 of the bill, excludes actual bull fights and prize fights. This should be taken out of the bill. There is a real demand for prize fights and bull fights in certain states. Bull fights, for instance, are in good taste and wanted in New Mexico, Texas, and southern California. Prize fight films are in demand and make money in any state they are exhibited. It is easy for the censors to exclude from these films any part that might be offensive.

"Section 9 requires the manufacturer to file a statement under oath that parts condemned together with the corresponding negatives have been destroyed. All manufacturers will be very much opposed to destroying negatives, as they have use for these negatives in foreign countries. It is a well known fact that the taste of Americans is entirely different from that of the Spanish country, and it cannot be the intention of the Federal Board of Censors to pass judgment on films which are to be shown in Europe and South America.

"Under Section 10, it is not quite clear if films can be transported through the several states for the purpose of export. I suggest that at the end of this section be added the words 'in the United States.' It would be quite necessary that topical films which have to be shown to the public immediately and very often on the same day they happen, be exempted from review by the censors. This would necessitate the modification of Section II.

"Under Section 12, the fees are fixed at two dollars per reel. The fees are too small and will not cover the expenses of the commissioners. It should be four dollars instead of two dollars.

"In the appendix, I notice that Section 9 provides that no copyright shall be issued for a film not licensed. This would be very injurious. For instance, many producers make films for releasing companies offering them for sale to several companies until they have found a purchaser. It is always up to the purchaser to attend to the censoring as the film has to be reconstructed and retitled to meet his particular requirements. Therefore it would work a hardship for the producer to have to attend to the censoring, as under this condition, he would place himself under the danger of having his production pirated, if he could not have it copyrighted.

"Also if an American manufacturer should want to make special films for foreign countries, which films would not be adaptable for the United States, this would prevent him from copyrighting his films. Under Section 10, a manufacturer could not export his films unless they had been licensed. He could not even have his cameraman in all parts of the country shipping the film to him, and he could not transport exposed (but not developed) positives or negatives. This would practically put the motion picture news out of business.

A Prohibitive Fee

"Section 12 would place a prohibitive fee on the whole industry. All manufacturers and exhibitors will be very much against paying a fee for each duplicate copy. This is superfluous, as the commission is not spending any time in looking into duplicate copies.

"In the revised Smith-Hughes Bulletin, submitted by Dr. Crafts, I notice several things which are also objectionable. In Section 5, I call your attention to the provision requiring condemned parts of films to be left in the custody of the Commission. This should be eliminated as these parts can be used for export by manufacturers. They cost money and should not be confiscated when they are submitted to a Board for approval or refusal.

"Section 7 provides that films can be licensed only on presenting the scenario. This is certainly wrong as the scenario by no means gives an absolutely true reproduction of the motion picture.

"Section 7 also provides for a tag to be attached to each container. This would be very troublesome, as the motion picture films do not remain all the time in the hands of the same individuals, but pass from hand to hand practically every day. It would be a hardship to impose this provision on the exchanges, because of this and also the carelessness of exhibitors in not returning the containers the tag on which corresponded with the motion picture within."

Very truly yours,
J. A. BERST,
General Manager.

"Shoes" Deals with Grave Sociological Problem

Universal Picture, Produced Under Direction of the Smalleys, is Founded on a Story in Collier's Weekly by Stella Wynne Herron—Mary Ida McDonald in the Lead

THE problem of the underpaid working girl will be presented in a Bluebird photoplay, entitled "Shoes," which Lois Weber adapted from a story by Stella Wynne Herron in Collier's Weekly. It was filmed under the direction of the Smalleys, with Mary Ida McDonald in the leading role, and it will be released on June 26.

Like "Where Are My Children?" this picture deals with a sociological question. Its theme is described by General Manager M. H. Hoffman, of Bluebird, in this very vivid manner:

"Great truths are revealed in the pictorial history of three vital weeks in the life of a girl who clerked in a ten-cent store. She had worn her shoes into shreds, and through the holes in their bottoms she picked up splinters from the rough floor where she stood day after day. Her father, too lazy to work, permitted her to support him and two little sisters, while the mother bent daily over the washtub to contribute her laborious share. Pasteboard soles could not withstand the winter rains—and the girl got her shoes.

"When she came home with the new shoes she flung herself into her mother's lap, and these two women were welded together in their suffering, and the girl's sin was washed away in her mother's understanding tears."

GARRICK FILMS WILKIE COLLINS' NOVEL FOR MUTUAL

Picturization of Wilkie Collins' famous novel, "Armadale," which is to be released by the Mutual as a three part feature, would be incomplete without the thrilling scene in which the false Allan Armadale locks the rightful bearer of that name in a stateroom of a sinking steamer and leaves him to his fate.

Under the direction of Richard Garrick of the Gaumont-Mutual studios, these water scenes have been filmed, despite the fact none of them were taken within a mile of a ship of any kind. All that Garrick did was to place the scenery necessary for the photographing of the scenes in the river near the shore and wait for the rising tide to come in and furnish the necessary realism.

EDWARD EARLE GREETS AUDIENCE AT EXPOSITION

Edward Earle, famous star of the Edison Company, was presented to the audience at the Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden Sunday evening as a popular screen actor.

Mr. Earle is said to be considering a contract with one of the largest producing companies to appear as their star.

The announcement of his plans will probably be made soon.

"Room for Long and Short Pictures"—Lois Weber

Small Subjects Are More Than "Fillers"—Transient Patrons, Unable to Spare Time for a Feature, Like Programs of One and Two Thousand Feet Films

LOIS WEBER, whose many contributions to the class of unusual features entitles her to speak with authority on picture production, has been in New York on a business and pleasure trip. While here she talked with a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and expounded several most interesting ideas on the picture subject.

In reference to the future of the picture, both feature and short length, Miss Weber said: "There will always be room for both the five-reeler and the one and two-reelers. The latter class of pictures has been disregarded of late, so great has been the demand for features, but recently the manufacturers have hearkened to the fact that if a picture is good is will always be appreciated, no matter what its footage.

"The short subject is, however, considerably more than a filler. A transient patronage hardly ever can spare the time to see a long picture, particularly when they arrive in the middle of it, and a theatre with such a patronage can exist best with a program of one and two thousand foot subjects."

Miss Weber also spoke on the subject of longer runs for all pictures, and cited an experience of her own to drive home her point. "With my production, 'Jewel,'" she said, "exchange men had the opportunity to make a clean-up, particularly in Chicago. There are thousands of Christian Scientists in that city, and Clara Louise Burnham, herself, the author of the story on which the picture was based, resides there, but despite all that the longest run given the picture in any house was one day. From the date of its release I have received hundreds of letters asking when this picture was to be shown in Chicago, and from all appearances Chicago saw the last of it after a few days' run in scattered houses. Such proceedings are almost suicidal."

The censorship question aggravates any director or author, and as a result Miss Weber might have an excuse to register a double protest against such an evil, as she holds down both positions. She mentioned another experience of her own regarding this subject. "The manner in which the censors treated 'Hop, the Devil's Brew.'" she remarked, "stamped them as either grossly inconsistent or defective. This picture, which dealt with the drug traffic to a certain harmless but enlightening extent, was shown on the West Coast after having been materially cut by these reformers. What was my surprise, however, to discover that after leaving several scenes of opium smoking in the film they eliminated a flash of a pair of baby's shoes, which I had inserted to give added significance to a dramatic episode!"

Babies' shoes evidently have a harmful effect on an easily influenced picture-goer. Miss Weber, advanced director that she is, believes that the foundation of a good photoplay is the story, and, what is more, she believes in the natural length subject. To let the story run its normal, unpadded length is the correct way to produce a picture, and when the manufacturer realizes this we will have a greater number of better pictures.

Sennett Ships Four Fun Subjects to Eastern Offices

"Her Marble Heart" Is a Key(stone) to Unlock Risibles of Hardened Anti-Laugh Grouches with Cold Shoulders Turned Against Merriment

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, May 13.

THE Mack Sennett producing staff has completed four subjects which have been sent east during the past few days. This includes a wide variety of comedy, each picture being of a different type.

"Her Marble Heart" is the title given the subject made by Richard Jones, with a cast composed of Louise Fazenda as the country girl, Harry Booker her father, Weyland Trask the farm hand, and Charles Murray, the heavy and owner of the adjoining farm and the holder of a mortgage on the home place of Booker. Murray insists upon the girl's hand in marriage or he will foreclose the mortgage, but a dying relative of the farm hand aids the family by bequeathing his wealth at the psychological moment. This abounds with barnyard comedy.

"The Lion and the Girl," produced by Glen Cavender, has Joe Jackson and Claire Anderson as principals. Joe, of course, appears as the hobo, and is escaping from the law after stealing jewels from a pawn broker's wife, and hawking them to her husband. During his escape he comes upon their daughter in a park. The girl is swinging in a wooden swing which breaks as she is over a cage, and she falls into the lions' den. Joe being the hero of the event, gets in right with the old man.

Mack Swain is featured as the sheriff in the Keystone subject "His Bitter Pill." Luella Maxum is the sweetheart, and Ed. Kennedy a gambler and bad man. It is of a decided western nature. The bad man has won the heart of the girl whom the sheriff loves. The officer then catches the bad man after he has held up the stage coach, but because of his love for the girl, the sheriff gives the man his liberty. This becomes known to all the citizens of the town, and the sheriff loses his job and social position. Then it is the girl who forces the gambler to confess, bringing about the exoneration of the sheriff—and then the two are wedded.

The Charles Parrott picture has been titled "A Dash of Courage." This pertains to a band of crooks following a police lieutenant who is on a mission to another city to raise funds for a home for retired policemen, and deals with their adventures in getting away with the money. Chloroform makes it possible for them to put the entire police force to sleep, and the crooks thus gain possession of the uniforms and conduct the municipality.

One section of the Keystone studio was flooded this week when scenes for a bath-tub story were filmed by Director Edward Frazee. The scenes are laid in an apartment house fitted with the popular instantaneous water heaters, one of which explodes bringing on the flood. Anna Luther, who is featured in the comedy with Fred Mace, floats about the apartment house in a bath-tub going from room to room, then into the lobby, through the hall, down street, into the city reservoir, and from there to the ocean. Mace and other lodgers of the building take a similar course, and they all meet in the ocean.

CARE EXERCISED IN MAKING "PROPS" FOR "WOMAN WHO DARED"

An illustration of the lengths to which the present day motion picture producer must go to secure correctness of detail in his work, may be found in the "props" at the California Company studios, San Rafael, Cal., which have been specially built for "The Woman Who Dared," featuring Beatriz Michelena.

The scenes of the pretentious seven part picture are laid in Rome and Paris. Everything must be made to conform to this foreign atmosphere. An instance of it is found, according to Pacific Coast reports, in an elaborate railroad coach, built in accordance with the accepted European design.

A considerable problem confronted the technical force of the producing company in providing this and was only solved through having the coach built bodily inside and out, laying a track and providing locomotion.

Allen, Cobe and Rosenbach Form Unity Sales

Company Opens Offices in Godfrey Building, New York, and Begins Distribution with "Pursuing Vengeance," "My Country First," and Other Features

ONE of the most interesting recent events in film history is developed by the formation of the Unity Sales Corporation. The company is headed by Charles W. Allen, president and treasurer; Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager, and Arthur Rosenbach, secretary.

The firm occupies a suite of offices in the Godfrey Building, at Seventh Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and in addition to its executive facilities, is constructing a laboratory, which will be under the direct supervision of Cobe and Rosenbach, who will personally examine every inch of film developed and carefully supervise every detail of the work, assuring exhibitors of an output of the highest standard.

The primary feature of the purpose of the new corporation is to insure the producer a fair price for his product, at the same time give the exchangeman a continuing line of high-class features at prices he can afford to pay.

In speaking of the purposes of the Unity Sales Corporation, Mr. Cobe said: "A long and painstaking study of the film situation as it exists between manufacturers and independent exchanges, has convinced me that there is an immense field for my ideals of distribution. My main object is to bring about a condition which will result in the consolidation of the interests of the manufacturer, exchange and exhibitor. Part of our service to the exhibitor and the manufacturer is an extensive advertising campaign, which is bound to result in a great benefit to all concerned. The Unity Sales Corporation will use the motto, 'Service and Co-operation.' This will be our watchword. The independent exchanges of the country and the producers have already responded to the announcements of our plans with gratifying enthusiasm."

Mr. Cobe is one of the best-known men in the industry and is recognized by exhibitors, exchangemen and producers alike as an executive of ability.

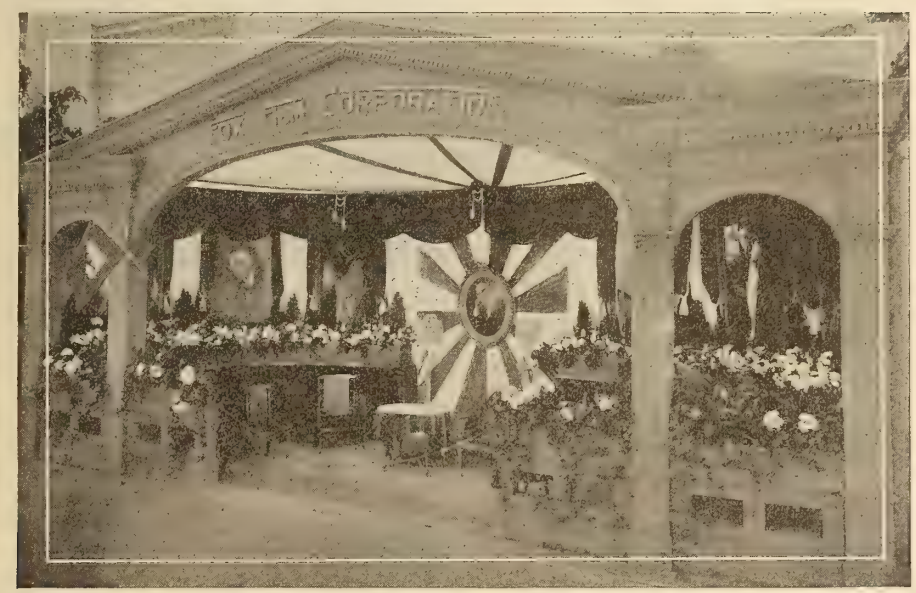
Mr. Allen formerly managed his sister, Viola Allen, and was also engaged in many important theatrical enterprises. Mr. Allen is himself a producer, his most recent features being "Diana," starring Paul Swann and Baroness Dewitz, and the "Boy Scouts," by the late Richard Harding Davis.

Mr. Rosenbach is one of the best-known men in the industry, in which he has been engaged for ten years.

The Unity Sales Corporation is now distributing "The Pursuing Vengeance," with Sheldon Lewis, based on the celebrated novel, "The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet," by Burton E. Stevenson. Another presentation of the new firm is Tom Terriss in "My Country First," a Terriss Film Corporation feature.

Other productions in contemplation are "The Marathon Mystery," "The Gloved Hand," "The Destroyer," all by Burton E. Stevenson.

William Fox Captures Prize for Booth at Palace Show; Company's Stars Receive Hearty Welcome



THE FOX FILM CORPORATION BOOTH AT GRAND CENTRAL PALACE EXPOSITION

WILLIAM FOX and the Fox Film Corporation emerged triumphant from the third international Exposition of the Motion Picture Art, held at the Grand Central Palace, May 1 to 6.

The judges in making their awards picked the Fox exhibit and its distinctive booth, and the silver cup captured as the prize for novelty and excellence was straightway moved down to the Madison Square Garden and placed on exhibition there in the Fox booth.

John Zanft and his assistants, who designed the exhibit at the Grand Central Palace, had worked for days before the show opened to make certain the superiority of the firm's exhibit over all others. In color scheme and arrangement the exhibit was pronounced artistically beautiful.

This booth formed a distinctive setting for the William Fox notables who were present each night of the show. Virginia Pearson, appearing two nights in succession, attracted throngs to the booth and formed many new direct friendships among persons who previously had been but screen admirers. Dorothy Bernard, Claire Whitney, June Caprice, the newest young star of the Fox forces, each had their night at the show and were heartily welcomed.

GARDEN GETS "GLORIA'S ROMANCE" FOR WASHINGTON, D. C.

Special to Motion Picture News.

Washington, D. C., May 13.

Billy Burke in "Gloria's Romance" had something of a battle for first appearance in Washington, but the honor came to Tom Moore, who is showing this film at his Garden Theatre. "Billy Burke made a remarkable hit with her first picture," commented Arthur Robb, house manager of the Garden, "so we felt confident in securing this film novel. The star herself as well as the story promises to appeal to our patrons. We are putting this on in an unusual manner, however, in that we are featuring the story in the titles of the chapters rather than as episodes of the novel."

Usually serials are not popular in the large down-town houses, but Mr. Moore has a manner all his own of making these appeal to his patrons, especially as the Garden has an established patronage for every night in the week. It is the securing of this very dependable standard that makes the popularity and security of a photoplay house.

KLEINE OPENS FOUR BRANCH OFFICES

The constantly growing demands of the Billie Burke serial have induced George Kleine to add to his already long list of branches. New offices were opened last week in four cities. I. P. Rosenberg was appointed manager of the St. Louis branch in the Empress Theatre Building; W. A. Ratz, Fletcher Savings and Trust Building, Indianapolis; F. Rutledge, 207 Broadway, Market Building, Detroit; and Rudolph Berger, Bank of Commerce and Savings Building, Washington, D. C. These offices are already open and ready for business.

AL RAY WITH CHAPIN IN MORE LINCOLN PLAYS

Al Ray, producer of comedies and probably the world's youngest director, is now with the Charter Features Corporation, at Ridgefield, N. J. He is working with Benjamin Chapin, famous for his characterization of Abraham Lincoln, in producing the Lincoln Cycle of Photoplays. Ray is also playing the juvenile lead.

First Morosco Featuring Edna Goodrich Finished

"Maddalena" Is an Adaptation from a Play by Mary and Samuel Lewis—Forrest Stanley, Howard Davies, John Burton, Mary Mersch and Others in Supporting Cast

THE first Morosco picture starring Edna Goodrich, entitled "Maddalena," and adapted from the Mary and Samuel Lewis play, "The Making of Maddalena," has been finished at the Morosco-Pallas studio. The supporting cast for this has Forrest Stanley as the leading man, Howard Davies as heavy, John Burton, the veteran Morosco character actor, Mary Mersch, Colin Chase, Violet White, Laura LaVarnie, Kathlyn Griffith and Walter Frederick. A particular feature of this is a magnificent setting which covers the entire stage, and represents the interior of a Fifth Avenue mansion of a millionaire. Scenes taken in this show action in three separate rooms, a dance in one, reception in another, and in the other, a gentlemen's lounging or smoking room. This subject was filmed under the direction of Frank Lloyd, and contains the story of an American artist who is disowned by his wealthy parents because of his marriage to an Italian model. The artist's wife later redeems herself, and takes a foremost place in American society.

Director William D. Taylor has taken up the filming of a Morosco-Pallas play that will star Myrtle Stedman. This is entitled "The American Beauty," and is from an original scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers. Myrtle Stedman plays the dual role, that of mother and daughter. As the mother she makes up as a woman of great age, and the facial transformation is spoken of as wonderful, it being said that she was not recognized by principals at the studio. As the daughter, she is picked by artists who wish to paint a picture for a wealthy art collector who desires to secure the most notable type of beauty of the various civilized nations. Seven artists enter the contest, and as many models, some of which pose in the nude. One of the big sets for this is that of the interior of a New York studio similar to that of the late Stanford White in Madison Square Garden tower. This will occupy the entire stage at the studio, and contain a balcony with pipe organ and other elaborate furnishings. Oriental atmosphere will be created by expensive draperies of Asiatic design. Jack Livingston appears in the early part of the play opposite Miss Stedman as her husband, Elliott Dexter is leading man of the photoplay proper, Howard Davies, Edward Ayres and Adelaide Woods being the other principals in the enactment of the story.

Co-operative Plan by Brooklyn Exhibitors to Save Expenses

League Members Take Steps to Secure Cheaper Heating, Lighting and Bookings—Appoint Committee to Receive Bids for 10,000 Tons of Coal

DEFINITE and substantial action, looking toward the general good, has been taken by the Brooklyn branch of the Exhibitors' League; the organization has placed itself on record as a co-operative and helpful association of exhibitors, and the steps taken to secure cheaper heating, lighting and bookings are indications of the possibilities of a real get-together spirit.

The Brooklyn organization has appointed a committee, consisting of William Brandt, of the New Albany theatre, and Louis L. Levine, of the Regent, to receive bids for coal to be supplied to every theatre owner in the organization at a flat rate. It is estimated that 10,000 tons will be contracted for next winter, and the individual exhibitors will save $1.50 a ton on their fuel. It is proposed also to buy carbons and other supplies in the same manner.

Another committee, consisting of Mr. Levine and Mr. Goodman, will arrange for a reduction in the cost of light current, and it is reported that the Edison Company has already agreed to a system which will save from five to eight dollars a week for each consumer.

The Philadelphia plan of joint bookings is also under consideration. The officers of the organization are now working on this scheme, and will announce details later. Attempt is also being made to have all schools, churches, Y. M. C. A.'s and public halls, which show pictures in competition with the theatres, either placed under theatre licenses, or restricted to the showing of educational films. This matter has already been taken up with the Board of Education and the Commission of Licenses.

William Brandt, secretary of the League, reports that the campaign against increased poster prices has already resulted in reductions by several of the large distributors.

They're All Excitedly Calling for the Police

But There Is no Alarming Trouble—It's Just the Exhibitors Asking General Film for Re-Bookings of the Chaplin-Essanay Feature With That Title

IF early reports from General Film Company branch office managers may be taken as a criterion, the Essanay-Chaplin comedy feature, "Police!" is going to attract as much, if not more, attention and awaken greater interest than the Essanay-Chaplin "Carmen."

Immediately following the first announcement of a release date for "Police!" through General Film branches, inquiries and orders began to arrive at most of the branches and the number has been steadily increasing, according to an announcement just made.

Many exhibitors have made application, not only for a first-run show, but also for a second and even a third return date for "Police!"

As an instance of the desire for "Police!" shown by exhibitors, the following copy of a telegraph message sent by Manager John P. McCue of the Bijou Theatre, El Paso, Texas, to the General Film Company branch manager, D. Prince of Dallas, Texas, is cited:

"We want exclusive use of this film. . . . You may book us for a two days' showing and a return date in two weeks after first showing, you to fix the price for both exhibitions."

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT MOVES TO THE GODFREY BUILDING

The American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., announces its removal to new offices in the Godfrey Building, Seventh avenue and Forty-ninth street, New York, where the business of booking "The Battles of a Nation" will continue without interruption.

CAPELLANI TO DIRECT CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

The engagement of Albert Capellani as director general of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation Productions is announced. He will assume personal supervision over each of the new company's productions, beginning with the picturization of "The Common Law," Robert W. Chambers' noted novel, which has been secured for Miss Young's initial offering at the head of her own producing company.

In choosing Mr. Capellani as the presiding genius over all their productions, Miss Young and Lewis J. Selznick, president of the company, were guided by the work the director has accomplished for Miss Young in the past. Her greatest success so far, "Camille," was the work of this director.

In order to put in execution Miss Young's plan to prepare two productions at the same time, two highly capable directors will be engaged as Mr. Capellani's associates. These will be assigned the general detail of scenic construction, casting and selection of locations, as well as much of the actual photographic work, all under Mr. Capellani's personal supervision.

ALBERT CAPELLANI

Mr. Capellani is best known in this country for the two superb pictures he produced, "Les Miserables" and "Camille."

MARGUERITE CLAYTON ESSAYS COMEDY FOR ESSANAY

Marguerite Clayton, pretty Essanay leading lady, has undertaken her first venture in light comedy. "Putting It Over," a two-act piece built on several laughs, is her introduction to this type of screen play. Harry Beaumont plays opposite her, it also being the first time these two popular Essanay leads have played in the same piece.

Miss Clayton started her motion picture career in plays with western themes at the Essanay California studios. She then came to the Chicago studios and played leads in straight dramas, among them numerous features.

New Stars at Work on Famous Players Productions

Peggy Hyland Will Make Her American Debut in "Saints and Sinners"—Ann Pennington, from Ziegfeld "Follies," to Make Bid for Serious Consideration as Screen Actress

PEGGY HYLAND ANN PENNINGTON LOUISE HUFF

THE studios of the Famous Players Film Company are busy on a number of new productions, some of which will introduce stars who, although well known in the motion picture and theatrical world, are comparative strangers in the Famous Players studio. In addition to such familiar faces as Mary Pickford, who will soon be seen in "Hulda from Holland"; Marguerite Clark, and Hazel Dawn; there are Peggy Hyland, Louise Huff and Ann Pennington.

Miss Hyland, the British star, is working on "Saints and Sinners," in which she will make her American debut. Miss Huff is now on Block Island doing a sea-coast story, "Destiny's Toy," in which she plays a fisher maid. Ann Pennington, the diminutive star of the Ziegfeld "Follies," is already playing Susie Snowflake, the titular character in which she will make her screen debut.

In the directorial staff there has been one important addition in the person of Joseph Kaufman, who was formerly with Lubin. He is now directing Pauline Frederick in an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The World's Great Snare." Robert G. Vignola is directing a big production in which will appear several well-known players who have not been seen before in Famous Players productions, among whom are Grace Valentine and Crauford Kent.

Emile Chautard Finishes "Sudden Riches" for World

Director Completing Year's Activity with the Company—He Is at Work on a Volume Entitled "Film Photography," for Publication in French

EMILE CHAUTARD, now working with World-Paragon at the new Paragon studios under the direction of William A. Brady, is the honor man of the World roster this week by reason of the completion and release of his most recent effort, "Sudden Riches," in which Robert Warwick again makes his appearance on the World Program.

Mr. Chautard is completing his year with the World Film Corporation and his seventh production for that company. Some of the other pictures were "The Boss," "Old Dutch," "Human Driftwood" and "Sudden Riches," and he is now busily engaged on Thomas W. Lawson's elaborate story, "Friday, the Thirteenth."

Chautard and Maurice Tourneur were companions during their student days in the Latin Quarter, Paris. Tourneur was studying art, while Chautard was endeavoring to learn the intricacies of stage technique. Several years later they met at the Theatre Francais, where Tourneur and Chautard were engaged in making a production. They separated and were again drawn together in the early days of film making in the various studios around Paris.

Chautard took up the film production, and when the Eclair Company began operations in Paris he was one of the mainstays of that organization.

Mr. Brady has assigned a number of important productions to Chautard for the coming season and, beginning with "Friday, the Thirteenth," will keep him busy right through the hot months into the fall.

Chautard, in addition to being an actor, director and film author, is at work on a book entitled "Film Photography," which is to be published by a French publishing house and which, it is thought, will be translated into English and published here.

FIRST RELEASE FROM POPULAR PICTURES IN TWO WEEKS

Popular Pictures Corporation, 218 West Forty-second street, New York, announces through its president, Milton M. Goldsmith, that this company's first release, which will be forthcoming within the next two weeks, will be "The House of Mirrors."

The story is by Frederick Chapin, and the picture was made under the direction of Marshall Farnum, by the Rialto Film Corporation. Frank Mills, formerly of Triangle; Bliss Milford, formerly a Pathe star; Harry Spingler, Rudolph Cameron, Lillian Kemble, Runa Hodges and Jack Curtis will be featured.

It is also announced that, beginning September 1, Popular Pictures Corporation will begin releasing a regular program consisting of one feature each week.

POST, ARTIST-JOURNALIST, GOES TO WEST COAST FOR TRIANGLE

Charles Johnson Post, author and artist, has left New York to organize a Pacific Coast branch of the publicity department of the Triangle Film Corporation. The Triangle aims to make Mr. Post the man on the ground who will standardize the distribution of the news of the coast studios. Systematic organization and effective distribution is the Triangle slogan behind Mr. Post.

For more than twenty years Mr. Post has been active as an artist-journalist. His services have at various times been in demand by the Associated Press, the Times, World, Herald and Journal of New York; Philadelphia Inquirer, Illustrated American, Century, Harper's, Pearson's, Cosmopolitan, Everybody's and Outing Magazines, and Harper's Weekly. Work for these publications have taken him all over the world. At the outbreak of the Spanish war he enlisted as a private, rose to be first lieutenant and battalion quartermaster and took part in the battles at Las Guasimas and San Juan and the Siege of Santiago. He has retained his military connections and is now a first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery of the State of New York.

Mr. Post's most recent newspaper work has been for the New York Globe.

BRADBURY MAKES UP BLACK FACE FOR CHARACTER WITH WHITE PRINCIPALS

Active work has been started on "The Valiants of Virginia," under the direction of T. N. Heffron, of the Selig Company. This is a picturization of the popular novel of the same name by Hallie Erminie Rives. The film will follow the novel closely. A cast has been selected headed by Kathlyn Williams, who will be an ideal Shirley Dandridge, the young Southern heroine. Arthur Shirley will enact the role of John Valiant, the young scion of wealth who sacrifices his fortune to save the family name from dishonor.

Other important roles will be enacted by Edward J. Peil, Edith Johnson, James Bradbury and Al W. Filson. For the first time in over thirty years James Bradbury will don black-face make-up, when he enacts the role of Jeff, the old negro servant in "The Valiants of Virginia."

Nearly Half Frisco's Exhibitors in Its League

Headquarters Located on Eighth Floor of Mechanics Bank Building—Organization is Ready for Strong Fight Against Extended Censorship Power Planned by Board of Supervisors

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Francisco, May 13.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors League of San Francisco, recently reorganized and placed on a firm basis, now has a membership that includes fully one-half of the exhibitors of this city and is growing rapidly. Quarters have been secured again in the Mechanics Bank Building at Market and Mason streets, but space has been taken on the eighth floor instead of the second. Two rooms are occupied here, one containing lockers where members may store film and posters while downtown, the other being used for a meeting place and for the offices of the organization. The officers chosen to serve during the ensuing term have never before served in like capacity, it having been decided with the reorganization of the League that new blood would be necessary to make it a success.

The new body has been very busy since its formation, combatting the plans for an enlarged censorship board in this city, and in this work it has had the hearty cooperation of the Film Exchange Board of Trade. Recently it became apparent that unless strenuous efforts were made at once the censorship ordinance drawn up by representatives of the California Club, specifying a board of censors consisting of nine members and having almost unlimited powers, would be passed by the board of supervisors. Hundreds of petitions were printed, speakers were sent to the various theatres of the city, and thousands of signatures were secured against the passage of this or any similar measure.

These signed petitions will be presented to the supervisors at the next meeting, when the censorship ordinance will be considered, but it is not intended to let the matter rest, no matter what decision is reached by the lawmakers. The petitions will be kept in circulation until an opportunity has been presented to every one to sign them, with the idea of demonstrating beyond any doubt that the rank and file do not wish censorship. In case the board of supervisors sees fit to enact the ordinance now under consideration, a referendum vote will be demanded, thus placing the issue squarely before the people. As every newspaper in San Francisco has gone on record as opposing a censorship of film productions, there is no doubt but that the publicity that could be given the issue would result in a distinct victory for film interests.

Pathe Plans $5,000,000 Serial Program for Coming Season

Berst Announces the Release of Seven Picture Series Between May of This Year and May, 1917—Authors of National Prominence Signed to Write Stories

PLANS for a $5,000,000 motion picture serial program are announced by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathé Exchange, Inc. Pathé will release at least seven pictrue serials between May of this year and May, 1917.

"The continued motion picture is the serial literature of the screen," Mr. Berst said. "There always will be continued stories in the newspapers and the magazines, and there always will be continued stories on the screen. The motion picture serial has come to stay. The public demands this form of screen entertainment."

Newspaper advertising will be the backbone of Pathé's serial campaigns. Pathé has contracted for the services of a number of authors of national prominence. Among those now actively engaged in connection with future serials are Louis Tracy, Randall Parrish, Albert Payson Terhune and Mrs. Wilson Woodrow.

Mr. Tracy is an English author. His "Wings of the Morning" placed him in the front rank of present-day novelists. He is in Florida now rushing to completion a photo novel that is said to have an unusual and powerful theme. Arrangements for the syndication of this story are now being made with leading newspapers in all of the important cities of the country. Balboa is producing the pictures under the direction of W. A. S. Douglas of the Pathé organization. The advertising arrangements are in the hands of G. A. Smith, serial publicity manager.

For release later in the year, Pathé is producing a serial story by Randall Parrish that suggests a present-day Monte Cristo. This serial is under the direction of Louis J. Gasnier, one of the foremost producers of the country. Mr. Gasnier recently returned from Havana, where some of the scenes were laid.

Mr. Terhune, who novelized "The Red Circle," a recent Pathé serial, is under contract for a new series of stories. Mrs. Wilson Woodrow is the talented authoress of "Who's Guilty?" a novel-a-week picture series released May 8.

Release Through V-L-S-E is Selig Plan for Athletics

First Subject Shows Mike Gibbons, Champion Middleweight Boxer, in a Lively Glove Contest—Second is a Billiard Event Between Jap and Yankee Contestants

THE Selig Polyscope Company has announced the intention of releasing its pictures showing the world's greatest stars in all fields of athletic endeavor, through the V-L-S-E organization.

According to Mr. Irwin, general manager of the Big Four, the first reel will be shown to exhibitors in the various territories.

The first release of the athletic and feature film series will show Mike Gibbons, champion of all middleweight boxers in a glove contest that will prove a revelation to lovers of the fistic arena.

The next event is a billiard contest between Koji Yamada, the Japanese exponent of the cue, and Albert Cutler, the Yankee champion, of Boston. In addition to the billiard match each expert presents a number of marvelous exhibition shots.

The final event in the first release of the athletic film is a wrestling match to a finish between Dr. B. F. Roller, one of the greatest of wrestlers, and Frank Dalkus, the Lithuanian champion.

J. H. Herman, manager of the Selig athletic feature film department, in conjunction with Jones, Linick and Schafer, are responsible for the development of this film series.

JOSE COLLINS IS A NEW FOX STAR

Jose Collins, a young woman of great beauty, is the most recent star in the William Fox firmament. Mr. Fox predicts for her an enviable future on the screen. She is said to possess a face remarkably adapted to camera acquirements, and considerable ability in emotional acting.
